☞ Bro. SAGE, G. W. P. of the Grand Division of the Sons of Temperance of this State, called at our office the other day, on his way to the National Division. He was in fine spirits, and full of hope for the ultimate triumph of our good cause. He is actively engaged in advancing our principles, and whatever he can do will be done to promote their benign influences.

The following Circular which he has published, in compliance with the resolution of the Grand Division, at its late session, is worthy of the careful perusal of the friends of our cause all over the State. Read the Circular, and heed it:

Circular.

To the Members of the Order of the Sons of Temperance:

BRETHREN:—The undersigned was instructed, by the Grand Division at its last session, to address you a Circular in behalf of the "TEMPERANCE CHART."

The time has [illegible] question is to be settled, whether it shall live or die. It cannot much longer survive our neglect and indifference. For a while past it has been living a dying life. Good wishes and fine promises will not support it; neither can it live upon the conceded fact, that such an organ is indispensable to the prosperity and success of our Order, and our cause. The paper must be patronized.—Members and Divisions should take it.

Its circulation ought to be greatly and immediately increased. There are whole Divisions in which not a single copy of the "Chart" is taken by their members. Hundreds of those members, however, are at the same time regular paying subscribers of papers which are inimical to their temperance principles. Is this as it ought to be? Do they not stint their own growth and check intelligent activity in the Temperance cause, by omitting to take the "Temperance Chart?"

The Grand Division, at its last session, appropriated $570 to discharge the present indebtedness of the Chart. Can such an appropriation be repeated annually? Brethren, if it could, it need not be done.

There are thirteen thousand members of our Order in the State, while there are but three thousand three hundred subscribers to the Chart. A number of these are not Sons of Temperance, and some are not residents of the State. Our religious papers reckon on at least one subscriber for every five of the membership of the churches which support them.

Ought we not to have a much larger proportion, in as much as the membership of our Order are all males above the age of eighteen; whereas, Christian churches receive both males and females of all ages, Surely some Divisions, and some members, have not well considered the subject, and are, therefore, found in that long list of non-subscribers. And now we put the question, shall the Chart be supported? Is it not worthy of our patronage? Does not our Order need such an organ?—Is not a Temperance paper in our State desirable and indispensable? Shall it become a fact, that Indiana has no press to speak in favor of the principles of our Order, and a prohibitory law? Shall our paper die on our hands, while so many of our sister States are enlarging the subscription lists of their old papers, and establishing new ones? Shall we throw away our chief weapon of attack and defense, at the very moment when the friends of rum are becoming timid and fearful of defeat, and the friends of Temperance are growing bold, and hopeful of glorious victories and complete success?

Shall we spike the Chart and leave ourselves and our cause exposed to the merciless fire of the various presses, which, like so many open or masked batteries, are constantly cannonading us? Let the universal answer be—NO!

Our paper is a cheap one—our Editor gives entire satisfaction, and let us, one and all, give him our hearty encouragement and support. We may then "hang our banner on the outer wall," well assured that "our castle strength will laugh a siege to scorn."

P. S. SAGE, G. W. P.

Allensville, Ind., May 10, 1853.

PUTNAM'S MAGAZINE.—We have received from the Book Store of COX & MATHES, the June number of this popular periodical. It still sustains the position it took at first, among the magazines of the day. In America we have none more deserving of patronage. It is far more solid than HARPER; and far less truckling than GRAHAM.

It can be had at COX & MATHES' RAILROAD CITY BOOK STORE, where we advise all lovers of literature to go to gratify their taste.

Correspondence.

For the Temperance Chart.

Stanzas,

AFFECTIONATELY INSCRIBED TO I. N. CRAIG,

BY M. LOUISA CHITWOOD.

Don't grow heart-sick—don't grow weary
Battling with life's roar and din—
Ope thy heart and let the angels
Of life's early morning in.
Roam away to waodland arches,
Where gay birds rock to and fro,
And the voices 'mid the larches
Trill the notes of long ago.

Where bright rivulets meander
Over rocks and through the dells,
Where the wood-nymphs singing wander,
And the white-winged naiad dwells,
Where the bee steals honey treasures
From the aromatic flowers,
Wander there, and dream the pleasures
O'er of life's departed hours.

Yes, go there, and 'mid the weaving
Of the sunlight's golden woof,
And the zephyr's lute-like breathing
Through the forest's leafy roof,
Bird and bee, and breeze and blossom,
Will not speak to thee in vain;
Hope's bright angels in thy bosom
Will bind up life's leaves again.

When we leave the isle of childhood,
Of much light are we bereft,
But there is in vale and wild wood,
Much of broken music left;
Music sweet with skillful fingers,
Memory's hand may bind the strings,
And the harp while feeling lingers,
Tells of childhood's glorious things.

We may roam tbrough castles olden,
We may gaze on works of art,
Where the light falls soft and golden,
Like a blessing on our heart;
But our early home before us,
Is the sweetest picture yet,
And while stars shine brightly o'er us,
We can learn not to forget.

Thanks that in the brightest places
Our heart's corridors can keep Memory's pencil softly traces Strains we would not woo to sleep.
Thanks, although of many treasures,
'Mid life's ways we are bereft,
For affections boundless measures,
And the broken music left.

Mount Carmel, Ind.

☞ The New Orleans True Delta has the following. Let the reader multiply 50 by 20 and the total by 365, and the amount is astonishing. Yet we believe it is true:

At a cost to the city of at least $20 each, about fifty persons are every night arrested for intemperate disturbance of the peace in the several districts of the city. In the morning they are taken before the Recorder, and nine out of ten get off scot free. This should not be so. Either the officers do wrong in arresting them, or the offender should indemnify ihe city for the expenses they put it to. The fining power judiciously exercised, would create a fund sufficient to pay half the expense of the city police, and nothing would have so salutary an effect on drunken squabblers as the appeal to their pockets which good fines would make. As it is, the lawyers get the money which should be exacted from prisoners in the shape of fines. It certainly does no good to arrest a man at night and tell him in the morning he can go, save, perhaps, the opportunity it affords the Recorder of being generous to prisoners; and ungrateful would be the prisoners who would afterwards forget such generosity.

DILL AND DAVIS.—We have on hand in the way of preparation an article on the Groggery of these gentlemen (?), that will, if we shall be able to do justice to the subject, present their establishment as the lowest and vilest of its class. We intend, as heretofore, to offer our services to the police, if not as eyes, at least as spectacles, and if they wont look through us, we can't help it. They will see sights if they do.

The covetuous man reverses the principle on which Æsop chose his burthen, and oppresses himself with a heavier load of provisions the nearer he gets to the end of his journey.

The Hottentots run to suppress a quarrel in a family, the same as we do to extinguish a fire; and they allow themselves no repose till every matter in dispute is adjusted.

Prohibition of the Liquor Traffic--True Conservatism.

Terms often lose their appropriate meaning, by a continued improper use of them. Conservative and progressive are not necessarily antagonistic. Indeed they harmonize. The healthy tree cannot grow and produce fruit unless it be preserved from decay. A good constitution must be kept sound, to enable the man to develop his physical powers, and improve in strength and activity. And the peace and prosyerity of a State or nation require that the fundamental principles, which are essential to their preservation and progressive expansion, be sedulously guarded against the influence of everything calculated to work deterioration and ruin.—They, then, are the true conservatives in the social compact, who devote themselves most firmly to the work of resisting dangerous innovations, by the introduction of principles and practices which tend to corrupt society and produce disorder and ruin.

That the drinking usages of the country, sustained by the liquor traffic, is preducing more evil to community than all the other causes of deterioration combined, we consider no longer an open question. The most violent opposers of every practicable measure to remove the blighting curse, admit it. Yet there are few that assume to manage the political machinery which controls public affairs, who seem to this grave matter entitled to any consideration. Anything that can be manufactured by party leaders into importance enough to be made a party question, becomes a theme for the party organs and stump orators; and candidates for office are obliged to pledge themselves for its support, as a condition of receiving the suffrages of the party. But the extirpation of this all-pervading and most ruinous evil, the liquor traffic, must not be mingled with politics—must not be brought into the party issues.

Well, if parties persist in refusing to place this question, of such acknowledged importance to the safety of our institutions, and the well being of society, among others of inflnitely less importance, for political and legislative action, they cannot complain if those who view it in its true light, fulfill their duty respecting it without them. They have the same right to unite for the purpose of saving the country from dissipation and ruin by intemperance, that others have for the emoluments of office, and the gains of an unrighteous business. We go for a conservative party—a party that will, from principle, unite their efforts and energies to extirpate the great evil of drunkenness from the land, by a prohibitory liquor law. And we doubt not but there is virtue enough in the masses, who are sufficiently removed from the power and influence of liquor dealers to act independently, to sustain the measuie as a conservative state policy, which the condition of the country demands. Let the sovereign people be appealed to. Let them be enlightened on the subject by the same means which party politicians employ to influence their trained followers, and the cause of truth and righteousness will find them true to its claims. Cheated and deceived as the honest lovers of peace and good order have been by the professions and promises of politicans and office-seekers, it is time for them to think, speak, and act independently. The liquor traffic is not an element in the righteous principles upon which the structure of our free institutions is founded. Prohibition would neither weaken this foundation, nor retard the progress of our national prosperity, but, on the contrary, greatly strengthens the one and facilitates the other. This is true conservatism.—Temperance Journal.

Sitting on a Block in Church.—A young man was seen to enter a church during service. He paused at the entrance; the congregation started; he advanced but a few steps, and calmly surveyed the assembly, commenced a deliberate march up the broad aisle. Not a pew was opened; the audience was too busy for civility. He wheeled in the same manner, performed a march, stepped as if to Roslyn Castle, or the time of the Dead March in Saul, and disappeared. A few minutes after, he re-entered with a large block upon his shoulder. His countenance was immovable. Again the good people started, and half rose from their seats, with their books in their hands.—At length he placed the block in the center of the principal passage, and seated himself upon it. Then, for the first time, the reproach was felt. Every pew-door in the house was instantly thrown open. But no, the strangar was a gentleman; he came net there for disturbance; he moved not, smiled not, but preserved the utmost decorum till the service was concluded, when he deliberately shouldered his block, and to the same slow step bore it off, and placed it where he found it. The congregation is now the most polite and attentive to strangers of any in America.—Baltimore Patriot.

☞ Flowers are the alphabet of angels whereby they write on hills and fields mysterious truths.

Hunt's Merchants' Magazine,

New York—Published monthly py Freeman Hunt, at five dollarl per annum.

We have often expressed our admiration of this periodical, the oldest, as it is undoubtedly the most reliable work of the kind, in the world. The number before us, March, 1853, is part of vol. xxviii, an age rarely attained to in enterprises of this nature, especially when we consider that the original projector of the work is still editor and sole proprietor. May he live long to elucidate the mysteries of trade to his thousands of readers.

Our object for introducing his name and Magazine in our present issue is, to call attention to the following extract from his Commercial Chronicle and Review. It contains the most sensible view of the situation and bearings of our markets that has been offered:

"That there has been a very great expansion in credits, with a corresponding influence upon prices, is apparent to the most casual observer; but the course which this movement will take in future—whether toward a still greater inflation—a gradual reduction—or a sudden collapse—it is not easy to predict. Many who remember the rapid expansions of former periods, so speedily followed by sudden and disastrous revulsions, look for the same catastrophe as the certain result of the present excitement; while others rogard the sources of our prosperity as beyond the reach of a commercial panic. It may be that both classes are mistaken.—There is certainly no such analogy between the causes of the present expansion, and those which produced similar excitements in the past, as would warrant a belief in the certainty of a like termination in a sudden and disastrous revulsion. The fever of speculation in the past has been almost always caused by a very rapid and unwarranted increase in the quantity of nominal capital in circulation, which capital was found totally nnreliable, the moment the seeming prosperity received a healthful check. The history of the present expansion has a totally different reading. It began side by side with the increase of our coined gold, and it has hardly kept pace with this increase in relative expansion.—We hazard nothing in saying that the nominal value of other species of property has not increased uniformly with the product of gold; and the relative proportions between capital and credits bear, at this moment, a comparison more favorable to the latter than at the commencement of the expansion. In plain words, there is at this moment a greater amount of solid available capital in proportion to the business of the country, than there was four years ago. We know that new enterprises have been started, requiring a great outlay of money, and that many of these schemes have absorbed heavy sums in their progress; but the amount of coin distributed through the channels of trade, and more especially throughout the interior of our country, is enormously large, compared with our progress in that respect in former years.

* * * * * *

"The thing most to be dreaded in the present excitement is, the waste of money in useless projects and wild schemes, where the capital can neither be regathered or profitably employed. The mere transfer of local property from one hand to another at a high nominal rate, works much less mischief than is generally supposed. The chief evil resulting from it is, the idleness and extravagance it is apt to engender among the speculators themselves.

"We do not wish to be understood as warranting the continuance of our present prosperity; our object has been to show that it is not chimerical, and that it is not to be permanently checked, by the same causes which have brought on the revulsions of the past. If evil overtake us, it will come in some other shape. Suppose, for instance, that while our imports are swelling to a large amount, and while capitalists are carrying a load of stocks and bonds greater than ever before known, the cotton crop should fail, or the production of this staple should be greatly diminished, in this case those who suppose that the bulk of our new securities are held abroad, would find themselves wofully mistaken. They would find a great portion of it represented by the additional capital already noticed, which being called upon to make good the deficiency of exports, would leave the securities like a mill-stone upon the neck of the money market. Such a contingency, however, may not arise, and if it should, the immediate decline of imports would soon regulate the evil, and apply the proper correction."

☞ A late German writer says that the people of the Unitad States can burst more steamboats and chew more tobacco than any other five nations in the world. Complimentary thai.

The art of being able to make a good use of moderate abilities wins esteem, and often confers more reputation than real merit.

Robert Fulton.

With the success of Capt. Ericsson and his caloric ship before us, we sat down a few days since and read the "Life of Robert Fulton, by his friend Cadwallader D. Colden, New York, 1847." A new generation has sprung up since this memoir was published; and of the distinguished men mentioned in its pages few remain to the present day. Even going back fifty years seems like taking a long step into the past; and the fifty years to come will strike most of our names from the list of the living. Before that period shall pass, the pall will rest on many a youthful form, youthful no longer. We of to-day will pass from maturity to decay, from the labor of this little life to the vast eternity beyond.

Fulton fell with his hands full of work, and his active brain busy as ever planning new inventions. We give a few facts of his history that may not be known to every reader. He was born in the town of Little Britain, Lancaster county, Pa., in 1765. His family was respectable but not wealthy, and it may be interesting to add, that his people were natives of the "Emerald Isle." His childhood and youth were passed in acquiring the rudiments of an education, together with a considerable knowledge of mechanics, which he obtained in leisure hours by frequenting shops and factories.

By the time he had attained the age of seventeen years, he became so much an artist with his pencil as to derive emolument from painting portraits and landscapes in Philadelphia, where he remained until he was twenty-one. In this time he had made the acquaintance of our celebrated countryman, Dr. Franklin, by whom he was much noticed.

We next find him abroad, where he spent several years, principally at Paris; and while there he projected the first panorama exhibited in that city. This being a novelty, attracted many spectators, and was a source of considerable profit. It will lead us too far to speak of his ingenious torpedoes and his submarine experiments. We come to the crowning effort of his genius—the navigation of the Hudson by steam, in August, 1807. His first boat, called the North River, or Clermont, was one hundred and thirty-three feet in length, and only attained a speed of five miles an hour. Ais sixth boat reached nine miles an hour. The time occupied in the passage from this city to Albany may be thus set down:—In 1807, thirty hours; 1818, eighteen hours; 1848, nine hours.

Fulton's first trip having been made in August, it is really a matter of wonder that the anniversary of so eventful a voyage has not been observed. What more fitting occasion could be presented for those numerous excursions which enliven our river and bay during the heat of summer? On the river which witnessed his triumph, Fulton seems well nigh forgotten.

Considerable exposure in the winter of 1814-15, brought on an illness which baffled the highest medical skill, and on the 23rd of February, 1815, closed his useful life. He was buried the day following, from his residence in State street, and the funeral procession embraced all the officers of the National and State governments then in the city, a number of societies, and a larger number of citizens than had ever been collectnd on any similar occasion.—The procession moved to Trinity church, amid the firing of minute guns from the steam frigate and the Battery. The remains were enclosed in a leaden coffin covered with mahogany, and deposited in a vault belonging to the Livingston family.

Mr. Fulton was about six feet high.—His person was slender, but well-proportioned, and well formed. Nature had made him a gentlemen, and bestowed upon him ease and gracefulness. His features were strong, and of a manly beauty, he had large dark eyes, and a projecting brow, expressive of intelligence and thought. His temper was mild, and his disposition lively; he was fond of society, which he always enlivened by his sensible conversation.—N. Y. Times.

Old Fogies.—This name is applied to all hang-back, draw-back, rusty old politicians who are afraid of progress. We are glad that we have very few worthy of such an unenviable designation in the temperance ranks, and we are sorry that there are any. We occasionally meet with a practical temperance man who thinks that the progressives will ruin everything, and that we must get back to the license system and moral suasion, before good will be done. There is no use of arguing the question in the paper, for not one of these poor souls take the Organ, and we will only commend them to the pity and compassion of our readers. Forgive them for their indifference in the hour of trial, they know not what they do. They can only injure us negatively, for they are too stupid to wake up and go to work on the other side.

The religion of Christ is peace and good will—the religion of Christendom is war and ill will.

Deserted Age.

One of the most touching sorrows of old age is solitude. To outlive the world in which we are born—to be the last survivor of our generation, is to any a melancholy position to occupy, but bleak and dreary in the extreme to him who has no hopes of a brighter existence beyond the grave. Our natural repugnance to death renders us willing to live on, but what sorrowful changes are produced by the lapse of a few years! One generation passes, another springs up; and he that passes on to third finds himself a stranger in the world. Familiar faces have disappeared; loved ones have passed away, joys are only remembered, and the remembrance is sorrowful. Busy thought brings back the vision of happiness departed, and never to be recalled; and a sense of painful loneliness falls over the heart although the world is as gay and as busy as ever.

We have felt melancholy thoughts obtruding themselves on our minds as we have gazed on a solitary tree that had escaped the axe which had prostrated whole forests besides; and now in its age, withered at the top and decayed in its branches, was left to encounter the peltings of every storm. But a sorrowful feeling has possessed us in beholding the aged and decrepid man, who had lost the fire of his eyes, and vigor of his limbs, and from whose side had been struck down all who felt an interest in his existence. The world passes on, and each succeeding year sunders some endearing tie; and sad and melancholy must be our lot if amidst this wreck, which the storms of death produce, we have no brightening hope of the renewal of our youth in a happier and a more genial clime.

☞ "Luther threw his inkstand at the Devil," saith history. The reformer was a man of true moral heroism, and boldly encountered an enemy. He was a man of iron nerve and indomitable will. No difficulties discouraged him—no dangers appalled him. The rack and the axe frowned at Werms, but he declared his determination to go there, though there should be as many devils as tiles on the roofs of houses. With a giant arm and a spirit which never knew defeat, he encountered the overshadowing iniquity of papal despotism, and shook it to the foundations.

We love that free, bold. never-say-die, indomitable spirit. There is a moral grandeur in its exhibitions. It bears itself so gallantly in the contest, and wears so haughty a crest. Enemies even, send up a cheer as that plume comes tossing into the field. There is something in it which commands respect. The odds may be against it. It may go beleagured by violent foemen; but with a kindling eye and a steady lip it plunges into the ranks and cuts to the right and left. If it falls, it falls with the feet to the foe, and that foe has a generous tear for the fallen, for the brave love the brave. Once convinced of the right and enlisted in its defence, it counts no odds. Expediency or policy are not in its vocabulary. It does not stop to ask what that or this man, or class of men, will think or say. "Is it right?" That question once determined, there is but one course. There is no deviation.—From its own warm throbbing heart, the spark is struck out, and others grow warm in its light until a band of moral heroes swarm at the breach of error and enter over its crumbling ruins.

Give us the men of bold, unhesitating action. They say less words, but do more deeds.—Cayuga Chief.

Mind One's own Business.—Women gossip of right; but we are sure, in Philadelphia, the men do a little too. Does a person move into a larger house? Instantly his business neighbors begin to wonder if he can afford it, implying, of course, by the question, that he cannot.—Does another buy a horse? There are ominous shakes of the head, and sage remarks, in whispers, about spendthrifts.—Does a third beautify his store, or enlarge his stock? Dark hints are heard respecting people that go too fast, and who are certain always to end in ruin. Has a fourth made a fortune? As people cannot now abuse him for spending money, they say he has grown haughty, so that, unless he is twice as affable as before, he is sneered at for being "purse proud."—A fifth, a sixth, a seventh, and so on endless, has some other pretended fault, over which his acquaintance talk behind his back, or hint of, winking as they smoke their cigars. There is a good deal of this minding other people's business to be found among even men in Philadelphia, and we suspect elsewhere also. Sensible people, however, find their own affairs as much as they can attend to properly.—Depend upon it, he who is always minding the business of other persons, is very apt to neglect his own, till it gets into a hopeless tangle.

Laws are generally not understood by three sorts of persons; namely—by those who make them, by those who execute them, and by those who suffer if they break them.

"I Can't."—Apollo! what a face, doleful as a hearse; folded hands; hollow chest, whining voice; the very picture of cowardly irresolution. Spring to your feet, hold up your head, set your teeth together, draw that fine form of yours up to the heighth that God made it; draw an immense long breath and look about you. What do you see? Why, all creation taking care of number one—pushing ahead like the car af Juggernaut, over live victims. There it is, and you can't help it. Are you going to lie down and be crushed?

By all that's glorious, no! dash ahead! You've as good a right to mount the triumphal car as your neighbor. Snap your finger at croakers; if you can't get round a stump, leap over it, high and dry!—Have nerves of steel, a will of iron; never mind side-aches, or heart-aches, or head-aches,—dig away without stopping to breathe, or to notice envy or malice. Set your target in the clouds and aim at it.—If your arrow falls short of the mark, what of that? Pick it up and go it again. If you should never reach it, you'll shoot higher than if you only aimed at a bush. Don't whine, if your friends fall off. At the first stroke of good luck, by Mammon! they'll swarm around you like a hive of bees, till you are disgusted with human nature.

"I Can't!" Oh, psaw! I'll throw my glove in your face, if I am a woman! You are a disgrace to corduroys. What! a man lack courage! A man want independence! A man to be discouraged at obstacles! A man afraid to face anything on earth, save his Maker! Why! Why, I'm a little "Bunker Hill," myself! I've the most unmitigated contempt for you! you little pusillanimous pussy cat! There's nothing manly about you except your whiskers. Fanny Fern.

Eloquence.—Eloquence, in it highest flights, is beyond all question the greatest exertion of the human mind. It requires for its conception a combination of the most exalted faculties: for its execution, a union of the most extraordinary powers. Unite in thought the most varied and dissimilar faculties of the soul—strength of understanding with redundancy of imagination; fire of conception with solidity of judgment; a retentive memory with an enthusiastic fancy; the warmth of poetry with the coolness of prose; an eye for the beauties of nature, with a command of the realities of life; a mind stored with facts, and a heart teeming with impressions—and you will form the elements from which the most powerful style of oratory is to be created. But this is not all. Physical powers, if not essential, are at least a great addition to the mental qualities required for its success. The orator must have at once the lengthened thought which is requisite for a prolonged argument, and the ready wit which can turn to the best advantage any incident which may occur in the course of its delivery. More than all is required the fixity of purpose, the energy in effort, the commanding turn, which, as it is the most valuable faculty of the mind, so it is the one most rarely to be met with in any walk of life, and least of all in combination with the brilliant and imaginative qualities which are the very soul of every art which is to subdue or captivare mankind.

Acknowledgments.

Received of Ransom Stattery 50 cents for the Chart 8 months; of J. A. Arnet 25 cents, for the Chart 4 months; of H. E. Roads, of Waveland, $6, for 8 copies for one year; of Brother Sage, of Allensville, $10, for 14 copies as far as it goes; of Thomas Fitton, Cedar Grove, $1, for the Chart; of J. D. Koffel, Leesburgh, for the Chart, $1; of D. E. Horton, Marion, for the Chart for Grant Division of the S. of T., $1; of J. H. Frazier, Delphi, $9; of F. M. Thomas, of Albia, $1; J. B. Innis, of Cross Plains, $1; of R. S. Frazier, Indianapolis, $1,25; and of Alexander Warner and others, at Metamora, $3.

About two weeks since we received a letter containing $4.50, but having laid the letter aside, before entering it in our books, it was lost, and we have forgotten the writer's name, and even his post-office. Those who sent the money will confer a favor on the Editor by informing him of their names and post-office address.

CONSTITUTION AND BY-LAWS,

We are still prepared to print Constitution and By-Laws, where the alterations are few from the copy recommended by the Grand Division, at the following rates:

100 copies, (or less)	$5 00
200 "	8 00
300 "	10 00

We will pay the postage on all ordered from us.

☞ All orders accompanied by the cash, will be promptly attended to.

Address, JOHN H. OHR,
Indianapolis, Indiana.

CHARTERS.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR A DIVISION S. OF T.

(Date.)

The undersigned inhabitants of ——, believing the Order of the Sons of Temperance to be well calculated to extend the blessings of total abstinence, and promote the general welfare of mankind, respectfully petition the Grand Division of the —— of ——, to grant them a Charter to open a new Division, to be called the —— Division, No. —, Sons of Temperance, of the —— of ——, to be located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves, individually and collectively, to be governed by the rules and usages of said Grand Division, and also, by those of the National Division.

Enclosed is the Charter Fee, $5 00. Books, $2 00.

This must be signed by at least eight persons of good character and standing in community, and sent to C. WOODWARD, G. S., Indianapolis, Ind, free of postage.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR A TEMPLE.

(Date.)

The undersigned, believing the Temple of Honor to be well calculated to cement more firmly our fraternal relations, and add to the general prosperity of the cause of Temperance, respectfully petition the Grand Temple of the —— of ——, to grant them a Charter to open a new Temple, to be called the —— Temple of Honor, No. —, of the —— of ——, to be located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves individually and collectively, to be governed by the rules and usages of the Grand Temple, and also by those of the Order at large.

Enclosed is the Charter Fee, $20 00.

To be directed to the G. W. R., free of postage.

This must be signed by at least twenty persons of good standing, and if not known to the G. W. T. or G. W. R., must send satisfactory references.

J. H. OHR, G. W. R.

Indianapolis, Ind.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR CADETS OF TEMPERANCE.

The undersigned, boys of ——, believing the Order of Cadets of Temperance to be well calculated to extend the blessings of total abstinence, and promote the general welfare of mankind, respectfully petition the Grand Section of the State of Indiana, to grant them a charter to open a new Section, to be called the —— Section, No. ——, Cadets of Temperance, of the State of Indiana, to be located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves, individually and collectively to be governed by the rules and usages of said Grand Section, and also those of the acting Head of the Order.

Enclosed is the fee for Charter, R. B.'s and officers' cards, $5 00.

It must also be stated whether the applicants are members of the Order or not; if they are, of what Section. The application to be directed to the Grand Secretary, free of postage.

It must also be certified by a W. P. or P. W. P, that the W. Patron elect is a Son of Temperance in good standing.

Address (post paid) HENRY OHR, G. S., C. o T., Indianapolis, Indiana.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR DAUGHTERS OF TEMPERANCE.

(Date.)

The undersigned, inhabitants of ——, believing the Order of the Daughters of Temperance to be well calculated to extend the blessings of Total Abstinence, and promote the general welfare of mankind, respectfully petition the Grand Union to grant them a charter to open a new Union to be called the —— Union, No. —, D. of T., of the State of Indiana, located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves, individually and collectively, to be governed by the rules and usages of said Grand Union.

Enclosed is the Charter Fee, $5 00.

The above must be signed by at least eleven females, of proper age and good standing in community.

Address (post paid,) Mrs. ELIZA RICHMOND, G. S. S., Indianapolis, Indiana.

SOMETHING NEW.

LATHROP & STEVENS, Wholesale and Retail Dealers in BOOTS AND SHOES, at the West room in the Bates House, Washington Street, Indianapolis.

We are now opening a new and splendid stock of Boots and Shoes of every variety and style, which we are receiving direct from the manufacturers.—We design to keep constantly on hand a good assortment of the best quality of goods manufactured, which we can warrant to give satisfaction to all who may give them a trial. We will sell by the case, dozen, or single pair, at low prices for cash.—Our stock consists in part of Gents' fine Cloth, silk warp, glove kid, buck, patent calf, and enameled Gaiters and Ties of every variety and style; Ladies' fine silk warp Gaiters, Buskins, Ties, Slippers and Boots; Misses' ditto; Men's calf, goat, kip, and thick Boots and Brogans; Boys' and Youths' ditto; assorted Ladies, kid, goat and calf Boots and Buskins; Misses' ditto. Also every variety of Children's Shoes. Come and see for yourselves.

LATHROP & STEVENS,
may 25 4w Indianapolis, Indiana.

TEMPERANCE INN, Bloomington, Indiana.

J. & S. M. ORCHARD, PROPRIETORS.

TRAVELLERS will find it to their advantage to call and try the accommodation of the TEMPERANCE INN. Stage office for all the different routes, in connection with this House. may25 6m ¶

The Cheapest Illustrated Paper for the Young.

PRICE ONLY TEN CENTS A YEAR, or nearly three papers for one cent, where 100 copies are taken.

Twenty-six numbers a year, and each number illustrated with from three to seven engravings.

The Youth's Penny Gazette,

A strictly Religious and Moral Paper, is published by the AMERICAN SUNDAY SCHOOL UNION and is designed to furnish the Children and Youth of the United States with reading matter, in a popular form, for the improvement of Mind and Heart.

It is published (not monthly, nor weekly, but) every other week, or twenty-six numbers in a year. It is religious but unsectarian, and the matter is carefully prepared with a view to the habits, character and prospects of American Youth

TERMS OF THE PENNY GAZETTE.

$10 a year, in advance, for 100 copies, to one address. $5 a year, in advance, for 40 copies, to one address. $3 a year, in advance, for 20 copies, to one address. Single subscriptions, 25 cents per year.

TERMS BY MAIL, POSTAGE PAID.

☞ When the postage is paid at the place of mailing, the terms are very low. For $15 remitted, we will send 100 copies of the paper for one year, to one address—we paying postage. For $7 remitted, we will send 40 copies of the paper to one address, for one year—we paying postage. For $3 50 remitted, we will send 20 copies of the paper for one year, to one address—we paying postage. Less than 20 cannot be sent at this cheap rate.

Subscriptions received at the Society's House, No. 146 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.

Feb 16 3w G. S. SCOFIELD, Agent.

COMMERCIAL COLLEGE,

(Late Commercial Institute,)

Of Indianapolis,

Established March 31, 1851.

INCORPORATED, 1853.

W. McK. SCOTT, A. M., Founder and President.

JAMES C. HAYDEN, (Late Professor in Bacon's Mercantile College, Cincinnati,)

PROF. OF BOOK-KEEPING AND PENMANSHIP.

THE Session will commence at College Hall as follows:

1st Session on the first Monday of September.
2d Session on the 1st Monday of November.
3d Session on the 1st Monday of January.
4th Session on the 1st Monday of March.
5th Session on the 1st Monday of May.

Having secured, permanently, the services of the distinguished Professor above named, and leased for a term of years the commodious and beautiful Hall formerly known as CONCERT HALL, but now named COLLEGE HALL, which is to be fitted up in a style of great elegance, taste, and convenience, the President would say, that this College now offers advantages superior to all others, for imparting a sound, thorough, and accomplished business education.

COURSE OF STUDIES.

The Course of Studies, as enlarged, will be as follows, viz:

1. Book-Keeping, by Single and Double Entry, in all its various branches, and its application to all kinds of business.
2. The Laws, Customs, and Usages of Trade and Commerce.
3. Mercantile Arithmetic, upon the short and easy system of cancelation, (taught in no other College.)
4. Commercial Law, in a series of Lectures, thorough and systematic.
5. Business Penmanship.
6. Commercial Correspondence.
7. Lectures upon Banking, Political Economy, and other subjects valusble to the business man.

EXPENSES.

Cards of Admission, invariably in advance, or secured, $25; Diplomas $3; Stationery $5; Boarding $2 50 per week; incidentals, at option of student, $15. Making entire expenses about $75.

On application, a Catalogne will be furnished, giving full particulars.

All letters will receive prompt attention on being directed, post-paid, to

june 8 W. McK. SCOTT, President.

"God never made his works for man to mend."
DR. FRANKLIN.

KIER'S ROCK OIL.

A NEW AND MOST IMPORTANT REMEDY FOR DISEASE.

DISCOVERED IN 1849.

IS drawn from a deep well near Pittsburgh—has been used with remarkable success in Ohio and Pennsylvania, and more Eastern States—and is now working its way West. An opportunity is now offered to the Afflicted for testing it. Where known and tried, it at once makes firm friends, and cures which are eloquent in its praise. Certificates of its power to heal are at hand—but we know well, reader, that such evidence, to have weight with you, now-a-days, must be in your own neighborhood.—You have only to try the Oil to be satisfied—it will SPEAK FOR ITSELF.

We have no war with the legion of Nostrums and Specifics of the day—we know but little about them—some say they are good for nothing. However that may be, the

Petroleum

will not be suppressed and kept back by reason of the above nostrums—duty and inclination both forbid it.

Those who are afflicted, are respectfully invited to get a Circular and look over the Directions for

Ague, Rheumatism, Piles, Diarrhœa, Flux, Tooth Ache, Burns, Worms, Scrofula, Coughs, Bronchitis, Croup, Old Sores, Cholera Morbus, Contractions of the Limbs and Joints, Sore Eyes, Blindness, Costiveness, Dyspepsia, and other Diseases.

By that time you may say, "it cures too much." But recollect it is not a HUMAN INVENTION, but compounded by Nature's master hand—and Nature does not do her work by halves.

The Oil is used both internally and externally.

As AGUE, SORE EYES, PILES, RHEUMATISM, and SCROFULA are so common in many parts of the West, we are constrained to say, that while this Oil will cure and relieve other diseases, it has been and is constantly used with most complete success in these cases.

☞ Price 50 cents per Bottle (half pint.)

Beware of all Rock Oil preparations, as some persons are offering a spurious article. Look for S. M. KIER'S name written on the label of the bottle.

For sale by the Druggists throughout Indiana, and by TOMLINSON BROTHERS, J. P. POPE & Co., S. ROSENGARTEN, WM. TILLEY, and at wholesale by W. W. ROBERTS, Indianapolis, Indiana.

R. M. LYON, Fort Wayne,
may25 10w Proprietor in the Western States.

D. CRAIGHEAD. R. BROWNING.

CRAIGHEAD & BROWNING,

Dealers in all kinds of

Drugs, Medicines, Surgical Instruments, Paints, Oils, Chemicals, Varnishes, Dye Stuffs, Glassware Window Glass, Brushes, Cosmetics, Spices, Cigars, Tobacco, Perfumery, &c.,

WASHINGTON STREET,
INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

ALL are respectfully invited to call and examine our stock and prices, as we feel confident we can render satisfaction both as to prices and quality of articles. Great care is taken in the selection of articles, in reference to their purity, as we endeavor at all times to keep such articles as are strictly pure and genuine. Every article will be waranted as represented. Orders from Physicians and others promptly attended to. Particular attention given to filling Prescriptions and compounding Medicines, which, in all cases, shall receive the personal attention of one of the firm. june 30

LITTLE, DRUM & ANDERSONS

WHOLESALE DEALERS IN

STAPLE AND FANCY DRY GOODS, BOOTS, SHOES, HATS, CAPS, STATIONERY, NOTIONS, TRIMMINGS, GROCERIES, HARDWARE, QUEENSWARE, AND GLASSWARE,

North side of Washington Street,
INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

WE are receiving Country Produce of all descriptions, and paying the highest market price. Dealers visiting Indianapolis are respectfully invited to call and examine our stock and prices, both for Produce and Merchandise generally. june30 tf

PLEASE TO READ THIS.

A good chance to clear from $500 to $1,000 a year.

AGENTS WANTED IN EVERY TOWN and COUNTY throughout the Union, to sell "SEARS' NEW AND POPULAR WORKS," universally acknowledged to be the best and cheapest ever published, as they certainly are the most saleable. Any active Agent may clear $500 or $1,000 a year. A cash capital of at least $35 or $50 will be necessary. Full particulars of the principles and profits of the Agency will be given on application, either personally or by letter. The postage must in all cases be paid. Please to address,

ROBERT SEARS, PUBLISHER,
jan 12 2m 181 William Street, New York.

The American Life and Health Insurance Company.

Office—No. 7, South Third St., Philadelphia.

Officers.

LEONARD JEWELL, President.
JAMES PEACOCK, Treasurer.
JOHN C. SIMS, Sec'y and Actuary.
THOS. S. SMITH, Solicitor

JOHN F. BIRD, FRED. A. FICKARDT, } Medical Examiners.

CHARLES WOODWARD, Indianapolis, Ind., General Agent for the State of Indiana.

THIS Company issues policies at Total Abstinence Rates, Joint stock Rates, and at Mutual Rates, which for $1000 on the life of a person 30 years of age, are as follows:

Age.	Total Abstinence.	Joint Stock.	Mutual.
30	$15.40	$19.60	$23.60

A further table of Rates will be furnished at the Office.

The condition in Total Abstinence rates (believed to be the lowest in the Union,) is entire forfeiture upon the departure of the Insured from Total Abstinence in its strictest sense.

Policies at Joint Stock and Mutual rates, contain no condition except as usual in Life Insurance.

HEALTH INSURANCE DEPARTMENT.

All Moneys received from the Insured, for Annual Premiums, after deducting expenses, will be divided among the Sick

The Public have for some time been familiar with the subject of Life and Health Insurance, but it is obvious that too little thoughts has been given to the latter. LIFE Insurance benefits our successors, while HEALTH Insurance directly benefits ourselves. It makes provision for a time of sickness, when the products of a man's industry are cut off, and want unites with Disease to aggravate his distress. It is at this gloomy period, when he is prostrated and helpless, and when despondency would otherwise overwhelm him, that the holder of a Health Insurance Policy will realize its benefits.

RATES, under 50 years of age,

$2,00	per year,	for	$2,00	per week.
3,00	"	"	3,00	"
4,00	"	"	4,00	"
5,00	"	"	5,00	"
6,00	"	"	6,00	"

Over fifty and under sixty.

$2,50	per year,	for	$2,50	per week.
3,75	"	"	3,00	"
5,00	"	"	4,00	"
6,25	"	"	5,00	"
7,50	"	"	6,00	"

When the Fund shall amount to Three Dollars and upwards for every person insured and sufficient to warrant an additional distribution, the weekly allowances will be increased in accordance with the Rules of the Policy.

All the members of a Temple or Division insured at greatly reduced rates.

Applications for Agencies in any of the cities or towns in the State, should be made to the undersigned, post paid, or in person.

As Agent for the above Company, I am prepared to receive applications for Policies at any of the above rates.

CHARLES WOODWARD, Agent,
At ADAMS & CO.'S Express Office.

J. L. MOTHERSHEAD, Medical Examiner.
june 30 '52-1y

Ohio Life Insurance Company,

Capital $100,000.

JOINT STOCK AND MUTUAL,

CINCINNATI.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS.

Wm. Burnet, Jno. N. Ridgway, Chas. Goodman,
S. Robert, E. S. Haines, Jno. M. Blair,
J. W. Donohue, Eden B. Reeder, Wm. Person.

WM. BURNET, President.

S. W. REEDER, Sec'y J. W. DONOHUE, Vice Pres't

Office in Reeder's Building, Third street, between Almy's and City Bank.

This Company insures Lives at the lowest rates consistent with safety, either upon the Joint Stock or Mutual plan.

In the Joint Stock Department, premium payable quarterly, semi-annually or annually. On the Mutual plan, one-half the premium paid in Cash, the balance by a note bearing six per cent. interest—the interest only payable annually. Persons insuring on the mutual plan, participate in the profits of the Company in that department.

The undersigned having been appointed agent for the above Company, is prepared to fill applications for Life Insurance, on favorable terms.

Any information on the subject and pamphlets explaining the nature and utility of Life Insurance, furnished without charge, at the office of the Agent.

C. WOODWARD, Agent.

Office at Adam's & Co.'s Express Office, Journal Building, Pennsylvania street, Indianapolis, Ind.
june 30, '52-1y.

JAMES HALL,

MERCHANT TAILOR,

No. 2. Temperance, Hall, Indianapolis,

Manufactu'ng & Clothing Emporium,

Wholesale and Retail Dealer in Ready Made Clothing, Cloths, Cassimers, Vestings, Trimmings, Trunks, Sachels, Canes, Umbrellas, Hats, Caps, a every description of Gentlemen's Furnishing.

Also:

General Agency for the sale of GRAND AND SUBORDINATE REGALIA, EMBLEMS, COSTUMES, &c., FOR THE ORDERS OF MASONS, ODD FELLOWS, TEMPLE OF HONOR, SON, DAUGHTERS, AND CADETS OF TEMPERANCE. oct27 1y

Railroad City Book Store.

COX & MATHES,

South side of Washington, between Illinois and Meridian streets,

INDIANAPOLIS, INDIANA.

AT wholesale and retail, Standard and Miscellaneous Works, Law, and Medical Books, School Books, Plain and Fancy Stalionery, Blank Books, Wall Papers, &c., &c. mar 2

CHEAP WATCHES & JEWELRY.

Good Gold Watches at $24!

WE are now in our new Room No. 1, Palmer House, with a lot of beautiful Watches and Jewelry which we are selling lower than ever heretofore sold in Indianapolis, for instance we sell

Good 18 K Case Gold Lepines at $24.
" 18 K " " Levers at $28.
" Silver Anchor Levers $12 to $18.
" " Cylenders, $9 to $12.
" " Quarter's $6 to $10.

In addition to the above we have a fine assortment of other description of Watches all of which we will sell lower than any other firm dare sell in the place. I have in my employ a very superior Watch Repairer who will always be on on hand to do watch repairing of every description. Mr. Michot has worked in Geneva, Paris, New York and other large cities and has had great experience in his Branch of the business. All Watches warranted for one year, and the money in all cases refunded, provided they do not give entire satisfaction.

feb9 tf E. W. NEFF.

SMALL CHANGE.

THE undersigned is prepared to furnish Merchants and others with three cent pieces from the United States Mint at Philadelphia, free of transportation, in sums of 30, 60, and 90 dollars, upon deposit of Gold or Eastern Exchange. Also cents and half cents, upon payment of frieght on gold to Philadelphia, or on Eastern Exchange free of freight.

C. WOODWARD, Agent,
june 30 Adams & Co.'s Express.

THE ONLY TRUE PORTRAIT OF WASHINGTON.

JUST PUBLISHED,

T. B. Welch's Magnificent PORTRAIT OF WASHINGTON.

Engraved (by permission) from Stuart's only original portrait, in the Atheneum, Boston.

THIS suberb picture, Engraved under the superintendence of THOMAS SULLY, Esq., the eminent and highly gifted artist, is the only correct likeness of Washington ever published. It has been characterised as the greatest work of art ever produced in this country. As to its fidelity, we refer to the letters of the adopted son of Washington, GEORGE WASHINGTON PARK CUSTIS, who says, "it is a faithful representation of the celebrated original," and to CHIEF JUSTICE TANEY of the Supreme Court of the United States, who says, "As a work of art its excellence and beauty must strike every one who sees it: and it is no less happy in its likeness to the Father of his country. It was my good fortune to have seen him in the days of my boyhood, and his whole apearance is yet strongly impressed on my memory. The portrait you have issued appears to me to be an exact likeness, representing perfectly the expression as well as the form and features of the face." And says SENATOR CASS, it is a life-like representation of the great original. PRESIDENT FILLMORE says, "the work appears to me to have been admirably executed and eminently worthy of the patronage of the public." Says MARCHANT the eminent portrait painter, and the pupil of Stuart, "your print to my mind is more remarkable than any other I have seen, for presenting the whole individuality of the original portrait, together with the noble and dignified repose of air and manner, which all who ever saw him considered a marked characteristic of the illustrious man it commemmorates."

For the great merits of this picture we would refer every lover of Washington to the portrait itself, to be seen at the office of this paper, and to the letters of the following Artists, Statesmen, Jurists and Scholars accompanying it.

ARTISTS.—Marchant and Elliott of New York; Neagle, Rothermel, and Lambdin, of Philadelphia; Chester Harding of Boston; Charles Fraser, of Charleston, S. C; and to the adopted son of Washington, Hon. Geo. W. P. Custis, himself an artist. STATESMEN.—His Excellency Millard Fillmore, Major Gen. Winfield Scott, Hon. George M. Dallas, Hon. William R. King, Hon. Daniel Webster, Hon. Lynn Boyd, Hon. Lewis Cass, Hon. Wm. A. Graham, Hon. John P. Kennedy, Hon. R. C. Winthrop, LL. D. JURISTS—Hon. Roger B. Taney, Hon. John Duer, Hon John McLean, Hon. Rufus Choate. SCHOLARS.—Charles Folsom, Esq. the well known Librarian of the Boston Atheneum, who says, "I would rather own it than any painted copy I have ever seen;" E. P. Whipple, Richard Hildreth, Hon. Edward Everett, LL. D., Jared Sparks, LL. D., Wm. H. Prescott, LL. D., Washington Irving, Ralph W. Emerson, Esq., Prof. T. C. Upham, J. T. Headley, Fitz Green Halleck, H. W. Longfellow, Wm. Gilmore Simms; and FROM EUROPE, Lord Talfourd, T. B. Macauley, Sir Archibald Alison, Lord Mayor of London, &c., &c. THE PRESS, throughout the entire Union, have with one voice proclaimed the merits of this suberb engraving.

To enable all to possess this valuable treasure, it is sold at the low price of $5 per copy.

Published by GEORGE W. CHILDS,
N. W. corner of Fifth and Arch sts., Philadelphia.
WILLIAM G. STEEL,
Sole Agent for the States of Ohio and Indiana.

This Portrait can only be obtained from MR. STEEL, or from his duly authorized agents.

Arrangements have been made with the Post Office Department, by which copies of the Portrait can be sent to any point, per mail, in perfect order.

☞ Persons by remitting FIVE DOLLARS, to WM. G. STEEL, Cincinnati, Ohio, will have a copy of the Portrait sent to them free of Postage.

☞ Magnificent Gilt Frames, got up expressly for these Portraits, furnished at the low price of $5 each.

JUST ISSUED,

A MAGNIFICENT PORTRAIT OF

General Jackson,

Engraved by T. B. WELCH, Esq., after the original portrait painted by T. SULLY, Esq.

This Portrait will be a match for the Washington, and is in every respect as well got up.

Price $5.00 per copy. Address as above.
nov 10-3m

REAL ESTATE AND GENERAL AGENCY OFFICE,

INDIANAPOLIS, INDIANA.

UNDER THE CONTROL OF W. M'K. SCOTT, Attorney & Counsellor at Law, and Notary Public.

The attention of the Agency will be devoted,

First—To the collection of debts and the payment of Taxes for non-residents in any county in the State. Also, the redemption of Lands sold for Taxes, sale, purchase or lease of Lands, purchase of adverse claims, examination and perfection of Title, &c., &c.

Second—To the prosecution of claims against the General Government, procuring Land Warrants, Patent Rights, and Pensions under the various Pension Laws, &c.

Third—All other Miscellaneous agencies as may be intrusted to the care of this office.

Fourth—The taking of Depositions and Attestation of all instruments requiring a seal

In all cases requiring an outlay of money for the benefit of individuals, the requisite funds must be transmitted in advance.

Prompt attention to all letters on business that are pre-paid. Address W. M'K. SCOTT,

Real Estate and General Agent,
jan 5-1y Indianapolis, Ind.

ADAMS & CO'S EXPRESS.

WE are now running a daily line East and West, accompanied by special messengers, and with the speed of the mails, running our own cars with the passenger trains.

Packages will be received at the cars up to the time of starting, and at our office until 1 o'clock each day.

We are prepared to transport packages, bank notes and specie, to and from any of the eastern cities, also, Louisville, Frankfort, and Lexington, Ky., St. Louis, Mo., or any points on the Ohio and Mississippi rivers; and to and from Terre Haute, and all intermediate points, and to forward freight from Terre Haute up and down the Wabash.

In addition to these, we have the most complete arrangements for transporting packages to and from California and Europe.

Exchange on England, Ireland, and Scotland, for sale, payable at any bank in the kingdom.

Foreign passage tickets; by Grinnell, Minturn & Co.'s line to Liverpool and London, constantly on hand, and for sale at the lowest rates.

Notes, drafts, and bills collected in any of the Eastern or Western cities.

Orders for goods to be returned by Express, sent free. Our rates of charges have been greatly reduced, and the public will find this a safe and expeditious method of transportation.

Indianapolis, June 30, 1852. ADAMS & CO.

Office in Indianapolis in Journal Building, west side Pennsylvania Street.

Office open during business hours.

june30 1y C. WOODWARD, Agent.

HANNAMAN & DUZAN,

DEALERS IN

DRUGS AND MEDICINES,

Surgical Instruments, Paints, Oils, Varnishes, Dye Woods, Medical and Window Glass, Brushes, Perfumery, Soaps, &c.

Washington, 3 doors west of Pennsylvania St.,

june 30 1y INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

THE ILLUSTRATED MAGAZINE OF ART.

THE five numbers of this Magazine which are published, place it at the head of publications of this kind No expense will be spared to make it in every respect worthy of the name, the "Illustrated Magazine of Art. The Engavings which are preparing for the future numbers are in the hands of first-class American and European Artists.

A Series of most interesting Tales will appear in it. "The School of Life," written and Illustrated by ANNA MARY, daughter of William and Mary Howitt, will shortly appear; also, "The Dead Bridal," an historical romance, illustrative of the most interesting period in the history of the Venetian Republic, by JONATHAN FREKE SLINGSBY, of the Dublin University Magazine; contributions, too, from WILLIAM and MARY HOWITT, PERCY B. ST. JOHN, and other writers of distinction in America and Europe

The following is a brief outline of the plan of the Magazine:

I. The Historical Department will abound with picturesque representations of the most remarkable events which have occurred in this and other countries; accompanied with interesting anecdotes and details from the pen of the most eminent writers of the day. This department will contain several splendid engravings, designed by the first artists of the world, and engraved in the highest style of modern art.

II. The Men and Women of the Age. This department will consist of beautifully executed portraits of the leading characters of the age, especially of those who figure on the stage of humanity as the world's benefactors. Each portrait will be accompanied by an interesting biographical sketch.

III. The Wonders of Natural History, Botany, and other sciences, will be developed in choice Engravings of Beasts, Birds, Fishes, Insects, Forest Trees, Flowers, Geological and Fossil Specimens, &c., with accompanying descriptions.

IV. The Triumphs of Architectural Art will be displayed in exquisitely finished representations of Cathedrals, Churches, Palaces, and other models of ancient and modern Architectural Art.

V. The Works of the Great Masters, selected from the principal Galleries of Art in the World. In general, the portrait of the Master will be given, accompanied with a highly finished engraved copy of his chef d'œuvre.

VI. The Scientific Portions will be rendered highly interesting by the familiar explanations, and the numerous diagrams which will accompany each subject.

VII. Manufactures. The principal manufacturing processes in use will be fully explained by minute details, and an abundance of beautiful engravings.

VIII. Machinery and Inventions will have due attention paid to them, and be described by numerous appropriate engravings.

IX. The Literary Department, independently of the various articles accompanying the illustrations, will comprise original and interesting narratives, contributed by the most popular writers of the day, with numerous illustrations.

In every respect, the "Illustrated Magazine of Art," will be decidedly

SUPERIOR TO ANY MAGAZINE OF THE DAY.

Each Monthly part will contain at least Thirty superb Engravings, four of which will be printed separately, on supefine Plate Paper.

The greatest care will be manifested in every department of production. The Paper will be of the first manufacture, and the Ink supplied from the celebrated Printing Ink Establishment of Messrs. Lawson & Co., of Paris. Six of the monthly portions, when completed, will form a volume which, for interest, originality, value and beauty, will defy competition. It will not only be an interesting family book, but a rich ornament for the drawing-room table, and a pleasant companion in the study.

The parts will appear on the First of every Month at Twenty-five Cents each.

ALEXANDER MONTGOMERY,
may 25 17 Spruce Street, New-York.

SPLENDIDLY ILLUSTRATED WORKS.

THE ALPS, SWITZERLAND, SAVOY AND LOMBARDY.

With the Magazine for June will be ready, Part I., price Twenty-five Cents, of a Magnificent Work to be completed in Twelve Monthly Parts, entitled

THE ALPS, SWITZERLAND, SAVOY AND LOMBARDY, with an account of the most recent Ascents to Mont Blanc, &c. By the Rev. Charles Williams. This work, when completed, will form a large thick Volume, in Imperial Octavo, containing upwards of Three Hundred beautiful Engravings, descriptive of the peculiar Scenery of those most interesting portions of Europe, with the Occupations of the Inhabitants, &c., &c.

Cassell's Natural History.

On the First of July will commence

CASSELL'S NATURAL HISTORY, which for variety, beauty and completeness, will claim to be considered as a first-class work, upon this most interesting subject. The First volume will be devoted to the Feathered Tribe of the Creation and will contain upwards of Three Hundred Engravings, in the first style of Art. The volume will be completed in Twelve Monthly Parts, Imperial Octavo. Price 25 cents each.

History of England.

On the First of July will appear Part I., price 25 cts. of THE ILLUSTRATED HISTORY OF ENGLAND, from the earliest period on record to the present time. Edited by ROBERT FERGUSON, LL. D.

This History, which is intended to form a great National Work, will extend to Four Volumes, Imperial Octavo; each Volume to be completed in Twelve Monthly Parts, price 25 cents each. The Work will comprehend the Political, Civil, and Domestic History of the Nation, and its Progress in Civilization, Literature, Art, &c. It will be profusely Illustrated with Engravings from Designs by GILBERT, PHILLIPPOTEAUX, WILLIAMS, and others. Representations of the most remarkable Events will be worked separately upon Plate Paper. The Portraits will form a complete Gallery, not only of the Monarchs, but of those individuals whose names are prominent in England's History. Also, Antiquities, including Autographs, Buildings, Costume, Furniture, Arms, Coins, Monuments, Manufactures &c., of each Epoch.

History of Hungary.

July First will be published, in one Handsome Volume, Imperial Octavo, price, One Dollar and Twenty-five Cents, in Cloth Boards,

THE ILLUSTRATED HISTORY OF HUNGARY, AND THE MAGYARS, from the Earliest Period to the clos of the late War. By EDWARD LAWRENCE GODKIN. The Volume will be Illustrated with One Hundred highly finished Engravings, including representations of the principal Battles; Portraits of the early Kings, and of the Statesmen and Generals who figured in the War of Independence; Costumes of the Peasantry, &c.; Views of the chief Towns and Fortresses, &c.; with an accurate Description of the Manners and Customs of the People, their Literature, Commerce, Arts, &c.

ALEXANDER MONTGOMERY,
may25 Publisher, 17 Spruce Street, New-York.

MANSION HOUSE, Cambridge City, Indiana.

J. CUNNINGHAM, Proprietor.

TRAVELLERS

Will find it to their advantage to call and try the accommodation of the MANSION HOUSE.

STAGE OFFICE also in connection with this House.
may 4 6m

INDIANA STATE LIBRARY

TEMPERANCE CHART.

A Weekly Journal:---Devoted to Temperance, Morality, Education, Literature, Useful Arts, Science, General Intelligence, &c.

J. W. GORDON, M. D., EDITOR.] ORGAN OF THE GRAND DIVISION OF INDIANA. [JOHN H. OHR, PRINTER.

VOL. II. INDIANAPOLIS, IND., WEDNESDAY, JUNE 15, 1853. NO. 51.

THE TEMPERANCE CHART,

IS PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY, BY THE GRAND DIVISION, S. of T. OF INDIANA.

Edited by J. W. Gordon, M. D.

To whom all Communications and Subscriptions must be addressed, post-paid.

OFFICE—in second story of Temperance Hall Building, Washington St., Indianapolis.

TERMS:

Single copy, one year,..... 75 cts.

☞ In advance in all cases,

TERMS OF ADVERTISING.—Circulation 4000 copies.

One Squre, (12 lines,) for one week,		$0 50
" "	for each subsequent insertion,	25
" "	for 3 months,	3 00
" "	for 6 months,	5 00
" "	for 1 year without alteration,	8 00
" "	for 1 year, with changes,	12 00

A reduction made on larger advertisements.

Cuts double the above rates.

Advertisements must be handed in by Saturday, of each week, to insure insertion.

Applications for advertising, or for any kind of Printing for the Order, must be made to

J. H. OHR, Indianapolis.

POETRY.

The Old Brandy Bottle.

You old brandy bottle, I've loved you too long,
You've been a false friend unto me;
When I met with you first I was healthy and strong,
And handsome as handsoue could be:
I had plenty of cash in my pocket and purse,
And my cheeks were as red as a rose,
And the day when I took you for better for worse,
I'd a beautiful aquiline nose.

But now only see, I'm a sight to behold,
The beauty I boasted has fled,
You might think I was nearly a hundred years old,
When I'm raising my hand to my head;
For it trembles and shakes like the earth when it quakes,
And I'm always spilling my tea;
And whenever I speak, I make awful mistakes,
Till every one 's laughing at me.

The ladies don't love me; and this I can trace
To the loss of my aquiline nose—
Like an overgrown strawberry stuck on my face,
Still larger and larger it grows—
And I havn't a cent in my pocket or purse,
And my clothes are all ragged and torn,
Oh! you old brandy bottle you've been a sad curse,
And I wish I had never been born.

You old brandy bottle, I'll love you no more,
You've ruin'd my body and soul;
I'll dash you to pieces—and now from this hour,
To give up both you and the bowl,
And I'll now go and sign—I can surely do worse—
On that pledge all my hopes I'll repose,
And I'll get back my money in pocket and purse—
I'll get back my beautiful nose.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Anecdote of Dan. Webster.

I well remember hearing my father tell the following anecdote, illustrative of the early genius of that great man whose loss a mighty nation mourns:—

Ebenezer Webster, the father of Daniel, was a farmer. The vegetables in his garden had suffered considerably from the depredations of a woodchuck, whose hole and habitation were near the premises.—Daniel, some ten or twelve years old, and his older brother Ezekiel, had set a trap, and finally succeeded in capturing the trespasser. Ezekiel proposed to kill the animal and end at once all further trouble from him; but Daniel looked with compassion upon his meek, dumb captive, and offered to let him go free. The boys could not agree, and each appealed to their father to decide the case. "Well, my boys," said the old gentleman, "I will be the judge, there is the prisoner (pointing to the woodchuck), and you shall be the counsel, and plead the case for and against his life and liberty."

Ezekiel opened the case with a strong argument urging the mischievous nature ef the criminal, the great harm he had already done, said that much time and labor had been spent in his capture, and now, if he was suffered to go and live again at large, he would renew his depredations, and be cunning enough not to suffer himself to be caught again, and that he ought now to be put to death; that his skin was of some value, and that to make the most of him they could, it would not repay half the damage he had already done. His argument was ready, practical, to the point, and of much greater length than our limits will allow us to occupy in relating the story.

The father looked with pride upon his son, who became a distinguished jurist in his manhood. "Now, Daniel, it is your turn; I'll hear what you have to say."

It was his first case. Daniel saw that the plea of his brother had sensibly affected his father, the judge, and as his large, brilliant, black eyes looked upon the soft, timed expression of the animal, and as he saw it tremble with fear in its narrow prison house, his heart swelled with pity, and he appealed with eloquent words that the captive might again go free. God, he said, had made the woodchuck; he made him to live, to enjoy the bright sunlight, the pure air, the free fields and woods.—God had not made him, or any thing in vain; the woodchuck had as much right to life as any other living thing; he was not a destructive animal, as the wolf and and the fox were; he simply ate a few common vegetables, of which they had a plenty, and could well spare a part; he destroyed nothing except the little food he needed to sustain his humble life; and that little food was as sweet to him, and as necessary to his existence, as was to them the food on his mother's table. God furnished their own food; he gave them all they possessed; and would they not spare a little for the dumb creature, who really had as much right to his small share of God's bounty, as they themselves had to their portion? Yea, more; the animal had never violated the laws of his nature, or the laws of God, as man often did; but strictly followed the simple, harmless instincts he had received from the hand of the Creator of all things. Created by God's hand, he had a right, a right from God, to life, to food, to liberty; and they had no right to deprive him of either. He alluded to the mute but earnest pleadings of the animal for that life, as sweet, as dear to him, as their own was to them, and the just judgment they might expect if, in selfish cruelty or cold heartlessness, they took the life they could not restore again—the life that God alone had given.

During this appeal the tears had started to the old man's eyes, and were fast running down his sunburnt cheeks; every feeling of a father's heart was stirred within him; he saw the future greatness of his son before his eyes; he felt that God had blessed him in his children beyond the lot of common men; his pity and sympathy were awakened by the eloquent words of compassion, and the strong appeal for mercy; and forgetting the judge in the man and the father, he sprang from his chair, (whilst Daniel was in the midst of his argument, without thinking he had already won his case,) and turning to his older son, dashing the tears from his eyes, exclaimed, "ZEKE, ZEKE, YOU LET THAT WOODCHUCK GO."—Boston Traveller.

London Literary Lions of the Day.

In a charming mansion in St. James' Place, secluded somewhat from the roar and tumult of the great city, still lives the venerable poet of the "Pleasures of Memory," whose great age (ninety years have rolled over his bald, ripe forehead), disqualifies him for taking his long-accustomed walks about the metropolis.

Mr. Rogers sat in Westminster Hall when Burke and Sheridan were pouring out their invectives against Warren Hastings, and all London was ringing with the applauses which eloquent Brinsley elicited on that occasion. He is, therefore, part and parcel of bygone days, and very good authority on what happened during the last sixty years.

In a fine large house in Tavistock Place, Tavistock Square, sits Charles Dickens, busy as a bee over "Bleak House," and "Household Words." On an afternoon, the loiterer in that vicinity may catch a glimpse of his thin hair, now sprinkled with gray, as it is tossed by the summer wind which visits his desk, as he sits writing in his ample writing room. It is not an unfrequent occurrence to meet him in a rail car, rushing out of London for a few days' respite at Brighton or Bath.

Thackeray has, ere this, got home again, and any fine day, between twelve and two o'clock, he may be found at the Garrick Club, in King street, Covent Garden, poring over a French newspaper, or chatting with Albert Smith over a mutton chop and Sherry additions. It is not an unusual thing to find him at one end of poor old Charles Kemble's ear trumpet, or vis a vis with Buckstone, the comedian, discussing old actors and defunct Drury Lane.

Walter Savage Landor is at home in Bath, having been expelled from Italy, on account of his "dangerous liberty doctrines." At rare intervals he goes up to London, and then his hosts of friends flock around him, and make his fine old face radiant with smiles at the profuse hospitalities poured around him.

In the village of Twickenham, in a modest brick house by the road side, muses Alfred Tennyson, the Poet Laureate of England. His own publisher only meets him once or twice a year, as he eschews London and loves privacy. As you walk by the side of the Thames at the sunset hour on a Sunday evening, sometimes the wide hat of Alfred, the bard of Locksley Hall is visible.

The Brownings are like swallows, flitting from clime to clime, but London is often in their way, and they may be met not unfrequently in the National Gallery, in Trafalgar square, or at the opera. Both are so delightful to encounter, this pleasure, like all exquisite enjoyments, is rare.

If one should try very hard to get a glimpse of the illustrious Thomos Carlysle, the great "Sartor Resartus" of modern Europe, he would find it a difficult matter. Thomas likes to be a lion, but he don't want anybody in his cage besides himself. He lives in Chelsea, and often comes to town, but to find him often is not common even to his best friends.

Macauley is a club man, and when he is not among his idols—the books of the British Museum—he may be met with in the brilliant halls of the Athenæum or the Reform. On a lazy, hazy, London day proper, he might with a certainty be counted on ever a folio at the British.

Dear, kind, gentle old Leigh Hunt toddling over the pavement in the Strand toward's his son's newspaper office, is a common occurrence. He lives a few miles from the dust of Fleet street, but he seems to love its dingy walls, and grows warm and eloquent over its rush and whirl. Is he the Skimpole of "Bleak House?" The knowing ones of London say he is.

To the left, as you go up Piccadilly to the Parks, stands a neat book shop, with Chapman & Hall over the door. The tall gentleman with the large nose and the waistcoat, and the elegant cravat, is Sir Edward Lytton, or Bulwer, as you may happen to call him. He is telling Mr. Chapman, who has his ear close to the Baronet's bosom, that the engraving just brought in for his inspection, is not quite right in the direction of the whiskers or the shirt collar. Spite of his dandy aspect and his affected drawl, no better hearted gentleman wields the fluent quill, than the author of "My Novel." Whenever he runs down from his elegant retreat at Knebworth to London, he does so many kind acts for the poor brother authors, that "Bulwer's guineas" are sure as morning suns or evening stars.—Boston Transcript.

The Throne of Solomon.

The following account of a remarkable piece of mechanism is taken from a Persian manuscript, called "The History of Jerusalem." It purports to be a description of the throne of King Solomon, and if the details are correctly given, it undoubtedly surpasses any specimen of mechanism produced in modern times, notwithstanding the wonderful inventions and improvements which have lately taken place in every brach of science:

"The sides of it were of pure gold, the feet of emerald and rubies, intermixed with pearls, each of which was as big as an ostrich egg. The throne had seven steps; on each side were delineated orchards full of trees, the hranches of which were composed of precious stones, representing fruit, ripe and unripe; on the tops of the trees were to be seen figures of beautifully plumaged birds, particularly the peacock, the etaub, and the kurges.—All these birds were hollowed within artificially, so as occasionally to utter a thousand melodious notes, such as the ear of mortal has never heard. On the first were delineated vine branches, having bunches of grapes, composed of various sorts of precious stones, fashioned in such a manner as to represent the different colors of purple, violet, green, and red, so as to render the appearance of real fruit. On the second step, on each side of the throne, were two lions, of terrible aspect, as large as life, and formed of cast gold. The nature of this remarkable throne was such, that when the prophet Solomon placed his foot on the first step, the birds spread forth their wings, and made a fluttering noise in the air. On his touching the second step, the two lions expanded their claws. On reaching the third step, the whole assembly of demons and fairies and men repeated the praise of the Deity.—When he arrived at the fourth step, voices were heard addressing him in the following manner: 'Son of David, be thankful for the blessings the Almighty has bestowed on you.' The same was repeated on his reaching the fifth step. On his touching the sixth, all the children of Israel joined them; and on his arrival at the seventh, all the throne, birds and animals, became in motion, and ceased not until he had placed himself in the royal seat, when the birds, lions, and other animals, by secret springs, discharged a shower of the most precious perfumes on the prophet; after which two of the kurgeses descended and placed a golden crown upon his head. Before the throne was a column of burnished gold, on the top of which was a golden dove, which held in its beak a volume bound in silver. In this book were written the Psalms of David; and the dove having presented the book to the king, he read aloud a portion of it to the children of Israel. It is further related, that on the approach of wicked persons to the throne, the lions were wont to set up a terrible roaring, and to lash their tails with violence; the birds also began to bristle up their feathers; and the assembly also of demons and genii to utter horrible cries, so that for fear of them no person dared be guilty of falsehood, but confess their crime. Such was the throne of Solomon, the son of David.

Liquid Eloquence

Paul Denton, a Methodist preacher in Texas, advertised a barbacue, with better liquor than that usually furnished. When the people were assembled, a desperado in the crowd cried out, "Mr. Paul Denton, your reverence has lied. You promised us not only a good barbacue, but better liquor. Where is the liquor?" "There," answered the Missionary, in tones of thunder, and, (says a Yankee contemporary,) pointing his motionless finger at the matchless double spring, gushing up in two strong columns, with a sound like a shout of joy, from the bosom of the earth.—"There!" he repeated, with a look terrible as lightning, while his enemy actually trembled on his feet, "there is the liquor which God, the Eternal, brews for all his children!"

"Not in the simmering still, over smoky fires choked with poisonous gases, and surrounded with the stench of sickening odors and rank corruption, doth your Father in heaven prepare the precious essence of life, the pure cold water; but in the green glade and grassy dell, where the red deer wanders, and the child loves to play—there God brews it: and down, low down in the deepest valleys, where the rills sing; and high upon the tall mountain tops, where the storm-cloud broods and the thunder storms crash: and away far out on the wide, wild sea, where the hurricane howls music, and the big waves roar the chorus, sweeping the march of God—there He brews it, that beverage of life, health-giving water.

"And everywhere it is a thing of beauty, gleaming in the dew-drop, singing in the summer rain, shining in the ice gem, till the trees all seem turned to living jewels, spreading a golden veil over the setting sun, or a white gauze around the midnight moon, sporting in the cataract, sleeping in the glacier, dancing in the hail shower, folding its bright snow curtains softly about the wintry world, and weaving the many-colored iris, that seraph's zone of the sky, whose warp is the raindrop of earth, whose woof is the sunbeam of heaven, all checquered over with the celestial flowers, by the mystic hand of refraction. Still, always it is beautiful—that blessed life-water! No poison bubbles on its brink; no madness or murder; no blood stains its liquid glass; pale widows and starving orphans find no tears in its depths, no drunkard's shrieking ghost from the grave cursing in words of eternal despair. Speak out, my friends! would you exchange it for the demon's drink—alcohol?"

A shout, like the roar of a tempest, answered "NO!"

Early Impressions.

The old monks of the middle ages had a way of erasing the ancient writings from parchment, that they might substitute the legend of a saint for the book of Livy.—But there is no art of monks, no device of chemists, no tears of repentance, even, which can blot from the child's mind the early impressions received in the school room. They strike through like the red letters on our bank bills.

Kinds words are the brightest flowers of earth's existence; they make a very paradise of the humblest home that the world can show. Use them, and especially round the fireside circle. They are jewels beyond price, and more precious to heal the wounded heart, and make the weighed-down spirit glad, than all other blessings the earth can give.

As there are some faults that have been termed faults on the right side, so there are some errors that might be denominated errors on the safe side. Thus we seldom regret having been too mild, too cautious, or too humble; but we often repent of being too violent, too precipitate, or too proud.

It is in the power of every man to preserve his probity; but no man living has it in his power to say that he can preserve his reputation, while there are so many evil tongues in the world, ready to blast the fairest character, and so many open ears ready to believe their reports.

Those who wish for what they have not, forfeit the enjoyment of what they have. Set a just term to your wishes, and when you have touched it, make a stand; happiness only begins when wishes end, and he that hankers after more, enjoys nothing.

It often happens that those are the best people whose characters have been injured by slanderers; as we usually find that to be the sweetest fruit which the birds have been pecking at.

A man that has nothing to do, is generally doing wrong. If you would keep out of deviltry, therefore, have as little to do with idleness as possible. Give a boy a holiday, and in less than an hour a brindle dog will have him by the corduroys for robbing an apple orchard.

We may glean knowledge by reading, but the chaff must be separated from the wheat by thinking. Knowledge is proud that he has learned so much! Wisdom is humble that she knows no more.

Avarice has been termed, "the vice of little minds." And though the vice of a little mind, it is by no means a little vice, but one of the largest, as it is insatiable in its desires, and unlimited in its cravings.

But for pride, many a man who sits in the poor-house porch to-day, might have rested in the shadow of his own household tree.

There are many doublings in the human heart; do not think you can find out the whole of a man's real character at once.

The face of nature is the footprint of God.

HONOR.—What is honor but the height and flower-top of morality, and the utmost refinement of conversation? Virtue and honor are such inseparable companions that the heathen would admit no man into the temple of honor who did not pass into it through the temple of virtue. Princes, indeed, may prefer honor, or rather titles and names of honor, but they are man's and woman's own actions which must make him or her truly honorable. And every man's life is the herald's office whence he must derive and fetch that which must blazon him to the world; honor being but the reflection of a man's own actions, shining brighter in the face of all about him, and from thence rebounding on himself. It teaches a man not to revenge a contumelious or a reproachful world, but to be above it, and, therefore, it was greatly spoken by Caius Marius—he said that he valued not what men would say of him, for, if they spoke true, they must needs speak honorably of him; if otherwise, his life and manners should be their confutation. And doubtless it is a truer and nobler vindication of a man's honor to clear off and confute a slander by his own life than by another man's death—to make his innocence and his virtue his compurgators; and not to fight, but to live down and shame the calumniator.

v. 2 # 51

TEMPERANCE CHART.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.
WM. HANNAMAN, C. E. BABB,
JAMES HALL, R. T. BROWN,
JOHN B. ABBETT.

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 15, 1853.

Temperance at Greenfield.

The Sons of Temperance at Greenfield, in Hancock county, held a meeting a few weeks ago, which was all that could have been desired. The attendance was large and spirited. The most determined efforts are being made to dry up the streams of vice and death that have swept over that county for the last few years. Every thing indicates that the good cause will triumph. "No license" carried the day there by a large majority, and, not like it has been here, the law has been nobly enforced. Their officers go about the discharge of their duties with alacrity and effect; and the result is, that, although only a few weeks have passed away since the election, there is little or no liquor sold in the county. His Honor, Judge Gooding, metes out justice to the scamps that dare violate the law, and the officers of the court are not so fond of oysters or office, as to earn the contempt of honest men by winking at crimes they are sworn to bring to punishment.

The meeting was ably addressed by our Prosecuting Attorney, R. A. Riley, Esq., and Dr. Wm. C. Thompson, whose stirring appeals awoke the most exalted enthusiasm in the multitude. It has been our pleasure to listen to both these able advocates of progressive Temperance Reform. We know, therefore, that the audience had a "feast of reason and flow of soul." Hurrah for Greenfield!!

Temperance does not lack Advocates.—We mentioned last week that our present liquor law was undergoing the scrutiny of the Supreme Court. It will soon be known whether it has any force or none. We have received an able printed brtef prepared by Messrs. Orth & Brakett, of Lafayette, in answer to Mr. Pettit's, already noticed. It is worthy of the high reputation of its authors; and clearly presents, in our opinion, the only just view of the case. Our cause will not want advocates—the ablest and best men will stand ranged on the side of Virtue and Temperance, against the lawless and disobedient.

Dennis Malony was fined yesterday fifty dollars, by Esq. Sullivan, for selling spirituous liquors, contrary to law. Stick it to 'em. A large majority of the voters of this township have decreed that "fire-water" shall not be sold among them: therefore no man has a right to sell spirituous liquors except as provided by the late temperance law, and if any one violates it he does it knowingly, and should be severely dealt with.—Journal.

Constable Stapp officiated on this occasion. and brought the offender before the justice. Why is it that our Marshal has not been accused of doing the like in a single instance? Can any one answer? We hope a can of oysters, &c., &c., has not prevented him. It is certain, if he were not as blind as an owl at noon-day, he could not fail to find offenders.

Strawberry Entertainment.—Do n't forget the Feast of Fruits, Flowers, and Feminine Graces, to-night at Masonic Hall. The Depot Church Ladies will spare no pains to make this equal to those that have preceded it. This Church needs help, and we hope the people will attend in great numbers and manifest their liberality.—Journal.

Now that the party is over, we should be pleased to know, if the Local of the Journal attended; and if so, whether he had the privilege of sitting down to a dish of "Feminine Graces?" We ask for information, as we were still an outsider.

The Ladies' Christian Annual.

This beautiful little parlor visitant, under the care of its estimable editor, James Challen, has completed its first year.—None of our monthlies have been more welcome—none have left us less to regret for the time spent in their perusal than it. It pours upon the mind of the public a healthy and pure stream of fresh and vigorous thoughts; and will be felt in its influences when the minds in which they originated shall have been transplanted to other fields than those of earth. It began its career at the "Queen City of the West" but soon crossed the mountains and is now permanently located in the "Quaker City." It will always be welcome to our table, while it continues, as it has heretofore been, a medium of pure thought and high tendencies.

It is published by the Editor, and sent to subscribers. at the following rates:

Single copies, one year, $1.00, in advance.

To clubs, 6 copies,	one year,	$5.00
13	"	10.00
27	"	20.00
50	"	36.00

Payments invariably in advance.

A "Sick of Fitness."—Our friend, the Editor of the Chart, takes exceptions to the little fantasy which we penned last Wednesday, while the transporting scenes of the Strawberry Supper of the night before dwelt in our senses. The Doctor's intention is to give a back lick at the plan of raising funds for Church purposes by Strawberry Suppers, Fairs, and other social entertainments; and while this is his design he is too great an admirer of woman's sense of right and wrong to say openly that such means are not proper.—You admit, Doc., that you were an "outsider." No wonder, then, that you are so sour in your feelings. Without assuming too much in prescribing to a physician, we advise you to attend the Strawberry Supper in Masonic Hall to-morrow night. Bathe your senses in the purifying element of woman's smiles: then take a potion consisting of equal parts of cheerful gossip with the young ladies; grave disquisition with the old folks; "music with its voluptuous swell;" promenading with some lady of good gait and gab; hearty laughter, and genuine good nature—take this potion to the dregs, wash it down with the numerous good things which may be purchased there cheap, and then reject from your diet all the acid of opposition to innocent social pleasure, and if you are not cured, you are a "gone case." We are confident you will be healed, however, if you only follow the directions "with a will."—Journal.

Now, Mac, you don't expect us to take that prescription, do you? We are fearful your compound might prove poisonous, for it is manifestly composed of incompatibles:—"Cheerful gossip," and "grave disquisition;" "voluptuous swell," and "gait and gab;" "hearty laughter," and "good nature"—why really that would be a singular compound. Inflated with poetry as you certainly are, we would have supposed the idea of "dregs" resulting from such a compound would not have entered into your head. Is it possible there would be a residuum in the form of "dregs" from such a compound. How much of each of the simples of which it is composed would be found among the "dregs?" What part of "cheerful gossip," voluptuous swell," "gait and gab," etc., would be left as dregs? Or would they all result in one item of bitterness, to be shuddered over at the mourner's bench as a part of the follies of life? It is not for us to say; but it seems that such results might follow from scenes manifestly as incompatible as those of the strawberry party, and the altar of God.

J. C. Richardson, of "the Garland," of Cincinnati, called at our sanctum on last Saturday; and thus enabled us to make personally an acquaintance which, through his valuable sheet, we had already been most happy to enjoy. He is engaged actively in the promotion of our good cause; and has our warmest wishes for his success.

"The whole Christian religion lies in this: Faith in Jesus Christ as the means of salvation; the Gospel, as the source of light; the Spirit of God, as our our guide; the love of God, as our law; Heaven, as our home; eternal life, as our end."

We enhance the reputation of some with a view of depreciating that of others: and sometimes we should not praise the Prince de Conde and M. de Turenne so much, if we did not wish to blame them both.

The Pardoning Power.

It is to us a matter of regret that His Excellency, Governor Wright, should deem the vendors of alcoholic poisons proper recipients of executive favor, when they find themselves visited by the penalties of the laws which they have violated. It seems, nevertheless, that such is the fact; for in a single instance in ono of our counties, he has remitted to one whisky seller one hundred and seventy dollars, which a court had imposed for a wilful violation of law—law passed by the Legislature, and sanctioned by a large majority of the voters of Indiana.

Now, it might strike one at first glance, that the people really do not know what is necessary for their well-being; and that His Exce'lency, out of his abundant wisdom and benevolence, has in this instance set them right in that regard. We do not deny that there are circumstances where the Executive merits applause and not censure for interferences of this kind—where clemency may be shown with advantage to the people and honor to him who is their agent in manifesting it; but it is respectfully submitted whether the case of the liquor fiend is among such cases. He sells his poison from motives low as any gambler or thief that ever stole his neighbor's goods. He knows that his traffic is one of unmixed evil to community; that it is forbidden by every consideration that should induce men to act; and that it conduces to his individual profit only. He knows, too, that the law and his fellow-citizens have forbidden it. Yet propelled by sheer selfishness, he sells it. He is taken up, tried, and fined: and His Excellency wipes out the fine with a single dash of his pen, and informs the people, that their power shall be employed to thwart their will, and turn upon them the lawless and disobedient. Better, far better, release a whole menagerie of tigers, lions, bears, hyenas, and poisonous serpents. These might be got rid of in a way that would end their depredations; but with John Pettitt to argue that our law is unconstitutional, and His Excellency to pardon all who may suffer under its provisions, what hope have we, except through the judiciary, to rid ourselves of the hordes of whisky monsters that are preying upon our people?

It is understood that His Exeellency has in one instance in this city, interfered for the relief of a scurvy Irishman, who, too mean to acknowledge that he sells liquor in violation of law, charges his little daughter with committing the crime for which he was fined. When shall these things end? Will His Excellency let the justice of the peace in our State know, that, although they may fine for petty offences, he can pardon even down to the pettiest?

Humor.—The eccentric Carlyle thus discourses concerning humor:

"The last perfection of our faculties, says Schiller with a truth far deeper than it seems, is that their activity, without ceasing to be sure and earnest, become sport. True humor is sensibility, in the most catholic and deepest sense; but it is this sport of sensibility; wholesome and perfect therefore; as it were, the playful teasing fondness of a mother to her child.

"That faculty of irony, of caricature, which often passes by the name of humor, but consists chiefly in a certain superficial distortion or reversal of objects, and ends at best in laughter, bears no resemblance to the humor of Richter. A shallow endowment this; and often more a habit than an endowment. It is but a poor fraction of humor; or rather, it is the body to which the soul is wanting; any life it has being false, artificial, and irrational.—True humor springs not more from the head than from the heart; it is not contempt, its essence is love; it issues not in laughter, but in still smiles, which lie far deeper. It is a sort of inverse sublimity; exalting, as it were, into our affections what is below us, while sublimity draws down into our affections what is above us. The former is scarcely less precious or heart-affecting than the latter; perhaps it is still rarer, and, as a test of genius, still more decisive. It is, in fact, the bloom and perfume, the purest effluence of a deep, fine, and loving nature; a nature in harmony with itself, reconciled to the world and its stintedness and contradiction, nay, finding in this very contradiction new elements of beauty as well as goodness."

Truth is a rock of strength, sufficient to bear the universe: error, a mire in which bodies sink in proportion to their gravity.

Horrid Murder.

A few days since a Mr. Vice, of this city, died of delirium tremens. He had long been a customer of our groggeries, and had seen, step by step, every element of his prosperity depart, until reputation, friends, and even hope were gone.—Pinched by dire necessity, and haunted by the dim remembrances of what he once was, he resolved, as such poor victims often resolve, to quit the city, where his old associations rendered his reformation hopeless. But he had no means to carry out this resolution.

A single bed, however, was left; and it was at last agreed between him and his stricken wife, that this should be sold, and the money obtained by the sale, appropriated to the payment of their fare from this city to seme other abode. The bed was sold; but, the victim was destined never to escape. The eyes of such men as GARNER, FORD, and DILL and DAVIS were upon him. They got his money and gave him poison in return.—Leaving his last farthing with his destroyers, he returned to his cheerless home to die. We need not say how he died. The awful agony of his last struggle; the more than midnight blackness that enveloped his entrance into the dark valley; and the bitter, burning tears shed over his grave by his heart-broken wife—these may not be described.

Such scenes call for action on the part of the friends of humanity. It is our duty to ferret out and drive out the murderers; and to minister to the wants of those whom they have robbed and made desolate.

Dill and Davis.—It was our intention to have arraigned these men at the bar of an outraged public opinion, in the present number; but we have not yet obtained all the facts necessary to expose their nefarious practices fully as we intend to do.—There is such studied concealment on their part that it is next to impossible to detect their deep iniquity. They deal in more unlawful ways and wares than the liquor and fish-berry business; and, if we are not greatly mistaken, we shall be able to drag them to the light—a work that, if our Marshal had either eyes, or energy, or sense of propriety, would not be left to our hands.

Good and True.—A man, says Doctor Franklin, as often gets two dollars for the one he spends in informing his mind, as he does for a dollar he lays out in any other way. A man eats up a pound of sugar, and it is gone, and the pleasure he has enjoyed has ended; but the information he gets from a newspaper is treasured up in the mind to be enjoyed anew, and to be used whenever occasion or inclination calls for it. A newspaper is not the wisdom of one man, or of two men; it is the wisdom of the age, and of past ages, too. A family without a newspaper is always half an age behind the times in general information; besides, they can never think much nor have much to talk about. And then there are the little ones growing up in ignorance without any taste for reading. Besides all these, there is ihe wife, who when the work is done, has to sit down with hands in her lap, and nothing to amuse her or divert her mind from the toils and cares of the domestic circle.—Who, then, would be without a newspaper? [Do you take the Temperance Chart?]

Sticking to Principles.—About thirty-five years ago, there resided in the town of Hebron, a certain Dr. T——, who became very much enamored of a young lady in the same town. In due course of time they were engaged to be married.—The Doctor was a strong and decided Presbyterian, and his lady-love as strong and decided a Baptist. They were sitting together one evening, talking of their approaching nuptials, when the Doctor remarked, "I am thinking, my dear, of two events which I shall number among the happiest of my life." "And pray, what may they be, Doctor," asked the lady.—"One is the hour when I shall call you my wife for the first time." "And the other, if you please?" "It is when we shall present our first-born for baptism." "What, sprinkled?" "Yes, my dear, sprinkled." "Never shall a child of mine be sprinkled." "Every child of mine shall be sprinkled." "They shall be, ha?" "Yes, my love." "Well, sir, I can tell you then, that your babies won't be my babies. So good night, sir." The lady left the room, and the Doctor left the house. The sequel to this true story was, that the Doctor never was married, and the lady is an old maid.

The desire of appearing clever often prevents our becoming so.

Beauties of Ignorance.

[A paper, printed at Tipperary, in Ireland, gives the following account of a case of superstition, and its melancholy consequences. There was no cruelty of purpose in this; It was sheer ignorance, only.—Ed.]

"A man of the name of James Mahony, who lives on the demesne of Heywood, the property of Mr. Charles Riall, had a son of the age of six or seven, a most delicate child. It appears the boy had been confined to bed, for two years, with an affection of the spine; and, being a very intellectual child, and accustomed to make the most shrewd remarks about everything he saw and heard passing around him, his parents and the neighbors were led to the conclusion that he was a fairy! Under this impression, a consultation took place, at the house of Mahony, and the result was, that the intruder from the 'good people' should be frightened away; and, accordingly, on Tnesday night last, the poor, dying child was threatened with a red-hot shovel and a ducking under a pump, if he did not disclose where the real John Mahony was; and so successful were the actors in their scheme devised for the expulsion of the fairy, that the feeble child, after being held near the hot shovel, and also having been taken a part of the way to the pump, told them he was a fairy. and that he would brlng back the real John Mahony, the next evening, if they gave him that night's lodging. This occurred on Tuesday night last, and the child was dead the next morning. When our active stipendiary magistrate, Mr. William Nash, heard of the matter, he immediately had four persons, named Pierce Whelan, James and Henry Beresford, and James Mahony, taken into custody, as being implicated in the unprecedented affair; and, on yesterday, an inquest was held on the body, before Mr. William Ryan, coroner, when several witnesses proved the facts as stated above, and said, they had seen the shovel prepared to a red heat, and the child placed over it, close enough to burn him. Mr. Nash said, that such a case of ignorance, cruelty, and superstition, should be exposed before the world. Dr. John Smith deposed, that the child was in a very debilitated state for some time before its death; that it labored under a curvature of the spine, and that the debility produced by the affection caused death.—Ans. to Mr. Nash: If anything was done that could cause excitement, when that excitement had subsided, a greater degree of debility may be superadded, which would accelerate death. The investigation here closed, and the jury, after deliberation for about twenty minutes, returned a verdict of, 'Died by the visitation of God.'"

[The true verdict would have been,—"Died by ignorant parents."—Ed.]

Ignorant parents may have been the cause of death; but the remote cause undoubtedly was the undue influence of a despotic Church and priesthood.—Editor Chart.

Tom Corwin--Good Advice.

Mr. Harvey, the Washington correspondent of the Philadelphia North American, tells the following tale:

"About three years ago, a young man presented himself to Mr. Corwin for a clerkship. Thrice was he refused, and still he made a fourth effort. His perseverance and spirit of determination awakened a friendly interest in his welfare, and the Secretary advised him in the strongest possible manner to abandon his purpose, and go to the West, if he could do better outside the departments. 'My young friend,' said he, 'go to the North-west, buy one hundred and sixty acres of government lands—or, if you have not the money to purchase, squat on it; get you an axe and mattock, put up a log cabin for your habitation, and raise a little corn and potatoes; keep your conscience clear, and live like a freeman, your own master, with no one to give you orders, and without dependence upon anybody. Do that and you will be honored, respected, influential, and rich. But accept a clerkship here, and you sink at once all independence, your energies become relaxed, and you are unfitted in a few years for any other and more independent position. I may give you a place to-day, and kick you out again to-morrow; and there 's another man over there at the White House, who can kick me out, and the people, by and by, can kick him out, and so we go. But if you own an acre of land, it is your kingdom, and your cabin is your castle—you are a sovereign, and you will feel it in every throbbing of your pulse, and every day of your life will assure me of your thanks for having thus advised you." If the thousands who so ardently strive for places under government would ponder well these words and exercise a sound discretion in their application, thus many a young and gallant spirit would be saved from inanition to be useful to the world; and a joy rather than a grief to its possessor."

Correspondence.

For the Temperance Chart.

Prohibition--A Song.

Suggested by the late Meeting held in Concert Hall, Philadelphia, on the subject of Prohibition.

BY JAMES CHALLEN.

I.

Prohibition! Prohibition!
Let us form a coalition,
Strong and mighty as our mountains,
Thundering, as their gushing fountains,
Flowing now, and flowing ever,
'Till they swell a noble river;
For a voice is heard in sadness,
Heard in wailing and in madness,
Which shall turn to joy and gladness,
Louder still, and louder sounding,
O'er our hills and valleys bounding,
From our sisters and our brothers,
From our fathers and our mothers.
Prohibition—for our dying,
Prohibition—for us sighing,
See—the foe—is from us flying.

II.

Prohibition! Prohibition!
Let us form a coalition,
Like our fathers who in story,
Won immortal fame and glory,
When their rights had been invaded,
Chain'd, insulted, and degraded,
Up they rose, like clouds in heaven
By the gathering tempests driven,
When the gnarled oaks are riven,
Hark! The voice is louder sounding,
O'er our hills and valleys bounding,
From our sisters and our brothers,
From our fathers and our mothers,
Prohibition, sternly crying,
Prohibition, for the dying,
Prohibition, for the signing,
See—the foe—is from us flying.

Philadelphia, May 25, 1853.

For the Chart-

Died, on Wednesday evening, the 8th inst., HIRAM BROWN, ESQ., of this city.

The announcement of the death of Hiram Brown fell cold upon the hearts of hundreds on last Thursdry morning. It seemed but a day since he had been moving in our streets and courts of justice, as had been his wont for many years. His disease was congestion of the brain, his illness but of four days' duration, although he had been in feeble health for months. He was a native of Pennsylvania, for many years a resident of Lebanon, Ohio, and for the last thirty a citizen and prominent member of the bar of Indianapolis. His age was about sixty-one years.

Noted for his ingenuity, his acumen and eloquence, he has in many a heady fight, grappled with the master spirits of the Indiana bar, with no doubtful success. With a musical voice, a measured perfection of sentences, and an unfailing flow of language, at all times, he spoke well, and when occasion required, rose naturally and easily into a powerful eloquence.—He was an off-hand speaker, and relied, perhaps, too much on tbe impulse of the hour. He was a man of genial, humorous temperament, at times rising into wit of polished sharpness, and then gliding off into the slyest and shyest drolleries. He was not a student nor a scholar, but a man of broad common sense and keen discrimination, and of that practised sagacity and unflagging energy that commands success.

As a citizen he stood up among the best friends of good order and good morals, and men of public spirit. His zeal in the cause of temperance was active, wakeful, and efficient; he was an advocate of its principles when and where it was weak and unpopular; and now in that its dawn of triumph is breaking, he stood upon the right side, battling as of yore, and hailing the coming brightness.

Perhaps no one among us outshone Mr. Brown in the social circle. Affable, bland, gentle, his humor bubbled up a perpetual fountain. His memory was stored with anecdote, while his fancy warmed and kindled it into life.

Like all of us, Mr. Brown had his faults, but they were so much over-balanced by his better parts, that no one will deny, that it was well that he lived; that he was no ordinary man in mind, in moral courage, in influence, and in action; that he leaves a wide void in society not easily filled; that his name will long live among the people, in the forum, throughout the State;—that his children may regard with pride as well as devotion the memory of their father; that his friends can look backward with satisfaction upon his well-spent career, and forward to the rewards of a better world than this.

What we Labor for.

We have often been asked this question—What are you laboring for? It would seem that no answer was necessary—that the state of society would itself point out what we labor for, and the necessity of that labor.

Look at that gathering at a fair: see some of them staggering about under the vilest agency which Hell has employed to people its dominions! No sense of pride keeps that poor fellow from rolling about in the mud—no love for the partner of his bosom, prevents him from spending his money for rum; no love to his children keeps him from degrading them by his drunken frolic, and why? Rum has stolen his honest pride; crushed his love for his wife and his hope for his children,—it is for this we labor.

Look at this house, or hovel. There sits a poor woman plying her needle with an earnestness and softness that shows that she is not given to laziness. The room is scantily furnished; the furniture is broken; the crockery is in a like condition; the clothing of the woman and the covering of the bed are scaree enough to keep the cold from her. And why is this? Why does the poor woman toil thus long and hard, and yet have so few necessaries? She has not a depraved look; there is pride, even nobility in her eye; and though now thin and sallow, and her eyes red with weeping and working long, long and late, she has the impression of former beauty; she has seen better days. Why is it thus, why so poor, so forlorn, so wretched? Her husband is a drunkard, and steals, yes steals her earnings to fire his brain with rum. It is for such as her we labor.

Look at that poor little boy selling newspapers. No shoes cover his feet; his hat is minus of a rim, and shows the little fellow's hair through the top; his pants have a rent on the knee, and various patches are seen on his coat. All these betoken poverty, wretchedness, and woe. But why does this little boy roam the streets to sell papers? He is a child that could learn; he should go to school; his eye and brow show that he is not a dull fellow; they betoken intelligence, decision and perseverance. Ask him. "My father is a drunkard, my mother is sick, and I must work to keep us from starving." It is for such as him we labor.

Look at that young tailoress girl; she is dressed neat but plainly. She is just returning to her humble home, but she carries her work with her; she will sit up late and work, that she may earn the bread she daily eats. She is strong now but her hard labor is beginning to take the roses from her cheek, the elasticity from her step, and the brightness from her eye. She will soon be worn out, and her form will be laid on a sick bed; consumption will claim her, and she must surrender.—But why need she labor so; why wear out her life? Her father is a drunkard, and oft he will steal her earnings and the comforts of life that she has purchased, and pawn them for rum. She has a mother, who is also working hard, and two or three little sisters who she is trying to keep from starving and from rags! It is for her we labor.

This is our work; this our end! To assist the poor; to shield the innocent; to save the erring! To battle for that law which will remove all these sad evils; will bring happiness to these bruised and broken hearts; will make cheerful those firesides now the abode of sorrow and wretchedness! And is not this a glorious work? Is not this a work of love? Does not the present temperance man exult in the glorious cause he is pursuing? Does he not thank his God that such a noble work has been given him? Such should be his feeling: for it is a noble lot, it is a sacred calling. And then let us pursue that calling with energy, with untiring zeal; and, with the blessing of God, we shall succeed. Future generations will look with joy to the present, and revere the memory of those who the second time brought liberty to the land, liberty from the chains of despotic Rum.

TOBACCO.—Dr. Warren of Boston, says that "tobacco, used in the way of mastication, is a slow poison, which were it administered by another person, would deserve and receive retribution from the laws of the land." After stating the injurious effects of smoking, as well as chewing, this "poweaful vegetable poison," he adds: "These statements are not exaggerated, but the result of many years' experience and observation; so that when a young man applies to me for a cure of pain in the chest, and symptoms of dyspepsia, I feel it my first duty to inquire whether he smokes or chews tobacco.

My Wife is the Cause of it.

It is now more than forty years ago that Mr. L—— called at the house of Dr. ——, one very cold morning, when on his way to R——.

"Sir," said the Doctor, "the weather is very frosty; will you not 'take something to drink,' before you start?"

In that early day, ardent spirits were deemed indispensable to warmth in winter. When commencing a journey, and at every stoppage place along the road, the traveller always used intoxicating drinks to keep him warm.

"No," said L——, "I never touch anything of that kind, and I will tell you the reason; my wife is the cause of it. I had been in the habit of meeting some of our neighbors every evening for the purpose of playing cards. We assembled at each other's shop, and liquors were introduced. After a while we met not so much for playing as for drinking, and I used to return home late in the evening, more or less intoxicated. My wife always met me at the door, affectionately, and when I chided her for sitting up so late for me, she kindly replied, 'I prefer doing so, for I cannot sleep when you are out.'

"This always troubled me; I wished in my heart that she would only begin to scold me, for then I could have retorted and relieved my conscience. But she always met me with the same gentle and loving spirit.

"Things passed on thus for months, when I at last resolved that I would, by remaining very late and returning intoxicated, provoke her displeasure so much as to cause her to lecture me, when I meant to answer her with severity, and thus by creating another issue between us, unburthen my bosom of its present trouble.

"I returned in such a plight about four o'clock in the morning. She met me at the door with her usual tenderness, and said, 'Come in, husband, I have just been making a warm fire for you, because I knew you would be cold. Take off your boots and warm your feet, and here is a cup of coffee for you.'

"Doctor, that was too much. I could not endure it any longer, and I resolved that moment that I would never touch another drop while I lived, and I never will."

He never did. He lived and died practising total abstinence from all intoxicating drinks, in a village where intemperance has raged as much as any other in this State.

That man was my father, and that woman my mother. The facts above related I received from the Doctor himself, when on a visit to my native village not long since.

May we not safely assert that were there more wives like my blessed mother, there would be fewer confirmed drunkards.

The Marriage Altar.

Judge Charlton, in a recent eloquent address before the Young Men's Library Association, at Augusta, Georgia, thus sketches the marriage scene:—

"I have drawn for you many pictures of death; let me sketch for you a brief but bright scene of beautiful life. It is the marriage altar. A lovely female, clothed in all the freshness of youth and surpassing beauty, leans upon the arm of him to whom she has just plighted her faith; to whom she has just given up herself forever. Look in her eyes, ye gloomy philosophers, and tell me if you dare, that there is no happiness on earth.

"See the trusting, the heroic devotion which impels her to leave country and parents for a comparative stranger. She has launched her frail bark upon a wide and stormy sea; she has handed over her happiness and doom for this world, to another's keeping; but she has done it fearlessly, for love whispers to her that her chosen guardian and protector bears a manly and noble heart. Oh, wo to him that forgets his oath and his manhood!

'Her dark wing shall the raven flap,
O'er the false-hearted,
His warm blood the wolf shall lap,
Ere life be parted.
Shame and dishonor sit,
On his grave ever;
Blessings shall hallow it,
Never! oh, never!'

"We have all read the story of the husband, who, in a moment of hasty wrath, said to her who but a few months before united her fate to his, 'If you are not satisfied with my conduct, go, return to your friends and to your happiness.' 'And will you give back that which I brought to you?' asked the despairing wife.—'Yes,' he replied; 'all your wealth shall go with you; I covet it not.' 'Alas!' she answered, 'I thought not of my wealth; I spoke of my devoted love; can you give this back to me?' 'No!' said the man, as he flung himself at her feet. 'No! I cannot restore these, but I will do more—I will keep them unsullied and untainted; I will cherish them through my life, and in my death; and never again will I forget that I have sworn to protect and cherish her who gave up to me all she held most dear.'

"Did I not tell you there was poetry in a woman's look—a woman's word? See it here! The mild and gentle reproof of love, winning back from its harshness and rudeness, the stern and unyielding temper of an angry man. Ah! if creation's fairer sex only knew their strongest weapons, how many of wedlock's fiercest battles would be unfought; how much of unhappiness and coldness would be avoided!'

Wanted.

AN ANGEL FOR HEAVEN.—And so death closed those little eyes—shrouded their light glances. Oh, that the sun would not come streaming on her shrouded form, as if their were no grief in the world.

How sweetly she sleeps, that little angel! How lightly curl the glossy rings on her white forehead! You could weep your very soul away, to think those cherub lips will never, never unclose. Vainly you clasp and unclasp that passive, darling hand that wandered so often over your cheek. Vainly your anguished glance strives to read the dim story of love in those faded orbs. The voice, sweet as winds blowing through wreathed shells, slumbers forever. And still the busy world knocks at your door, and will let you have no peace. It shouts in your ear; its chariots rumble by; it smiles broadly in your care-worn face; it mocks you as you sew the shroud; it meets you at the coffin, at the grave; and its heavy footsteps tramp up and down in the empty rooms whence you have borne the dead. But it comes never in the hush of night to wipe away your tears!

Wanted—an angel for Heaven? Can you look up? Can you bear the splendor of that sight? Ten thousand celestial beings, and your own radiant child-angel in their midst;

"In her eyes a glory light,
On her brow a glory crown."

Wanted—angels for heaven! Cling not too closely to your beautiful treasures, children of earth!

EDUCATION FOR THE PEOPLE.—The education required for the people is that which will give them the full command of every faculty, both of mind and body; which will call into play their powers of observation and reflection; which will make thinking and reasoning beings of the mere creatures of impulse, prejudice, and passion; that which, in a moral sense, will give them objects of pursuit, and habits of conduct, favorable to their own happiness, and to that of the community of which they will form a part; which, by multiplying the means of rational and intellectual enjoyment, will diminish the temptations of vice and sensuality: which, in the social relations of life, and as connected with objects of legislation, will teach them the identity of the individual with the general interest; that which, in the physical sciences, especially those of chemistry and mechanics, will make them masters of the secrets of nature, and give them powers which, even now, tend to elevate the moderns to a higher rank than that of the demi-gods of antiquity. All this, and more, should be embraced in that scheme of education which would be worthy of statesmen to give, and of a great nation to receive; and the time is near at hand when the attainment of an object thus comprehensive in its character, and leading to results, the practical benefits of which it is almost impossible for even the imagination to exaggerate, will not be considered a Utopian dream.

A THOUGHT TO BE THOUGHT OF.—It is the suggestion of philosophy, acccording to some, that any ideas that ever get into a man's mind, become, as it were, part of it; and he will never lose them. What a thing it is, to think that there are minds in hell that wlll carry with them throughout all eternity a complete, accurate knowledge of the system of mercy and the way of redemption; that there are immortal spirits there, that have in them all the ideas necessary to a full, correct comprehension of the way of salvation; that there are minds in hell, that have far more knowledge of the Word of God and the way of mercy, and far more accurate acquaintance with the whole theory of theology, than what served numbers in getting to heaven; that there are minds that have got to heaven with less knowledge than many carry with them to hell!—Now do not let that start you. I think the ideas necessary for a man to get to heaven are very few and simple,—knowl- of his danger, a knowledge of his Redeemer. And many a learned man with the learning of folios in his memory, and with an accurate knowledge of all the principles and all the doctrines of the Gospel, yet because his heart has not been touched, and his mind has not been given up to Christ, all his knowledge will not avail him; he will go to hell! and his knowledge will go with him throughout all eternity. But it is a fearful thing, to think that the human spirit should be thus suffered under the condemnation of impenitence, guilt, disobedience, and yet within it, in the mind and in the memory, the knowledge of the way by which it might have been saved.—T. Binney.

Moral Reflections, Sentences, and Maxims.

There are some crimes which become innocent, and even glorious, by their renown, their number, and their excess.—Hence it is that public robberies become proofs of talent, and seizing whole provinces unjustly is called making conquests.

We confess our faults, to make amends by our sincerity for the harm they have done us in the opinion of others.

There are heroes in evil as well as in good.

We do not despise all those who have vices, but we despise all those who have not a single virtue.

The name of virtue is as serviceable to interest as vice is.

The health of the soul is no more secure than that of the body; and though we may appear free from passions, we are in quite as much danger of being carried away by them as we are of falling sick when we are in health.

It would seem that Nature has prescribed to every one from the moment of his birth certain limits for virtue and vice.

It belongs only to great men to have great faults.

It may be said that the vices await us in the journey of life like hosts with whom we must successively lodge; and I doubt whether experience would make us avoid them if we were to travel the same road a second time.

When our vices quit us we flatter ourselves with the belief that it is we who quit them.

There are relapses in the disorders of the soul as well as in those of the body. What we take to be our cure is most often nothing but an intermission or a change of the disorder.

The faults of the soul are like wounds in the body. Whatever care we take to cure them the scar always appears, and they are every moment in danger of reopening.

What often prevents our abandoning ourselves to a single vice is, our having more than one.

We easily forget our faults when they are only known to ourselves.

There are some people of whom we should never have believed evil unless we had seen it, but there are none at whom we ought to be surprised when we do see it.

Virtue would not travel so far if vanity did not keep her company.

He who thinks he can find in himself the means of doing without others is much mistaken; but he who thinks that others cannot do without him is still more mistaken.

Pretenders to virtue are those who disguise their faults from others as well as from themselves. The truly virtuous know their imperfections and confess them.

FANNY FERN'S BEST THING.—We think Fanny Fern never wrote a better pair of paragraphs than the following, from the Olive Branch:

"Look on this picture, and then on that. Father is coming! and little round faces grow long, and merry voices are hushed, and toys are hustled into the closet, and mamma glances nervously at the door, and the baby is bribed with a lump of sugar to keep the peace; and father's business face relaxes not a muscle; and the little group huddle like timid sheep in a corner, and tea is despatched as silently as if speaking were prohibited by the statute book, and the children creep like culprits to bed marveling that the baby dare crow so loud, now that 'Father has come.'

"Father is coming! and bright eyes sparkle for joy, and tiny feet dance with glee, and eager faces press against the window-pane, and a bevy of rosy lips claim kisses at the door, and picture books lie unrebuked on the table, and tops, and balls, and dolls, and kites are discussed, and little Susy lays her soft cheek against the paternal whiskers with the most fearless 'abandon,' and Charley gets a love-pat for his 'medal,' and mamma's face grows radiant, and the evening paper is read (not silently, but loud,) and tea, and toast, and time vanish with equal celerity, for jubilee has arrived, and 'Father has come!'"

CONSTITUTION AND BY-LAWS,

WE are still prepared to print Constitution and By-Laws, where the alterations are few from the copy recommended by the Grand Division, at the following rates:

100 copies, (or less)	$5 00
200 "	8 00
300 "	10 00

We will pay the postage on all ordered from us.

☞ All orders accompanied by the cash, will be promptly attended to.

Address, JOHN H. OHR,
Indianapolis, Indiana.

CHARTERS.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR A DIVISION S. OF T.

(Date.)

The undersigned inhabitants of ——, believing the Order of the Sons of Temperance to be well calculated to extend the blessings of total abstinence, and promote the general welfare of mankind, respectfully petition the Grand Division of the —— of ——, to grant them a Charter to open a new Division, to be called the —— Division, No. —, Sons of Temperance, of the —— of ——, to be located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves, individually and collectively, to be governed by the rules and usages of said Grand Division, and also, by those of the National Division.

Enclosed is the Charter Fee, $5 00. Books, $2 00.

This must be signed by at least eight persons of good character and standing in community, and sent to C. WOODWARD, G. S., Indianapolis, Ind, free of postage.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR A TEMPLE.

(Date.)

The undersigned, believing the Temple of Honor to be well calculated to cement more firmly our fraternal relations, and add to the general prosperity of the cause of Temperance, respectfully petition the Grand Temple of the —— of ——, to grant them a Charter to open a new Temple, to be called the —— Temple of Honor, No. —, of the —— of ——, to be located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves individually and collectively, to be governed by the rules and usages of the Grand Temple, and also by those of the Order at large.

Enclosed is the Charter Fee, $20 00.

To be directed to the G. W. R., free of postage.

This must be signed by at least twenty persons of good standing, and if not known to the G. W. T. or G. W. R., must send satisfactory references.

J. H. OHR, G. W. R.

Indianapolis, Ind.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR CADETS OF TEMPERANCE.

The undersigned, boys of ——, believing the Order of Cadets of Temperance to be well calculated to extend the blessings of total abstinence, and promote the general welfare of mankind, respectfully petition the Grand Section of the State of Indiana, to grant them a charter to open a new Section, to be called the —— Section, No. ——, Cadets of Temperance, of the State of Indiana, to be located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves, individually and collectively to be governed by the rules and usages of said Grand Section, and also those of the acting Head of the Order.

Enclosed is the fee for Charter, R. B.'s and officers' cards, $5 00.

It must also be stated whether the applicants are members of the Order or not; if they are, of what Section. The application to be directed to the Grand Secretary, free of postage.

It must also be certified by a W. P. or P. W. P, that the W. Patron elect is a Son of Temperance in good standing.

Address (post paid) HENRY OHR, G. S., C. o T., Indianapolis, Indiana.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR DAUGHTERS OF TEMPERANCE.

(Date.)

The undersigned, inhabitants of ——, believing the Order of the Daughters of Temperance to be well calculated to extend the blessings of Total Abstinence, and promote the general welfare of mankind, respectfully petition the Grand Union to grant them a charter to open a new Union to be called the —— Union, No. —, D. of T., of the State of Indiana, located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves, individually and collectively, to be governed by the rules and usages of said Grand Union.

Enclosed is the Charter Fee, $5 00.

The above must be signed by at least eleven females, of proper age and good standing in community.

Address (post paid,) Mrs. ELIZA RICHMOND, G. S. S., Indianapolis, Indiana.

SOMETHING NEW.

LATHROP & STEVENS, Wholesale and Retail Dealers in BOOTS AND SHOES, at the West room in the Bates House, Washington Street, Indianapolis.

We are now opening a new and splendid stock of Boots and Shoes of every variety and style, which we are receiving direct from the manufacturers.—We design to keep constantly on hand a good assortment of the best quality of goods manufactured, which we can warrant to give satisfaction to all who may give them a trial. We will sell by the case, dozen, or single pair, at low prices for cash.—Our stock consists in part of Gents' fine Cloth, silk warp, glove kid, buck, patent calf, and enameled Gaiters and Ties of every variety and style; Ladies' fine silk warp Gaiters, Buskins, Ties, Slippers and Boots; Misses' ditto; Men's calf, goat, kip, and thick Boots and Brogans; Boys' and Youths' ditto; assorted Ladies, kid, goat and calf Boots and Buskins; Misses' ditto. Also every variety of Children's Shoes. Come and see for yourselves.

LATHROP & STEVENS,
may 25 4w Indianapolis, Indiana.

TEMPERANCE INN, Bloomington, Indiana.

J. & S. M. ORCHARD, PROPRIETORS.

TRAVELLERS will find it to their advantage to call and try the accommodation of the TEMPERANCE INN. Stage office for all the different routes, in connection with this House. may25 6m ¶

The Cheapest Illustrated Paper for the Young.

PRICE ONLY TEN CENTS A YEAR, or nearly three papers for one cent, where 100 copies are taken.

Twenty-six numbers a year, and each number illustrated with from three to seven engravings.

The Youth's Penny Gazette,

A strictly Religious and Moral Paper, is published by the AMERICAN SUNDAY SCHOOL UNION and is designed to furnish the Children and Youth of the United States with reading matter, in a popular form, for the improvement of Mind and Heart.

It is published (not monthly, nor weekly, but) every other week, or twenty-six numbers in a year. It is religious but unsectarian, and the matter is carefully prepared with a view to the habits, character and prospects of American Youth

TERMS OF THE PENNY GAZETTE.

$10 a year, in advance, for 100 copies, to one address. $5 a year, in advance, for 40 copies, to one address. $3 a year, in advance, for 20 copies, to one address. Single subscriptions, 25 cents per year.

TERMS BY MAIL, POSTAGE PAID.

☞ When the postage is paid at the place of mailing, the terms are very low. For $15 remitted, we will send 100 copies of the paper for one year, to one address—we paying postage. For $7 remitted, we will send 40 copies of the paper to one address, for one year—we paying postage. For $3 50 remitted, we will send 20 copies of the paper for one year, to one address—we paying postage. Less than 20 cannot be sent at this cheap rate.

Subscriptions received at the Society's House, No. 146 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.

Feb 16 3w C. S. SCOFIELD, Agent.

COMMERCIAL COLLEGE,

(Late Commercial Institute,)

Of Indianapolis,

Established March 31, 1851.

INCORPORATED, 1853.

W. McK. SCOTT, A. M., Founder and President.
JAMES C. HAYDEN, (Late Professor in Bacon's Mercantile College, Cincinnati,)
PROF. OF BOOK-KEEPING AND PENMANSHIP.

THE Session will commence at College Hall as follows:

1st Session on the first Monday of September.
2d Session on the 1st Monday of November.
3d Session on the 1st Monday of January.
4th Session on the 1st Monday of March.
5th Session on the 1st Monday of May.

Having secured, permanently, the services of the distinguished Professor above named, and leased for a term of years the commodious and beautiful Hall formerly known as CONCERT HALL, but now named COLLEGE HALL, which is to be fitted up in a style of great elegance, taste, and convenience, the President would say, that this College now offers advantages superior to all others, for imparting a sound, thorough, and accomplished business education

COURSE OF STUDIES.

The Course of Studies, as enlarged, will be as follows, viz:

1. Book-Keeping, by Single and Double Entry, in all its various branches, and its application to all kinds of business.
2. The Laws, Customs, and Usages of Trade and Commerce.
3. Mercantile Arithmetic, upon the short and easy system of cancelation, (taught in no other College.)
4. Commercial Law, in a series of Lectures, thorough and systematic.
5. Business Penmanship.
6. Commercial Correspondence.
7. Lectures upon Banking, Political Economy, and other subjects valusble to the business man.

EXPENSES.

Cards of Admission, invariably in advance, or secured, $25; Diplomas $3; Stationery $5; Boarding $2 50 per week; incidentals, at option of student, $15. Making entire expenses about $75.

On application, a Catalogue will be furnished, giving full particulars.

All letters will receive prompt attention on being directed, post-paid, to

june 8 W. McK. SCOTT, President.

"God never made his works for man to mend." DR. FRANKLIN.

KIER'S ROCK OIL.

A NEW AND MOST IMPORTANT REMEDY FOR DISEASE.

DISCOVERED IN 1849.

IS drawn from a deep well near Pittsburgh—has been used with remarkable success in Ohio and Pennsylvania, and more Eastern States—and is now working its way West. An opportunity is now offered to the Afflicted for testing it. Where known and tried, it at once makes firm friends, and cures which are eloquent in its praise. Certificates of its power to heal are at hand—but we know well, reader, that such evidence, to have weight with you, now-a-days, must be in your own neighborhood.—You have only to try the Oil to be satisfied—it will SPEAK FOR ITSELF.

We have no war with the legion of Nostrums and Specifics of the day—we know but little about them—some say they are good for nothing. However that may be, the

Petroleum

will not be suppressed and kept back by reason of the above nostrums—duty and inclination both forbid it.

Those who are afflicted, are respectfully invited to get a Circular and look over the Directions for

Ague, Rheumatism, Piles, Diarrhœa, Flux, Tooth Ache, Burns, Worms, Scrofula, Coughs, Bronchitis, Croup, Old Sores, Cholera Morbus, Contractions of the Limbs and Joints, Sore Eyes, Blindness, Costiveness, Dyspepsia, and other Diseases.

By that time you may say, "it cures too much." But recollect it is not a HUMAN INVENTION, but compounded by Nature's master hand—and Nature does not do her work by halves.

The Oil is used both internally and externally.

As AGUE, SORE EYES, PILES, RHEUMATISM, and SCROFULA are so common in many parts of the West, we are constrained to say, that while this Oil will cure and relieve other diseases, it has been and is constantly used with most complete success in these cases.

☞ Price 50 cents per Bottle (half pint.)

Beware of all Rock Oil preparations, as some persons are offering a spurious article. Look for S. M. KIER'S name written on the label of the bottle.

For sale by the Druggists throughout Indiana, and by TOMLINSON BROTHERS, J. P. POPE & Co., S. ROSENGARTEN, WM. TILLEY, and at wholesale by W. W. ROBERTS, Indianapolis, Indiana.

R. M. LYON, Fort Wayne,
may25 10w Proprietor in the Western States.

D. CRAIGHEAD. R. BROWNING.

CRAIGHEAD & BROWNING,

Dealers in all kinds of

Drugs, Medicines, Surgical Instruments, Paints, Oils, Chemicals, Varnishes, Dye Stuffs, Glassware Window Glass, Brushes, Cosmetics, Spices, Cigars, Tobacco, Perfumery, &c.,

WASHINGTON STREET,
INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

ALL are respectfully invited to call and examine our stock and prices, as we feel confident we can render satisfaction both as to prices and quality of articles. Great care is taken in the selection of articles, in reference to their purity, as we endeavor at all times to keep such articles as are strictly pure and genuine. Every article will be waranted as represented. Orders from Physicians and others promptly attended to. Particular attention given to filling Prescriptions and compounding Medicines, which, in all cases, shall receive the personal attention of one of the firm. june 30

LITTLE, DRUM & ANDERSONS

WHOLESALE DEALERS IN

STAPLE AND FANCY DRY GOODS, BOOTS, SHOES, HATS, CAPS, STATIONERY, NOTIONS, TRIMMINGS, GROCERIES, HARDWARE, QUEENSWARE, AND GLASSWARE,

North side of Washington Street,

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

WE are receiving Country Produce of all descriptions, and paying the highest market price. Dealers visiting Indianapolis are respectfully invited to call and examine our stock and prices, both for Produce and Merchandise generally. june30 tf

A CHANCE TO MAKE MONEY.

Profitable and honorable Employment!

THE Subscriber is desirous of having an agent in each county and town of the Union. A capital of from $5 to $10 only will be required, and anything like an efficient, energetic man can make from three to five dollars per day; indeed some of the Agents now employed are realizing twice that sum Every information will be given by addressing, (postage paid) WM. A. KINSLER,
june 15 3w ¶ Box 601, Philadelphia P. O.

The American Life and Health Insurance Company.

Office—No. 7, South Third St., Philadelphia.

Officers.

LEONARD JEWELL, President.
JAMES PEACOCK, Treasurer.
JOHN C. SIMS, Sec'y and Actuary.
THOS. S. SMITH, Solicitor
JOHN F. BIRD, FRED. A. FICKARDT, } Medical Examiners.

CHARLES WOODWARD, Indianapolis, Ind., General Agent for the State of Indiana.

THIS Company issues policies at Total Abstinence Rates, Joint stock Rates, and at Mutual Rates, which for $1000 on the life of a person 30 years of age, are as follows:

Age.	Total Abstinence.	Joint Stock.	Mutual.
30	$15.40	$19.60	$23.60

A further table of Rates will be furnished at the Office.

The condition in Total Abstinence rates (believed to be the lowest in the Union,) is entire forfeiture upon the departure of the Insured from Total Abstinence in its strictest sense.

Policies at Joint Stock and Mutual rates, contain no condition except as usual in Life Insurance.

HEALTH INSURANCE DEPARTMENT.

All Moneys received from the Insured, for Annual Premiums, after deducting expenses, will be divided among the Sick

The Public have for some time been familiar with the subject of Life and Health Insurance, but it is obvious that too little thoughts has been given to the latter. LIFE Insurance benefits our successors, while HEALTH Insurance directly benefits ourselves. It makes provision for a time of sickness, when the products of a man's industry are cut off, and want unites with Disease to aggravate his distress. It is at this gloomy period, when he is prostrated and helpless, and when despondency would otherwise overwhelm him, that the holder of a Health Insurance Policy will realize its benefits.

RATES, under 50 years of age,

$2,00	per year,	for	$2,00	per week.
3,00	"	"	3,00	"
4,00	"	"	4,00	"
5,00	"	"	5,00	"
6,00	"	"	6,00	"

Over fifty and under sixty.

$2,50	per year,	for	$2,50	per week.
3,75	"	"	3,00	"
5,00	"	"	4,00	"
6,25	"	"	5,00	"
7,50	"	"	6,00	"

When the Fund shall amount to Three Dollars and upwards for every person insured and sufficient to warrant an additional distribution, the weekly allowances will be increased in accordance with the Rules of the Policy.

All the members of a Temple or Division insured at greatly reduced rates.

Applications for Agencies in any of the cities or towns in the State, should be made to the undersigned, post paid, or in person.

As Agent for the above Company, I am prepared to receive applications for Policies at any of the above rates.

CHARLES WOODWARD, Agent,
At ADAMS & CO.'S Express Office.
J. L. MOTHERSHEAD, Medical Examiner.
june 30 '52-1y

Ohio Life Insurance Company,

Capital $100,000.

JOINT STOCK AND MUTUAL,

CINCINNATI.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS.

Wm. Burnet, Jno. N. Ridgway, Chas. Goodman, S. Robert, E. S. Haines, Jno. M. Blair, J. W. Donohue, Eden B. Reeder, Wm. Person.

WM. BURNET, President.

S. W. REEDER, Sec'y J. W. DONOHUE, Vice Pres't.

Office in Reeder's Building, Third street, between Almy's and City Bank.

This Company insures Lives at the lowest rates consistent with safety, either upon the Joint Stock or Mutual plan.

In the Joint Stock Department, premium payable quarterly, semi-annually or annually. On the Mutual plan, one-half the premium paid in Cash, the balance by a note bearing six per cent. interest—the interest only payable annually. Persons insuring on the mutual plan, participate in the profits of the Company in that department.

The undersigned having been appointed agent for the above Company, is prepared to fill applications for Life Insurance, on favorable terms.

Any information on the subject and pamphlets explaining the nature and utility of Life Insurance, furnished without charge, at the office of the Agent.

C. WOODWARD, Agent.

Office at Adam's & Co.'s Express Office, Journal Building, Pennsylvania street, Indianapolis, Ind.
june 30, '52-1y.

JAMES HALL,

MERCHANT TAILOR,

No. 2. Temperance, Hall, Indianapolis,

Manufactu'ng & Clothing Emporium,

Wholesale and Retail Dealer in Ready Made Clothing, Cloths, Cassimers, Vestings, Trimmings, Trunks, Sachels, Canes, Umbrellas, Hats, Caps, a every description of Gentlemen's Furnishing.

Also:

General Agency for the sale of GRAND AND SUBORDINATE REGALIA, EMBLEMS, COSTUMES, &c., FOR THE ORDERS OF MASONS, ODD FELLOWS, TEMPLE OF HONOR, SON, DAUGHTERS, AND CADETS OF TEMPERANCE. oct27 1y

Railroad City Book Store.

COX & MATHEs,

South side of Washington. between Illinois and Meridian streets,

INDIANAPOLIS, INDIANA.

AT wholesale and retail, Standard and Miscellaneous Works, Law, and Medical Books, School Books, Plain and Fancy Stationery, Blank Books, Wall Papers, &c., &c. mar 2

CHEAP WATCHES & JEWELRY.

Good Gold Watches at $24!

WE are now in our new Room No. 1, Palmer House, with a lot of beautiful Watches and Jewelry which we are selling lower than ever heretofore sold in Indianapolis, for instance we sell

Good 18 K Case Gold Lepines at $24.
" 18 K " " Levers at $28.
" Silver Anchor Levers $12 to $18.
" " Cylenders, $9 to $12.
" " Quarter's $6 to $10.

In addition to the above we have a fine assortment of other description of Watches all of which we will sell lower than any other firm dare sell in the place. I have in my employ a very superior Watch Repairer who will always be on on hand to do watch repairing of every description. Mr. Michot has worked in Geneva, Paris, New York and other large cities and has had great experience in his Branch of the business. All Watches warranted for one year, and the money in all cases refunded, provided they do not give entire satisfaction.

feb9 tf E. W. NEFF.

SMALL CHANGE.

THE undersigned is prepared to furnish Merchants and others with three cent pieces from the United States Mint at Philadelphia, free of transportation, in sums of 30, 60, and 90 dollars, upon deposit of Gold or Eastern Exchange. Also cents and half cents, upon payment of frieght on gold to Philadelphia, or on Eastern Exchange free of freight.

C. WOODWARD, Agent,
june 30 Adams & Co.'s Express.

THE ONLY TRUE PORTRAIT OF WASHINGTON.

JUST PUBLISHED,

T. B. Welch's Magnificent

PORTRAIT OF WASHINGTON.

Engraved (by permission) from Stuart's only original portrait, in the Atheneum, Boston.

THIS suberb picture, Engraved under the superintendence of THOMAS SULLY, Esq., the eminent and highly gifted artist, is the only correct likeness of Washington ever published. It has been characterised as the greatest work of art ever produced in this country. As to its fidelity, we refer to the letters of the adopted son of Washington, GEORGE WASHINGTON PARK CUSTIS, who says, "it is a faithful representation of the celebrated original," and to CHIEF JUSTICE TANEY of the Supreme Court of the United States, who says, "As a work of art its excellence and beauty must strike every one who sees it; and it is no less happy in its likeness to the Father of his country. It was my good fortune to have seen him in the days of my boyhood, and his whole apearance is yet strongly impressed on my memory. The portrait you have issued appears to me to be an exact likeness, representing perfectly the expression as well as the form and features of the face." And says SENATOR CASS, it is a life-like representation of the great original. PRESIDENT FILLMORE says, "the work appears to me to have been admirably executed and eminently worthy of the patronage of the public." Says MARCHANT the eminent portrait painter, and the pupil of Stuart, "your print to my mind is more remarkable than any other I have seen, for presenting the whole individuality of the original portrait, together with the noble and dignified repose of air and manner, which all who ever saw him considered a marked characteristic of the illustrious man it commemmorates."

For the great merits of this picture we would refer every lover of Washington to the portrait itself, to be seen at the office of this paper, and to the letters of the following Artists, Statesmen, Jurists and Scholars accompanying it.

ARTISTS.—Marchant and Elliott of New York; Neagle, Rothermel, and Lambdin, of Philadelphia; Chester Harding of Boston; Charles Fraser, of Charleston, S. C; and to the adopted son of Washington, Hon. Geo. W. P. Custis, himself an artist. STATESMEN.—His Excellency Millard Fillmore, Major Gen. Winfield Scott, Hon. George M. Dallas, Hon. William R. King, Hon. Daniel Webster, Hon. Lynn Boyd, Hon. Lewis Cass, Hon. Wm. A. Graham, Hon. John P. Kennedy, Hon. R. C. Winthrop, LL. D. JURISTS.—Hon. Roger B. Taney, Hon. John Duer, Hon John McLean, Hon. Rufus Choate. SCHOLARS.—Charles Folsom, Esq. the well known Librarian of the Boston Atheneum, who says, "I would rather own it than any painted copy I have ever seen;" E. P. Whipple, Richard Hildreth, Hon. Edward Everett, LL. D., Jared Sparks, LL. D., Wm. H. Prescott, LL. D., Washington Irving, Ralph W. Emerson, Esq., Prof. T. C. Upham, J. T. Headley, Fitz Green Halleck, H. W. Longfellow, Wm. Gilmore Simms; and FROM EUROPE, Lord Talfourd, T. B. Macauley, Sir Archibald Alison, Lord Mayor of London, &c., &c. THE PRESS, throughout the entire Union, have with one voice proclaimed the merits of this suberb engraving.

To enable all to possess this valuable treasure, it is sold at the low price of $5 per copy.

Published by GEORGE W. CHILDS,
N. W. corner of Fifth and Arch sts., Philadelphia.
WILLIAM G. STEEL,
Sole Agent for the States of Ohio and Indiana.

This Portrait can only be obtained from MR. STEEL, or from his duly authorized agents.

Arrangements have been made with the Post Office Department, by which copies of the Portrait can be sent to any point, per mail, in perfect order.

☞ Persons by remitting FIVE DOLLARS, to WM. G. STEEL, Cincinnati, Ohio, will have a copy of the Portrait sent to them free of Postage.

☞ Magnificent Gilt Frames, got up expressly for these Portraits, furnished at the low price of $5 each.

JUST ISSUED,

A MAGNIFICENT PORTRAIT OF

General Jackson,

Engraved by T. B. WELCH, Esq., after the original portrait painted by T. SULLY, Esq.

This Portrait will be a match for the Washington, and is in every respect as well got up.

Price $5.00 per copy. Address as above.
nov 10–3m

REAL ESTATE AND GENERAL AGENCY OFFICE,

INDIANAPOLIS, INDIANA.

UNDER THE CONTROL OF W. M'K. SCOTT, Attorney & Counsellor at Law, and Notary Public.

The attention of the Agency will be devoted,

First—To the collection of debts and the payment of Taxes for non-residents in any county in the State. Also, the redemption of Lands sold for Taxes, sale, purchase or lease of Lands, purchase of adverse claims, examination and perfection of Title, &c., &c.

Second—To the prosecution of claims against the General Government, procuring Land Warrants, Patent Rights, and Pensions under the various Pension Laws, &c.

Third—All other Miscellaneous agencies as may be intrusted to the care of this office.

Fourth—The taking of Depositions and Attestation of all instruments requiring a seal

In all cases requiring an outlay of money for the benefit of individuals, the requisite funds must be transmitted in advance.

Prompt attention to all letters on business that are pre-paid. Address W. M'K. SCOTT,
Real Estate and General Agent,
jan 5–1y Indianapolis, Ind.

ADAMS & CO'S EXPRESS.

WE are now running a daily line East and West, accompanied by special messengers, and with the speed of the mails, running our own cars with the passenger trains.

Packages will be received at the cars up to the time of starting, and at our office until 1 o'clock each day.

We are prepared to transport packages, bank notes and specie, to and from any of the eastern cities, also, Louisville, Frankfort, and Lexington, Ky., St. Louis, Mo., or any points on the Ohio and Mississippi rivers; and to and from Terre Haute, and all intermediate points, and to forward freight from Terre Haute up and down the Wabash.

In addition to these, we have the most complete arrangements for transporting packages to and from California and Europe.

Exchange on England, Ireland, and Scotland, for sale, payable at any bank in the kingdom.

Foreign passage tickets; by Grinnell, Minturn & Co.'s line to Liverpool and London, constantly on hand, and for sale at the lowest rates.

Notes, drafts, and bills collected in any of the Eastern or Western cities.

Orders for goods to be returned by Express, sent free. Our rates of charges have been greatly reduced, and the public will find this a safe and expeditious method of transportation.

Indianapolis, June 30, 1852. ADAMS & CO.

Office in Indianapolis in Journal Building, west side Pennsylvania Street.

Office open during business hours.

june30 1y C. WOODWARD, Agent.

HANNAMAN & DUZAN,

DEALERS IN

DRUGS AND MEDICINES,

Surgical Instruments, Paints, Oils, Varnishes, Dye Woods, Medical and Window Glass, Brushes, Perfumery, Soaps &c.

Washington, 3 doors west of Pennsylvania St.,

june 30 1y INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

THE ILLUSTRATED MAGAZINE OF ART.

THE five numbers of this Magazine which are published, place it at the head of publications of this kind No expense will be spared to make it in every respect worthy of the name, the "Illustrated Magazine of Art. The Engravings which are preparing for the future numbers are in the hands of first-class American and European Artists.

A Series of most interesting Tales will appear in it. "The School of Life," written and Illustrated by ANNA MARY, daughter of William and Mary Howitt, will shortly appear; also, "The Dead Bridal," an historical romance, illustrative of the most interesting period in the history of the Venetian Republic, by JONATHAN FREKE SLINGSBY, of the Dublin University Magazine; contributions, too, from WILLIAM and MARY HOWITT, PERCY B. ST. JOHN, and other writers of distinction in America and Europe

The following is a brief outline of the plan of the Magazine:

I. The Historical Department will abound with picturesque representations of the most remarkable events which have occurred in this and other countries; accompanied with interesting anecdotes and details from the pen of the most eminent writers of the day. This department will contain several splendid engravings, designed by the first artists of the world, and engraved in the highest style of modern art.

II. The Men and Women of the Age. This department will consist of beautifully executed portraits of the leading characters of the age, especially of those who figure on the stage of humanity as the world's benefactors. Each portrait will be accompanied by an interesting biographical sketch.

III. The Wonders of Natural History, Botany, and other sciences, will be developed in choice Engravings of Beasts, Birds, Fishes, Insects, Forest Trees, Flowers, Geological and Fossil Specimens, &c., with accompanying descriptions.

IV. The Triumphs of Architectural Art will be displayed in exquisitely finished representations of Cathedrals, Churches, Palaces, and other models of ancient and modern Architectural Art.

V. The Works of the Great Masters, selected from the principal Galleries of Art in the World. In general, the portrait of the Master will be given, accompanied with a highly finished engraved copy of his chef d'œuvre.

VI. The Scientific Portions will be rendered highly interesting by the familiar explanations, and the numerous diagrams which will accompany each subject.

VII. Manufactures. The principal manufacturing processes in use will be fully explained by minute details, and an abundance of beautiful engravings.

VIII. Machinery and Inventions will have due attention paid to them, and be described by numerous appropriate engravings.

IX. The Literary Department, independently of the various articles accompanying the illustrations, will comprise original and interesting narratives, contributed by the most popular writers of the day, with numerous illustrations.

In every respect, the "Illustrated Magazine of Art," will be decidedly

SUPERIOR TO ANY MAGAZINE OF THE DAY.

Each Monthly part will contain at least Thirty superb Engravings, four of which will be printed separately, on supefine Plate Paper.

The greatest care will be manifested in every department of production. The Paper will be of the first manufacture, and the Ink supplied from the celebrated Printing Ink Establishment of Messrs Lawson & Co., of Paris. Six of the monthly portions, when completed, will form a volume which for interest, originality, value and beauty, will defy competition. It will not only be an interesting family book, but a rich ornament for the drawing-room table, and a pleasant companion in the study.

The parts will appear on the First of every Month at Twenty-five Cents each.

ALEXANDER MONTGOMERY,
may 25 17 Spruce Street, New-York.

SPLENDIDLY ILLUSTRATED WORKS.

THE ALPS, SWITZERLAND, SAVOY AND LOMBARDY.

With the Magazine for June will be ready, Part I., price Twenty-five Cents, of a Magnificent Work to be completed in Twelve Monthly Parts, entitled

THE ALPS, SWITZERLAND, SAVOY AND LOMBARDY, with an account of the most recent Ascents to Mont Blanc, &c. By the Rev. Charles Williams. This work, when completed, will form a large thick Volume, in Imperial Octavo, containing upwards of Three Hundred beautiful Engravings, descriptive of the peculiar Scenery of those most interesting portions of Europe, with the Occupations of the Inhabitants, &c., &c.

Cassell's Natural History.

On the First of July will commence

CASSELL'S NATURAL HISTORY, which for variety, beauty and completeness, will claim to be considered as a first-class work, upon this most interesting subject. The First volume will be devoted to the Feathered Tribe of the Creation and will contain upwards of Three Hundred Engravings, in the first style of Art. The volume will be completed in Twelve Monthly Parts, Imperial Octavo. Price 25 cents each.

History of England.

On the First of July will appear Part I., price 25 cts. of THE ILLUSTRATED HISTORY OF ENGLAND, from the earliest period on record to the present time. Edited by ROBERT FERGUSON, LL. D.

This History, which is intended to form a great National Work, will extend to Four Volumes, imperial Octavo; each Volume to be completed in Twelve Monthly Parts, price 25 cents each. The Work will comprehend the Political, Civil, and Domestic History of the Nation, and its Progress in Civilization, Literature, Art, &c. It will be profusely Illustrated with Engravings from Designs by GILBERT, PHILLIPPOTEAUX, WILLIAMS, and others. Representations of the most remarkable Events will be worked separately upon Plate Paper. The Portraits will form a complete Gallery, not only of the Monarchs, but of those individuals whose names are prominent in England's History. Also, Antiquities, including Autographs, Buildings, Costume, Furniture, Arms, Coins, Monuments, Manufactures &c., of each Epoch.

History of Hungary.

July First will be published, in one Handsome Volume, Imperial Octavo, price, One Dollar and Twenty-five Cents, in Cloth Boards,

THE ILLUSTRATED HISTORY OF HUNGARY, AND THE MAGYARS, from the Earliest Period to the close of the late War. By EDWARD LAWRENCE GODKIN. The Volume will be Illustrated with One Hundred highly finished Engravings, including representations of the principal Battles; Portraits of the early Kings, and of the Statesmen and Generals who figured in the War of Independence; Costumes of the Peasantry, &c.; Views of the chief Towns and Fortresses, &c.; with an accurate Description of the Manners and Customs of the People, their Literature, Commerce, Arts, &c.

ALEXANDER MONTGOMERY,
may25 Publisher, 17 Spruce Street, New-York.

MANSION HOUSE, Cambridge City, Indiana.

J. CUNNINGHAM, Proprietor.

TRAVELLERS

Will find it to their advantage to call and try the accommodation of the MANSION HOUSE.

STAGE OFFICE also in connection with this House
may 4 6m

INDIANA STATE LIBRARY

TEMPERANCE CHART.

A Weekly Journal:---Devoted to Temperance, Morality, Education, Literature, Useful Arts, Science, General Intelligence, &c.

J. W. GORDON, M. D., EDITOR.] ORGAN OF THE GRAND DIVISION OF INDIANA. [JOHN H. OHR, PRINTER.

VOL. II. INDIANAPOLIS, IND., WEDNESDAY, JUNE 22, 1853. NO. 52.

THE TEMPERANCE CHART,

IS PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY, BY THE GRAND DIVISION, S. of T. OF INDIANA.

Edited by J. W. Gordon, M. D.

To whom all Communications and Subscriptions must be addressed, post-paid.

OFFICE—in second story of Temperance Hall Building, Washington St., Indianapolis.

TERMS:

Single copy, one year,..... 75 cts.

☞ In advance in all cases,

TERMS OF ADVERTISING.—Circulation 4000 copies.

One Squre, (12 lines,) for one week,	$0 50
" " for each subsequent insertion,	25
" " for 3 months,	3 00
" " for 6 months,	5 00
" " for 1 year without alteration,	8 00
" " for 1 year, with changes,	12 00

A reduction made on larger advertisements.
Cuts double the above rates.
Advertisements must be handed in by Saturday, of each week, to insure insertion.
Applications for advertising, or for any kind of Printing for the Order, must be made to

J. H. OHR, Indianapolis.

POETRY.

My Mother.

BY N. P. WILLIS.

My mother's voice! How often creeps
Its cadence on my lonely hours,
Like healing on the wings of sleep,
Or dew on the unconscious flowers.
I might forget her melting prayer,
While 'wildering pleasures madly fly;
But in the still, unbroken air,
Her gentle tones come stealing by;
And years of sin and manhood flee,
And leave me at my mother's knee.

I have been out at eventide,
Beneath a moonlit sky of spring,
When earth was garnished like a bride,
And night had on her silver wing;
When bursting buds and dewy grass,
And waters leaping to the light;
And all that makes the pulses pass
With wilder fleetness thronged the night:
When all was beauty then have I
With friends on whom my love is flung,
Like myrrh on winds of Araby,
Gazed on where evening's lamp is hung.

And when the beauteous spirit there,
Flung over all its golden chain,
My mether's voice came on the air,
Like the light dropping of the rain;
And, resting on some silver star,
The spirit of a bended knee,
I've poured a deep and fervent prayer,
That our eternity might be—
To rise in heaven, like stars, by night,
And tread a living path of light.

MISCELLANEOUS.

From the Boston Olive Branch.

A Mother's Influence.

BY FANNY FERN.

"And so you sail to-morrow, Will? I shall miss you."

"Yes, I'm bound to see the world.—I've been beating my wings in desperation against the wires of my cage these three years. I know every stick and stone and stump in this village by heart, as well as I do those stereotyped sermons of Parson Grey's. They say he calls me a scapegrace—pity I should 'have the name without the game,'" said he bitterly.—"I haven't room here to run the length of my chain. I'll show him what I can do in a wider field of action."

"But how did you bring your father over?"

"Oh, he's very glad to be rid of me; quite disgusted because I've no fancy for seeing corn and oats grow. The truth is, every father knows at once too much and too little about his own son; the old gentleman never understood me; he soured my temper, which is originally none of the best, roused all the worst feelings of my nature, and is constantly driving me from instead of to the point he would have me reach."

"And your mother?"

"Well, there you have me; that's the only humanized portion of my heart—the only spot upon it. She came to my bed last night, after she thought I was asleep, gently kissed my forehead, and then knelt by my bed side. Harry, I've been wandering round the fields all the morning, to try to get rid of that prayer. Old Parson Grey might preach at me till the millennium, and it wouldn't move me any more than that stone. It makes all the difference in the world when you know a person feels what they are praying about.—I'm wild and reckless and wicked, I suppose; but I shall never be an infidel, while I can remember my mother. You should see the way she bears my father's impetuous temper; that's grace not nature, Harry; but don't let us talk about it—I only wish my parting with her was all over. Good bye; God bless you, Harry; you'll hear from me, if the fishes don't make a supper of me;" and Will left his friend and entered the cottage.

His mother was moving nervously and restlessly about, tying up all sorts of mysterious little parcels that only mothers think of, "in case he should be sick," or in case he should be this, that, or the other. interrupted occasionally by exclamations like this from the old farmer:

"Fudge—stuff—great, over-grown baby—making a fool of him—never be out of leading strings;" then turning short about and facing Will, as he entered, he said:

"Well, sir, look in your sea-chest, and you'll find gingerbread and physic, darning needles and tracts, bitters and Bible, peppermint and old linen rags, and opodeldoc. Pshaw! I was more of a man than you are when I was nine years old. Your mother always made a fool of you, and that was entirely unnecessary, too, for you were always short of what is called common sense. You needn't tell the captain you went to sea because you didn't know enough to be a landsman; or that you never did anything right in your life, except by accident. You are as like that ne'er do well. Jack Halphine, as two peas. If there is anything in you, I hope the salt water will fetch it out. Come, your mother has your supper ready, I see."

Mrs. Low's hand trembled as she passed her boy's cup. It was his last meal under that roof for many a long day. She did not trust herself to speak—her heart was too full. She had heard all his father so injudiciously said to him, and she knew too well from former experience the effect it would have upon his impetuous, fiery spirit. She had only to oppose to it a mother's prayers, and tears, and all-enduring love. She never condemned, in Will's hearing, any of his father's Philippics; always excusing him with the general remark that he didn't understand him. Alone, she mourned over it; and when with her husband, tried to place matters on a better footing for both parties.

Will noted his mother's swollen eye-lids; he saw his favorite little tea-cakes, that she had busied herself in preparing for him, and he ate and drank what she gave him, without tasting a morsel he swallowed, listening for the hundredth time to his father's account of "what he did when a young man."

"Just half an hour, Will," said his father, "before you start; run up and see if you have forgotten any of yonr duds."

It was the little room he had always called his own. How many nights he had lain there listening to the rain pattering on the low roof; how many mornings awakened by the chirp of the robbin in the apple-tree under the window. There was the little bed with its snowy covering, and the thousand and one little comforts prepared by his mother's hand. He turned his head—she was at his side, her arms about his neck. "God keep my boy!" was all she could utter. He knelt at her feet as in the days of childhood, and from those wayward lips came this tearful prayer, "O God, spare my mother, that I may look upon her face once more in this world!"

Oh, in after days, when that voice had died out from under the parental roof, how sacred was that spot to her who gave him birth!—There was hope for the boy, he had recognized his mother's God! By that invisible silken cord she still held the wanderer, though broad seas rolled between.

Letters came to Moss Glen—at stated intervals, then more irregularly, picturing only the bright spots in his sailor life (for Will was proud, and they were to be scanned by his father's eye.) The usual temptations of a sailor's life when in port were not unknown to him—of every cup the syren Pleasure held to his lips, he drank to the dregs; but there were moments in his maddest revels when, "God keep my boy," palsied his daring hand, and arrested the half-uttered oath. Disgusted with himself, but only to drown again more recklessly "that still small torturing voice."

* * * *

"You're a stranger in these parts," said a rough farmer to a sun-burnt traveller. "Look as though you'd been in foreign countries?"

"Do I?" said Will, slouching his hat over his eyes. "Who lives in that little cottage under the hill?"

"Old Farmer Low—and a tough customer he is too; it's a word and a blow with him. The old lady has had a hard time of it, good as she is, to put up with all his kinks and quirks. She bore it very well till the lad went away, and then she began to droop, like a willow in a storm, and lose all heart, like. Doctor's stuff didn't do any good, as long as she got no news from the boy. She's to be buried this afternoon, sir."

Will staid to hear no more, but tottered in the direction of the cottage. He asked no leave to enter, but passed over the threshold into the little "best parlor.," and found himself alone with the dead.—It was too true! dumb were the lips that should have welcomed him: and the arms that should have enfolded him were crossed peacefully over the heart that beat true to him to the last.

Conscience did its office. Long years of mad folly passed in swift review before him; and over that insensible form a vow was made, and registered in heaven.

* * * *

"Your mother should have lived to see this day, Will," said a gray-haired old man, as he leaned on the arm of the clergyman, and passed into the village church.

"Bless God, my dear father, there is 'joy in heaven over one sinner that repenteth;' and of all the angel band, there is one seraph hand that sweeps more rapturously its harp to-day, for 'the lost that is found!'"

Attention.

When a speaker or writer has exhausted his powers of thought and analysis on any given subject, if you would be benefitted by his lucubrations, you must think with him. No minds are so powerful and fruitful as those which compel us to think. But even the most original teacher will fail to be appreciated unless he can command attention, and the great secret of his success will arise from securing this from those whom he designs to instruct. In the parable of the sower and the seed, the only one benefitted by the word, was the one who heard and understood it; he alone yielded fruit.

It was remarked by Haller, "That we are deaf while we are yawning." The muscles which are extended in the act of yawning naturally closes the ear. This it would be well to remember in the schoolroom and chapel. Every lecturer is dull and uninteresting to those who by this process close their ears. I have really thought that there was something in the atmosphere of the conventicle to produce this phenomenon. Whether it is owing to the monotonous tones of the speaker, to his matter or manner, the air of quiet and repose which rests upon the congregation, the little interest which men feel on subjects with which they are familiar, or the bad ventilation in houses of worship; it is certain that of all places of my knowledge where people assemble together, none seem to affect one so much as meeting-houses. Various plans have been resorted to by preachers to keep their people awake, and some have been a little amusing. I once saw a good brother, who was a little corpulent, and fond of a nap in the church, whose eyes began to grow heavy, and whose countenance to assume that stolid and simple appearance, which it is most apt to do when one is caught napping in improper places. For the effort to keep awake, and the overpowering influence of Morpheus, produce most singular changes upon the face—of course unknown to the unfortunate sleeper, but quite manifest to the speaker.—Well, I say, this brother, after many unsuccessful attempts to keep awake finally yielded, with as little reluctance as might be imagined, to the influences which had fallen upon him, and put down his head to take a regular siesta! When, whether from malice or some higher motive I will not say, but raising my voice to its utmost tension, and directing it in a line with his ear, for you must know that he was some little distance from me, I made a strong assertion, growing out of my subject, and promised to prove it, provided my hearers would keep awake!! in the meantime. Reader, it has been some years since this occurred—but I have a most distinct recollection of the crack-like sound of that word—awake—and the effect it produced—not only on the ears, eyes, and person of the party for which it was designed, but of others who had been placed in a similar category. But there is the "mental yawn," which places the person in the same predicament: the ear within is closed by the same process. Inattention will shut up any avenue to the mind. The best writen book will fail to amuse or instruct, and the most accomplished speaker will be considered dull to those who are given to this unfortunate habit.

In these busy, stirring times nobody thinks, so I think. Certainly it is not one of the characteristic features of the age.—There is too much bustle and noise, too much sensuality or levity for thought.—The mental process requires patience; and who now-a-days has any patience?—This virtue, once held in such high esteem, and ever in such constant demand, is well nigh regarded as obsolete. It would be quite a discovery to find out some infallible way to enable one to think. Many persons deceive themselves on this head. They dream, they indulge themselves in all the "reveries of a bachelor," they sigh over the follies of the age, and perchance their own—and they call this thought. Anybody can do this; it is the easiest thing possible; it will not cost you any mental labor; but do not suppose that this is worthy the name of thought. Let any one read "Butler's Analogy," or "Foster's Essays," and he will find that the labor of comprehending such works is almost equal to the task of making them.

Sir Isaac Newton, with that modesty which is characteristic of true greatness, attributed his success in the discovery of truth, not to any superior force of intellect, but to patient thought. "I sat," said this prince of philosophers, "until truth made her appearance, and then with my whole heart I embraced her. Truth never fails to come at the bidding of such; she is naturally coy and reserved, and always gives some intimation of her approach. She knocks at the door, and waits for you to open, and then she will enter, and will tarry only so long as she is an honored and welcome guest. Her presence, like the ark in the family of Obed-Edom, always leaves a blessing behind.

Let the reader, then, learn to think, cultivate the power of attention, and be patient in his pursuits of knowledge.

I am always thankful to the author or speaker who obliges me to think; but there is one class of men who are so self-confident that they are right, and who have such an exalted opinion of their powers of reasoning, that they wonder why all do not see with their eyes what they suppose is so perfectly plain. Thus they charge every one with obtusity of intellect, want of good taste, or moral turpitude, who fails to understand or appreciate their reasonings.

Coleridge says of Warburton, in his "Divine Legation of Moses," "That he seems to have written, as if he deemed it a duty of decorum to publish his fancies on the Mosaic Law as the Law itself was delivered, that is, 'in thunders and lightnings': as if he had applied to his own book, instead of the sacred mount, the menace, 'There shall not a hand touch it, but he shall surely be stoned or shot through with a dart.'" This is not so surprising in a mind of such calibre as Warburton's, when treating of the "fiery law," but when the same dogmatism is indulged in with regard to the Gospel it is without apology. Have we not seen some who seemed to be possessed of a double psrtion of that spirit which asked for "fire from heaven" to consume their adversaries, and as impatient of contradiction as if they were "Sir Oracle," against whom no one should dare to "bark?"

FREEDOM FOR CUBA—REVOLUTIONARY MOVEMENTS!—Havana, May 28th.—It is reported here that the Captain General has received instructions from Madrid to consider, in connection with the principle slaveholders, the propriety of emancipating the negroes and binding them as apprentices; also to allow the introduction of emigrants from Africa.

Intelligence from Cardenas confirms previous reports of the finding of revolutionary documents among the soldiers of the Barracks.

There was quite a row at the University on the 19th of May, the anniversary of the landing of Lopez. Several students were arrested, four of whom were charged with having collected money for the Cuban junta, were dismissed. Political affairs for the moment are quiet; business is dull; weather very fine.

Moral Reflections, Sentences, and Maxims.

Folly pursues us in every period of life. If any one appears wise, it is only because his follies are proportioned to his age and fortune.

There are some silly people who know themselves, and make a clever use of their silliness.

He who lives without folly is not so wise as he thinks.

As we grow old we become more foolish and more wise.

Some people resemble ballads, which are only sung for a certain time.

The generality of people only judge of men by the fashion they are in, or by their fertunes.

Love of glory, fear of shame, the design of making a fortune, the desire of rendering our lives easy and agreeable, and the envious wish of lowering the fame of others are often the causes of that valor so celebrated among men.

Valor in common soldiers is a dangerous trade, which they have adopted to gain their livelihood.

Perfect bravery and thorough cowardice are two extremes which are seldom reached. The space between the two is great, and comprehends all other kinds of courage, between which there is as much difference as between countenances and dispositions. There are some men who expose themselves readily at the commencement of an action, and are disheartened and discouraged by its duration; some are content as soon as they have satisfied their reputation with the world, and do very little beyond this. We see some who are not at all times equally masters of their fears; others suffer themselves to be carried away by general panics; others go to the charge because they dare not remain in their posts. We find some in whom an acquaintance with petty dangers strengthens their courage, and prepares them to expose themselves to greater ones. Some are brave when sword in hand, and yet dread the fire of musketry; others are steady under fire, and fear the sword. All these different species of courage concur in this, that night, by augmenting fear and concealing good or bad actions, gives the privilege of being discreet. There is another species of discretion which is more general, for we never see a man perform as much in an encounter as he might do if he were sure of coming off safe; so that it is evident the fear of death subtracts something from courage.

Perfect valor is to do unwitnessed what we should be capable of doing before all the world.

Intrepidity is an extraordinary strength of mind, which raises it above the troubles, the disorders, and the emotions, which the sight of great perils is calculated to excite; it is by this strength that heroes maintain themselves in a tranquil state of mind, and preserve the free use of their reason under the most surprising and terrible circumstances.

One thing is quite clear, that whether Fortune be more like Plutus, or an angel, it is no use abusing her—one may as well throw stones at a star.

A truly virtuous man is he who prides himself upon nothing.

Severity of demeanor in women is a species of decoration and paint which they add to their beauty.

The virtue of women is often love of their reputation and of their quiet.

It is to be a truly virtuous man to wish to be always exposed to the view of virtuous people.

An important verdict has lately been rendered in a telegraph suit, which proves the liability of the companies for errors which happened through the blunders of the operators. Sometime in 1850, Messrs. Bidwell & Co., of Adrian, sent by telegraph to Bowen & NcNamee, of N. Y., for "one handsome eight dollar blue and orange" shawl. When they receved the dispatch, it read "one hundred." The ninety nine odd shawls were sent back, after the season was over, when they were depreciated in value. B. & McN. sued the telegraph company for the cost of transportation and depreciation in value. Verdict for plaintiffs $118.

STATE LIBRARY INDIANAPOLIS
v. 2 # 52

TEMPERANCE CHART.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.
WM. HANNAMAN, C. E. BABB,
JAMES HALL, R. T. BROWN,
JOHN B. ABBETT.

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 22, 1853.

To Correspondents.—We have received numerous letters, which will receive suitable attention in our next. There are no Temperance song books now to be had in this city.

The Chart.

The present is the last number of the present volume of the Chart. With it closes the subscription of many of our patrons. It is fondly hoped they will renew their names for the sake of the good cause to which it is devoted. It may not claim much for its ability, but we have endeavored to make it the medium of independent thought. In this way only does it seem to us, that any paper can deserve the support of free men. It is not to say things agreeable to our readers; but to present fairly, what seems to us the truth, that should furnish the rule of our conduct. It has been our aim to speak the truth, however, unpleasant it may have been to us at times, to utter some hard things, which it demanded, against our personal friends. We have spoken with freedom, to freemen, believing that they would be pleased with our real thoughts, when an attempt to please them by adopting their sentiments would not fail to offend. But good or ill—the Chart must be its own advocate. It neither becomes us to speak in its praise; nor to attempt to give it a character differing from that arising from its efforts to promote our principles. It must stand as its own apology; and its fate must repose in the zeal of the Temperance men of Indiana.

It will be sent for one or two numbers to all our old subscribers, after the expiration of the present volume. Each paper when the time is out, will be marked with a cross at the end of the name. Take notice!

William J. Brown.

We are again assaulted by the Editor of the Sentinel; and treated as though we were responsible for the conduct of those over whom we have no control. He intimates that we are by concert acting with the Journal for Whig principles; because we are a Whig. The charge whether intimated remotely or spoken out plainly, is false in the conception, utterance and intent; and would have choked the filthy life out of its author, and left his carcass as cold, as similar utterances have long left his conscience, had not his throat been the highway of falschood for so many years that it is enlarged to a sufficient capacity to accommodate any of the monstrous creations of a heart utterly at war with truth.

He cannot, however, provoke us into a renewal of our old feud so easily. We have once been compelled to publish a brief sketch of his career; and that must suffice. It is not desirable to foul white paper with his name, nor insult decency by giving utterance to the truth concerning such a moral monstrosity. In the national mind his character for duplicity will long remain; for his protracted career of iniquity has given us a stereotyped edition of his adventures. To that we appeal for a vindication from his calumnies. If ever man could read his history in a nation's eyes, he is that man. He has read it in the Hall of the National Legislature; and at Louisville on a recent occasion. His memory by one voice—South and North—has been gibbetted, and pelted so often and so long with suitable missiles, by an indignant people, that, covered over with filth and infamy, he is no longer sensible of pain under any infliction. Vale.

The Evening Time, and its Thoughts.

'Tis evening. The church bells are ringing out their beautiful chime to call the worshippers together. A thousand pleasant and pure memories are borne to the heart by every stroke; and visions of departed joys renew to us our earliest and happiest years. The breeze, "freighted with perfume" from the flowers that deck the breast of June, steals gently into our sanctum, and silent and holy as a ministering angel woos us—oh how lovingly!—to think of the better hereafter—the heart's own loved ideal of home. Light clouds, tinged with a thousand hues, career in beauty o'er the stilly blue of heaven, as missioned to bear its messengers of mercy to the abodes of human sorrow and suffering. The moon sails brightly up the sky, and countless stars look smilingly and encouragingly on the children of men.—A miracle of love and loveliness is spread before the world. The mighty One is heard, felt and seen in it all. Not operating merely through those unfeeling agencies—the physical laws of the universe; but heard, felt and seen as its quickening spirit.—Love—His own paternal affection—for the beings he has created, lives in all its parts and irradiates them with a divine glory. The heart quickens its stroke, for it feels that the eye of the Purifier is upon it; and that its hidden depths are open to His gaze. The mind is uplifted from its earth-level to the contemplation of His excellencies, who "is good unto all, and whose tender mercies are over all his works." At such a moment who would not be alone?

But, alas! we are not alone. The city's hum is mingled with nature's song of praise, and half drowns the whisperings of our guardian angel, as they fall in music and hope on the silence of the soul. The clatter of myriad feet, and the coarse voices of the rabble, hurrying on to loose themselves in the wine cup and revel, come ringing upon the ear, with an assurance that man is still "of the earth, earthy." The auction bell, too, and the Negro's "O yes!"—what music the former, and what motto the latter for the busy world to keep time to, and follow! Thousands spit forth blasphemies in the very face of their Creator, and laugh, without knowing why, at follies that "make the angels weep." A thousand beauties, wonders and blessings cannot win men from the iron-hooped cage of selfishness in which they have shut themselves; or the abyss of abasement into which they have heedlessly plunged. The man of the world counts his dimes; weighs the chances of increasing them; schemes, and plans, and presses forward for one object only. Money has become "the end and aim of his existence," and money he must have or die. Thus always degraded by his idol from the privileges of true manhood, he wanders farther and still farther from happiness, at every step he takes in the journey of life. and dies at last the most utterly miserable of all the fools of earth, who barter their manhood for the earth-bubbles that glitter but for a moment, and then vanish forever. Not even the fool that treads the slime-polluted paths of vice pursues his career with more certainty of disappointment and sorrow, than the mere earth-worm—to whom God has said: "Thou fool, this night thy soul shall be required of thee." If to none but the crawler after yellow dirt—the emulator of "Gripus or Gripus' wife," this language has been uttered, does it not become many who are "still at ease in their possessions," to ponder it. Let it arise like an old memory from the soul's depths, to rebuke, reprove, correct and purify the soul. Then shall it be a voice of hope and not of despair—a note of gladness and rejoicing forever.

A Scurvy Irishman.—Mr. Brown, of the Sentinel, charges us with calling O'Biren a scurvy Irishman, because he voted against the Whigs, although we expressly assigned our reason for so naming him. It is this: He said his little daughter sold the liquor for which he was fined; and no man who is not a scurvy dog, will make such a stoop even if it were true; but in this case it is utterly false, for Miss O'Brien was fined for her own offence and paid it. O'Brien's slander upon his daughter entitled him to the epithet we applied to him almost as justly as your intentional falsehood in his defence entitles you to be called a LIAR!

The Pardoning Power.

By the Constitution of Indiana, the Governor is empowered "to remit fines and forfeitures, under such regulations as may be prescribed by law," and is required to report to the General Assembly at its next session, each case; "and also the names of all persons in whose favor remissions of fines and forfeitures shall have been made, and the several amounts remitted." See, Constitution of Indiana, Article 5, sec. 17.

Under this provision of the Constitution, Governor Wright—as we are informed—procured the passage of the following statute, which was duly approved June 14, 1852:

"Sec. 1. Be it enacted by the General Assembly of the State of Indiana, That all applicants to the Governor for the remission of fines and forfeitures, shall forward to him, with their application, the opinion of the propriety of so doing, of a majority of the following officers in the county where the fine was assessed, or forfeiture occurred, viz.: the Clerk of the Circuit Court, Auditor, Sheriff, County Treasurer, and such officers as shall, from time to time, have the care and custody of the Common School fund within the county."

It will be seen, by reference to our School Law, as prepared and published by our worthy Superintendent, that the school fund of each county is placed under the control of the Treasurer and Auditor, subject, however, to the supervision and control of the County Commissioners. See, Prof. Larrabee's edition of the School Law, p. 43–45. We thus have before us a basis upon which we can rest our conclusions, in reference to the conduct of our officers in the remission of fines and forfeitures; and with this basis to build on, we have a few remarks to submit to the candid of all parties.

From the 12th of November, 1851, until the 24th of December, 1852, the Governor remitted fines and forfeitures which had been imposed upon sixty-one persons, amounting in the aggregate to the sum of $4,425 33. Of these, ten cases appear from the Governor's list attached to his last Annual Message, to have been cases of retailing, and the aggregate of fines remitted in these cases, $246. One of the last of these cases is that of Balous Coates, of Marion County, who was fined in two cases, at the June term of the Marion Circuit Court, 1851, in the sum of $51. The petition was signed by the Prosecuting Attorney, County Assessor, Recorder, Clerk, District Attorney, Seminary Trustee, and other citizens, and shows no reason whatever why clemency should have been extended to the culprit.

Merit Teague, of Switzerland County, fined $11 for three offences, had his fine remitted on the representation of the Clerk of the Circuit Court, Treasurer elect, and other citizens, that he was poor. The date of the remission in this last case is November 30, 1852. Now, it must be remembered, that the law of which we have already quoted the first section, was approved and went into operation by virtue of an emergency clause before that time. That law requires a majority of the following officers to sign the application before the Governor can hear it, viz.: "the Clerk of the Circuit Court, Auditor, Sheriff, County Treasurer, and such officers as shall from time to time have the care and custody of the common school fund within the county." The Constitution gives the Governor power to remit fines only in accordance with "such regulations as may be prescribed by law." Here the Governor has given us the facts; and was, as we are informed, instrumental in procuring the passage of the law cited; and we now place the Constitution, law and facts, side by side, and leave an honest public to decide whether the remission, in the last named case, is in accordance with the constitution and law. Is the Clerk of the Circuit Court of Switzerland County a majority of the officers of that County, named by the law, under which the Sentinel justifies the course pursued by his Excellency? You appeal to the law, and by the law you shall be judged. The facts which we cite are of your own divulging, the law of your own recommending, and the Constitution of the people's choosing, and the conclusion to be deduced from the facts, law and Constitution, is now referred to the people also.

His Excellency, however, remitted a forfeiture of $1,000, December 20, 1852, after the law already quoted went into operation, against the express remonstrance of all the officers named in the law, and over the opinion of fifty of the principal citizens of Morgan County, where the forfeiture was taken. By that law—and the Governor knew it—the application for the remission could not legally be heard unless accompanied by the opinion of the propriety of so doing of a majority of the following officers in the county, viz.: "the Clerk of the Circuit Court, Auditor, Sheriff, County Treasurer, and such officers as shall from time to time have the care and custody of the common school fund within the county." What do you say to this case? To be sure whisky may have had nothing to do with it.

But we are compelled in self-defence to present a different, and, we are sorry to say, far less favorable view of the conduct of his Excellency, than that deducible from any special case. There is a class of cases in which we are fearful he has acted not only without authority to remit the fines, but in violation of the express letter of the Constitution, which he is sworn to support. The Constitution gives his Excellency no power to remit fines or forfeitures at all before the Legislature under it, pass a law prescribing the manner in which he shall remit them: there was no law passed by the Legislature on that subject, until the 14th of June, 1852; yet the Governor remitted from the 14th of November, 1651, till the 8th of June, 1852, fines and forfeitures to the amount of $2,381 33. Here is an oversight, to say the least of it, that presents the conduct of his Excellency in this particular in no very favorable light. What authority had he to act in the premises? Did he derive it from the Constitution? That granted him no authority, until the Legislature should prescribe the manner of its exercise. He acted then without authority. An important question here presents itself for our consideration. It is this: Are not all the Gubernatorial remissions of fines and forfeitures, between the coming into force of the new Constitution, and the passage of the law of the 14th June, 1852, void? If so, is it not the duty of courts to enforce their collection? These are grave questions, and that they will, if tested, be settled affirmatively, we have no doubt.* Those who know the law can decide whether we are correct in this conclusion or not.

We should not have thought of referring to these things, but for the unprovoked and uncandid charges of Mr. Brown. We refer to our course hitherto, as the best evidence of our feelings towards his Excellency. Those who have read the Chart, know that we have spoken of him on all occasions kindly both as a Governor and a man; but we "paddle our own canoe," and do not intend to be sunk by a broadside from the piratical craft in which our neighbor of the Sentinel sails.

*The following dictum will show that our position is fully sustained by the Supreme Court of the U. S., on this point:

"The constitution of Mississippi adopted in 1832, prohibited the introduction of slaves into that State as merchandize, from and after the 1st day of May, 1833. A contract for the purchase of negroes introduced into that State in 1835 was not invalidated, because the legislature passed no law to carry into effect that article of the constitution till 1837." 15 Peters, 449.

The Southern Ladies' Book.

We have before us the May number of this truly beautiful monthly. This is the commencement of its second volume, and if it receives a patronage equal to its merit and beauty, it must already be high on the road to complete success. It is beautifully printed on excellent paper, and embellished in a superior style. The present number, contains two excellent engravings—the first being "the raising of Lazarus"—the second, the beautiful and intellectual face of its Editress—Mrs. L. Virginia French, whose name is a sufficient guarrantee for the literary character of the periodical. It ranks among its contributors a galaxy of the best literary talent in the Union. Among these we may mention Mrs. French, George D. Prentice, and M. F. Bigney, all of whom have favored the present number with a sample of their writings, well worthy of their reputation.

All in all, the work is much superior to its competitors "Godey" and "Graham;" and, if for nothing else, should be preferred by all the people of the free States, on account of its independence. It does not pander to our opinions for the sake of popularity among us, as those just named do to the notions of the South. We love outspoken independence, even when opposed to all our opinions; and although we regret the difference, we are willing to hold up both our hands in favor of such an opponant, while we heartily despise the cringing and false advocate of our most cherished principles. The present number contains but one article which we could wish were not in it. We allude to the notice of Mrs. H. Beecher Stowe. Whatever may be her faults, as an author, her character, as a woman and a philanthropist, is above reproach. Abuse can not reach either; and is not certainly the best weapon with which to vidicate even a good cause. An honest difference of opinion may and often does exist between individals on points of the most vital and fundamental character, in morals, politics, and religion; and hence Christian forbearance should induce us to treat even what we conceive to be the gross faults of others with kindness—and display towards them that beautiful charity "which thinketh no evil."

"The Southern Ladies' Book" is published at New Orleans, and mailed to subscribers at $3.00 per annum, in advance. We are assured that our friends Cox & Mathis, of the "Railroad City Bookstore," intend to obtain the agency for this city. The work will sell, as it ought, wherever sound literature is appreciated.

Glass was made to look through.

It has often occurred to us, in passing the windows of certain shops in our city, that there must be something wrong in them; for their windows were either hung with red curtains, or the glass thereof painted, so that the eye of an outsider might not pierce the mystery that lies beyond. It is not now-a-days the custom of honest traders thus to skulk behind screens, and curtains, and paint. They show their wares; invite all to inspect them; and solicit an open and manly patronage. Yet all our traders do not act thus above-board, and in the light. Like thieves, some of them steal through the darkness and heat, and malaria of their polluted rooms, and dare not let even their right hand know what their left hand doeth. Like counterfeiters, they dive into cellars, and hide in darkness. The pure bright light of heaven is too pure for their chambers. They paint their glass, set up screens or hang red curtains, to modify its brightness and sully its purity. And so they ought. It would be too much for their weak eyes to gaze upon such a glory as a sunbeam new and warm from the face of the day-god. Yet, after all, the glass was made to look through; and it is only those whose eyes are weak, or whose vices and crimes demand protection from the public gaze, that will shut out the light. It is proper for the groggery—the gaming-house, and kindred establishments, to hang their windows with red curtains, or paint them; for to expose their traffic would subject them to pains and penalties for open and notorious public indecency.

More about the Pardoning Power and its friends.

In the case of O'Brien, the Irishman fined before Mayor Scudder, we have taken some pains to ascertain the facts, from the proper records. The names of the officers designated in the law accompanied the application. The clerk of the Circuit Court signed it first, with a declaration that he knew nothing of the amount of the fines inflicted or the character of the offences for which they were inflicted; next follows the names of the Recorder, Sheriff, and Auditor, without qualification; and last that of the Treasurer, Willis W. Wright, who states, that he knows nothing of the facts set forth in the petition, "except from rumor." We can find it in our heart, to overlook whatever those of our officers, who are not avowedly temperance men, do in these cases; but when a temperance man thus aids the guilty to escape from the penalties of the law against intemperance, which he has violated, we have no plea for his conduct. Nor does it help his case that he predicates his action on rumor. If he knows nothing about the case, he should refuse to act. Indeed, it is but a pitiful subterfuge altogether below manliness, to attempt thus to dodge responsibility. His "rumor" is intended as it has been employed by the Journal already, to excuse his act with the better class of men, while his name is lent to the liquor fiend to secure his influence in some future political emergency. Away with such dishonesty! We abhor it, and happen where and how it may, we shall never withhold our unqualified disapprobation from such conduct. Nor is it more painful for us to pronounce our condemnation of the conduct of W. W. Wright, Treasurer of Marion county, for his part in such remission, than it was, and is, to express our unpleasant convictions of the kindred errors of Joseph A. Wright, Governor of the State of Indiana. We should even have thought better of the Treasurer, if he had left out his little qualification; for then it would have borne the face of manliness; but it is unmanly to do our actions with some back door always open to admit of an escape from responsibility whenever we may desire to fly. The fact, however, does not make the case any better; but on the contrary leaves us free to presume that the act was characterized by duplicity from the beginning.

But our Treasurer is not the only one who has aided and abetted in releasing the victims of the law from punishment suitable to their crimes. We are sorry to write it; but we are in truth and honor bound to say that Brother Woodward, G. S. of the Grand Division of this State, has allowed himself to be used for the same purpose. Wm. C. Vanblaricum, famous for keeping a gambling house—known as the California Exchange—in this city, was fined by our Circuit Court in the sum of $150, in three cases; and on the recommendation of C. Woodward, D. B. Culley, J. W. H. Langsdale and others, not known as Temperance men, these fines were remitted without any other reason for their remission whatever. The California Exchange was a liquor establishment too, of the lowest order—kept by a man that braved public opinion and law—and laughed at the agony he inflicted upon others. How can temperance men hope to succeed while they assist in removing the oonsequences of such crimes from the doors of the criminals? What heart have officers to labor to drag the guilty to justice, if the professed conservators of good order are the first to labor for their release? What would a prohibitory law avail, if as often as the engines of the law were brought to bear upon the groggeries and their keepers, the leaders of the Temperance reform would rush between them and the power that threatened to destroy, and rescue them from destruction? A thousand Maine laws would be impotent, as ropes of sand under such circumstances. Temperance men have no right to throw stones at others, until they can say, they are in that regard "without sin." Let us stand "erect" before we blame others for obliquity.

Indianapolis Groggeries.
No. IV.
DILL & DAVIS.

A few weeks since we published a series of sketches designed to enable the traveling public to know the locality of some of our most conspicuous and destructive groggeries. The series was then left incomplete in consequence of our temporary absence from home, and our time has been so much engrossed with other topics since our return, that we have hitherto been deterred from resuming that subject. A moment's leisure enables us to turn our attention once more to it; and we seize upon the favorable opportunity with alacrity. Do not, however, suppose that the occasion brings to us any other pleasure than that arising from an opportunity to discharge a solemn duty. There is nothing grateful to our feelings in plunging into the stews of vice and filth, the haunts of their depraved and degraded victims, or in the delineation of the cold and fiend-like selfishness of those who for "filthy lucre" pander to their vices, and aid in maturing them for the penitentiary or the gallows. On the contrary, it is a duty undertaken with reluctance, and only performed because imposed bp obligations which we can not disregard. Nevertheless we do not say these things by way of apology; for next to positive evil-doing we deem most apologies, and feel certain than an honest intention can seldom have occasion to adopt them as a part of its panoply.

Something over a year ago, DILL & DAVIS established themselves, in violation of the will of the people, and the laws of the State, in their present locality, on the East side of Illinois street, and upon the alley immediately North of Mr. Towsey's corner. From the date of their establishment, that spot became a marked place in our city. It was no longer the abode of quiet, of decency, of purity, or of safety; but the home of disorder, indecency, impurity, obscenity, profanity, violence, and crime. The carcase was there, and if not the eagles, the buzzards and night owls that delight to revel and riot on viands eschewed by every clean beast and bird, were there also, They came to the piping, and caught greedily at the bait, which the Masters of the domicil had spread to allure them from the paths of virtue, not knowing or not caring that it was for their lives. The street in front of their house—that nursing mother of crime—has ceased to be either safe or agreeable to the passenger, and the fair and innocent have long had either to pass by on the other side, or run imminent risk of being shocked by the indecency. jostled by the rudeness or insulted by the coarseness of its patrons.

In front of the door stands a pump, over which cluster the branches of two beautiful locust trees, between these may be seen a lamp trimmed and burning as often as the darkness of the night makes it instrumental in decoying the wayfaring and simple in the purlieus of the adjacent hell. Thus are the most beautiful gifts of Providence desecrated by the destroyer. There is the pure water—a perennial fount—to slake the thirst of the wanderer, and "nourish and invigorate" all, without money and without price—a perpetual testimony of the goodness of God, and of the weakness and wickedness of man, who converts it into poison. There, too, are the green trees, instinct with life and glorious in beauty, in whose branches, as erst in the Garden, may still be heard in audible whispers the voice of God. But the wrecker has poised his piratical light in the midst of the trees, and immediately over the blessed fount of crystal water, "prepared by God himself to nourish and invigorate his creatures, and beautify his footstool." The serpent is under that covert hard by. He lurks in the shade of those beautiful trees, like his great prototype, to deceive by lies, and ruin by deceiving. Within his immediate den are many things to allure the thoughtless, and to ruin whom they allure. The ceiling of the room above is beautifully paper-hung, the shelves are backed up by large mirrors, in which the flash of the rosy wine, variously tinted liquids, ranged upon them, may be seen in the most imposing light. There, too, are the servitors, whom, out of respect for humanity which is not yet degraded to the demon level, we forbear to describe. No spider ever saw an unfortunate fly light upon his gossamer with more fiend-like delight that leers in their eyes when one of the simple ones first treads their door sill. Another victim they whisper so low as not to reach his ear, but loud enough to wake an echo of joy in all the caverns of the pit. And so they live day by day, eating the flesh and drinking the blood of their fellows. Vampire like, preying upon their kindred, and counting as a most delicate morsel the broken hearts of widows—made widows by themselves. They might perhaps be shocked at the recital of tales of African cannibalism; but a single moments reflection must satisfy any sane mind, that in all the elements of cruelty they are in every essential feature of that offence on the image of God, worse than the Caffer or Hottentot. They devour their fellow men as certainly, and with circumstances of outrage, that would make their savage brethren blush, for shame. The only difference is, that they do indirectly and knowing their crime, what the savages do directly but ignorantly.

And these men are permitted to hold on the even tenor of their way, without hindrance by public opinion or public police. With the law against their business as a crime, against their brawls and fights as crimes, and against their den and its offshoots as nuisances, they are passed-over from day to day by our Mayor, our Marshal, our constables, and our people, without being dragged to justice and punishment. If to revel and riot are criminal, their place is the ground of such crimes. If to fight and brawl are against law, they are against law. If to disturb the quiet and sleep of their neighbors, is contrary to law and right, their house is opposed to both. If to make drunkards by the score, and turn them out in shoals to infest our streets, to disturb the peace, and endanger the property of the city, is an outrage upon the rights of community, then are they guilty of that outrage. If to prepare men for the grossest and most infamous public indecencies, and thus prepared, turn them out in the streets to insult our wives and daughters, and outrage decency, by a violation of the moral sense of our people, then are these men guilty of violating that moral sense.

What hinders us from abating as a nuisance, a house known and held to be such by all who know it best, unless it be by those who unable to stand, lend themselves to it as the pillars of its support? The following case was decided at the present term of the Supreme Court:

Bepley v. The State. Appeal from the Hamilton Court of Common Pleas.

This was a prosecution for a nuisance, under the 17th Section of the act of March, 1853, regulating the retail of spiritous liquors. Trial by jury, and verdict and judgment for the State. Section 17, is as follows:

"All places or houses, wherein spirituous liquors shall be sold or bartered, directly or indirectly, without license, in a less quantity than one gallon, or suffered or allowed to be drank in or about such place, house, out-house, yard, or appurtenance thereto, be and the same are hereby declared to be common and public nuisances, and all persons keeping and maintaining such nuisances as aforesaid, shall, upon conviction thereof, be fined in any amount not less than ten dollars, nor more than one hundred dollars."

There was evidence tending to prove that Bepley, on a single occasion, sold liquor by a less quantity than a gallon, and suffered it to be drank in his house. It appeared also that he had bottles of different kinds of liquor, usual in retail establishments. It was for the jury to say, whether this evidence was sufficient. Having so decided in a matter peculiarly within their province to decide, we think the verdict ought not to be disturbed. The constitutional question so elaborately argued by Counsel, does not arise in the record. The 17th Section is not liable to any objection of that kind. It is competent for the Legislature to declare any practice deemed injurious to the public a nuisance, and to punish it accordingly. This is fully recognized in the elaborate liquor cases decided in 5 Howard, U. S. R., 504, et infra. There is sufficient in the Statute independent of the parts which Counsel deemed unconstitutional, to execute the 17th Section, and support the judgment of the Court below.

The following is the article of the Washington Union on Russia, which has excited so much commotion in the ranks of the Democracy, and called forth various strictures from the presses of the country at large:

From the Washington Union of May 19.

"RUSSIA.—Mr. H. Winter Davis, a conspicuous orator in the late Scott campaign, has published a hook with the fantastic title of 'The War of Ormuzd and Ahriman,' in whieh he affects to regard the United States and Russia as the respective champions of the principle of liberty, and the principle of despotism, and to foresee in the distant future a mighty and decisive conflict between these puissant combatants in the great drama of human history. The fundamental idea of this book is so absurd a fiction that no effort of ingenuity or power of eloquence could clothe it in a plausible garb. It is perfectly safe, therefore, to assume that it will not make much impression upon the country when developed in the extravagant speculation and hyperbolical rhetoric of the puerile production of Mr. Davis.

The idea of an inevitable antagonism and ultimate conflict between the United States and Russia is so silly that we can only express surprise that any sensible man could entertain it for a moment. It was the dream of the Persian mythology that the spirits of good and evil—Ormuzd and Ahriman—waged a perpetual struggle for the ascendancy over man; but to assign any such Quixotic mission to nations is to betray a sad want of philosophic reflection. To assume as the basis of a grave disquisition an inevitable and mortal antagonism between the United States and Russia is to betray an egregious ignorance of the past and present political relations of the two countries.

It is the idea of some enthusiasts that the science of government is a mere abstraction, and that its theoretical perfection necessarily implies its practical fitness for man in every condition. Persons who reason in this way may regard the Government of Russia as an unmixed evil; but when we consider the peculiar condition and wants of the Russian people, and their aggregate of individual and national happiness, we will conclude that they are not so much the victims of oppression as such writers as the author of 'Ormuzd and Ahriman' would represent. The Government of Russia may be a despotism, and for that reason abhorrent to the notions of republicans; but its effect upon the subject people establishes its fitness for them. Under the government of absolute monarchy the Russian nation have emerged from the depths of barbarism, and within a single century have taken position in the front rank of civilization.—The great fact in European history for the last hundred years is the rise and progress of Russia. At the battle of Pultowa, July 8, 1700, an infant nation struggled for existence. That infant has since grown to the stature of a giant, like a colossus, bestrides the continent of Europe. Its social development has been coincident with its growth in political power; its conquests in the realms of science and art, and learning, have even surpassed the vast achievements of its armies. In the rapidity of its progress it has outstripped every nation in Europe, and the United States alone can present a parallel to its wonderful career. In every element of national strength and happiness Russia is great and prosperous beyond any other country in Europe. Its government is more stable and efficient, and its people more contented than any other, while in respect to political supremacy it is universally recognized as the preponderating power of the Old World. In the character of its rulers Russia has been singularly fortunate. In energy of will, honesty of purpose, and force of genius, they have for the most part presented a striking exception to the proverbial stupidity, cowardice, and meanness of legitimate royalty. When we contemplate the policy of the Russian government through all the vicissitudes of its history, we are struck as much by the immense genius as by the colossal ambition of its monarchs. If the internal administration of the government be conducted with anything of the skill and energy which characterize its foreign policy, we need be at no loss to comprehend the devoted loyalty and patriotism of the nation. And we have a right to infer, from the consummate ability of the Russian diplomacy, that its government manifests no want of genius in conducting the domestic concerns of the empire. Whatever opinion may be entertained of the Russian government in an abstract view, it is idle to deny the energy of its administration and its perfect adaptation to the condition of the nation. The destruction of Moscow, the most heroic display of unconquerable patriotism which history records, illustrates, the devotion of the people to their country and its institutions.

The governments of Russia and the United States are based upon antagonistic principles; but their relations have ever been of the most amicable kind. President Jeckson, in an official message, spoke of Russia as our ancient and steadfast friend. Mr. Jefferson, radical Democrat as he was, enjoyed and reciprocated the ardent esteem of the Emperor Alexander. Indeed, strange as it may seem to theorists of the 'Ormuzd and Ahriman' school, this chivalrous Emperor entertained an admiration for American institutions. It was his friendly mediation that initiated the negotiation which resulted in the treaty of Ghent, and it was by his arbitration that the citizens of the South got indemnity for the slaves which were kidnapped by the British in the last war. The reigning Emperor shares the feelings and opinions of his predecessor; and we have every reason to believe that the United States and Russia will consolidate and perpetuate their friendly relations by the same just and pacific policy which has regulated their intercourse in times past.

HONEST LABOR.—Labor, honest labor, is mighty and beautiful. Activity is the ruling element of life, and its highest relish. Luxuries and conquests are the result of labor—we can imagine nothing without it. The noblest man on earth is he who puts hands cheerfully and proudly to honest labor. Labor is a business and ordinance of God. Suspend labor, and where is the glory and pomp of earth—the fruitful fields and palaces, and the fashionings of matter for which men strive and war!

Let the labor-scorner look around him, look to himself, and learn what are the trophies of toil. From the crown of his head to the sole of his foot, he is the debtor of toil.

Oh! scorn labor, do you—man who has never yet earned a morsel of bread. Labor pities you, proud fool, and laughs you to scorn. You shall pass to dust forgotten, but labor will live on forever glorious in its conquests and monuments.—Ex.

Hypocrisy is the homage which vice renders to virtue.

AUSTRIAN TYRANNY.—Kossuth, at the recent meeting held in London, to present him a copy of the Works of Shakspeare, related the following instance of Austrian tyranny, which, for cold-blooded atrocity, it would be difficult to parallel:

"You remember the attempt of Libeny to assassinate Francis Joseph, whom men may call Emperor of Austria, but who certainly is not King of Hungary.—(Cheers.) I certainly am not the man either to excuse assassins, or to justify assassinations, though you are all taught in your universities to honor Brutus with the name of a hero and a patriot. I only wonder why all who justly condemned Libeny for his criminal attempt, have not equal words of condemnation for other assassinations; but that I will leave to their own consciences. However, Libeny having stricken his blow, General Kempfen sent word to the court martial that from the vast number of Hungarian political prisoners, four should be despatched immediately to Pesth, to be executed there. The court martial—mark the words, gentlemen, even an Austrian court martial—answered that, unfortunately, they could not furnish his excellency with the wanted victims, as it just so happened that there was no prisoner condemned, or who could be condemned, to death, all fit persons having been despatched in due course.—Well, Hempfen answered, 'If you have none, I will designate four, who, guilty or not guilty, shall die.' So he did. The designated individuals had already had their trials. One had been sentenced upon suspicion to ten years' imprisonment; Juhbal, formerly tutor to the children of my sister, to four years; and the two others equally to imprisonment. Kempfen answered, 'Tried or not tried, that does not matter; they shall die:' and a new special court having been patched up in haste, they have been doomed and executed."

PRACTICAL TEMPERANCE LECTURES.—Monday morning, the 30th ult., the Kalamazoo depot was burned, the fire originating in a drunkery near by. One poor fellow, so drunk he could not remove himself from the devouring flames, was burned to death! Another man enrolled on the black catalogue of alcohol's victims!—How many more martyrs will be necessary to arouse the people to action? What other notes must he struck at these Bacchanalian orgies? A short time since another degraded specimen of fallen humanity graduated in one of the death shops of Battle creek. He was driven out of doors, successively from doggery to doggery, after getting the usual potion, until in a state of unlocomotive inebriety, he staggered into the river, and after nine days his bloated corpse rose to the surface near the saloon where he was finished. An appropriate sign, truly! That incident in rum's history aroused the people of the vicinity to action, and will probably secure many votes for the Maine Law. Those that defeat all of manhood's objects in their life, may sometimes benefit humanity by their death. Perhaps these practical lectures may have effect.—Michigan Temperance Advocate.

QUAKER TOAST.—"This is from me and mine to thee and thine. I wish when thou and thine come to see me and mine, that me and mine will treat thee and thine as kindly as thou and thine have treated me and mine." This is a new version of the old compliment, which runs somewhat after this wise:—"I wish thee and thy folks, loved me and my folks, as well as me and my folks love thee and thy folks. For, sure, there never was folks since folks was folks, that ever loved folks half so well as me and my folks love thee and thy folks."

Acknowledgments.

Received of S. Frazier, at Indianapolis, $1.25 for Chart; St. Joseph D. S. of T., at Mishawaka, $5 for Chart; J. C. Shutz, at Lockport, for 1 copy of the Chart to be sent to Pulaski, and 3 to Lockport, $3.00; W. L. Dorsey, at Princeton, $11; Dr. J. G. Wright, Plainfield, 50 cents for Chart, 8 months; Oliver Cassell, New Albany, $4.50 for 6 copies; R. Wheaton, Dillsboro', 50 cents; B. F. Shelley, Lewisville, $1.00; J. Becken, Wabash, $1.00; Lyman H. Gilbert, at Covington, 75 cents; West Point Div. S. of T., $2.50 for 6 copies.

We are happy to say that the $4.50 which came in a letter we lost, was for the Chart, from Anderson Div. S. of T.

CONSTITUTION AND BY-LAWS,

WE are still prepared to print Constitution and By-Laws, where the alterations are few from the copy recommended by the Grand Division, at the following rates:

100 copies, (or less)	$5 00
200 "	8 00
300 "	10 00

We will pay the postage on all ordered from us.

☞ All orders accompanied by the cash, will be promptly attended to.

Address, JOHN H. OHR,
Indianapolis, Indiana.

CHARTERS.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR A DIVISION S. OF T.

(Date.)

The undersigned inhabitants of ——, believing the Order of the Sons of Temperance to be well calculated to extend the blessings of total abstinence, and promote the general welfare of mankind, respectfully petition the Grand Division of the —— of ——, to grant them a Charter to open a new Division, to be called the —— Division, No. —, Sons of Temperance, of the —— of ——, to be located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves, individually and collectively, to be governed by the rules and usages of said Grand Division, and also, by those of the National Division.

Enclosed is the Charter Fee, $5 00. Books, $2 00.

This must be signed by at least eight persons of good character and standing in community, and sent to C. WOODWARD, G. S., Indianapolis, Ind, free of postage.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR A TEMPLE.

(Date.)

The undersigned, believing the Temple of Honor to be well calculated to cement more firmly our fraternal relations, and add to the general prosperity of the cause of Temperance, respectfully petition the Grand Temple of the —— of ——, to grant them a Charter to open a new Temple, to be called the —— Temple of Honor, No. —, of the —— of ——, to be located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves individually and collectively, to be governed by the rules and usages of the Grand Temple, and also by those of the Order at large.

Enclosed is the Charter Fee, $20 00.

To be directed to the G. W. R., free of postage.

This must be signed by at least twenty persons of good standing, and if not known to the G. W. T. or G. W. R., must send satisfactory references.

J. H. OHR, G. W. R.

Indianapolis, Ind.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR CADETS OF TEMPERANCE.

The undersigned, boys of ——, believing the Order of Cadets of Temperance to be well calculated to extend the blessings of total abstinence, and promote the general welfare of mankind, respectfully petition the Grand Section of the State of Indiana, to grant them a charter to open a new Section, to be called the —— Section, No. ——, Cadets of Temperance, of the State of Indiana, to be located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves, individually and collectively to be governed by the rules and usages of said Grand Section, and also those of the acting Head of the Order.

Enclosed is the fee for Charter, R. B.'s and officers' cards, $5 00.

It must also be stated whether the applicants are members of the Order or not; if they are, of what Section. The application to be directed to the Grand Secretary, free of postage.

It must also be certified by a W. P. or P. W. P, that the W. Patron elect is a Son of Temperance in good standing.

Address (post paid) HENRY OHR, G. S., C. o T., Indianapolis, Indiana.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR DAUGHTERS OF TEMPERANCE.

(Date.)

The undersigned, inhabitants of ——, believing the Order of the Daughters of Temperance to be well calculated to extend the blessings of Total Abstinence, and promote the general welfare of mankind, respectfully petition the Grand Union to grant them a charter to open a new Union to be called the —— Union, No. —, D. of T., of the State of Indiana, located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves, individually and collectively, to be governed by the rules and usages of said Grand Union.

Enclosed is the Charter Fee, $5 00.

The above must be signed by at least eleven females, of proper age and good standing in community.

Address (post paid,) Mrs. ELIZA RICHMOND, G. S. S., Indianapolis, Indiana.

TO BUILDERS.

North Western Christian University.

THE Building Committee of the Board of Directors of the North-Western Christiana University, propose contracting for the west wing of the University Building, to be put up on the University grounds in the vicinity of Indianapolis.

Sealed Proposals in detail, with prices affixed for doing the work necessary to the completion of the said Wing, will be received until the 19th day of July next, and may be handed to the undersigned, or to J. T. Cox. Secretary of the Company, at the Book Store of Cox & Mathes, in Indianapolis.

The materials and work to be according to the plan, drawings and specifications prepared by Wm. Tinsley, Architect, which may be seen and examined at his room, on the east side of Pennsylvania street, three doors north of the north-east Diagonal, in Indianapolis. The specifications have been materially changed and modified, so as to reduce the cost of the building.

Proposals for the whole combined, would be preferred; but will be received for the different parts and portions thereof separotely. The whole to be completed and fit for use by the first day of September, 1854.

Payments will be made as the work progresses, at such short periods as may suit the covenience of the Contractors. Bond and security will be required for the performance of the work.

In behalf of the Building Committee:

OVID BUTLER,
President of the Board of Directors.

June 10, 1853. june 22 3w

THE LATEST WONDER of the 19th CENTURY.

DR. G. W. BENNETT'S Celebrated Eye-Balm.

A SPECIFIC FOR CHRONIC, SORE, INFLAMED, AND WEAK EYES.

Prepared only by Dr. George W. Bennett, and for sale by Merchants and Druggists generally.

THIS Balm is an excellent and certain cure for sore and inflamed Eyes, in all cases of Psoroic, Scrofulous, and Purulent Opthalmia, and what is commonly termed wild hairs in the eye-lids. It is a specific in Infantile, Purulent, and Scrofulous Inflamed, and Sore Eyes, and all in the various diseases of the Eyes, that prevail among the human family, in every climate. It will be found a sovereign remedy if properly applied.

W. W. ROBERTS, Indianapolis, Ind. General Agent for State of Indiana, to whom all orders must be addressed.

Price---Twenty-five Cents.

I warrant the above Balm to cure if the directions are strictly observed, or return the money.

june 22 4m G. W. BENNETT.

W. W. ROBERTS, Druggist and Apothecary.

Wholesale and Retail Dealer in

DRUGS, MEDICINES, PAINTS, OILS, AND DYE STUFFS, BRUSHES, FANCY GOODS, AMERICAN AND FRENCH WINDOW GLASS, &c.

WASHINGTON ST., INDIANAPOLIS.

Physicians, Country Merchants, and the people generally, are invited to examine his stock, which will be sold at the lowest cash price.

☞ QUALITY WARRANTED TO SUIT. ☜

june 22 4m

COMMERCIAL COLLEGE,

(Late Commercial Institute,)

Of Indianapolis,

Established March 31, 1851.

INCORPORATED, 1853.

W. McK. SCOTT, A. M., Founder and President.

JAMES C. HAYDEN, (Late Professor in Bacon's Mercantile College, Cincinnati.)

PROF. OF BOOK-KEEPING AND PENMANSHIP.

THE Session will commence at College Hall as follows:

1st Session on the first Monday of September.
2d Session on the 1st Monday of November.
3d Session on the 1st Monday of January.
4th Session on the 1st Monday of March.
5th Session on the 1st Monday of May.

Having secured, permanently, the services of the distinguished Professor above named, and leased for a term of years the commodious and beautiful Hall formerly known as CONCERT HALL, but now named COLLEGE HALL, which is to be fitted up in a style of great elegance, taste, and convenience, the President would say, that this College now offers advantages superior to all others, for imparting a sound, thorough, and accomplished business education

COURSE OF STUDIES.

The Course of Studies, as enlarged, will be as follows, viz:

1. Book-Keeping, by Single and Double Entry, in all its various branches, and its application to all kinds of business.
2. The Laws, Customs, and Usages of Trade and Commerce.
3. Mercantile Arithmetic, upon the short and easy system of cancelation, (taught in no other College.)
4. Commercial Law, in a series of Lectures, thorough and systematic.
5. Business Penmanship.
6. Commercial Correspondence.
7. Lectures upon Banking, Political Economy, and other subjects valusble to the business man.

EXPENSES.

Cards of Admission, invariably in advance, or secured, $25; Diplomas $3; Stationery $5; Boarding $2 50 per week; incidentals, at option of student, $15. Making entire expenses about $75.

On application, a Catalogue will be furnished, giving full particulars.

All letters will receive prompt attention on being directed, post-paid, to

june 8 W. McK. SCOTT, President.

"God never made his works for man to mend."
DR. FRANKLIN.

KIER'S ROCK OIL.

A NEW AND MOST IMPORTANT REMEDY FOR DISEASE.

DISCOVERED IN 1849.

IS drawn from a deep well near Pittsburgh—has been used with remarkable success in Ohio and Pennsylvania, and more Eastern States—and is now working its way West. An opportunity is now offered to the Afflicted for testing it. Where known and tried, it at once makes firm friends, and cures which are eloquent in its praise. Certificates of its power to heal are at hand—but we know well, reader, that such evidence, to have weight with you, now-a-days, must be in your own neighborhood.—You have only to try the Oil to be satisfied—it will SPEAK FOR ITSELF.

We have no war with the legion of Nostrums and Specifics of the day—we know but little about them—some say they are good for nothing. However that may be, the

Petroleum

will not be suppressed and kept back by reason of the above nostrums—duty and inclination both forbid it.

Those who are afflicted, are respectfully invited to get a Circular and look over the Directions for

Ague, Rheumatism, Piles, Diarrhœa, Flux, Tooth Ache, Burns, Worms, Scrofula, Coughs, Bronchitis, Croup, Old Sores, Cholera Morbus, Contractions of the Limbs and Joints, Sore Eyes, Blindness, Costiveness, Dyspepsia, and other Diseases.

By that time you may say, "it cures too much." But recollect it is not a HUMAN INVENTION, but compounded by Nature's master hand—and Nature does not do her work by halves.

The Oil is used both internally and externally.

As AGUE, SORE EYES, PILES, RHEUMATISM, and SCROFULA are so common in many parts of the West, we are constrained to say, that while this Oil will cure and relieve other diseases, it has been and is constantly used with most complete success in these cases.

☞ Price 50 cents per Bottle (half pint.)

Beware of all Rock Oil preparations, as some persons are offering a spurious article. Look for S. M. KIER'S name written on the label of the bottle.

For sale by the Druggists throughout Indiana, and by TOMLINSON BROTHERS, J P. POPE & Co., S. ROSENGARTEN, WM. TILLEY, and at wholesale by W. W. ROBERTS, Indianapolis, Indiana.

R. M. LYON, Fort Wayne,
may25 10w Proprietor in the Western States.

SOMETHING NEW.

LATHROP & STEVENS, Wholesale and Retail Dealers in BOOTS AND SHOES, at the West room in the Bates House, Washington Street, Indianapolis.

We are now opening a new and splendid stock of Boots and Shoes of every variety and style, which we are receiving direct from the manufacturers.—We design to keep constantly on hand a good assortment of the best quality of goods manufactured, which we can warrant to give satisfaction to all who may give them a trial. We will sell by the ease, dozen, or single pair, at low prices for cash.—Our stock consists in part of Gents' fine Cloth, silk warp, glove kid, buck, patent calf, and enameled Gaiters and Ties of every variety and style: Ladies' fine silk warp Gaiters, Buskins, Ties, Slippers and Boots; Misses' ditto; Men's calf, goat, kip, and thick Boots and Brogans; Boys' and Youths' ditto; assorted Ladies, kid, goat and calf Boots and Buskins; Misses' ditto. Also every variety of Children's Shoes. Come and see for yourselves.

LATHROP & STEVENS,
may 25 4w Indianapolis, Indiana.

TEMPERANCE INN, Bloomington, Indiana.

J. & S. M. ORCHARD, PROPRIETORS.

TRAVELLERS will find it to their advantage to call and try the accommodation of the TEMPERANCE INN. Stage office for all the different routes, in connection with this House. may25 6m ¶

R. R. UNDERHILL & CO.

Manufacturers of

Steam Engines for Grist and Saw Mills,

Of Every Size and Description,

Corn and Cob Grinders, and Castings.

CITY FOUNDRY AND MACHINE SHOP,
Pennsylvania, South of Maine Street,
oct 20 3m INDIANAPOLIS.

NICHOLS & JOHNSTON,

SURGEON DENTISTS,

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

PERFORM all operations connected with Dental Surgery, and warrant the same to stand, or repair free of charge.

Dentist's Fine Gold Foil, and plate, also Plate and Pivot Teeth, for sale at the usual rates.

Orders by mail or otherwise, accompanied with the Cash, carefully and promptly attended to.

june30 6m

REAL ESTATE AND GENERAL AGENCY OFFICE,

INDIANAPOLIS, INDIANA.

UNDER THE CONTROL OF W. M'K. SCOTT, Attorney & Counsellor at Law, and Notary Public.

The attention of the Agency will be devoted,

First—To the collection of debts and the payment of Taxes for non-residents in any county in the State. Also, the redemption of Lands sold for Taxes, sale, purchase or lease of Lands, purchase of adverse claims, examination and perfection of Title, &c., &c.

Second—To the prosecution of claims against the General Government, procuring Land Warrants, Patent Rights, and Pensions under the various Pension Laws, &c.

Third—All other Miscellaneous agencies as may be intrusted to the care of this office.

Fourth—The taking of Depositions and Attestation of all instruments requiring a seal

In all cases requiring an outlay of money for the benefit of individuals, the requisite funds must be transmitted in advance.

Prompt attention to all letters on business that are pre-paid. Address W. M'K. SCOTT,
Real Estate and General Agent,
jan 5-1y Indianapolis, Ind.

ADAMS & CO'S EXPRESS.

WE are now running a daily line East and West, accompanied by special messengers, and with the speed of the mails, running our own cars with the passenger trains.

Packages will be received at the cars up to the time of starting, and at our office until 1 o'clock each day.

We are prepared to transport packages, bank notes and specie, to and from any of the eastern cities, also, Louisville, Frankfort, and Lexington, Ky., St. Louis, Mo., or any points on the Ohio and Mississippi rivers; and to and from Terre Haute, and all intermediate points, and to forward freight from Terre Haute up and down the Wabash.

In addition to these, we have the most complete arrangements for transporting packages to and from California and Europe.

Exchange on England, Ireland, and Scotland, for sale, payable at any bank in the kingdom.

Foreign passage tickets; by Grinnell, Minturn & Co.'s line to Liverpool and London, constantly on hand, and for sale at the lowest rates.

Notes, drafts, and bills collected in any of the Eastern or Western cities.

Orders for goods to be returned by Express, sent free. Our rates of charges have been greatly reduced, and the public will find this a safe and expeditious method of transportation.

Indianapolis, June 30, 1852. ADAMS & CO.

Office in Indianapolis in Journal Building, west side Pennsylvania Street.

Office open during business hours.

june30 1y C. WOODWARD, Agent.

The Cheapest Illustrated Paper for the Young.

PRICE ONLY TEN CENTS A YEAR, or nearly three papers for one cent, where 100 copies are taken.

Twenty-six numbers a year, and each number illustrated with from three to seven engravings.

The Youth's Penny Gazette,

A strictly Religious and Moral Paper, is published by the AMERICAN SUNDAY SCHOOL UNION and is designed to furnish the Children and Youth of the United States with reading matter, in a popular form, for the improvement of Mind and Heart.

It is published (not monthly, nor weekly, but) every other week, or twenty-six numbers in a year. It is religious but unsectarian, and the matter is carefully prepared with a view to the habits, character and prospects of American Youth

TERMS OF THE PENNY GAZETTE.

$10 a year, in advance, for 100 copies, to one address. $5 a year, in advance, for 40 copies, to one address. $3 a year, in advance, for 20 copies, to one address. Single subscriptions, 25 cents per year.

TERMS BY MAIL, POSTAGE PAID.

☞ When the postage is paid at the place of mailing, the terms are very low. For $15 remitted, we will send 100 copies of the paper for one year, to one address—we paying postage. For $7 remitted, we will send 40 copies of the paper to one address, for one year—we paying postage. For $3 50 remitted, we will send 20 copies of the paper for one year, to one address—we paying postage. Less than 20 cannot be sent at this cheap rate.

Subscriptions received at the Society's House, No. 146 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.

Feb 16 3w G. S. SCOFIELD, Agent.

D. CRAIGHEAD. R. BROWNING.

CRAIGHEAD & BROWNING,

Dealers in all kinds of

Drugs, Medicines, Surgical Instruments, Paints, Oils, Chemicals, Varnishes, Dye Stuffs, Glassware Window Glass, Brushes, Cosmetics, Spices, Cigars, Tobacco, Perfumery, &c.,

WASHINGTON STREET,
INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

ALL are respectfully invited to call and examine our stock and prices, as we feel confident we can render satisfaction both as to prices and quality of articles. Great care is taken in the selection of articles, in reference to their purity, as we endeavor at all times to keep such articles as are strictly pure and genuine. Every article will be waranted as represented. Orders from Physicians and others promptly attended to. Particular attention given to filling Prescriptions and compounding Medicines, which, in all cases, shall receive the personal attention of one of the firm. june 30

HANNAMAN & DUZAN,

DEALERS IN

DRUGS AND MEDICINES,

Surgical Instruments, Paints, Oils, Varnishes, Dye Woods, Medical and Window Glass, Brushes, Perfumery, Soaps, &c.

Washington, 3 doors west of Pennsylvania St.,

june 30 1y INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

LITTLE, DRUM & ANDERSONS

WHOLESALE DEALERS IN

STAPLE AND FANCY DRY GOODS, BOOTS, SHOES, HATS, CAPS, STATIONERY, NOTIONS, TRIMMINGS, GROCERIES, HARDWARE, QUEENSWARE, AND GLASSWARE,

North side of Washington Street,

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

WE are receiving Country Produce of all descriptions, and paying the highest market price. Dealers visiting Indianapolis are respectfully invited to call and examine our stock and prices, both for Produce and Merchandise generally. june30 tf

A CHANCE TO MAKE MONEY.

Profitable and honorable Employment!

THE Subscriber is desirous of having an agent in each county and town of the Union. A capital of from $5 to $10 only will be required, and anything like an efficient, energetic man can make from three to five dollars per day; indeed some of the Agents now employed are realizing twice that sum. Every information will be given by addressing, (postage paid) WM. A. KINSLER,
june 15 3w ¶ Box 601, Philadelphia P. O.

The American Life and Health Insurance Company.

Office—No. 7, South Third St., Philadelphia.

Officers.

LEONARD JEWELL, President.
JAMES PEACOCK, Treasurer,
JOHN C. SIMS, Sec'y and Actuary.
THOS. S. SMITH, Solicitor
JOHN F. BIRD, FRED. A. FICKARDT, } Medical Examiners.

CHARLES WOODWARD, Indianapolis, Ind., General Agent for the State of Indiana.

THIS Company issues policies at Total Abstinence Rates, Joint stock Rates, and at Mutual Rates, which for $1000 on the life of a person 30 years of age, are as follows:

Age.	Total Abstinence.	Joint Stock.	Mutual.
30	$15.40	$19.60	$23.60

A further table of Rates will be furnished at the Office.

The condition in Total Abstinence rates (believed to be the lowest in the Union,) is entire forfeiture upon the departure of the Insured from Total Abstinence in its strictest sense.

Policies at Joint Stock and Mutual rates, contain no condition except as usual in Life Insurance.

HEALTH INSURANCE DEPARTMENT.

All Moneys received from the Insured, for Annual Premiums, after deducting expenses, will be divided among the Sick

The Public have for some time been familiar with the subject of Life and Health Insurance, but it is obvious that too little thoughts has been given to the latter. LIFE Insurance benefits our successors, while HEALTH Insurance directly benefits ourselves. It makes provision for a time of sickness, when the products of a man's industry are cut off, and want unites with Disease to aggravate his distress. It is at this gloomy period, when he is prostrated and helpless, and when despondency would otherwise overwhelm him, that the holder of a Health Insurance Policy will realize its benefits.

RATES, under 50 years of age,

$2,00	per year,	for	$2,00	per week.
3,00	"	"	3,00	"
4,00	"	"	4,00	"
5,00	"	"	5,00	"
6,00	"	"	6,00	"

Over fifty and under sixty.

$2,50	per year,	for	$2,50	per week.
3,75	"	"	3,00	"
5,00	"	"	4,00	"
6,25	"	"	5,00	"
7,50	"	"	6,00	"

When the Fund shall amount to Three Dollars and upwards for every person insured and sufficient to warrant an additional distribution, the weekly allowances will be increased in accordance with the Rules of the Policy.

All the members of a Temple or Division insured at greatly reduced rates.

Applications for Agencies in any of the cities or towns in the State, should be made to the undersigned, post paid, or in person.

As Agent for the above Company, I am prepared to receive applications for Policies at any of the above rates.

CHARLES WOODWARD, Agent,
At ADAMS & CO.'S Express Office.
J. L. MOTHERSHEAD, Medical Examiner.
june 30 '52-1y

Ohio Life Insurance Company,

Capital $100,000.

JOINT STOCK AND MUTUAL,

CINCINNATI.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS.

Wm. Burnet, Jno. N. Ridgway, Chas. Goodman,
S. Robert, E. S. Haines, Jno. M. Blair,
J. W. Donohue, Eden B. Reeder, Wm. Person.

WM. BURNET, President.
S. W. REEDER, Sec'y J. W. DONOHUE, Vice Pres't.

Office in Reeder's Building, Third street, between Almy's and City Bank.

This Company insures Lives at the lowest rates consistent with safety, either upon the Joint Stock or Mutual plan.

In the Joint Stock Department, premium payable quarterly, semi-annually or annually. On the Mutual plan, one-half the premium paid in Cash, the balance by a note bearing six per cent. interest—the interest only payable annually. Persons insuring on the mutual plan, participate in the profits of the Company in that department.

The undersigned having been appointed agent for the above Company, is prepared to fill applications for Life Insurance, on favorable terms.

Any information on the subject and pamphlets explaining the nature and utility of Life Insurance, furnished without charge, at the office of the Agent.

C. WOODWARD, Agent.

Office at Adam's & Co.'s Express Office, Journal Building, Pennsylvania street, Indianapolis, Ind.

june 30, '52-1y.

JAMES HALL,

MERCHANT TAILOR,

No. 2. Temperance, Hall, Indianapolis,

Manufactu'ng & Clothing Emporium,

Wholesale and Retail Dealer in Ready Made Clothing, Cloths, Cassimers, Vestings, Trimmings, Trunks, Sachels, Canes, Umbrellas, Hats, Caps, a every description of Gentlemen's Furnishing.

Also:

General Agency for the sale of GRAND AND SUBORDINATE REGALIA, EMBLEMS, COSTUMES, &C., FOR THE ORDERS OF MASONS, ODD FELLOWS, TEMPLE OF HONOR, SON, DAUGHTERS, AND CADETS OF TEMPERANCE. oct27 1y

Railroad City Book Store.

COX & MATHES,

South side of Washington, between Illinois and Meridian streets,

INDIANAPOLIS, INDIANA.

AT wholesale and retail, Standard and Miscellaneous Works, Law, and Medical Books, School Books, Plain and Fancy Stalionery, Blank Books, Wall Papers, &c., &c. mar 2

CHEAP WATCHES & JEWELRY.

Good Gold Watches at $24!

WE are now in our new Room No. 1, Palmer House, with a lot of beautiful Watches and Jewelry which we are selling lower than ever heretofore sold in Indianapolis, for instance we sell

Good 18 K Case Gold Lepines at $24.
" 18 K " " Levers at $28.
" Silver Anchor Levers $12 to $18.
" " Cylenders, $9 to $12.
" " Quarter's $6 to $10.

In addition to the above we have a fine assortment of other description of Watches all of which we will sell lower than any other firm dare sell in the place. I have in my employ a very superior Watch Repairer who will always be on on hand to do watch repairing of every description. Mr. Michot has worked in Geneva, Paris, New York and other large cities and has had great experience in his Branch of the business. All Watches warranted for one year, and the money in all cases refunded, provided they do not give entire satisfaction.

feb9 tf E. W. NEFF.

SMALL CHANGE.

THE undersigned is prepared to furnish Merchants and others with three cent pieces from the United States Mint at Philadelphia, free of transportation, in sums of 30, 60, and 90 dollars, upon deposit of Gold or Eastern Exchange. Also cents and half cents, upon payment of frieght on gold to Philadelphia, or on Eastern Exchange free of freight.

C. WOODWARD, Agent.
june 30 Adams & Co.'s Express.

THE ILLUSTRATED MAGAZINE OF ART.

THE five numbers of this Magazine which are published, place it at the head of publications of this kind No expense will be spared to make it in every respect worthy of the name, the "Illustrated Magazine of Art. The Engavings which are preparing for the future numbers are in the hands of first-class American and European Artists.

A Series of most interesting Tales will appear in it. "The School of Life," written and Illustrated by ANNA MARY, daughter of William and Mary Howitt, will shortly appear; also, "The Dead Bridal," an historical romance, illustrative of the most interesting period in the history of the Venetian Republic, by JONATHAN FREKE SLINGSBY, of the Dublin University Magazine; contributions, too, from WILLIAM and MARY HOWITT, PERCY B. ST. JOHN, and other writers of distinction in America and Europe.

The following is a brief outline of the plan of the Magazine:

I. The Historical Department will abound with picturesque representations of the most remarkable events which have occurred in this and other countries; accompanied with interesting anecdotes and details from the pen of the most eminent writers of the day. This department will contain several splendid engravings, designed by the first artists of the world, and engraved in the highest style of modern art.

II. The Men and Women of the Age. This department will consist of beautifully executed portraits of the leading characters of the age, especially of those who figure on the stage of humanity as the world's benefactors. Each portrait will be accompanied by an interesting biographical sketch.

III. The Wonders of Natural History, Botany, and other sciences, will be developed in choice Engravings of Beasts, Birds, Fishes, Insects, Forest Trees, Flowers, Geological and Fossil Specimens, &c., with accompanying descriptions.

IV. The Triumphs of Architectural Art will be displayed in exquisitely finished representations of Cathedrals, Churches, Palaces, and other models of ancient and modern Architectural Art.

V. The Works of the Great Masters, selected from the principal Galleries of Art in the World. In general, the portrait of the Master will be given, accompanied with a highly finished engraved copy of his chef d'œuvre.

VI. The Scientific Portions will be rendered highly interesting by the familiar explanations, and the numerous diagrams which will accompany each subject.

VII. Manufactures. The principal manufaciuring processes in use will be fully explained by minute details, and an abundance of beautiful engravings.

VIII. Machinery and Inventions will have due attention paid to them, and be described by numerous appropriate engravings.

IX. The Literary Department, independently of the various articles accompanying the illustrations, will comprise original and interesting narratives, contributed by the most popular writers of the day, with numerous illustrations.

In every respect, the "Illustrated Magazine of Art," will be decidedly

SUPERIOR TO ANY MAGAZINE OF THE DAY.

Each Monthly part will contain at least Thirty superb Engravings, four of which will be printed separately, on supefine Plate Paper.

The greatest care will be manifested in every department of production. The Paper will be of the first manufacture, and the Ink supplied from the celebrated Printing Ink Establishment of Messrs. Lawson & Co., of Paris. Six of the monthly portions, when completed, will form a volume which, for interest, originality, value and beauty, will defy competition. It will not only be an interesting family book, but a rich ornament for the drawing-room table, and a pleasant companion in the study.

The parts will appear on the First of every Month at Twenty-five Cents each.

ALEXANDER MONTGOMERY,
may 25 17 Spruce Street, New-York.

SPLENDIDLY ILLUSTRATED WORKS.

THE ALPS, SWITZERLAND, SAVOY AND LOMBARDY.

With the Magazine for June will be ready, Part I., price Twenty-five Cents, of a Magnificent Work to be completed in Twelve Monthly Parts, entitled

THE ALPS, SWITZERLAND, SAVOY AND LOMBARDY, with an account of the most recent Ascents to Mont Blanc, &c. By the Rev. Charles Williams. This work, when completed, will form a large thick Volume, in Imperial Octavo, containing upwards of Three Hundred beautiful Engravings, descriptive of the peculiar Scenery of those most interesting portions of Europe, with the Occupations of the Inhabitants, &c., &c.

Cassell's Natural History.

On the First of July will commence

CASSELL'S NATURAL HISTORY, which for variety, beauty and completeness, will claim to be considered as a first-class work, upon this most interesting subject. The First volume will be devoted to the Feathered Tribe of the Creation and will contain upwards of Three Hundred Engravings, in the first style of Art. The volume will be completed in Twelve Monthly Parts, Imperial Octavo. Price 25 cents each.

History of England.

On the First of July will appear Part I., price 25 cts. of THE ILLUSTRATED HISTORY OF ENGLAND, from the earliest period on record to the present time. Edited by ROBERT FERGUSON, LL. D.

This History, which is intended to form a great National Work, will extend to Four Volumes, Imperial Octavo; each Volume to be completed in Twelve Monthly Parts, price 25 cents each. The Work will comprehend the Political, Civil, and Domestic History of the Nation, and its Progress in Civilization, Literature, Art, &c. It will be profusely Illustrated with Engravings from Designs by GILBERT, PHILLIPPOTEAUX, WILLIAMS, and others. Representations of the most remarkable Events will be worked separately upon Plate Paper. The Portraits will form a complete Gallery, not only of the Monarchs, but of those individuals whose names are prominent in England's History. Also, Antiquities, including Autographs, Buildings, Costume, Furniture, Arms, Coins, Monuments, Manufactures &c., of each Epoch.

History of Hungary.

July First will be published, in one Handsome Volume, Imperial Octavo, price, One Dollar and Twenty-five Cents, in Cloth Boards,

THE ILLUSTRATED HISTORY OF HUNGARY, AND THE MAGYARS, from the Earliest Period to the clos of the late War. By EDWARD LAWRENCE GODKIN. The Volume will be Illustrated with One Hundred highly finished Engravings, including representations of the principal Battles; Portraits of the early Kings, and of the Statesmen and Generals who figured in the War of Independence; Costumes of the Peasantry, &c.; Views of the chief Towns and Fortresses, &c.; with an accurate Description of the Manners and Customs of the People, their Literature, Commerce, Arts, &c.

ALEXANDER MONTGOMERY,
may25 Publisher, 17 Spruce Street, New-York.

MANSION HOUSE, Cambridge City, Indiana.

J. CUNNINGHAM, Proprietor.

TRAVELLERS

Will find it to their advantage to call and try the accommodation of the MANSION HOUSE.

STAGE OFFICE also in connection with this House.

may 4 6m

INDIANA STATE LIBRARY

TEMPERANCE CHART.

A Weekly Journal:---Devoted to Temperance, Morality, Education, Literature, Useful Arts, Science, General Intelligence, &c.

J. W. GORDON, M. D., EDITOR.] ORGAN OF THE GRAND DIVISION OF INDIANA. [JOHN H. OHR, PRINTER.

VOL. III. INDIANAPOLIS, IND., WEDNESDAY, JUNE 29, 1853. NO. 1.

THE TEMPERANCE CHART,

IS PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY, BY THE GRAND DIVISION, S. of T. OF INDIANA.

Edited by J. W. Gordon, M. D.

To whom all Communications and Subscriptions must be addressed, post-paid.

OFFICE—in second story of Temperance Hall Building, Washington St., Indianapolis.

TERMS:

Single copy, one year, ... 75 cts.

☞ In advance in all cases,

TERMS OF ADVERTISING.—Circulation 4000 copies.

One Squre, (12 lines,) for one week,	$0 50
" " for each subsequent insertion,	25
" " for 3 months,	3 00
" " for 6 months,	5 00
" " for 1 year without alteration,	8 00
" " for 1 year, with changes,	12 00

A reduction made on larger advertisements.
Cuts double the above rates.
Advertisements must be handed in by Saturday, of each week, to insure insertion.
Applications for advertising, or for any kind of Printing for the Order, must be made to

J. H. OHR, Indianapolis.

POETRY.

A New Poet.

England has been recently blessed with a new manifestation of the vision and the faculty divine, in the person of Alexander Smith. His appearance is so meteor-like, that the critics are quite taken by surprise—and surprisingly taken, considering the constitutional difficulty against which English critics have to labor in the appreciation of poetical merit. Mr. Smith, however, is greeted with speeches and comparisons as complimentary certainly as he could wish. Keats, Shelly, Tennyson are his company, and "Shakspearian" is thought not to be inappropriate. The Poems have been republished in this country, and some extracts are given, taken from a number in the New York Tribune. Some of them are certainly worthy of his classification:

THE POET'S MISSION.

A Poet must ere long arise,
And with a regal song sun-crown this age,
As a saint's head is with a halo crown'd;
One, who shall hallow Poetry to God
And to its own high use, for Poetry is
The grandest chariot wherein king-thoughts ride;—
One, who shall fervent grasp the sword of song,
As a stern swordsman grasps his keenest blade,
To find the quickest passage to the heart.
A mighty Poet whom this age shall choose
To be its spokesman to all coming times.
In the ripe full blown season of his soul,
He shall go forward in his spirit's strength,
And grapple with the questions of all time,
And wring from them their meanings.—As King Saul
Called up by the buried prophet from his grave
To speak his doom, so shall this Poet-king
Call up the dead Past from its awful grave
To tell him of our future. As the air
Doth sphere the world, so shall his heart of love—
Loving mankind, not peoples. As the lake
Reflects the flower, tree, rock, and bending heaven,
Shall he reflect our great humanity;
And as the young Spring breathes with living breath
On a dead branch, till it sprouts fragrantly
Green leaves and sunny flowers, shall he breathe life
Through every theme he touch, making all Beauty
And Poetry for ever like the stars.

BOOKS.

Books written when the soul is at spring-tide,
When it is laden like a groaning sky
Before a thunder-storm, are power and gladness,
And majesty and beauty. They seize the reader
As tempests seize a ship, and bear him on
With a wild joy. Some books are drenched sands,
On which a great soul's wealth lies all in heaps,
Like a wrecked argosy. What power in books!
They mingle gloom and splendor, as I've oft,
In thund'rous sunsets, seen the thunder-piles
Seamed with dull fire and fiercest glory-rents.
They awe me to my knees, as if I stood
In presence of a king. They give me tears;
Such glorious tears as Eve's fair daughters shed
When first they clasped a Son of God, all bright
With burning plumes and splendors of the sky,
In zoning heaven of their milky arms.

USES OF SONG.

What martial music is to marching men
Should Song be to Humanity. In song
The infant ages born and swathed are.
A beauteous menial to our wants divine,
A shape celestial tending the dark earth
With light and silver service like the moon,
Is Poetry.

A CHILD.

O thou bright thing, fresh from the hand of God;
The motions of thy dancing limbs are swayed
By the unceasing music of thy being!
Nearer I seem to God when looking on thee.
'Tis ages since he made his youngest star,
His hand was on thee as 'twere yesterday.
Thou later Revelation! Silver Stream,
Breaking with laughter from the lake divine
Whence all things flow! O bright and singing babe!
What wilt thou be hereafter?

THE SOUL.

A single soul is richer than all worlds,
Its acts are only shadows of itself,
And oft its wondrous wealth is all unknown;
'Tis like a mountain range, whose rugged sides,
Feed starveling flocks of sheep; pierce the bare sides,
And they ooze plenteous gold. We must go down
And work our souls like mines, make books our lamps,
Not shrines to worship at, nor heed the world—
Let it go roaring past. You sigh for Fame;
Would serve as long as Jacob for his love,
So you might win her. Spirits calm and still
Are high above your order, as the stars
Sit large and tranquil o'er the restless clouds
That weep and lighten, pelt the earth with hail,
And fret themselves away. The truly great
Rest in the knowledge of their own deserts,
Nor seek the confirmation of the world.

MARRIAGE OF THE SEA AND SHORE.

The bridegroom sea
Is toying with the shore, his wedded bride,
And, in the fullness of his marriage joy,
He decorates her tawny brow with shells,
Retires a space, to see how fair she looks,
Then proud, runs up to kiss her.

FAME AND THE POET.

Lord! how Poets geck
At Fame, their idol. Call 't a worthless thing,
Colder than lunar rainbows, changefuller
Than sleeker purples on a pigeon's neck,
More transitory than a woman's loves,
The bubbles of her heart—and yet each mocker
Would gladly sell his soul for one sweet crumb
To roll beneath his tongue.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Idleness.

BY HENRY WARD BEECHER.

Industry is habitual activity in some useful pursuit; and not only inactivity, but also all effort without the design of usefulness, is of the nature of idleness.—The supine sluggard is no more ignorant than the bustling do-nothing.

Men may walk much, and read much, and talk much, and pass the day without an unoccupied moment, and yet be substantially idle; because industry requires at least the attention of usefulness. Bnt gadding, gazing, lounging, mere pleasure-mongering, reading for the relief of ennui; these are as useless as sleeping or dozing, or the stupidity of a surfeit.

There are many grades of idleness; and we shall indulge in some descriptions of the various classes, leaving the reader to judge, if he be an indolent person, to which class he belongs. First, the lazy man.—He sleeps long and late; he wakes to stupidity, with indolent eyes sleepily rolling over neglected work; neglected because it is too cold in spring, and too hot in summer, and too laborious at all times. He is a great coward in danger, and therefore very blustering in safety.

Second;—Another idler is useless, but vastly more active than the first, attends closely to every one's business except his own. He has good advice for everybody, how to save, how to make money, how to do everything. He is a violent reader of newspapers, almanacs, and receipt books; and with scraps of history and mutilated anecdotes, he faces the very schoolmaster, and gives up only to the village lawyer.—What useful thing do these buzzing idlers perform?

Third;—We introduce another idler.—He follows no vocation; he only follows those who do. Sometimes he sweeps along the street with consequential gait; sometimes he perfumes it with the wasted odors of tobacco. His business is to see, his desire to be seen. He is a man of honor: not that he keeps his word, or shrinks from meanness. He defrauds his laundress, his tailor, his landlord. He drinks, and swears, and sometimes fights; but still he is a man of honor, for he has whiskers, wears a moustache, and says, "Upon my honor, sir;" "Do you doubt my honor, sir?"

Then there is the fashionable idler, whose riches defeat the very object for which God gave him birth. He is a reader of fiction; gay and frivolous, rich and useless, polished till the enamel is worn off, his whole life seems to make him an animated puppet of pleasure.

One other portrait should be drawn, of the person who wishes to subsist by his occupation while he attends to everything else. If a sporting club goes to the woods, he must go. He has set his line in every hole in the river, and dozed a summer day under every tree along its bank. He rejoices in a riding party, a sleigh ride, a summer's frolic, a winter's glee. He is forever busy when it will do him no good, and remiss when his interests require activity.

It would be endless to describe the wiles of idleness; how it creeps upon men, how sweetly it mingles with their pursuits, how much time it purloins from the scholar, from the professional man, from the artist. It steals minutes, and clips off the edges of hours, and at length takes possession of days. It makes heavy, scatters attention; and it lurks around to impede the sway of industry.

Indolence is a great spendthrift. An indolent young man can neither make nor keep property. If he borrows, the article remains borrowed. He spoils your work, disappoints your expectations, exhausts your patience, and hangs a dead weight upon all your plans.

You will abhor idleness in others without suspecting it in yourself. While you read, I fear you are excusing yourself; you are supposing that your leisure is only relaxation, not sloth; that it is genteel leisure, not idleness. Be not deceived; if you are idle, you are on the road to ruin; and there are few stopping places in it.

Bill Johnson's Pledge.

The Rev. John Abbot, the sailor preacher, addressed the Washingtonians of Poughkeepsie on Saturday evening, September 17th. After animadverting upon the conduct of clergymen and other persons who refuse to sign the pledge, because they love to drink a little wine occasionally, and illustrating the influence which the example of such individuals exerts on society, gave the following simile:

During the last war with Great Britain, an American soldier expressed a strong desire to have an opportunity of displaying his valor, but when the opportunity offered itself, he was the first to seek a hiding-place. His eye caught the sight of an old hollow tree, in which he snugly ensconced himself, and watched the movements of the red coats through a knot hole, with the same interest that the Texan lover did when he beheld his gal sewing bear-skin petticoats, though with very different feelings.

At last when they had passed, he sighed, "I hope every one of them will be taken prisoners!"

His whole heart was in the cause, like many people who say they are the friends of Temperance; but when kindly solicited to lend the influence of their names and examples to the good cause, they advance reasons for refusing to do so, as futile and cowardly as the soldier of hollow-tree memory.

Mr. Abbott concluded with the story of Bill Johnson, who was raised from the pit of inebriation through his instrumentality.

Mr. Johnson at the close of a cold water lecture, intimated that he must be permitted to sign the pledge his own way, which he did in these words: "I, William Johnson, pledge myself to drink no intoxicating liquor for one year." Some thought he would not stick three days; others allowed him a week; and a few gave him two weeks. But the landlord who knew him best, said he was good stuff, but at the end of the year Bill would have a real "bender."

Before the year was quite gone, Mr. Johnson was asked by Mr. Abbott, "Bill, are you not going to renew the pledge?"

"Well, I don't know, Jack, but what I will. I have done pretty well so far, will you let me sign it again my own way?"

"Oh, yes; any way that you won't drink rum."

He writes, "I, William Johnson, sign this pledge for nine hundred and ninety-nine years, and if living at the end of that time, I intend to make out a lease for my life.."

A day or two after, Johnson went to see his old landlord, who eyed him as a hawk does a chicken. "Oh, landlord," whined Bill, accompanied with sundry contortions of the body, as if enduring the most excruciating torments, "I have such a lump on my left side."

"That's because you have stopped drinking: you won't live two years longer at this rate."

"If I commence drinking will the lump go away?"

"Yes. If you don't you will have another just such a lump on the other side."

"Do you think so, landlord?"

"I know it: you will have them on your arms, back, breast, and head; you will be covered all over with lumps."

"Well, may be I will," said Bill.

"Come, Bill," said the landlord, "let's drink together;" at the same time pouring out the red stuff from a decanter into his glasses—gug, gug, gug.

"No," said Johnson, "I can't, for I dave signed the pledge again."

"You hain't though! You're a fool!"

"Yes, that old sailor coaxed so hard, I couldn't get off."

"I wish the devil had that old rascal! Well, for how long a time do you go this time?"

"For nine hundred and ninety-nine years," whimpered Bill.

"You won't live a year!"

"Well, if I drink, you are sure the lump on my side will go away?"

"Yes."

"And if I don't drink, I will have just such a lump on the other side?"

"Yes."

"Well, I guess I won't drink; here is the lump," continued Bill, holding up something with a hundred dollars in it, "and you say I'll have more such lumps? That's what I want!"—Michigan Temperance Advocate.

Loafers.

We ransack our vocabulary in vain to find words to express our abhorrence of a "loafer." Amid the stirring active scenes of this laboring world, and still loaf about with nothing to do. Ah, no! they do something. They hang about fashionable saloons, seeking for prey. The moment the young mechanic has left the shop, where he has done honor to himself and friends, he is seized by the "button-hole" by these lurking wolves, and enticed to spend a pleasant hour in some fashionable game: and it may be that at the very moment, when the evening prayer of a fond mother is ascending to Heaven for the protection of her son, these destroyers of fond hopes are chuckling over their new victims. O ye pests of society, how can ye escape the damnation of hell!

☞ The great law of Nature is, "eat and be eaten." The spawn-eater swallows the worm, the shark swallows the spawn-eater; the hawk pounces on the chicken—the eagle on the hawk—the sportsman on the eagle; rogues feed on honest men, pettifoggers on rogues, and the devil on pettifoggers. Queer arrangemrnt this; but who will say that it is not all for the best? Let us turn over and reflect.

☞ The swindler goes to the State prison for his rascality. The man who sells poison to another, and while thus poisoning, robs him of his money, is an agent of the people and the pet of good citizens.

Mrs. Stowe in England.

We heard a man say once, that there were two ways of keeping tavern—to accommodate the public, and to accommodate himself. Without being ultra in either of these directions, we suppose the matter is generally compromised, and the benefits of the calling are equally divided. The idea is suggestive. To give alms or to render homage to character—too often forgetful of the injunction not to let thy left hand know what thy right hand doeth—is, now-a-days, generally made to operate as a double glorification, and the practical, perceiving this, so arrange the drama, that the satellites can revolve around the fixed star, in full view of the admiring, or astonished beholders. Light is prized highly, even if reflected, when not possessed primarily. In the absence of true charity, it is perhaps pardonable in a worldly point of view, to appeal to vanity, where benevolence does not exist; as it is all the same to the recipient, whatever the motive of the donor may be.

Now, we think it probable, in view of the great wealth and love of show—the vast leisure and immense ennui of the female aristocracy of England, and the humility and servility of their worshipers, that these have, as much as anything else, stimulated them to make a pet of "Uncle Tom," and we apprehend the wrath of the United States is considered a fair offset to the glorification of Mrs. Stowe by the Bull family.

These convictions arise from the fact that there are as many millions of white slaves in England, unnoticed by these ladies, titled and toadies, as there are black slaves in the United States, and who are in as miserable a condition, morally, physically, and religiously. True charity begins at home; but there is less laudation connected with this, than the charity displayed abroad, and the former is almost always inferred from the latter: but we need not analyze the sentimentality of mankind, which comprises womankind also. It is, no doubt, gratifying to Mrs. Stowe, to be flattered by the descendants of heroes. for flattery is sometimes agreeable to those who know just what it is, such is human weakness, and provided it be not laid on too thick. But, Mrs. Stowe is a sensible woman, and, doubtless, sincere in her endeavor to assuage the grief of the oppressed everywhere, and to remove the causes of their woe. She is aware, likewise, of the impulse to action referred to in the first lines of this article, and can apply the doctrine judiciously and fairly. May we not hope, then, that she will probe the slavery of English, and especially of London life, to the very depth of its horrible repulsiveness, and the extent of its degradation, and place it in contrast with the slavery of this country.

The slavery of circumstances which are the result of law, is as oppressive, physically and mentally, as the slavery of law directly applied, and both are a libel, when enforced by personal considerations only, upon the professors of Christianity. The great struggle of mankind in this age appears to be to harmonize our duties and pecuniary interests; and this great problem is now under examination by two classes of people: those, and the fewest, who place religious duty before commercial profit, yet recognize both, and those who reverse the order. Slavery is one of the practical measures to which to apply the result of the investigation, whatever it may be.

We do not believe that Mrs. Stowe, with her host of admirers, nor the Duchess of Sutherland, with her immense "following," when thrown into the great sea of human affairs, of thought and sympathy, will expect any great results directly, and therefore have never thought much about them and their present "carrying on."—Out of evil groweth good, and

"There's a Divinity that shapes our ends,
Rough hew them how we will.

NO MORE BACHELOR'S REVERIES.—The Charleston, S. C., papers of Thursday announce the marriage of Donald G. Mitchell of Connecticut, ("Ike Marvel,") the author of the Reveries of a Bachelor, to Miss Mary F., daughter of William B. Pringle, of Charleston. Mr. Mitchell was a few days since appointed Consul to Venice by President Pierce.

"If it was not for hope the heart would break," as Mrs. Perkins said when she buried her seventh husband, and looked anxiously among the funeral crowd for another.

STATE LIBRARY INDIANAPOLIS
v.3#1

TEMPERANCE CHART.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.
WM. HANNAMAN, C. E. BABB,
JAMES HALL, R. T. BROWN,
JOHN B. ABBETT.

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 29, 1853.

Now is the Time to Subscribe.

The friends of the cause of Temperance, it is fondly hoped, will not forget that with this number we commence a new volume of the Chart. It is their own Organ, and hence we know they will support it. Be up and doing. Let it never be said that Indiana, ever glorious in her career and prospects is in any good word and work behind her sisters. Ohio supports several Temperance organs well. Can not Indiana support one? We will not believe the contrary. Up, then, friends of Reform and be doing. Let no call be deemed superior in point of obligation to that which rests on the friends of Temperance to sustain their Organ.

Hurrah for Dillsborough!

By reference to our acknowledgments it will be seen that the friends of the cause at Dillsborough, Dearborn county, are determined the Chart shall survive. If all our friends would do likewise, we should hereafter be able to defy misfortune. Our old friend, Col. Eggleston, gives us good cheer; and coming from that quarter, we know it is well founded. We almost feel personally complimented by such a subscription coming from our old stamping ground. Three cheers for Dillsborough!

Bro. R. T. Brown.

It is to us a matter of sincere regret, that our esteemed Brother Brown should be confined by sickness, as it must be to all the friends of the Temperance cause, for which he has done so much. He has our warmest sympathies and good wishes for his speedy recovery; for just now the cause needs all its forces. The following very brief epistle will satisfy the brethren that they will be answered as soon as practicable:

Crawfordsville, June 20, 1853.

Bro. Gordon:—I reached home from the N. D., a week ago this morning, sick, and have been confined to my bed every hour since.

Various communications accumulated during my absence, and many have arrived since my return, all of which remain unanswered. I hope the brethren will receive this as a sufficient explanation.

R. T. Brown.

Nine Cheers for Michigan!!

An extra Michigan Advocate brings us the glorious news, that Michigan has gone for the Maine Law by a majority of at least 20,000. All the large towns and cities had been heard from when the extra was printed, and even they have given a large majority for the law. Glorious Michigan! If envy could arise toward a State so noble, we might envy her career in well-doing. Again we say, three times three cheers for Glorious Michigan!

Fugitive Slave Case.—An interesting and important fugitive slave case is now pending in this city. The name of the claimant is Ellington, that of the supposed fugitive, who has resided here a number of years, Freeman. Considerable feeling has been manifested in the case by the people; but the profoundest respect for the peace and dignity of the State has hitherto been manifested. The people only seem anxious to know what the law is—a thing not seemingly very well understood even by those who administer it.

☞ We will notice Mr. Jones' beautiful song at some length in our next.—Meanwhile all who desire to purchase songs, music, or musical instruments are recommended to give him a call at his music store in Temperance Hall buildings.

The Chart.

☞ The first number of the second volume of the Temperance Chart, will be issued next week. The Chart is published by authority of the Grand Division of Sons of Temperance, and edited by Dr. J. W. Gordon, elected by the order. The Chart is a fearless and independent sheet, attacking all who advocate the liquor cause, or who aid or abet them, without regard to personal or political preferances; and this straightforward course, although it may appear harsh in some cases, is the only proper one for the permanent good of the cause. If the chart, like our political sheets, would blow hot or cold at the beck and call of every one, or truckle and play the sycophant for patronage, without regard for the public interest, it would soon lose its influence. Now is a good time to subscribe for the Chart.—Locomotive.

The foregoing is the opinion of one of our neighbors of the manner in which we conduct the Chart. Its author is engaged in conducting an independent paper himself; and is doubtless aware that such a paper will, if properly conducted, occasionally incur the displeasure of the purblind politicians of all parties. This can not be avoided; nor are we anxious it should be. Otherwise we might not have sufficient stimulus to keep us moving. Difficulties that may be surmounted are real advantages; and, as such, we receive the little annoyances of little men who fret and rave at an independent course on our part, almost as sensibly as an old hen when fearful of the loss of her brood.—While such are the opinions of an impartial press under the guidance of men of politics different from our own, we feel well assured of the harmlessness of the insane raving of the old woman of the State Sentinel.

The Sentinel.

This paper is still harping on coalition between the Chart and the Journal. We have already contradicted the insinuation in terms so direct and positive as to have subjected ourself to the editor's censure for vulgarity. We have also asked pardon for our mistake in descending so low. We shall not soon fall into the same error again. The Certificate Candidate for veracity against a prominent member of his own party is sacred, like the lightning-riven tree, from our future touch, His certificates may indeed show, that in this instance he told the truth; but, worse still, Mr. Barbour's assertion that it was not worthy of credit, and the loud applause which it called forth from his neighbors, proves that Mr. Brown has gone so far in the path of falsehood as not to be believed when he does tell the truth.

The Illustrated Magazine of Art.—This beautiful Magazine is before us; and we may say that for real merit, both in an artistic and literary point of view, it has no superior. This number closes the first volume; and is such as to assure its publishers of the good will and patronage of all that can appreciate the beautiful and useful combined. If it is patronized according to its merits, its success must be sufficient to fill the loftiest ambition of its conductors.

To the people of the West, and of Indiana and her capital especially, the present number must be peculiarly interesting; for it contains a good likeness of the Rev. H. W. Beecher, a name long to be remembered with pride by all who know him.

The Home Journal.—We have received this beautiful family newspaper, and must say it is every way worthy of public patronage, and of the just reputation of its editors.

Terms—$3.00 per annum; and $2.00 if paid in advance.

☞ If Frank Freeheart will favor us with a glance at his manuscript, we will inform him whether we can publish the same or not. We are satisfied the gentleman writes well; but want to see the thing.

☞ Ex-President Tyler is said to be suffering from dyspepsia and symptoms of consumption, and will not probably long survive.

☞ At Susquehannah, Brown county, recently, the engine on the Erie railway exploded, killing eleven persons, and wounding several.

The Indiana Female College

The commencement exercises of this institution were held at Wesley Chapel, on last Wednesday evening. The house was crowded by a highly intelligent audience, who seemed delighted with the evidences of progress and talent which the graduating class exhibited. It has never fallen to our lot to witness college exercises more interesting and creditable to all concerned than these. We doubt very much whether any college in the land could turn out ten young men who would write essays superior to those we heard on this occasion. The allusions to temperance were direct and eloquent, and evinced a thorough appreciation of this good cause by these educated young ladies, who will never consent to submit to the infamous follies of fashionable society on this subject. What is called polite society has done much to keep up the kingdom of rum and ruin. The truly refined and educated are now taking hold of the temperance reform in the right manner. We were very much pleased with the high moral tone of all the compositions, and also with the music. The President, Rev. T. H. Lynch, A. M., is just the man to manage such an institution, and will always turn out thorough scholars.

Indiana is happy in having such institutions in several of our principal cities, and especially at her capital. Long may the Indiana Female College live to bless and adorn central Indiana. We wish well to all the girls, and most heartily love them for the noble stand they take in morals. If they shall go out into the world with these feelings, and in the circles where Providence may cast them will use all their influence to spread peace and temperance; then, indeed, will their memorial never perish. For the sickly and disgusting depravity of wine-sipping, rowdy-living, fashionable misses, such young ladies must ever have unutterable contempt. Would to God every young lady in our State had such an education. *

The Concert of Miss Steffenone.

We had the pleasure to be present at this musical entertainment, and do not hesitate to declare it an oasis in this barren desert of negro minstrels, Amphions, Orpheans, Harmoneons, and Families innumerable, whose name is legion, and whose occupation humbug—that overruns our town, distresses (delights?!) its goodly inhabitants, and takes away its hard cash. We are glad to say that, in spite of the unusual character of the performance, the house was well filled. The audience was large and in the very best humor with itself and the artists, and well they might be.

Mc. Strakosch, the pianist, enjoys deservedly a high reputation as a performer and composer, and played some of his best pieces in his best style. Steffenone and Patti could not fail to delight by their powerful, well-trained and fine voices, as long as they moved in their proper sphere, the Italian, at least all who could appreciate this style of music. The last well-known duett, of Norma, between them was show to be what it really is, a musical gem, though few of our native musicians could ever do it justice. The same was the case with the beautiful Aria of "Lucretia Borgia." On the other hand, we would respectfully suggest to these artistes, to leave our English ballads alone, which do not suit the Italian genius.—"Sweet home" was not given so well as we should have liked.

Last we have to mention, that Paganini in miniature, Master Jullien, who promises fair to become a full-sized Paganini. The boldness, power, and excellency of his execution will entitle him to rank with the first, and if he improves in the next ten years of his life in the same proportion as in his ten preceding ones, he will be one of those great violinists that are just as rare as caterwauling fiddlers are plenty.

If we mistake not, this entertainment will long be remembered as the concert in the musical annals of the Hoosier City.

☞ "Why don't you take a seat within the bar?" asked one gentleman of another. "For the best reason in the world," replied the other. "My mother always told me to keep out of bad company." That'll do. But we wouldn't like to have a case in court after saying it. —Chicago Democrat.

W. J. Brown.

A brief notice of this very unwelcome subject must suffice. It never was our purpose to follow the Sentinel into the mazes of misrepresentation and falsehood, with which its Editor seems so familiar.—We have not space nor inclination to contradict statements that are sufficienly refuted when traced to their author. A recent unmistakable indication that such is the position of the Editor of the Sentinel, was given at our Court House, on last Thursday. A fact was stated, and his name given as its author, when it was emphatically said on the other side, that unless the statement could be traced to some other source beside Mr. Brown, it was a falsehood. The applause with which this declaration was received by a vast crowd of his immediate neighbors was more than enough to vindicate us against his calumnies. From that moment our resentment was changed into pity. We were ignorant of his real standing, and now sincerely regret that any provocation should have induced us to strike a blow at a being so fallen.

The Editor delivers us a homily on decency. We stand corrected. We acknowledge our error; but our style only descended to its subject; and his responsibility is, therefore, greater than ours.—We may have been guilty of bad taste—perhaps of a positive indiscretion—in the selection of a theme for remark; but, once selected, we had no alternative. We felt this with regret at the time, yet seemed compelled to do what was inevitable. We may sometimes go round impurities; but at others we are compelled to shovel them out of our way, and in such instances we have always held it the best policy, to roll up our sleeves and do the unwelcome drudgery in the most vigorous and determined manner. In this way we get through with it sooner and are less offended by the foulness, than if it were to remain longer on hand.

Our Committee are appealed to, that our hands may be tied, and the cause of Temperance left at the mercy of its deadliest foe—the Editor of the State Sentinel. Whenever our committee shall be influenced by his dictation, he will have accomplished a feat far more worthy of celebration in the Rum Kingdom, than any other of the remarkable events of his life. Hitherto, so far as we have been informed, we have had the approbation of the esteemed Brethren of the Committee referred to; and we have that confidence in their candor, that will not allow us to believe them capable of feeling and acting differently towards our humble efforts. It is their duty and their right to prescribe the general course of their organ; ours, to be governed by their views, while consistent with our notions of what is due to ourself. When that ceases to be our position, then, we trust, it will not be our fault if the Chart does not pass into other hands.

But does all this appeal to decency, and the Committee whose efforts to promote Temperance, the Sentinel has so zealously labored to thwart on all occasions, disprove our positions in regard to the pardoning power? If we publish entire, without comment, an article from the Union on the Government of Russia, does that prove that we are either ungenerous or illiberal; or that we have misinterpreted the Constitution or law on the pardoning power? It is easy to procure a decision of the Supreme Court against our opinion on the abuse of the pardoning power, if we are wrong. But you will find it most difficult to satisfy men, that the utterance of new falsehoods ever can establish old ones, or overthrow the truth. We want something better. We have asserted that it is wrong to remit the fines of the liquor fiend at all; and of anybody else in violation of law. Whether we established the fact, that these wrongs have been done in our State or not, is for the public to determine. We leave the result with the people, and shall be satisfied let their decision be as it may.

☞ It is a base temper in mankind that they will not take the smallest slight at the hand of those who have done them the greatest kindness.

The generality of people only judge of men by the fashion they are in, or by their fortunes.

Foreign.

By the steamer Pacific we have Liverpool dates to June 1st. Gold was coming in abundantly from Australia. Switzerland had ordered out all her citizens to fight Austria, if necessary, The Russian army, one hundred thousand strong, are concentrating on the Turkish frontier.—The Ministers of France, England, Prussia, and Austria had made a faint attempt to reconcile the parties; but Menschikoff and the Divan were equally inflexible.—The Ottoman fleet was sent for; the Porte had sent despatches to Egypt for troops; and cruisers had been dispatched to all the Ottoman provinces to call out the troops, and all the warlike resources of the empire are to be immediately brought into requisition. It is not known where the French fleet is; and the orders in regard to the British fleet are kept secret. The general aspect of affairs is critical in the extreme; yet some think matters may still be amicably adjusted. The British affairs in Burmah look very gloomy. The British forces had been repulsed, and cut off in several skirmishes. A steamer had been dispatched to India expressly for China news, it being deemed of the highest importance to the British interests.—The latest reliable news was received from Shanghai, under date of April 28th. It was then stated that Nankin was invested by the rebels, and the Imperial Commissioner had hired a fleet of Portuguese vessels to relieve the city; but the whole fleet was captured by the rebels.

A private letter by a Manchester house, dated Shanghai, one day later than the above advices, states that Nankin had fallen, and that the British commander had refused to permit British merchantmen to go up the river with stores to either party. It was expected that the Americans would also back out.

The Asia brings four days later news than the Pacific. There is nothing new from Turkey. The Sultan was making every preparation for war. Nothing further has come to hand from Russia. From Persia we learn that the Czar of Russia has demanded from that Government the immediate repayment of a loan of fifty millions, or the secession of the province of Asterland, on the Caspian Sea. The Shah of Persia refuses to do either. Diplomatic relations between Austria and Switzerland had not been restored; but it was thought they soon would be, notwithstanding the Swiss army was fighting upon the war footing. The grape crop in Sicily was likely to prove a partial failure. Dates from Liberia, of the 7th ult., state that President Roberts was, probably, reelected. The colony was prosperous.

The rebellion in China continues. The whole population of the empire is estimated at 367,000,000, and of this number 287,000,000 have given in their adhesion to the cause of the rebels. The city of Nankin has been taken, and there is but little doubt now of the entire dethronement of the reigning Emperor. In a proclamation published by one of the chiefs of the rebels, a distinct recognizance of the Christian religion over that of Hindooism is acknowledged, and a plea is also made for general religious liberty.

Russia.—The Russian army has gained a victory over the Circassians on the hill of Kazeland, April 1st.

France.—Emperor and wife gone to St. Cloud. Government considering projects for establishing free medical relief to the poor of country districts.

Italy.—"Uncle Tom" is prohibitad in all the Papal States.

Germany.—All Students' Associations in Germany are suppressed. Prince Henry, the King's brother, has espoused Princess Amelia of Saxe Weimar.

Greece.—American ship of war, Cumberland, with Mr. March on board, has demanded explanations and 3,000,000 of drachms, for illegal imprisonment of the consul.

Hungary.—4,000 passports issued for America, many for California—Emigrants promise not to return to Austria.

Canada.—The Canadian Parliament has voted £60,000 to build house of Parliament in Toronto. This settles the question which has recently been agitated in Canada, on the subject of the seat of government.

Drunkenness and Sabbath Breaking.—For a few weeks past, some of the liquor sellers in this city have pursued the work of their calling with unusual boldness.—The Daily Courier of Monday, June 6th, gives the following account of a disgraceful row at Bernhard's doggery. on last Sabbath. We rejoice to see the independence of the Courier, and believe that by the united efforts of the conductors of th public press, a law will soon be enacted, which will scathe and wither the liquor seller, and in part prevent him from defying the law, scoffing at religion, desecrating the Sabbath, despising morality, corrupting our youth and disgracing our city. —Christian Messenger.

☞ Be temperate in all you say or do.

Correspondence.

For the Chart.

Temperance in New Jersey.

DEAR DOCTOR:—I have thought seriously, for some time past, about writing you a few lines concerning the progress of the Temperance Reform in this State, but have delayed it till now. Over your State are scattered, I have no doubt, many persons who look back with pride and veneration to this, the land of their nativity, and eagerly desire its deliverance from under the power and rule of King Alcohol.

I would say, by way of comment, that that the cause of Temperance, at present, is in a healthy and prosperous condition; but has not attained that position for which its true and sincere friends labor and pray.

J. B. Gough, the noble champion of reform, has aroused the dormant energies of the slothful and indifferent; and by his power and eloquence, dealt very severe blows on the rotten carcase of the "Giant Monster." I believe that he is in the State yet, making wherever he goes an indelible mark, winning back the infatuated to the beautiful paths of virtue and honor; and showing up in all its naked deformity, the old, barbarous system which requires a man before he can sell Death to his fellows, to produce a certificate signed by twelve respectable (?) persons that he is competent to "do it up brown." The enactment in this State regulating the sale of the article, is as long as the Maine law. They have revised and amended it again and again; but it is the same vile monster that it was fifty years ago. It is, indeed, difficult to understand the meaning of all its provisions. They chain and bind down the dealers in the "good creature" from "stem to stern." In thus acting do they not virtually acknowledge, that the business is a dangerous one to the health of the people, and the prosperity of the commonwealth. Most certainly any sensible man will say so. Who ever heard tell of a man chaining and muzzling a dog, without he had bitten or was going to bite something or somebody. But the people here are weary of taking the responsibility, and they think that the laws by which liquor is regulated is a perfect "bore." In fact, it "bores" their pockets too deep, but their hearts and consciences are too hard. Corrupt party politicians and "political tricksters" have raised the war-whoop, "our liberties are in danger," and the rabble gather around the polls and liquor shops to protect them. O liberty! thou art sweet and dear to the true freeman; but thou art abused; thy name has been defamed, thy glory tarnished. There, upon the memorable spot where thou wast purchased by the heart's blood of many noble patriots, thy temples have been desecrated—thy altars polluted. Where can we find a more sacred place than the battle field of New Jersey? And where can we find a people more recreant to their holy trust? New Jersey is behind some States that have not attained to half her age. But, thank God! the people are waking up to their true and eternal interest. The old system of license will ere long receive from the hands of the intelligent portion of the people its just doom, and the proud and beautiful ensign of virtue and peace float freely in the breeze. There is a grand revolution going on in the public mind, which will end in the consummation of a mighty work.—May He who rules on high hasten the day when the songs of the redeemed freemen of New Jersey shall ascend up, and join with those who have been delivered. Freemen, arise! declare your rights; fight manfully for them, and the "day-star" of peace and happiness will soon shine upon you. J. C. B.

For the Chart.

Trifles.

This globe when separated into particles, is found to be composed of mere atoms; and when one of these parts is separated from the mass, is but a trifle: and when it is added to the whole, it is not perceptible: but, at the same time, trifle added to trifle makes up this mighty earth. Most of those who become steeped in crime, enter the mere portals of vice at first; their frail bark is gently moved around the extreme and scarcely perceptible circle of the awful whirlpool: gradually they are drawn nearer and closer to the fatal vortex, until they are rendered powerless, and sink to rise no more.

The first convivial party, the first social glass, the first infatuating game at cards, the first lucky throw of the dice, the first fortunate lottery ticket, the first violation of the sacred decalogue—al—lapparently trifles in themselves—have proved to be the entering wedge to the county prison, the State penitentiary, and the barbarous gallows. Reader, think of and prepare for thy final destiny.

All relations of life are interwoven with trifles. ERASTUS MACK.

Office Grand Division of Indiana,
Indianopolis, June 23, 1853.

BRO. GORDON:—Some time since I received the following Preamble and Resolutions from Cataract Division, No. 167, at Laporte, Indiana, enclosing five dollars. Please publish them, as that is the best means at my command to comply with the last resolution.

Yours in L. P. and F.,
C. WOODWARD, G. S.

HALL OF CATARACT DIVISION, No. 167,
SONS OF TEMPERANCE, May 52, 1853.

WHEREAS it appears from the report of the Grand Scribe, made to the Grand Division at her April term, that the Grand Division is in debt over and above her means on hand, in the sum of $585.50; And WHEREAS it is considered by this Division, that the Subordinate Divisions within this State should, by voluntary contributions relieve the Grand Division of said indebtedness; therefore Resolved, That an order be drawn on the treasury for five dollars as the proportion of this Division, to be forwarded by the R. S. to the Grand Scribe.

Resolved further, That the Grand Scribe be requested to call the attention of Subordinate Divisions to the condition of the finances of the Grand Division in such manner as he may deem most expedient.

Signs of a Storm in Europe.

Further intelligence by the Canada brings along the latest items that have been telegraphed to Liverpool. They are almost wholly confined to the Turkish question:

Seven days of the grace extended to the Porte by Menschikoff had expired, and he remained on board the Russian steamer the 20th of May. Redschid Pasha, the able anti-Russian Statesman is appointed Minister of Foreign Affairs. A Paris despatch telegraphed 19th confirms the report of the rupture of diplomatic relations, and adds, the Russian troops are receiving reinforcements. The state of affairs appears critical. The Turkish brig Selim has been sent with important orders to the Governor of Jerusalem and French Consul there.

The Times has a telegraphic despatch from Vienna of evening of 26th. Menschikoff and suite have left Constantinople. Russian subjects are placed under the protection of the Danish Ambassador. The French fleet is said to have received permission to pass the Dardanelles. Our Paris correspondent telegraphs to Liverpool, that it is not feared the peace of Europe will be disturbed by the Turkish difficulty. It is reported that the British Minister has so stated, but telegraphs contradict each other flatly.

An Eastern Cabinet Council on Eastern affairs is summoned for to-day, 29th.

There are other signs of a storm in Europe. The Duke of Genoa, brother of the King of Sardinia, is in Paris, having gone there suddenly from Dresden. The Paris correspondent of the London Advertiser says:

"The visit was not, as I have remarked, unexpected, but it was hastened by the menacing attitude of the Northern Powers, who are now coalescing their might against Franee. The Duke of Genoa had accompanied his consort to Dresden, where he was on a visit to her relations there, when the telegraph warned him to proceed immediately to Paris. The Sardinian King came to this decision as soon as he received official intimation of the betrothal of the heir to the Belgian throne with an Austrian Archduchess, and the projected union between the Austrian Emperor and a daughter of King Leopold.—Nor was this all the information that reached him. It is believed in diplomatic circles here, that the King's liberal opinions had alarmed Austria, that his bold, chivalrous protestations in behalf of that portion of his subjects who had been plundered of their property by Austria, has stirred up the envenomed hatred of the Court of Vienna to its utmost depth, and that intrigues were on foot to upset his throne, and place thereon the Duke of Modena, brother-in-law of the Count de Chambord, the legitimate heir to the throne of France. In case this project should be too unpalatable at Turin, it is said that he had discovered a plot, fostered by his own aristocracy, to transfer his crown to the Prince of Carignan, a collateral member of his house, but a firm believer in the 'right divine of kings to govern wrong,' and an utter abhorrer of liberal tendencies, whereupon his majesty bethought him of making friends with the mammon of unrighteousness, and orders were at once transmitted to the Duke of Genoa to proceed with all speed to Paris, to seek the decus et tutamen of the protection of France, in case he should find it necessary to repel by force the coalesced venom of despotism, now seething in the cauldron at Vienna, like the hell-broth stirred up by the witches in Macbeth."

This well-informed writer says, the French Emperor has received the Duke of Genoa with manifold demonstrations of respect, and will accede to his wishes, being heartily inciined to show spite against the despots who will not recognize him as their brother. The letter adds:

"The Emperor of Austria has lost no time in showing his teeth, as he has already broken off all diplomatic intercourse with the Helvetic Confederation. The rupture with Switzerland will not readily be healed, and great events are probably in store, and will be poured suddenly into the lap of Europe ere the reconciliation can be effected."

If the storm which these signs appear to predict, actually burst forth. it will not leave Europe as it found it. The hour for Hungary will have come. Italy will rise; and those who unite against the Czar and his minions will serve the cause of European liberalism, whether they intend it or not. In such a struggle, with a few men of regal nature on the liberal side, how much can be done for freedom! At such a time, what an elevating sense of its own greatness must pervade this republic, to find itself shouting and singing over its 'daring exploits' in a deliberate war with consumptive and snarling monkeys in Mexico!—Commonwealth.

Beautiful Extract.

The editor of the Knickerbocker attributes the following to Ike Marvel, and it is certainly worthy of him. Read it without tears if you can:

"Last evening as we were walking leisurely along, the music of choirs in the churches came floating out into the darkness around us, and they were all new and strange tunes but one. And that one—it was not sung as we have heard it, but it awakened a train of long-buried memories, that rose to us even as they were before the cemetery of the soul had a tomb in it.

"It was sweet old 'Corinth' they were singing—strains that we have seldom heard since the rose color of life was blanched; and we were in a moment back again to the old village church, and it was a summer afternoon, and the yellow sunbeams were streaming through the West windows, and the silver hair of the old deacon who sat in the pulpit, was turned to gold in its light, and the minister, who we used to think could never die, so good was he, had concluded 'application," and 'exhortation,' and the village choir was singing the last hymn, and the tune was 'Corinth.'

"It is years—we dare not think how many—since then, and 'the prayers of David the son of Jesus are ended,' and the choir are scattered and gone. The girl with blue eyes that sang alto, and the girl with the black eyes that sang the air,—the eyes of the one were like a clear June heaven at noon—they both became wives, and both mothers, and they both died. Who shall say they are not singing 'Corinth' still, where Sabbaths never wane, and congregations never break up! There they sat. Sabbath after Sabbath, by the square column at the right of the 'leader,' and to our young ears their tones were the 'very soul of music.' That column bears still their pencilled names, as they wrote them in those days—life's June, in 182—, before dreams of change had overcome their spirits like a summer's cloud.

"Alas! that with the old singers most of the sweeter tunes have died upon the air, but they linger in memory, and they shall yet be sung in the sweet reunion of song that shall take place by-and-by in a hall whose columns are beams of morning light, whose ceiling is pearl, whose floors are all gold, and where hair never turns silvery, and hearts never grow old. Then she that sang alto, and she that sang air, will be in their place once more."

MR. SOULE AND THE SPANISH GOVERNMENT.—Late accounts from Madrid indicate that Mr. Soule's appointment, as Minister to Spain, is producing considerable excitement. This gentleman has rendered himself quite obnoxious to Spain by the course he took in regard to the Lopez expedition, and the general advocacy of Filibusterism in relation to Cuba. The Spanish papers are discussing with much earnestness the propriety of receiving Mr. Soule; or rather, the propriety and duty of sending him home forthwith, on his arrival at Madrid. Spain has the undoubted right so to do; but whether good policy would justify such a measure, is a matter worth considering before the right is exercised.

The Liquor Traffic Wrong,

Because it increases the Power of Temptation to commit Crime!

A young man in Ireland commttted a murder in March, 1833. He was afterwards tried at Kilkenny and pronounced by the jury to be guilty.

"Yes, my lord," said the prisoner, "I am guilty," and pointing to his mother, a woman of more than eighty years of age, who stood by, he said: "She was the cause of it. She had agreed beforehand for tho price of the blood of Mr. Leonard,—the man who, according to that agreement, was to be murdered by her son.—She watched for the coming of the unfortunate and unsuspecting man, and when she saw him approaching, she handed her son the pistol with which to take his life. He instinctively shrunk back, saying,—"How can I murder the poor gentleman?" His mother handed him the whisky bottle, which she had got for the occasion, saying, "Take that." He took it, shot the man, and was hanged.

Another young man, who had committed a crime so horrid that it was thought to be incredible, was asked by the magistrate, in his examination, how it was possible that he could commit such a crime? He answered, "With the help of whisky, I could commit twenty such crimes."

Mr. Poinder, in his testimony before the British Parliament, stated, that many criminals assured him that it was necessary, before they could commit crimes of peculiar atrocity, to have recourse to this stimulant; and knowing this to be the fact, they resorted to it beforehand, for no other purpose than to fit themselves. "I could not," said one of them, "enter your house in the dead of night, and take the chance of your shooting me in it, or being hung when I got out of it, unless I was to get well primed first."

These are specimens of facts in proof of the position above taken, of which facts a volume might easily be collected. The liquor traffic increases the power of temptation to commit crime of every variety, and of every degree of turpitude, but especially the crime of drunkenness.

Who needs any proof on this point?—Who needs any proof that men are more likely to drink to excess where the traffic is carried on than where it is not? Who are the men that are forever telling us they never let a man have liquor who gives evidence of having had enough? Whose business most endangers men on this point? Whose traffic most increases the power of temptation to drink too much?—Who are most frequently under the necessity of offending drunkards, by refusing to let them have any more? Who are oftenest boasting of their virtue in this matter of refusing to take a man's money, for fear of making him drunk? Who will say, after reading these questions, that the liquor traffic does not increase the power of temptation to commit the crime of drunkenness?

SHOCKING MURDER IN BERWICK, ME.—On Wednesday evening, Lewis Maxwell, of Salmon Falls; and Ivory Pray, of South Berwick, took the part of a girl whom two brothers, named Waters, and another person, named Schammell were insulting in the street at Berwick. A fight was the immediete consequence; but the parties separated without injury. Afterwards, on their way home, both Pray and Maxwell were attacked by the two Waters. Maxwell was stabbed and knocked on the head and was found just over the bridge to Salmon Falls, sitting by the factory. He was taken home and died soon after.—Pray was alive on Thursday, but not expected to recover. His testimony is, that the two men Waters, before stabbing him, cried, "Now we'll fix him as we did Maxwell." This will hang them. A posse of officers and citizens turned out, and, forcing the doors of the Waters' house, arrested the brothers, who were secreted in their garret. Schammell fled, although it does not appear that he was one of the murderers.—Boston Post.

REMEDY FOR CANCER.—Col. Ussery, of the parish of De Soto, informs the editor of the Caddo Gazettee, that he fully tested a remedy for this troublesome disease recommended to him by a Spanish woman, a native of this country. The remedy is is this:—Take an egg and break it, pour out the white, retaining the yolk in the shell, put in salt, and mix with the yolk as long as it will receive it, stir them together until the salve is formed; put a portion of this on a piece of sticking-plaster, and apply it to the cancer about twice a day. He has tried the remedy twice in his own family with complete success.

MAINE LIQUOR LAW IN TEXAS.—Public sentiment in Texas is fast increasing in favor of a legal prohibition of the traffic in intoxicating liquors. The Houston Division of the Sons of Temperance have unanimously passed a resolution recommending a prohibitory law, and asking the concurrence of all the Divisions in Texas. In Eastern Texas, petitions are in circulation among the people asking for legal prohibition. Richmond on the Brazos, sent up a petition to that effect to the Legislature.

WESTERN LANDS.—Col. Benton says the Indian title is extinguished to three-fourths of all the country between the frontier of Missouri and the Rocky mountains, and that pre-emptioners may go and settle there with entire security. "There is territory there, open to settlement, enough to make a great State, in a temperate climate, much of it fertile, and on the straight course to San Francisco. Both the Kansas and Upper Arkansas are rich and beautiful, and as high up as the Pueblos, far above Bent's Fort, good crops are raised, and stock provide for themselves winter as well as summer, without food or shelter from their owners." The present Santa Fe road goes through this country, and Col. Benton's favorite central route for the Pacific railroad traverses it from one end to the other. We understand him to say that the Indian title to this territory was extinguished by the United States nearly thirty years ago, and that the boundaries of the Indian reservations and adjustments are clear and distinct, so that pioneers need lose no time in commencing settlements. At this distance it seems almost like a new discovery, but it cannot be doubted that emigration and enterprise will soon people the territory, and that in a few years it will mark distinctly the western progress of the star of empire.

THE LIQUOR BUSINESS.—The police of the several districts are engaged in taking a census of the liquor business of this city. Two districts have reported, from which it appears that there are, in the first five wards, six hundred and sixteen places where spirituous liquors are sold. In the third and fourth wards, there are one hundred and thirty-nine taverns and groceries. In the second district, comprising the second and fifth wards, there are four hundred and seventy-seven places where liquor is sold, of which two hundred and forty-six are groceries, and two hundred and thirty-one porter houses. The proprietors in the latter two wards are classified as follows: Irishmen, 319; Germans, 81; Americans, 47; Englishmen, 30.—The total number of licenses granted for the city at large, last year, was eleven!—New York Tribune.

COLONISTS FOR AFRICA.—We learn that a company of more than ninety colored emigrants arrived last Thursday night in the vicinity of this city, to await their embarkation for Liberia in the bark Adelaide of New York. These emigrants are a very respectable company, from Tennessee, and are in charge of two clergymen of the Presbyterian and Methodist churches. They will be joined here by several intelligent families of free people of color, residing in this city, and from other parts of this State.—Savannah Georgian, 28th ult.

THE TROUBLE WITH MEXICO.—Washington, June 5.—The Union of this morning contains an article upon our New Mexican affairs. It takes the ground that the conduct of Governor Trias in seizing with an armed force the Mesilla Valley, is an outrage combined with folly; that considering the weak condition of Mexico, it would hardly be magnanimous in the United States to make a hostile demonstration about it, but if the act is not disavowed by the Mexican authorities, the United States can not hesitate how to act; the article bears the stamp of authority.

THE BIBLE IN THE PAPAL STATES.—Several seizures of Bibles and Prayer-books amongst the luggage of English travellers, disembarking at Civita Vecchia, on their way to Rome for the Easter ceremonies, having recently been effected by the Papal police authorities, the British Consul has been appealed to, and has obtained the restoration of the confiscated Bibles and Prayer-books, and a kind of promise that British Protestants shall be allowed to travel with the sacred volume in their possession, provided they make no use of it for propagandist purposes.

Acknowledgments.

Danville Union D. of T., 75c.; Petersburg, Ind., $6.00, (returned from Dead Letter Office); J. W. Eggleston, Dillsborough, Ind., $18.00; E. Craig, at Perrysville, $2.00; D. W. Noble, at Indianapolis, 75c.; R. Armstrong, Princeton, Ind., 75c.; L. W. Dorsy, Princeton, 25c.; J. Humphrey. Vevay, $6.50; S. W. Ritchie, Indianapolis, 75c.

CONSTITUTION AND BY-LAWS,

WE are still prepared to print Constitution and By-Laws, where the alterations are few from the copy recommended by the Grand Division, at the following rates:

100 copies, (or less)	$5 00
200 "	8 00
300 "	10 00

We will pay the postage on all ordered from us.

☞ All orders accompanied by the cash, will be promptly attended to.

Address, JOHN H. OHR,
Indianapolis, Indiana.

CHARTERS.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR A DIVISION S. OF T.

(Date.)

The undersigned inhabitants of ——, believing the Order of the Sons of Temperance to be well calculated to extend the blessings of total abstinence, and promote the general welfare of mankind, respectfully petition the Grand Division of the —— of ——, to grant them a Charter to open a new Division, to be called the —— Division, No. —, Sons of Temperance, of the —— of ——, to be located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves, individually and collectively, to be governed by the rules and usages of said Grand Division, and also, by those of the National Division.

Enclosed is the Charter Fee, $5 00. Books, $2 00.

This must be signed by at least eight persons of good character and standing in community, and sent to C. WOODWARD, G. S., Indianapolis, Ind, free of postage.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR A TEMPLE.

(Date.)

The undersigned, believing the Temple of Honor to be well calculated to cement more firmly our fraternal relations, and add to the general prosperity of the cause of Temperance, respectfully petition the Grand Temple of the —— of ——, to grant them a Charter to open a new Temple, to be called the —— Temple of Honor, No. —, of the —— of ——, to be located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves individually and collectively, to be governed by the rules and usages of the Grand Temple, and also by those of the Order at large.

Enclosed is the Charter Fee, $20 00.

To be directed to the G. W. R., free of postage.

This must be signed by at least twenty persons of good standing, and if not known to the G. W. T. or G. W. R., must send satisfactory references.

J. H. OHR, G. W. R.

Indianapolis, Ind.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR CADETS OF TEMPERANCE.

The undersigned, boys of ——, believing the Order of Cadets of Temperance to be well calculated to extend the blessings of total abstinence, and promote the general welfare of mankind, respectfully petition the Grand Section of the State of Indiana, to grant them a charter to open a new Section, to be called the —— Section, No. ——, Cadets of Temperance, of the State of Indiana, to be located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves, individually and collectively to be governed by the rules and usages of said Grand Section, and also those of the acting Head of the Order.

Enclosed is the fee for Charter, R. B.'s and officers' cards, $5 00.

It must also be stated whether the applicants are members of the Order or not; if they are, of what Section. The application to be directed to the Grand Secretary, free of postage.

It must also be certified by a W. P. or P. W. P, that the W. Patron elect is a Son of Temperance in good standing.

Address (post paid) HENRY OHR, G. S., C. o T., Indianapolis, Indiana.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR DAUGHTERS OF TEMPERANCE.

(Date.)

The undersigned, inhabitants of ——, believing the Order of the Daughters of Temperance to be well calculated to extend the blessings of Total Abstinence, and promote the general welfare of mankind, respectfully petition the Grand Union to grant them a charter to open a new Union to be called the —— Union, No. —, D. of T., of the State of Indiana, located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves, individually and collectively, to be governed by the rules and usages of said Grand Union.

Enclosed is the Charter Fee, $5 00.

The above must be signed by at least eleven females, of proper age and good standing in community.

Address (post paid,) Mrs. ELIZA RICHMOND, G. S. S., Indianapolis, Indiana.

TO BUILDERS.

North Western Christian University.

THE Building Committee of the Board of Directors of the North-Western Christiana University, propose contracting for the west wing of the University Building, to be put up on the University grounds in the vicinity of Indianapolis.

Sealed Proposals in detail, with prices affixed for doing the work necessary to the completion of the said Wing, will be received until the 19th day of July next, and may be handed to the undersigned. or to J. T. Cox. Secretary of the Company, at the Book Store of Cox & Mathes, in Indianapolis.

The materials and work to be according to the plan, drawings and specifications prepared by Wm. Tinsley, Architect, which may be seen and examined at his room, on the east side of Pennsylvania street, three doors north of the north-east Diagonal, in Indianapolis. The specifications have been materially changed and modified, so as to reduce the cost of the building.

Proposals for the whole combined, would be preferred; but will be received for the different parts and portions thereof separately. The whole to be completed and fit for use by the first day of September, 1854.

Payments will be made as the work progresses, at such short periods as may suit the covenience of the Contractors. Bond and security will be required for the performance of the work.

In behalf of the Building Committee:

OVID BUTLER,
President of the Board of Directors.

June 10, 1853. june 22 3w

THE LATEST WONDER of the 19th CENTURY.

DR. G. W. BENNETT'S Celebrated Eye-Balm.

A SPECIFIC FOR CHRONIC, SORE, INFLAMED, AND WEAK EYES.

Prepared only by Dr. George W. Bennett, and for sale by Merchants and Druggists generally.

THIS Balm is an excellent and certain cure for sore and inflamed Eyes, in all cases of Psoroic, Scrofulous, and Purulent Opthalmia, and what is commonly termed wild hairs in the eye-lids. It is a specific in Infantile, Purulent, and Scrofulous Inflamed, and Sore Eyes, and all in the various diseases of the Eyes, that prevail among the human family, in every climate. It will be found a sovereign remedy if properly applied.

W. W. ROBERTS, Indianapolis, Ind. General Agent for State of Indiana, to whom all orders must be addressed.

Price---Twenty-five Cents.

I warrant the above Balm to cure if the directions are strictly observed, or return the money.

june 22 4m G. W. BENNETT.

W. W. ROBERTS, Druggist and Apothecary.

Wholesale and Retail Dealer in

DRUGS, MEDICINES, PAINTS, OILS, AND DYE STUFFS, BRUSHES, FANCY GOODS, AMERICAN AND FRENCH WINDOW GLASS, &c.

WASHINGTON ST., INDIANAPOLIS.

Physicians, Country Merchants, and the people generally, are invited to examine his stock, which will be sold at the lowest cash price.

☞ QUALITY WARRANTED TO SUIT. ☜

june 22 4m

COMMERCIAL COLLEGE,

(Late Commercial Institute,)

Of Indianapolis,

Established March 31, 1851.

INCORPORATED, 1853.

W. McK. SCOTT, A. M., Founder and President.

JAMES C. HAYDEN, (Late Professor in Bacon's Mercantile College, Cincinnati,)

PROF. OF BOOK-KEEPING AND PENMANSHIP.

THE Session will commence at College Hall as follows:

1st Session on the first Monday of September.
2d Session on the 1st Monday of November.
3d Session on the 1st Monday of January.
4th Session on the 1st Monday of March.
5th Session on the 1st Monday of May.

Having secured, permanently, the services of the distinguished Professor above named, and leased for a term of years the commodious and beautiful Hall formerly known as CONCERT HALL, but now named COLLEGE HALL, which is to be fitted up in a style of great elegance, taste, and convenience, the President would say, that this College now offers advantages superior to all others, for imparting a sound, thorough, and accomplished business education

COURSE OF STUDIES.

The Course of Studies, as enlarged, will be as follows, viz:

1. Book-Keeping, by Single and Double Entry, in all its various branches, and its application to all kinds of business.
2. The Laws, Customs, and Usages of Trade and Commerce.
3. Mercantile Arithmetic, upon the short and easy system of cancelation, (taught in no other College.)
4. Commercial Law, in a series of Lectures, thorough and systematic.
5. Business Penmanship.
6. Commercial Correspondence.
7. Lectures upon Banking, Political Economy, and other subjects valusble to the business man.

EXPENSES.

Cards of Admission, invariably in advance, or secured, $25; Diplomas $3; Stationery $5; Boarding $2 50 per week; incidentals, at option of student, $15. Making entire expenses about $75.

On application, a Catalogne will be furnished, giving full particulars.

All letters will receive prompt attention on being directed, post-paid, to

june 8 W. McK. SCOTT, President.

"God never made his works for man to mend." DR. FRANKLIN.

KIER'S ROCK OIL.

A NEW AND MOST IMPORTANT REMEDY FOR DISEASE.

DISCOVERED IN 1849.

IS drawn from a deep well near Pittsburgh—has been used with remarkable success in Ohio and Pennsylvania, and more Eastern States—and is now working its way West. An opportunity is now offered to the Afflicted for testing it. Where known and tried, it at once makes firm friends, and cures which are eloquent in its praise. Certificates of its power to heal are at hand—but we know well, reader, that such evidence, to have weight with you, now-a-days, must be in your own neighborhood.—You have only to try the Oil to be satisfied—it will SPEAK FOR ITSELF.

We have no war with the legion of Nostrums and Specifics of the day—we know but little about them—some say they are good for nothing. However that may be, the

Petroleum

will not be suppressed and kept back by reason of the above nostrums—duty and inclination both forbid it.

Those who are afflicted, are respectfully invited to get a Circular and look over the Directions for

Ague, Rheumatism, Piles, Diarrhœa, Flux, Tooth Ache, Burns, Worms, Scrofula, Coughs, Bronchitis, Croup, Old Sores, Cholera Morbus, Contractions of the Limbs and Joints, Sore Eyes, Blindness, Costiveness, Dyspepsia, and other Diseases.

By that time you may say, "it cures too much." But recollect it is not a HUMAN INVENTION, but compounded by Nature's master hand—and Nature does not do her work by halves.

The Oil is used both internally and externally.

As AGUE, SORE EYES, PILES, RHEUMATISM, and SCROFULA are so common in many parts of the West, we are constrained to say, that while this Oil will cure and relieve other diseases, it has been and is constantly used with most complete success in these cases.

☞ Price 50 cents per Bottle (half pint.)

Beware of all Rock Oil preparations, as some persons are offering a spurious article. Look for S. M. KIER'S name written on the label of the bottle.

For sale by the Druggists throughout Indiana, and by TOMLINSON BROTHERS, J. P. POPE & Co., S. ROSENGARTEN, WM. TILLEY, and at wholesale by W. W. ROBERTS, Indianapolis, Indiana.

R. M. LYON, Fort Wayne,
may25 10w Proprietor in the Western States.

SOMETHING NEW.

LATHROP & STEVENS, Wholesale and Retail Dealers in BOOTS AND SHOES, at the West room in the Bates House, Washington Street, Indianapolis.

We are now opening a new and splendid stock of Boots and Shoes of every variety and style, which we are receiving direct from the manufacturers.—We design to keep constantly on hand a good assortment of the best quality of goods manufactured, which we can warrant to give satisfaction to all who may give them a trial. We will sell by the case, dozen, or single pair, at low prices for cash.—Our stock consists in part of Gents' fine Cloth, silk warp, glove kid, buck, patent calf, and enameled Gaiters and Ties of every variety and style; Ladies' fine silk warp Gaiters, Buskins, Ties, Slippers and Boots; Misses' ditto; Men's calf, goat, kip, and thick Boots and Brogans; Boys' and Youths' ditto; assorted Ladies, kid, goat and calf Boots and Buskins; Misses' ditto. Also every variety of Children's Shoes. Come and see for yourselves.

LATHROP & STEVENS,
may 25 4w Indianapolis, Indiana.

TEMPERANCE INN, Bloomington, Indiana.

J. & S. M. ORCHARD, PROPRIETORS.

TRAVELLERS will find it to their advantage to call and try the accommodation of the TEMPERANCE INN. Stage office for all the different routes, in connection with this House. may25 6m ¶

R. R. UNDERHILL & CO.

Manufacturers of

Steam Engines for Grist and Saw Mills,

Of Every Size and Description,

Corn and Cob Grinders, and Castings.

CITY FOUNDRY AND MACHINE SHOP,
Pennsylvania, South of Maine Street,
oct 20 3m INDIANAPOLIS.

NICHOLS & JOHNSTON,

SURGEON DENTISTS,

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

PERFORM all operations connected with Dental Surgery, and warrant the same to stand, or repair free of charge.

Dentist's Fine Gold Foil, and plate, also Plate and Pivot Teeth, for sale at the usual rates.

Orders by mail or otherwise, accompanied with the Cash, carefully and promptly attended to.

june30 6m

REAL ESTATE AND GENERAL AGENCY OFFICE,

INDIANAPOLIS, INDIANA.

UNDER THE CONTROL OF W. M'K. SCOTT, Attorney & Counsellor at Law, and Notary Public.

The attention of the Agency will be devoted,

First—To the collection of debts and the payment of Taxes for non-residents in any county in the State. Also, the redemption of Lands sold for Taxes, sale, purchase or lease of Lands, purchase of adverse claims, examination and perfection of Title, &c., &c.

Second—To the prosecution of claims against the General Government, procuring Land Warrants, Patent Rights, and Pensions under the various Pension Laws, &c.

Third—All other Miscellaneous agencies as may be intrusted to the care of this office.

Fourth—The taking of Depositions and Attestation of all instruments requiring a seal

In all cases requiring an outlay of money for the benefit of individuals, the requisite funds must be transmitted in advance.

Prompt attention to all letters on business that are pre-paid. Address W. M'K. SCOTT,
Real Estate and General Agent,
jan 5-1y Indianapolis, Ind.

ADAMS & CO'S EXPRESS.

WE are now running a daily line East and West, accompanied by special messengers, and with the speed of the mails, running our own cars with the passenger trains.

Packages will be received at the cars up to the time of starting, and at our office until 1 o'clock each day.

We are prepared to transport packages, bank notes and specie, to and from any of the eastern cities, also, Louisville, Frankfort, and Lexington, Ky., St. Louis, Mo., or any points on the Ohio and Mississippi rivers; and to and from Terre Haute, and all intermediate points, and to forward freight from Terre Haute up and down the Wabash.

In addition to these, we have the most complete arrangements for transporting packages to and from California and Europe.

Exchange on England, Ireland, and Scotland, for sale, payable at any bank in the kingdom.

Foreign passage tickets; by Grinnell, Minturn & Co.'s line to Liverpool and London, constantly on hand, and for sale at the lowest rates.

Notes, drafts, and bills collected in any of the Eastern or Western cities.

Orders for goods to be returned by Express, sent free. Our rates of charges have been greatly reduced, and the public will find this a safe and expeditious method of transportation.

Indianapolis, June 30, 1852. ADAMS & CO.

Office in Indianapolis in Journal Building, west side Pennsylvania Street.

Office open during business hours.

june30 1y C. WOODWARD, Agent.

The Cheapest Illustrated Paper for the Young.

PRICE ONLY TEN CENTS A YEAR, or nearly three papers for one cent, where 100 copies are taken.

Twenty-six numbers a year, and each number illustrated with from three to seven engravings.

The Youth's Penny Gazette,

A strictly Religious and Moral Paper, is published by the AMERICAN SUNDAY SCHOOL UNION and is designed to furnish the Children and Youth of the United States with reading matter, in a popular form, for the improvement of Mind and Heart.

It is published (not monthly, nor weekly, but) every other week, or twenty-six numbers in a year. It is religious but unsectarian, and the matter is carefully prepared with a view to the habits, character and prospects of American Youth

TERMS OF THE PENNY GAZETTE.

$10 a year, in advance, for 100 copies, to one address. $5 a year, in advance, for 40 copies, to one address. $3 a year, in advance, for 20 copies, to one address. Single subscriptions, 25 cents per year.

TERMS BY MAIL, POSTAGE PAID.

☞ When the postage is paid at the place of mailing, the terms are very low. For $15 remitted, we will send 100 copies of the paper for one year, to one address—we paying postage. For $7 remitted, we will send 40 copies of the paper to one address, for one year—we paying postage. For $3 50 remitted, we will send 20 copies of the paper for one year, to one address—we paying postage. Less than 20 cannot be sent at this cheap rate.

Subscriptions received at the Society's House, No. 146 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.

Feb 16 3w G. S. SCOFIELD, Agent.

D. CRAIGHEAD. R. BROWNING.

CRAIGHEAD & BROWNING,

Dealers in all kinds of

Drugs, Medicines, Surgical Instruments, Paints, Oils, Chemicals, Varnishes, Dye Stuffs, Glassware Window Glass, Brushes, Cosmetics, Spices, Cigars, Tobacco, Perfumery, &c.,

WASHINGTON STREET,
INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

ALL are respectfully invited to call and examine our stock and prices, as we feel confident we can render satisfaction both as to prices and quality of articles. Great care is taken in the selection of articles, in reference to their purity, as we endeavor at all times to keep such articles as are strictly pure and genuine. Every article will be waranted as represented. Orders from Physicians and others promptly attended to. Particular attention given to filling Prescriptions and compounding Medicines, which, in all cases, shall receive the personal attention of one of the firm. june 30

HANNAMAN & DUZAN,

DEALERS IN

DRUGS AND MEDICINES,

Surgical Instruments, Paints, Oils, Varnishes, Dye Woods, Medical and Window Glass, Brushes, Perfumery, Soaps, &c.

Washington, 3 doors west of Pennsylvania St.,

june 30 1y INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

LITTLE, DRUM & ANDERSONS

WHOLESALE DEALERS IN

STAPLE AND FANCY DRY GOODS, BOOTS, SHOES, HATS, CAPS, STATIONERY, NOTIONS, TRIMMINGS, GROCERIES, HARDWARE, QUEENSWARE, AND GLASSWARE,

North side of Washington Street,

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

WE are receiving Country Produce of all descriptions, and paying the highest market price. Dealers visiting Indianapolis are respectfully invited to call and examine our stock and prices, both for Produce and Merchandise generally. june30 tf

A CHANCE TO MAKE MONEY.

Profitable and honorable Employment!

THE Subscriber is desirous of having an agent in each county and town of the Union. A capital of from $5 to $10 only will be required, and anything like an efficient, energetic man can make from three to five dollars per day; indeed some of the Agents now employed are realizing twice that sum. Every information will be given by addressing, (postage paid) WM. A. KINSLER,
june 15 3w ¶ Box 601, Philadelphia P. O.

The American Life and Health Insurance Company.

Office—No. 7, South Third St., Philadelphia.

Officers.

LEONARD JEWELL, President.
JAMES PEACOCK, Treasurer,
JOHN C. SIMS, Sec'y and Actuary.
THOS. S. SMITH, Solicitor

JOHN F. BIRD, FRED. A. FICKARDT, } Medical Examiners.

CHARLES WOODWARD, Indianapolis, Ind., General Agent for the State of Indiana.

THIS Company issues policies at Total Abstinence Rates, Joint stock Rates, and at Mutual Rates, which for $1000 on the life of a person 30 years of age, are as follows:

Age.	Total Abstinence.	Joint Stock.	Mutual.
30	$15.40	$19.60	$23.60

A further table of Rates will be furnished at the Office.

The condition in Total Abstinence rates (believed to be the lowest in the Union,) is entire forfeiture upon the departure of the Insured from Total Abstinence in its strictest sense.

Policies at Joint Stock and Mutual rates, contain no condition except as usual in Life Insurance.

HEALTH INSURANCE DEPARTMENT.

All Moneys received from the Insured, for Annual Premiums, after deducting expenses, will be divided among the Sick

The Public have for some time been familiar with the subject of Life and Health Insurance, but it is obvious that too little thoughts has been given to the latter. LIFE Insurance benefits our successors, while HEALTH Insurance directly benefits ourselves. It makes provision for a time of sickness, when the products of a man's industry are cut off, and want unites with Disease to aggravate his distress. It is at this gloomy period, when he is prostrated and helpless, and when despondency would otherwise overwhelm him, that the holder of a Health Insurance Policy will realize its benefits.

RATES, under 50 years of age,

$2,00	per year,	for	$2,00	per week.
3,00	"	"	3,00	"
4,00	"	"	4,00	"
5,00	"	"	5,00	"
6,00	"	"	6,00	"

Over fifty and under sixty.

$2,50	per year,	for	$2,50	per week.
3,75	"	"	3,00	"
5,00	"	"	4,00	"
6,25	"	"	5,00	"
7,50	"	"	6,00	"

When the Fund shall amount to Three Dollars and upwards for every person insured and sufficient to warrant an additional distribution, the weekly allowances will be increased in accordance with the Rules of the Policy.

All the members of a Temple or Division insured at greatly reduced rates.

Applications for Agencies in any of the cities or towns in the State, should be made to the undersigned, post paid, or in person.

As Agent for the above Company, I am prepared to receive applications for Policies at any of the above rates.

CHARLES WOODWARD, Agent,
At ADAMS & CO.'S Express Office.

J. L. MOTHERSHEAD, Medical Examiner.

june 30 '52-1y

Ohio Life Insurance Company,

Capital $100,000.

JOINT STOCK AND MUTUAL,

CINCINNATI.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS.

Wm. Burnet, Jno. N. Ridgway, Chas. Goodman, S. Robert, E. S. Haines, Jno. M. Blair, J. W. Donohue, Eden B. Reeder, Wm. Person.

WM. BURNET, President.

S. W. REEDER, Sec'y J. W. DONOHUE, Vice Pres't

Office in Reeder's Building, Third street, between Almy's and City Bank.

This Company insures Lives at the lowest rates consistent with safety, either upon the Joint Stock or Mutual plan.

In the Joint Stock Department, premium payable quarterly, semi-annually or annually. On the Mutual plan, one-half the premium paid in Cash, the balance by a note bearing six per cent. interest—the interest only payable annually. Persons insuring on the mutual plan, participate in the profits of the Company in that department.

The undersigned having been appointed agent for the above Company, is prepared to fill applications for Life Insurance, on favorable terms.

Any information on the subject and pamphlets explaining the nature and utility of Life Insurance, furnished without charge, at the office of the Agent.

C. WOODWARD, Agent.

Office at Adam's & Co.'s Express Office, Journal Building, Pennsylvania street, Indianapolis, Ind.

june 30, '52-1y.

JAMES HALL,

MERCHANT TAILOR,

No. 2. Temperance, Hall, Indianapolis,

Manufactu'ng & Clothing Emporium,

Wholesale and Retail Dealer in Ready Made Clothing, Cloths, Cassimers, Vestings, Trimmings, Trunks, Sachels, Canes, Umbrellas, Hats, Caps, a every description of Gentlemen's Furnishing.

Also:

General Agency for the sale of GRAND AND SUBORDINATE REGALIA, EMBLEMS, COSTUMES, &C., FOR THE ORDERS OF MASONS, ODD FELLOWS, TEMPLE OF HONOR, SON, DAUGHTERS, AND CADETS OF TEMPERANCE. oct27 1y

Railroad City Book Store.

COX & MATHES,

South side of Washington, between Illinois and Meridian streets,

INDIANAPOLIS, INDIANA.

AT wholesale and retail, Standard and Miscellaneous Works, Law, and Medical Books, School Books, Plain and Fancy Stationery, Blank Books, Wall Papers, &c., &c. mar 2

CHEAP WATCHES & JEWELRY.

Good Gold Watches at $24!

WE are now in our new Room No. 1, Palmer House, with a lot of beautiful Watches and Jewelry which we are selling lower than ever heretofore sold in Indianapolis, for instance we sell

Good 18 K Case Gold Lepines at $24.
" 18 K " " Levers at $28.
" Silver Anchor Levers $12 to $18.
" " Cylenders, $9 to $12.
" " Quarter's $6 to $10.

In addition to the above we have a fine assortment of other description of Watches all of which we will sell lower than any other firm dare sell in the place. I have in my employ a very superior Watch Repairer who will always be on on hand to do watch repairing of every description. Mr. Michot has worked in Geneva, Paris, New York and other large cities and has had great experience in his Branch of the business. All Watches warranted for one year, and the money in all cases refunded, provided they do not give entire satisfaction.

feb9 tf E. W. NEFF.

SMALL CHANGE.

THE undersigned is prepared to furnish Merchants and others with three cent pieces from the United States Mint at Philadelphia, free of transportation, in sums of 30, 60, and 90 dollars, upon deposit of Gold or Eastern Exchange. Also cents and half cents, upon payment of frieght on gold to Philadelphia, or on Eastern Exchange free of freight.

C. WOODWARD, Agent,
june 30 Adams & Co.'s Express.

THE ILLUSTRATED MAGAZINE OF ART.

THE five numbers of this Magazine which are published, place it at the head of publications of this kind No expense will be spared to make it in every respect worthy of the name, the "Illustrated Magazine of Art. The Engravings which are preparing for the future numbers are in the hands of first-class American and European Artists.

A Series of most interesting Tales will appear in it. "The School of Life," written and Illustrated by ANNA MARY, daughter of William and Mary Howitt, will shortly appear; also, "The Dead Bridal," an historical romance, illustrative of the most interesting period in the history of the Venetian Republic, by JONATHAN FREKE SLINGSBY, of the Dublin University Magazine; contributions, too, from WILLIAM and MARY HOWITT, PERCY B. ST. JOHN, and other writers of distinction in America and Europe.

The following is a brief outline of the plan of the Magazine:

I. The Historical Department will abound with picturesque representations of the most remarkable events which have occurred in this and other countries; accompanied with interesting anecdotes and details from the pen of the most eminent writers of the day. This department will contain several splendid engravings, designed by the first artists of the world, and engraved in the highest style of modern art.

II. The Men and Women of the Age. This department will consist of beautifully executed portraits of the leading characters of the age, especially of those who figure on the stage of humanity as the world's benefactors. Each portrait will be accompanied by an interesting biographical sketch.

III. The Wonders of Natural History, Botany, and other sciences, will be developed in choice Engravings of Beasts, Birds, Fishes, Insects, Forest Trees, Flowers, Geological and Fossil Specimens, &c., with accompanying descriptions.

IV. The Triumphs of Architectural Art will be displayed in exquisitely finished representations of Cathedrals, Churches, Palaces, and other models of ancient and modern Architectural Art.

V. The Works of the Great Masters, selected from the principal Galleries of Art in the World. In general, the portrait of the Master will be given, accompanied with a highly finished engraved copy of his chef d'œuvre.

VI. The Scientific Portions will be rendered highly interesting by the familiar explanations, and the numerous diagrams which will accompany each subject.

VII. Manufactures. The principal manufacturing processes in use will be fully explained by minute details, and an abundance of beautiful engravings.

VIII. Machinery and Inventions will have due attention paid to them, and be described by numerous appropriate engravings.

IX. The Literary Department, independently of the various articles accompanying the illustrations, will comprise original and interesting narratives, contributed by the most popular writers of the day, with numerous illustrations.

In every respect, the "Illustrated Magazine of Art," will be decidedly

SUPERIOR TO ANY MAGAZINE OF THE DAY.

Each Monthly part will contain at least Thirty superb Engravings, four of which will be printed separately, on supefine Plate Paper.

The greatest care will be manifested in every department of production. The Paper will be of the first manufacture, and the Ink supplied from the celebrated Printing Ink Establishment of Messrs. Lawson & Co., of Paris. Six of the monthly portions, when completed, will form a volume which, for interest, originality, value and beauty, will defy competition. It will not only be an interesting family book, but a rich ornament for the drawing-room table, and a pleasant companion in the study.

The parts will appear on the First of every Month at Twenty-five Cents each.

ALEXANDER MONTGOMERY,
may 25 17 Spruce Street, New-York.

SPLENDIDLY ILLUSTRATED WORKS.

THE ALPS, SWITZERLAND, SAVOY AND LOMBARDY.

With the Magazine for June will be ready, Part I., price Twenty-five Cents, of a Magnificent Work to be completed in Twelve Monthly Parts, entitled

THE ALPS, SWITZERLAND, SAVOY AND LOMBARDY, with an account of the most recent Ascents to Mont Blanc, &c. By the Rev. Charles Williams. This work, when completed, will form a large thick Volume, in Imperial Octavo, containing upwards of Three Hundred beautiful Engravings, descriptive of the peculiar Scenery of those most interesting portions of Europe, with the Occupations of the Inhabitants, &c., &c.

Cassell's Natural History.

On the First of July will commence

CASSELL'S NATURAL HISTORY, which for variety, beauty and completeness, will claim to be considered as a first-class work, upon this most interesting subject. The First volume will be devoted to the Feathered Tribe of the Creation and will contain upwards of Three Hundred Engravings, in the first style of Art. The volume will be completed in Twelve Monthly Parts, Imperial Octavo. Price 25 cents each.

History of England.

On the First of July will appear Part I., price 25 cts. of THE ILLUSTRATED HISTORY OF ENGLAND, from the earliest period on record to the present time. Edited by ROBERT FERGUSON, LL. D.

This History, which is intended to form a great National Work, will extend to Four Volumes, Imperial Octavo; each Volume to be completed in Twelve Monthly Parts, price 25 cents each. The Work will comprehend the Political, Civil, and Domestic History of the Nation, and its Progress in Civilization, Literature, Art, &c. It will be profusely Illustrated with Engravings from Designs by GILBERT, PHILLIPPOTEAUX, WILLIAMS, and others. Representations of the most remarkable Events will be worked separately upon Plate Paper. The Portraits will form a complete Gallery, not only of the Monarchs, but of those individuals whose names are prominent in England's History. Also, Antiquities, including Autographs, Buildings, Costume, Furniture, Arms, Coins, Monuments, Manufactures &c., of each Epoch.

History of Hungary.

July First will be published, in one Handsome Volume, Imperial Octavo, price, One Dollar and Twenty-five Cents, in Cloth Boards,

THE ILLUSTRATED HISTORY OF HUNGARY, AND THE MAGYARS, from the Earliest Period to the clos of the late War. By EDWARD LAWRENCE GODKIN. The Volume will be Illustrated with One Hundred highly finished Engravings, including representations of the principal Battles; Portraits of the early Kings, and of the Statesmen and Generals who figured in the War of Independence; Costumes of the Peasantry, &c.; Views of the chief Towns and Fortresses, &c.; with an accurate Description of the Manners and Customs of the People, their Literature, Commerce, Arts, &c.

ALEXANDER MONTGOMERY,
may25 Publisher, 17 Spruce Street, New-York.

MANSION HOUSE, Cambridge City, Indiana.

J. CUNNINGHAM, Proprietor.

TRAVELLERS

Will find it to their advantage to call and try the accommodation of the MANSION HOUSE.

STAGE OFFICE also in connection with this House.

may 4 6m

INDIANA STATE LIBRARY

TEMPERANCE CHART.

A Weekly Journal:---Devoted to Temperance, Morality, Education, Literature, Useful Arts, Science, General Intelligence, &c.

J. W. GORDON, M. D., Editor.] ORGAN OF THE GRAND DIVISION OF INDIANA. [JOHN H. OHR, Printer.

VOL. III. INDIANAPOLIS, IND., WEDNESDAY, JULY 6, 1853. NO. 2.

THE TEMPERANCE CHART,
IS PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY, BY THE GRAND DIVISION, S. of T. OF INDIANA.

Edited by J. W. Gordon, M. D.
To whom all Communications and Subscriptions must be addressed, post-paid.
Office—in second story of Temperance Hall Building, Washington St., Indianapolis.

TERMS:
Single copy, one year, ... 75 cts.
☞ In advance in all cases,

TERMS OF ADVERTISING.—Circulation 4000 copies.

One Squre, (12 lines,) for one week,	$0 50
" " for each subsequent insertion,	25
" " for 3 months,	3 00
" " for 6 months,	5 00
" " for 1 year without alteration,	8 00
" " for 1 year, with changes,	12 00

A reduction made on larger advertisements.
Cuts double the above rates.
Advertisements must be handed in by Saturday, of each week, to insure insertion.
Applications for advertising, or for any kind of Printing for the Order, must be made to
J. H. OHR, Indianapolis.

MISCELLANEOUS.

From the South-Western Baptist.

The Kingdom of Yoruba.

This nation, improperly called Yarriba, is the most westerly country of the region to which geographers have given the name of Central Africa. It lies between the river Niger and Atlantic ocean, about 800 miles East of Liberia. Between Yoruba and the sea are the Iketu, Egba and Otta tribes who speak dialects of the same language.

Yoruba is traversed by the Kong mountains, which are here considerably diminished in height and divided into several distinct chains, with terraces of undulating table lands between them. The rocks are granite with a little trap, white marble, &c., iron ore is abundant but no other metal has been discovered. The country is generally covered with sparsely wooded prairies, and watered by very numerous streams. There is no swamp, and the soil is firm in the wettest weather. Owing to the elevation and openness of the country, the climate is pleasant. The thermometer ranges from 75 deg. to 85 deg., and seldom rises above 90 in the hottest times. There are two rainy seasons, one in the spring and the other in the fall. The summer is pleasant with occasional showers; the winter months are the hottest season of the year, and nearly destitute of rain. From this cause vegetation ceases to grow, and enjoys a a season of repose. The dry grass on the prairies is generally burnt off in February. Rain begins to fall early in March.

The animals of Yoruba are elephants, lions, leopards, buffaloes, antelopes, wild hogs, &c. There are no deer in Africa. The domestic animals are the same as our own. In that climate sheep have no wool, but are smooth as goats. The pigs appear to be the same known in this country as the Guinea breed.

There is no tree or shrub common to Yoruba and the United States, except the grape vine. Some of the herbaceous plants are the same as ours, especially in the farms and about towns, where there are jamestown weeds, purslain, crab-grass, &c. The products of the farm are Indian corn, cow peas, beans, onions, sweet potatoes, yams, &c. Wheat is unknown here, but grows in Haussa, East of the Niger. Among the ornamental shrubs and trees are Cape-jessamine, the true jasmine vine, mimosas, oleanders, and some others not yet introduced into this country.

The population of Yoruba may be estimated at ten persons to the square mile. They live exclusively in towns, some of which are great cities measuring from ten to twelve miles in circuit. All the towns are surrounded by walls, and the gates are constantly watched. The houses are made of clay, one story high, very low, and covered with thatch of grass. The yard is in the middle of the house, and the doors of the numerous rooms open into an interior piazza which runs all round the yard, and is covered by the projection of the roof. The yard is entered by a large gate with heavy shutters. This gate is defended by charms and amulets, and each room is usually provided with the same means of security. As a general thing, the streets of towns are narrow and crooked, but there are squares shaded with tress where the people hold their markets.

The Yoruba people have no science.—Their arts are rude and simple. Every man has his own trade or profession.—There are iron smelters, blacksmiths, wood workmen, jewelers, who make beads of cornelian and jasper, weavers, tailors, fishers, hunters, &c. But the greater part of the people are farmers. They have a good many slaves captured or bought from other tribes, and considering that the plow is unknown, their farms are managed with a considerable degree of skill. Women do not work on the farms. Their business is to do the house work, to spin thread, which they sell to the weavers, to make earthenware, manufacture soap and various kinds of oil, and have to buy and sell almost everything which passes through the market. They are free dealers and sometimes get rich. As might be expected, they are not a little respected by the other sex, and have their share of influence.

The Yorubas have a code of morals preserved in the form of proverbs, some of which are poetical. Their government is a limited constitutional monarchy, evidently framed with an eye to a balance of power in the different departments. Of course their laws are oral, since they can not write, but they have laws both civil and criminal, which do credit to the nation; on the whole they are probably among the most honest, chaste, and amiable of all the heathen nations. Withal they are not blinded with self-conceit, but feel that they are ignorant and often seem desirous to learn.

The greatest sin of the people in this region is a love of war. I have seen whole countries and large cities which had been utterly depopulated by victorious armies. In some parts kidnappers and soldiers are common. In one of my journeys two parties of travelers were attacked in one day not far from me by these pests of Africa. I have heard of kidnappers who tied their prisoners and went in search of more, but afterward finding it inconvenient to return the same way, they left their victims to starve in the woods. Human sacrifices are common in some neighboring countries, and sometimes occur in Yoruba.

For the most part the people are poor, too poor to sustain churches or schools, even if they were planted among them.—Yet the country is not destitute of resources. The palm tree is no less valuable than the cotton or tobacco plant. Africa may produce vast amounts of several other valuable commodities; if wars could cease and an honest traffic spring up, it would enrich the country, and be no mean item even in the great commerce of England and America. An industrious, civilized people would soon raise Central Africa to a high position among the commercial countries of the torrid zone.—Doubtless the Niger and the Chadda will yet be the highway for exports and imports which will amount to several millions of dollars annually. At present the missionary, impelled by the love of souls, is advancing far beyond the limits of commercial enterprise, but the merchant will follow, and commerce will become a powerful auxiliary of the Gospel and civilization.

In Yoruba the people believe in only one God, but they do not worship him.—Their sacrifices and prayers are offered to idols and inferior spirits, which they call orisha. Their orisha are regarded as mediators, and sacrifices are offered to conciliate their favor. The religion of the people teaches them few lessons of morality. Neither does it satisfy that longing after peace of conscience which they sometimes feel, hence sacrifices are oft repeated. On the approach of death they sometimes manifest great concern, begging their friends to make sacrifices, and uttering exclamations of distress.

Since the Yorubas feel their need of sacrifices and mediators, they are prepared to appreciate the doctrine of Christ.—Hence there is no people in modern times who have paid more deep and earnest attention to the Gospel, or where some of them more heartily and utterly renounced their sacrifices and embraced the atonement and mediation of the Savior.

The Foreign mission Board of the Southern Baptist Convention have resolved to send out immediately six missionaries if they can be procured. Three have been appointed, and the appointment of two others may be regarded as certain. A physician is needed, and a mechanic or two would be an important addition to the party. We expect to begin in Yoruba and hope soon to penetrate into other nations, or Niefi and Haussa beyond the Niger. One of our measures will probably be a school for training teachers for future missions. A vast field occupied by races of black and red men lies before us. The character of the people and the circumstances are such as to warrant the hope that our labors will not be in vain.

T. J. Bowen.

Capital Punishment.

A short time since we gave some statistics relating to the operation of the non-capital punishment law in this State, and stated it as our impression that previous to the passage of this law, there were no convictions for murder, and consequently no executions. In this we were mistaken. In a conversation yesterday with Jones H. Titus, Esq., who was for several years Agent of the State Prison, we learned that there were four convictions for murder in the State previous to the passage of the law. Of the persons who were thus convicted, two were executed, and the sentences of the other two were commuted to imprisonment in the State Prison.

Thus in ten years, from 1836 to 1846, there were four convictions for murder under the capital punishment law, while in seven years, from 1846 to 1853, there were nine convictions under the present law. If we compare the relative population of the several years during the two periods, it will be found that there was an excess of murder committed during the former period over the latter. In other words, there was a greater per centage of convictions for murder when the penalty was hanging, than when it was solitary confinement at hard labor life.

There is an interesting fact connected with this subject which we will state. The two persons spoken of above, whose sentences were commuted to imprisonment for life, have since ascertained to have been innocent of the crime of which they were convicted, and both have been pardoned; and each is, we learn, leading a respectable life, engaged in the pursuit of an honest calling for a livelihood. One of them was a white and the other a colored man. Had the penalty of hanging in these cases been enforced, two innocent men would have suffered death. Facts like these will do more to make anti-capital punishment men than all the reasoning that can be advanced. It is better that ninety and nine guilty men escape than that one innocent man should suffer, is the legal maxim; and if it be an axiom, it will be long before Michigan should have recourse to the "bloody code."

We allude to this subject, not only because it is desirable to know the results of so important a change as that which this State has been the first to adopt, but for the reason that in other States movements are in progress to test a law which is called for by a very considerable portion of the public voice. Our experience, so far as it goes, is valuable, and proves, at least, that there has been no danger in making the experiment of pulling down the gallows. In other States, where the death penalty is still retained, murder has increased to an alarming extent, and, if we can judge by rusults, the gibbet has no greater terrors than solitary confinement for life.

It cannot be disguised that a great change has taken place in the public mind upon this question; and not only upon this question, but upon the broad subject of punishment generally. It is only within the space of a few years that the use of means to reform the criminal has been regarded as any part of the duty of the State. The tendency has ever been to still further degrade the guilty rather than seek to elevate and reclaim. The benevolent exertions of a few philanthropists—and among these we may prominently mention the persevering Miss Dix—have done much, very much, to change the current of public opinion. Not only religious and moral instrustors are furnished, but most of the State Prisons in this country are provided with libraries and all proper means are used to send the unfortunate criminal out upon the world a wiser and a better man. He is taught to believe there is yet hope—that he is not utterly lost. The benefits of this improvement in discipline is felt in the prisons both in securing better order among convicts, and in that cheerfulness which naturally flows from the diffusion of moral principles. The salutary consequences to the thousands of discharged convicts cannot be estimated.—Detroit Free Press.

Gratitude is like the good faith of traders, it maintains commerce; and we often pay, not because it is just to discharge our debts, but that we may more readily find people to trust us.

Canova's First Love.

In the story of his early love, if a juvenile and vague aspiration may be so termed, there was something of romantic and melancholy interest, which seems long to have shaded with perceptible coloring his future musings. While pursuing his studies in the Farsetti Palace, on first arriving in Venice, he one day beheld a female somewhat older than himself, and very beautiful, enter the gallery, accompanied by a friend or attendant, who, daily departing, soon after returned again before the hour of closing, leaving the former to pursue her studies, which chiefly consisted in drawing from antique heads. Chance first placed the youthful pair near each other, and some sleeping excellence, hitherto undiscovered, subsequently determined him constantly to select as models such subjects as brought him nearest the fair artist. Time thus rolled away, and the youth found his bosom penetrated with new, delicious, but undefinable sensations. He knew not why he wished to be near her, or why he delighted to gaze on her mild and lovely countenance—so pale and delicate, yet so full of feeling—nor could he tell why the furtive glance was so often directed to her sylph-like form and graceful movements: but he felt that with such a being he should be forever happy, although incapable of defining his ideas of that happiness. One day the object of his silent admiration was absent—another and another passed; still she did not appear. Antonio was inconsolable; but he shrunk from inquiry, for he feared that every one already possessed the secret of his thoughts. Many days elapsed in this uncertainty, during which he was as indefatigable in study—for she had once, while leaning on the shoulder of her companion, praised his works as being "assai belle"—words never forgotten though answered only by a silent obeisance, and he hoped again to attract her notice. At length the attendant again appeared—alone and habited in deep mourning. The heart of the youth failed at the sight; but, summening courage as she passed in departing with a portfolio, he ventured to inquire for her friend. "La Signora Julia," replied she, "is dead!" No more was asked, and nothing more was said. Who Julia was, Canova never knew; but her name, her image, long remained engraven on his memory.—Life of Canova.

Woman's Home Duties.

It may be a fancy of ours that Providence has so decidedly fitted woman for household cares, that she is never truly or healthfully happy without them; but if it be a fancy, it is one which much observation has confirmed. If there be anything likely to banish the fiend, ennui, from the dwellings of women of fortune, it is the habit of assuming a moderate share rf the daily cares which go to make home happy. To do every thing by proxy is to deprive ourselves of a thousand wholesome, cheerful, innocent interests; to nourish our pride and indolence at the expense of our affections; nay, we may add, is there not something almost impious in scorning the position for which God so evidently designed woman, and living an artificial life of our own devising, deputing our duties and privileges to hirelings!

It is a singular delusion of some women, and of American women in particular, for we know that even in England, women of fortune are much more truly domestic in their tastes and habits than we. We remember a story of a certain duchess cleaning some picture frames, when a protege, who happened to be present, officiously desired to take the office upon herself.

"Child," said her grace, "don't you suppose I should have called a servant if I had not chosen to do it myself."

The German ladies, with all their cultivation, take the most intimate interest in householdery, and they are remarkable for cheerfulness of temper, for natural and charming manners, and for the intelligence and vivacity of their conversational powers. Who knows but the terrible dearth of subjects of conversation among us might be somewhat mitigated, if young ladies spent a part of every morning among the various cares and duties, on the proper performance of which so much of the comfort and happiness of life depends, and which call into action far higher powers than those required for the bold chit-chat of an evening party, or the inanities of a morning call?

The universal sentiment of men is in favor of active domestic habits in women. It is said that men "love to see women delicate," and so they do, doubtless. But does any moderate amount of attention to home affairs deprive a lady of her delicacy? It may prevent the delicacy of dyspepsia; but few gentlemen admire that. Indeed, we have yet to discover the man of sense who is displeased by his wife's personal care of the comfort and economy of her house. Those whose lives are embittered by the lack of it are not far to seek. No houses are regulated with such neatness, accuracy, and elegance as those in which the ladies of the family take a personal part in household duties.

Goethe says of a young woman, one of his friends,—and a man of genius is entitled to speak for his sex:—"After the death of her mother, she displayed a high degree of activity as the head of a numerous young family, and alone had sustained her father and his widowhood.—The future husband could thus hope an equal blessing for himself and his descendants, and expect a decided domestic happiness. Every one confessed that she was a woman to be wished for. She was one of those who, if they do not inspire vehement passion, are found to excite a universal pleasure. A lightly formed symmetrical figure, a purely healthy nature, and the glad activity that arises from it, an unembarrassed care for daily necessities—with all these she was endowed.—The observation of those qualities was always agreeable to me, and I always sought the society of those who possessed them."—Mrs. Kirkland.

Female Compositors.

There are more females that have learned to set type in different parts of the Union than may be supposed. The editor of the Mountain Banner, a North Carolina paper, says, that during his absence his wife set the type for four columns of the paper, prepared the copy, read the proofs, and wrote some editorials..

The Boston Olive Branch. on which females are employed as compositors, says;

"Our rooms are all carpeted, and the girls do not come in till nine or ten o'clock in the morning, retiring in good season, seldom making over seven or eight hours a day. Smart compositors can in that time earn from $6 to $7 a week. We have also one female clerk out of the three we employ. Added to this, one desk has been occupied by a female editor as our associate, at a salary of $900. She has spent seven hours a day in the office, or five days in the week. We generally have in our office an organ and a piano forte, and have music at the meal hours, when the ladies feel like playing."

The Republic announces the fact that it has now a lady typo, and that she learned the "boxes" and set 2000 ems of Bourgeois, all well "justified." and the like, the first day. This the editor justly calls "a good beginning." We gladly welcome the young lady to the Fraternity. It is always gratifying to printers to look upon a fair proof.

Our "devil" (foolish boy!) is perfectly elated with the hope that the time is coming when "female devils" will be as thick as "toads after a shower." In view of that happy period, he says, "He ain't sorry that he has learned the trade."—Chardon Free Democrat.

Great Natural Curiosity.—At Kubberpore na Jeal, in India, there is a cannon two hundred and thirteen inches long, sixty-six inches around the muzzle, and eighteen inches around the calibre. It has five, and had originally six, equidistant rings by which it was lifted up. This gun is called by the natives Juan Kushall, or the Destroyer of Life, and its casting and position are attributed to the doesta, or divinities, though its almost obliterated Persian inscriptions declare its formation by hnman means. But what is most extraordinary about it is, that two Peepul trees have grown both carriage and cannon into themselves. Fragments of iron, a spring, one of the lynches, and a part of the wood work, protrude from between the roots and bodies of these trees, but the trees alone support the gun, one of its rings and half of its whole length, being completely hid between the inside of their barks and trunks. A more curious sight, or a cannon more firmly fixed, though by the mere gradual growth of two trees, cannot well be imagined. The Indians assert that it was only once fired, and sent the ball twenty-four miles.

It is a great folly to wish to be exclusively wise.

v. 3 #2

TEMPERANCE CHART.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.
WM. HANNAMAN, C. E. BABB,
JAMES HALL, R. T. BROWN,
JOHN B. ABBETT.

WEDNESDAY, JULY 6, 1853.

☞ Several interesting and important letters are necessarily crowded over till next week. Be patient—all.

The Chart.

We send the present number of the Chart to all our old subscribers; but hereafter will, under the direction of the committee, be under the necessity of discontinuing all whose time is out. It is expected, however, that most of those who have heretofore taken it, will renew their subscriptions.—The cause of Temperance requires that it should be supported; and temperance men should not feel backward in holding it up. Its fate is in their hands. They can make or unmake it. A little neglect now, will do it more harm, than future efforts to promote its success may be able to do it good. There is a time to all things. Now is the time to subscribe for the Temperance Chart. Let none of its readers forget this, and the result will answer the highest wishes of the friends of reform.

Many of the Divisions have already done gloriously. Azalia, Lyman Beecher Division, at Evansville, and others have stood up on the right side in a manner altogether as good as we anticipated. If others will do likewise, the CHART will be disembarrassed, and all engaged in its publication invigorated for better efforts in the cause of humanity. We all work best when we feel that our efforts are seconded by others. A good circulation, aside from any pecuniary consideration, is sufficient of itself to make an editor's labors light, for then he feels that his thoughts have the fellowship and sympathy of others, and that his labors are not in vain.

Election Returns.

Our friends from different parts of the State are still sending us occasionally, returns from the last Spring election on the liquor law; but they come in so slowly that we are almost disheartened. We might have had complete returns long ago, if some one friend of the cause in each county had only thought enough of it to give his attention to the subject for a single hour. This is but a short time to devote to such a purpose, yet it seems to be longer than men are willing to give to it. We have sufficient however, to let us know that it carried by a large majority of all the votes cast on the subject. We are unwilling to print an imperfect return so long as any hope remains of getting a complete one. Can we not have it? Had the vote showed a popular majority on the other side, it would have been quoted long ago, by all the moral-suasion-people-loving political journals in the State.

HARPER'S MAGAZINE.—The July number of this very popular monthly has found its way into our sanctum, and brought as usual much both to instruct and please. The glance at the signers of the "Immortal Declaration of Independence" is peculiarly appropriate at this time; and, as even the names of those great men who declared us independent are not remembered as they deserve, should be sufficient to introduce the present number to every home in our country. If our country ever does succeed in realizing the American idea—the establishment of man's right to self-control in the full, true, and proper sense of that word, the Declaration of Independence will then have achieved its proper influence in the world, not before.

Those desiring to purchase this or any other current publications, will do well to call at the "Rail-Road City Book-store, —Cox & Mathes—in this city.

Random Thoughts.

The Storm-King has retired: his cloud-chariot has passed; the rain has ceased to patter against the window; the voice of the thunder is hushed; and the broad sheet-lightning flashes faintly, and still more faintly, in the distant East. A rent here and there in the veil that shuts out the blue of heaven, tells of happy birds and sunny skies to-morrow. And now a dim, trembling star looks out, and, like a bright, sinless, happy child, smiles on us through darkness and tears. It is the child of promise, heralding the starry train, and whispering of the glorious King of day. Its tearful smile is both a memory and a hope. This breathes of sunny morn and azure skies; that, of cloud and storm departed. Down, far down, from that far-off, heaven-wandering trembler comes a voice to man. It is a still, small voice, indeed; but, as in the old time, it is still the voice of God—the voice of His love, and promise to those who love instruction. It is audible to those who, with an humble and pure heart, do good and love mercy. The wind, the earthquake, and the fire may be the voice of God to the great herd of the race, who neither see, feel, or worship aught that bears not the evidences of physical might along with it. To such, the steam engine, or the heavy rumble of the machinery it drives, may typify the loftiest conception of divinity, they are capable of receiving. But there are those of the race who are more highly gifted. Not to them does their Creator speak in the thunders of the physical universe. He admits them into a closer companionship with Himself. In the audience chamber of the King of kings, He whispers to them the counsels of Heaven; and often from the stars to these his favored children, he sends messages of love and joy, that others neither hear nor heed. To hear as the prophet heard, one's affections must be cut loose as were the prophet's, from the earth, and anchored on high. To such only speaks the voice from the excellent glory; and, when thus raised by great and pure thoughts above the world, the soul needs no other companionship. Voices unheard by others cheer it forward, and every star becomes a companion and a friend. Happy beyond measure must such a nature feel, when permitted to leave its earthly prison and range the wide fields over which it now so often looks with hope!

THE BIRTHNIGHT BALL.—We publish today a well-written Temperance Sketch from the pen of the REV. MR. CURRY, of Columbus, in this State, who did so much for the cause of Temperance by his masterly defense of prohibition, at Danville, last Spring. We are sincerely obliged to him for this favor; and if our finances were such as to enable us to make a more suitable acknowledgment for it, we would. The friends of Temperance in Indiana must, however, labor for the cause—the cause only; for, as yet, other things command the dimes.

PUTNAM'S MONTHLY: The July number of this Magazine is before us, full as usual of the instructing and entertaining. The Putnam's know how to meet the demands of the times; and take the tide in the affairs of men at the flood, that leads to cash, and fame. It is full of solid reading matter of a high order, and deserves to be sustained. The present issue contains a promise of further developements on the Bourbon question, in the next. This cannot fail to commend it to public favor; for it certainly will require something more than the affidavit of an old superstitious squaw, under the control of bribed Jesuitical Priests, to overthrow the array of facts already adduced by Mr. Hanson.

It can be had at Cox & Mathes' Bookstore, which has just been replenished with a new and beautiful stock.

FUGITIVE-STAVE CASE.—The case of Freeman is continued for the taking of testimony—both parties having asked further time, Meanwhile, the prisoner is shut up in jail. He has been forced to hire a guard, at an expense of three dollars per day, to watch himself, or submit to the necessity of being removed, whither he knew not, for safe keeping. Such is justice in "the land of the free and the home of the brave."

Indiana Female Seminary.

This institution closed its first year on last Thursday evening. Through the kindness of Professor Knepfler we were enabled to be present during the last afternoon's examination, and must say that we were not only pleased but highly delighted with all we saw and heard.—

There was a goodly attendance of the pupils; but not so many of the citizens as we should have been pleased to see present. Not only the scholars but their parents should feel deeply interested in such institutions; and their presence at the annual examination is not the least evidence of such interest. When the minds of the young people of both sexes shall be regarded as the real wealth—the noblest possession of our State, we shall then be in the path of progress, and near a glorious epoch in our history. When every other pursuit in life shall become a matter of secondary importance, and this, the leading idea—the all-absorbing aim of our people, the State will "arise and shine, her light being come, and the glory of the Lord arisen upon her."

When we entered the hall, the venerable President of the Institution, C. G. McLean, D. D., was engaged in examining a class in anatomy and physiology, and we must have lost all love for these beautiful sciences had we not been interested in the examination. He had just called their attention to the principle of vitality, and the simple, clear, and beautiful method in which he presented that most interesting topic to their young minds, excited in us the highest admiration for the attainments of the man. He entered into no abstruse questions in the consideration of which the mere physiologist often loses his reckoning, and wanders in the mists of uncertainty and doubt; but, basing his deductions on the truths of the Bible, as understood by the liberal minded, he gave his hearers an outline view of the subject that will serve them as a basis for further and more minute investigations during their future lives. He then passed generally over the subjects of digestion, secretion, and other functions, animal and intellectual, all of which seemed well understood by the class. It may be objected, that facts treated in this examination as ultimate facts are not always so; but what would be gained by going beyond facts comprehensible by the young mind to such as are incomprehensible even to the more mature? It may be said, too, that science should never become dogmatical, and especially physical science; and that when it is founded on the Mosaic account of the creation and its results, it necessarily, to a certain extent, becomes so. But we have no doubt of the most perfect harmony between the science of the Bible and the science of Nature, when both are understood aright. Nor are we disposed to censure the President for impressing the idea of this harmony upon his pupils; but to laud him rather, because it harmonizes with our own belief and wishes.

When this examination was concluded, Professor Knepfler enlivened the audience by a piece on the piano, which he executed in his own masterly manner. The institution is happy in having such a teacher; for after hearing Strackosch and other masters of the art, we must say that he is justly entitled to rank with the first. His rise in our city has been gradual, but has now reached the point of complete success. This was more difficult in his case than in that of others more inclined to push their pretensions before the public than he.—Unassuming and modest almost to a fault, he has continually avoided every thing like puffing—trusting, as all true merit ever trusts, to the slow, difficult, but certain triumph of the true over the false, the real over the seeming. He was not mistaken in his trust; and now a long bright path of usefulness among us is before him. We know he will walk in it with honor.

The pieces of music executed by the scholars were well done, and the voices and singing much better than half the voices and singing of those who tax our city for the pleasure of hearing them.

The method of giving each pupil a Certificate of character publicly, at the end of each year, exhibiting the number of credits and censures she has received during the year, for the manner in which she has complied with the rules of the institution, struck us as peculiarly well calculated to secure obedience, and especially of the older scholars, who, knowing the fact, will not fail to strive earnestly to avoid every cause of censure. Each day is literally made a critic on the past by this method; and every stimulus that can operate on an honorable and pure mind brought directly to bear on the young ladies of this institution.

Specimens in composition and drawing were given, highly creditable to the authors, and their teachers; and exhibtting great facility and diversity of style in both departments.

Give our female colleges proper patronage—let the intellectual culture of the girls receive proper attention, and legislators need give themselves no trouble concerning woman's rights. They will have a better and higher guarantee in the just esteem of society whose tastes and sentiments they will create and sway by a power as resistless as fate, and as genial and benevolent as the smile of the Creator—the power of woman's love.

Cruelty.

In passing along the street the other morning, we saw a boy standing at the crossing of two streets with a long cane fishing rod, with which ever and anon he struck at the swallows as they passed over his head. One he killed outright; and this wicked success stimulated his cruelty, and urged him to pursue his victims with greater eagerness than ever. The little Nero seemed to have, as indeed, he could have had, no other reason for this cruel sport, than merely the gratification of his desire to kill. If the boy be father of the man, what has society to expect from such accessions to its numbers? The dispositions of his early years promise only a selfish, heartless victimizer. Thus trained, it will be impossible for him, when his habits shall have stiffened into manhood, to feel the moral force of the golden rule:—"Whatsoever ye would that men should do unto you, do you even so unto them." It is from such that the heartless speculator, the infamous liquor vendor, and the cold and malicious murderer are raised up. The boy who has no heart to feel for the sufferings of a little innocent bird, whose life never harmed him, and whose death brings him no advantge will not be likely, when he becomes a man, to feel more for his fellow men,—and especially when they, like himself, are struggling for the same end by the same means. Parents should look to these things, and bring their children up in the way they should go; and when they get old they will not depart from it. Little boys, too, should think of better things.—Kindness is both more amiable and profitable than unkindness—love, than hatred—mercy, than wrath.

PAR NOBILE FRATRUM.—It was necessary to our purpose, a few weeks ago, to mention the name of Wm. C. Vanblaricum, as a mere incident to our main object. In any other sense we should not have thought of referring to him at all.—He could never, in any just estimate, constitute a principal figure in any sheet except the State Sentinel. Its editor, however, selects him as a suitable mouth-piece, and we have no objection that such a man should speak through such a trumpet.—Mr. Vanblaricum is a worthy associate for the Editor of the Sentinel, and a suitable correspondent for that organ. It is not likely that either will suffer for keeping bad company so long as found thus—vis a vis—each the mirror in which the other beholds his own peculiar traits.

THE ELOQUENCE OF A TEAR.—This tale is received, and will be duly attended to at the earliest time possible. We are glad that our friends who can write, are waking up at last. For nine long months our path has been alone, save when the gifted Muse of Mount Carmel has cheered us with her unbought and beautiful strains. Welcome have they been to our heart; for they have made glad our loneliness. Now that other voices cheer us onward we do not wish that she should forget us. If all who can will write our duty will become both easy and delightful.

Whatever pretext we may assign for our afflictions, it is often only interest or vanity which causes them.

Local Items.

DISGRACEFUL.—We saw a man laying on his back in front of W. J. Wallace's store, on Washington street, the other evening. He had been felled by a blow from one of his companions, and so severe was the concussion that he laid motionless while we walked from Market to Washington street. The ruffian who knocked him down, deeming he had killed him, fled as fast as his locomotive powers could bear him away from the scene. At length he came to, and was helped up, bleeding and disfigured by the brutal violence of his friend.(?) Quite a crowd gathered around him to assist him, and expressed in strong terms their just sense of the wrong done by the assailant. Among this crowd was the Whisky Fiend, who had caused it all, —a huge, black, greasy, ill-visaged, brutal specimen of the class. This burly villain, no doubt, would talk of rights if the officers of justice would bring him to account for his crimes; and might, perhaps, deliver a lecture, like his file-leader, on moral suasion. We really are at a loss to determine which best deserves a place in the asylum of criminals—the soundrel that violates the law, or the officer that wilfully overlooks his transgressions.

FATAL ACCIDENT.—We are just informed that a man was thrown off his horse into White river, last Thursday night, and drowned. Whisky is thought to have been the cause of the accident. Of course, the "Saloon men" of our city have another murder upon their souls. We have not learned the name of the victim. He is said to have been a German. Tbe people ef Marion County will pay the costs of an inquest in the case without grumbling, while the villain that made it, will count his gains.

WOMAN WHIPPING BY A UNITED STATES ARMY OFFICER!—We had supposed that so disgusting, inhuman and brutal a relic of barbarism as the public flogging of woman was practised only by the Haynaus of the old world; but the record of the proceedings of a court martial in the United States army, recently convened in New Mexico, has undeceived us. It appears that Brevet Captain George Sykes was tried recently on a charge of cropping the hair and publicly whipping two Mexican women, the sentence being executed by his guard. He pleaded not guilty.—The court martial found him not guilty in in one case, and in the other they found that the fact was proven, but that they attached no criminality thereto, and honorably acquitted him! This decision was disapproved by Colonel Sumner, who very properly administered a sharp rebuke to the court, and all others who would inflict unnatural punishment upon the helpless. We sincerely hope that there will be a more full and just investigation of this outrage, and that if the fact of the flogging is proved, the offender will he promptly dismissed from the army.—Boston Journal.

MISSISSIPPI AND ALABAMA.—These two great States are now fully embarked in a war against the liquor traffic. Their leading men and politicians have taken the work in hand with a determination to conquer, and conquer they will. It is too late in the day to cry out fanaticism, when such men stand forth boldly in denunciation of the accursed system. Many a noble intellect has been shattered and broken forever by the demon of intemperance in these States. The blood of many a talented son of Mississippi and Alabama now cries aloud from the dust and clamors for juatice. Some of your giants in intellect are now in chains, led captive by the enemy at his will, but the day of emancipation approaches. Loud and clear rings the tocsin of alarm over these States, the gathering hosts are buckling on their armor and flashing their bright blades.—They may not succeed wholly in crushing the monster this year, but the war has actually begun and we now can write its final history; for, just so sure as there is a God in heaven who favors right and truth, just so sure will they triumph. Write it down that the reign of whisky editors and whisky politicians is passing away. They must and they will go down before the gathering storm that is now sweeping over the land.—Southern Organ.

THE RULE OF THREE: If Wm. J. have lost his character for truth, and employ Wm. C., who never had any, to speak for him, how long will it take him to lose, by such a course, his character for discretion also? Quem Deus vult perdere, prius dementat—we guess.

Answer in the next.

Correspondence.

For the Temperance Chart.

THE BIRTHNIGHT BALL: or the First Cup of Wine.

BY REV. WM. W. CURRY.

The evening had deepened into night, the stars had come forth in beauty, and were shedding their silver light over the earth, and still the young man sat beside his table. Abstracted in thought, that from the varying shades of his countenance, seemed both pleasing and sad, he had long been unconscious of passing events. But arousing at length, and glancing hastily, at his watch, he exclaimed, "So late! I would not be the last to greet her to night, and yet"——. The sentence was unfinished. Throwing his cloak over his shoulders, he passed into the street.

It was a lovely night. The soft breath of summer yet lingered on the lap of a September breeze, and imparted a glow to his spirits, as he briskly made his way towards the stately mansion of Col. Lynn, from which proceeded streams of light and strains of music, indicating a scene of festivity.

And so indeed it was. It was the eighteenth birth night, of the beautiful Mary, the only child of the wealthy and doating father, and this assembly was in honor of that event.

"Hast thou come at last, laggart!" cried the marry girl, as soon as Mayfield made his appearance before her, "Thou has forgotten thine allegience, and for penance shalt drink to me from this cup, on thy knee."

"Nay, Mary," replied he, "I had not forgotten you, for that were impossible; and you must remit my penance, as you know I never drink."

"Not drink when I command you! am I not Queen of the evening, and dare any of my subjects disobey me? Here!"—and in the same vein of pleasantry she held out to him a glass of sparkling wine.

"I must beg," he began, but she interrupted him with—

"You must drink this as you value my favor."

Seeing her determined, while others called on him to yield, he took the glass, and dropping on his knee, pledged,

"May thy life be as pure, calm, and bright as the stars which now shine in heaven!"

"Well done, sir," said she, extending her hand, which he pressed to his lips, "you may now rise, and pay your devotions to others."

"You queen it bravely, my daughter," said Col. Lynn, who witnessed this scene, "but beware you do not stretch your authority too far."

"No fear, father," replied she in the same gay tone, "for Mr. Mayfield is a faithful subject."

And truly was he so. And well did she know that her power over him was not confined to a public assembly, or a birthnight ball.

In all that brilliant assembly of fair maidens, none shone superior to Mary Lynn. She was the centre of attraction, not less by her beauty and merit, than by her social position. And of all the gallant train by whom she was surrounded, on none did she smile more sweetly than on the accomplished William Mayfield. It was a gay scene, and with music and dancing is was protracted far into the night. Never was Mayfield more happy in his flashes of wit and sentiment, or more attractive to Mary, than on this occasion.—And when, with many a heartfelt wish for the future happiness of their friend, the company separated, the incident of Mayfield's trespass on his resolution, never to drink of the wine cup, had passed from all minds.

Well would it have been for him had its effects also ceased. But it was not so.—Years elapsed before its ultimate results were developed. So closely is interwoven the chain of human destiny, that every link is dependent on another, and those which at the time appear unimportant, are often those on which depend the most momentous consequences. So was it in this instance.

A few weeks after the events narrated, professional business called Mayfield to the residence of Mr. White, a wealthy farmer in the neighborhood, where wine was offered him. At first he refused to partake, but being urgently solicited, finally yielded. The resolution had been broken, and it was not now so easy to resist solicitation as before. And so it continued. Occasions multiplied on which he was called to yield to the persuasions of friends, until the palate became accustomed to it, and that which was at first taken merely to satisfy others, was eventually taken to satisfy self.

On her next birthday Mary Lynn was led to the altar, as the bride of William Mayfield. Never were lovers united under more apparently propitious circumstances. Col. Lynn was rejoiced to commit the happiness of his daughter to the keeping of one he deemed so worthy. Possessing ample fortune, and rapidly mounting to fame in his profession, while he bore an untarnished name, there seemed no more for heart to wish. And it was with a light heart that the health of the bride was pledged by the happy bridegroom.

Years rolled on and Mayfield stood in the front rank of his profession. The trumpet of fame had wafted his name beyond the bounds of his native village, and distant clients sought his services, in cases that required superior mental abilities, and legal attainments. At length he determined to remove to the city, that he might have a wider field for the exercise of his energies. B—— was chosen as the place of his future residence, where he soon attained a standing equal to the most exalted. Thus, every prospect appeared propitious. Happy in both social and domestic relations, no cloud of evil was visible to mar the gorgeous panorama of bliss painted by the pencil of fancy.

But earthly prosperity is oft transitory and illusory. So was it in this instance. For the habit of using wine had grown with years, until the stimulus it afforded was not sufficient, and stronger drinks were substituted. Gradually yet steadily the appetite was formed, yet was its victim all unconscious of its power. Although he habitually used ardent spirits, none deemed the talented Mayfield, whose attention to business was proverbial, and whose habits regarded as unexceptionable, was standing on the brink of a precipice, over which he was soon to be hurled to ruin. Nor was any one more unsuspecting than he. Trusting in the strength of his judgmont, he continued to tamper with the foe, forgetting that every act of indulgence weakened his powers of reistance.

Ten years had elapsed since his marriage, and four since his removal to the city, when he was called on by a gentleman, and engaged in a heavy suit then depending. Days and nights were devoted to the case, until it was fully mastered, and every precaution taken to secure success, of which he felt confident. This was to be the most important suit of the session, and its termination looked to with great interest.

On the day before that set for the trial, Mayfield was invited to spend the evening with a number of his brother lawyers and others, at an oyster supper, to which he gave his consent. True to his promise, at the appointed time he met the company at the Belvidere. Mirth and jollity reigned supreme during the evening. Liquors of the choicest brands disappeared with incredible rapidity. And night had nearly given place to morning when the sounds of revelry ceased—not by the voluntary withdrawal of the revellers, but by the overpowering force of alcohol, which had locked their senses in the embrace of stupefaction. They were put to bed by the proprietor of the house, and it was noon of the next day when Mayfield awoke to consciousness. And that return was accompanied with a most intense pain of the head, and dizziness, which rendered it impossible to quit his bed. And then came also the thought of his family, his business, and the disgraceful scene in which he had taken part. These thoughts racked his mind with torment, and with the physical effects of his debauch, produced a violent fever, which prostrated him for weeks.

From this time his course was downward. The loss of so important a suit by drunkenness deprived him of the confidence he had hitherto enjoyed. His energy seemed to have deserted him, and he rushed headlong down the steeps of intemperance, vainly striving to drown his sorrows in the bowl. His splendid visions of future glory and happiness faded away, "like the baseless fabric of a vision." His property was squandered, his health destroyed, and his name outcast from those circles, where he was once an honored guest. And in twelve years from the time she was led to the altar a blooming and happy bride, the wretched wife beheld the corpse of her husband brought to her presence, foul and gory, as he had miserably perished in a pothouse broil!

The broken-hearted Mary gathered enough from the wreck of his splendid fortune to take herself and little ones to the home of her youth. But, oh! how different her return and her departure. She was kindly received by her aged father, on whom the ruin of one he had so trusted, and on whose arm he had hoped to lean in the evening of life, had fallen with a crushing weight. And there, in seclusion from the world, did she devote her life to the instruction of her offspring, not forgetting to warn them, by the relation of her own sad history of the danger which lurks in the first cup of wine, even when partaken at a birthnight ball.

Columbus, Ind.

We take great pleasure in publishing the following from the State Sentinel. It furnishes a double contrast—the one it describes—and the one between the present and past of the Sentinel. Our friend Brown will soon be in for the Maine Law. Times are improving.

"THE CONTRAST.—On last Wednesday, there was a very large collection of people assembled in this city to attend the exhibition of the Menagerie. It is true, there were on the streets two or three drunken men, affording prima facie evidence that the Temperance Law is not as strictly enforced as it ought to be; but compared with what would have been witnessed at any such a collection of people fifteen or twenty years ago, it was an orderly, sober, and well-behaved assembly. We have often witnessed, in a much smaller crowd, hundreds of persons in a state of intoxication. The signs are cheering to the friends of reform. Intemperance is yielding before that mighty lever—public opinion.

The friends of temperance, however, are too eager and impatient for the consummation of their great mission. They expect to accomplish, in a year, that which will require half a century. Fashion must yield to sober reason. Judgment, religion, and law must all join in the work. Law must travel hand in hand with public sentiment. Moral suasion must first reform the minds, and correct the prejudices of the masses, before laws can be enforced. The bitter denunciations of temperance lecturers, and temperance editors, against "rum-sellers," never rolled forward the ball of reform one inch. When threatened, free-born Americans will often do wrong from mere perverseness, to show their independence, and that they are free to act and think for themselves. Missionaries tell us, that one great obstacle to the conversion of the heathen man is, the doctrine that it is wrong to have more wives than one. This strikes, at once, at all his notions of domestic felicity—his education, and the habits and manners of his ancestors. He thinks it is invading his social rights and domestic happiness. It requires a long series of training, by the mildest and gentlest means, to change his early prejudices and preconceived opinions. Civilized man, after all, has a great many streaks of the savage about him.—He can be led much easier than he can be driven. It must be recollected, that fifty years ago, the decanter was the emblem of refinement and hospitality. These prejudices must be removed by degrees. The oak, which defies the fury of the storm, falls before successive blows from the feeble arm of the ax-man.

"In this land of light and intelligence, where women, in all the circles of society, exercise a controling influence, they can do more, by their kind and endearing manners, to roll back the tide of intemperance, than all the noisy, blustering orators from Maine to Oregon. It is a high and holy mission, and one which they can execute with judgment and skill. Their happiness and their hopes are all bound up in the sobriety of their husbands and their sons. We bid them God speed in the work.

"On the 17th inst., Patrick Fitzgerald was executed in New York for the murder of his wife. O'Brien is under a similar sentence for the same crime, at Fall River, Mass.; and Daniel T. Woodward, at Washington City; and Tom Neary, in New York. All these men murdered their wives in a state of intoxication.—Several criminals are now in the New York prison awaiting their trials, for similar offences. All these cases call loudly for the renovating hand of reform.

"The only question is, how the evil is to be avoided? The Maine-liquor-law man lays down his platform, and denounces all who do not march up and plant themselves on that and no other system. He who advocates moral suasion and gentler and milder means, is denounced as an enemy worse than the liquor-seller himself. This begets bad feelings, and engenders strife, which brings the car of reform to a dead stand. It is beastly to get drunk, and those who cannot drink without making beasts of themselves ought to abstain entirely. If they cannot refrain, then the next best thing they can do is, to kill themselves as soon as possible, and make themselves, by that means, a beacon to warn others. In that way they may do some good to the rising generation. In conclusion, we say that it is the duty of every man to inculcate the principles of sobriety and temperance into the minds of his children, and by precept and example teach them the deleterious effects of intemperance. Women should join in the work. Crazy temperance men should not abuse their neighbors, who do not walk up and indorse every plank in their platform. This is our creed. We shall teach it to our children, and impress its importance on their minds. It is much easier to raise children to be sober and temperate, than to reform the confirmed inebriate."

Art Models.

The three thousand artists who reside at Rome require, of course, a large number of living models for the purpose of art. Grace Greenwood, in a recent letter, amusingly describes a group of these models competing for employment. She says:

"I am a good deal interested and amused by the professional models, who 'most do congregate' on the great flight of steps leading up to the Trinta di Monri from the Piazza di Spagna. There are often to be seen picturesque and varied groups, and single figures of striking character.—Handsome peasant women with charming brown babies—wild, long-haired youths from the mountains—raven-bearded young men and snowy-headed old men—the coquettish girls, with flashing eye and dashing costumes. There is one grand looking old man, with a bounteous white beard, who is said to do a great business in the saintly and patriarchal line. He is a multitudinous Moses, an inexhaustible St. Joseph, and the pictorial stock Peter, of many seasons. There is also a powerful handsome, dark, and terrible looking fellow, who does the brigand and the bravo.

"These various candidates for artistic favor seem to have the most social and agreeable relation with each other. Indeed, I have remarked the patriarch chatting and laughing with the brigand in a familiar manner scarcely in keeping with character. But let an artist or two ascend the steps, and presto, the dark-eyed young girls cease their idle gossip and spring into position—look archly or mournfully over the right shouider, or, with clasped hands, modestly contemplate the pavement, the pretty peasant woman snatches up the baby she left to creep about at its own sweet will, and bends over it tenderly and Madonna-like, while, at a word from her, a skin-clad little shepherd boy drops his game of pitch-penny, and takes up his role of St. John. Perhaps a dark, dignified, but somewhat rheumatic old woman, with her head wrapped up in a brown cloth, makes a modest venture of herself as St. Anna, while the fine old man I have described makes the comparatively unimportant character of St. Joseph, or, separating himself entirely from the group, looks authoritatively as Moses, or inspired as Isaiah, or resolute as Peter.

"The handsome bravo or brigand gives a fiercer twist of his moustache, slouches his pointed black hat, appears to be concealing a dagger under his brown cloak, or on the point of drawing an imaginary pistol from his belt—sets his teeth, scowls, and cultivates the diabolical generally in attitude and expression. It is altogether a very amusing and skillful piece of canvassing.

"Though nine years have rolled by, and brought revolutions and a few other little changes in Rome, since Dickens spent a winter here, yet these steps are precisely what he pictures them. Indeed, I believe that our friends—the patriarch and the brigand—are the identical personages whose portraits stand out so livingly in his grotesque but exquisite description."

☞ The trial of Miss Wheeler, for shooting her seducer, in the streets of Milwaukie, in October last, is now in progress at that place. The fact of the shooting is not denied, but her counsel puts the plea of MORAL INSANITY. We think the shooting of such a heartless wretch, under the circumstances, was an evidence of her sanity. If every victim of the accomplished libertine would do the same thing, and juries justify the act by acquitting, seduction would become a game too hazardous for the venture of such moral cowards.

Moral Reflections, Sentences, and Maxims.

The generality of men expose themselves in battle sufficiently to save their honor, but few are on all occasions willing to expose themselves as much as is necessary to insure the success of the enterprise for which they expose themselves.

Vanity, shame, and above all temperament. are often the causes of courage in men, and of virtue in women.

We are unwilling to lose our lives, and we wish to acquire glory. This is the cause of brave men having more tact and ability in avoiding death. than intriguing people have in preserving their fortunes.

There are very few persons who, in the first decline of life, do not let us see the points in which their bodies and minds will fail.

In the intercourse of our life we more often please by our faults than our good qualities.

A man may be ungrateful, and yet less blamable for his ingratitude than him who conferred the favor.

It is not all who fulfil the duties of gratitude who can on that account flatter themselves that they are grateful.

Too great eagerness to requite an obligation is a species of ingratitude.

Men more easily set bounds to their gratitude than to their hopes or their desires.

Pride does not like to owe, and self-love does not like to pay.

The good that we have received from any man sbould make us respect the evil that he does us.

Nothing is so contagious as example; and we never do any great good or great evil which does not produce its like. We imitate good actions from emulation, and bad ones from the depravity of our nature, which shame would keep prisoner, and example sets at liberty.

THE TOMB OF DANIEL THE PROPHET.—A letter from Persia, mentioned in the Boston Chronicle, states, that in the course of works on the line between Persia and Turkey, the commissioners have come upon the remains of the ancient palace Shushan, mentioned in the Sacred Books of Esther and Daniel, together with the tomb of Daniel the Prophet. The reader can turn to Esther, and there he will read of a "pavement of red, and blue, and white, and black marble" in that palace. The pavement still exists, and in the marble columns, dilapidated ruins, the sculpture, and the remaining marks of greatness and glory that are scattered around, the commissioners read the exact truth of the record made by the sacred penman. Not far from the palace stands a tomb; on it is sculptured the figure of a man bound hand and foot, with a huge lion in the act of springing upon him to devour him.

THE STATE OF FRANKLIN.—It is not generally known that, in 1784, the western portion of North Carolina seceded from the eastern, forming a new State called Franklin. Dr. J. G. M. Ramsey, who has recently published an interesting history of the State of Tennessee, has substantiated the fact. The State of Franklin maintained a separate existence for nearly four years. It afterwards, with other territory, became the present State of Tennessee.

WASHINGTON CITY, D. C.—On the question of license or no license, on Monday last, a heavier vote than ever before was cast, resulted in the defeat of the license ticket. Well done, friends of temperance at the capital of the nation. The moral influence of this vote cannot fail to do good everywhere.

Acknowledgments.

Lyman Beecher, D. S. of T., Evansville, $15.00; W. B. Gray, Lewisville, Ind., $6.00; J. West, Greensboro, $12.00; Mrs. H. Breed, Toledo, Ohio, 75c.; Mrs. Mary Harter, Crawfordsville, 75c.; Jno. Hicks, Pleasant Spring, $1,50; G. W. Boner, Americus, $4.50; T. R. Brown, Lafayette, $6.00; W. Hankins, Brandywine, $4.00; A. F. Glossbrenner, Jeffersonville, $5.25; M. Baker, Monroe, $6,00; J. Donnevan, Indianapolis, $20.60, W. Polen, at Azalia, $16.00.

CONSTITUTION AND BY-LAW'S,

WE are still prepared to print Constitution and By-Laws, where the alterations are few from the copy recommended by the Grand Division, at the following rates:

100 copies, (or less)	$5 00
200 "	8 00
300 "	10 00

We will pay the postage on all ordered from us.

☞ All orders accompanied by the cash, will be promptly attended to.

Address, JOHN H. OHR,
Indianapolis, Indiana.

CHARTERS.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR A DIVISION S. OF T.

(Date.)

The undersigned inhabitants of ——, believing the Order of the Sons of Temperance to be well calculated to extend the blessings of total abstinence, and promote the general welfare of mankind, respectfully petition the Grand Division of the —— of ——, to grant them a Charter to open a new Division, to be called the —— Division, No. —, Sons of Temperance, of the —— of ——, to be located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves, individually and collectively, to be governed by the rules and usages of said Grand Division, and also, by those of the National Division.

Enclosed is the Charter Fee, $5 00. Books, $2 00.

This must be signed by at least eight persons of good character and standing in community, and sent to C. WOODWARD, G. S., Indianapolis, Ind, free of postage.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR A TEMPLE.

(Date.)

The undersigned, believing the Temple of Honor to be well calculated to cement more firmly our fraternal relations, and add to the general prosperity of the cause of Temperance, respectfully petition the Grand Temple of the —— of ——, to grant them a Charter to open a new Temple, to be called the —— Temple of Honor, No. —, of the —— of ——, to be located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves individually and collectively, to be governed by the rules and usages of the Grand Temple, and also by those of the Order at large.

Enclosed is the Charter Fee, $20 00.

To be directed to the G. W. R., free of postage.

This must be signed by at least twenty persons of good standing, and if not known to the G. W. T. or G. W. R., must send satisfactory references.

J. H. OHR, G. W. R.

Indianapolis, Ind.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR CADETS OF TEMPERANCE.

The undersigned, boys of ——, believing the Order of Cadets of Temperance to be well calculated to extend the blessings of total abstinence, and promote the general welfare of mankind, respectfully petition the Grand Section of the State of Indiana, to grant them a charter to open a new Section, to be called the —— Section, No. ——, Cadets of Temperance, of the State of Indiana, to be located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves, individually and collectively to be governed by the rules and usages of said Grand Section, and also those of the acting Head of the Order.

Enclosed is the fee for Charter, R. B.'s and officers' cards, $5 00.

It must also be stated whether the applicants are members of the Order or not; if they are, of what Section. The application to be directed to the Grand Secretary, free of postage.

It must also be certified by a W. P. or P. W. P, that the W. Patron elect is a Son of Temperance in good standing.

Address (post paid) HENRY OHR, G. S., C. o T., Indianapolis, Indiana.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR DAUGHTERS OF TEMPERANCE.

(Date.)

The undersigned, inhabitants of ——, believing the Order of the Daughters of Temperance to be well calculated to extend the blessings of Total Abstinence, and promote the general welfare of mankind, respectfully petition the Grand Union to grant them a charter to open a new Union to be called the —— Union, No. —, D. of T., of the State of Indiana, located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves, individually and collectively, to be governed by the rules and usages of said Grand Union.

Enclosed is the Charter Fee, $5 00.

The above must be signed by at least eleven females, of proper age and good standing in community.

Address (post paid,) Mrs. ELIZA RICHMOND, G. S. S., Indianapolis, Indiana.

New Watch and Jewelry Store.

No 1, Bates House, Washington Street,

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

WE have now open the largest and best assortment of fine Watches and rich Jewelry ever offered in this city, to which we invite the examination of the public.

Our stock is all new—selected with great care, and comprises Watches, Diamond Work, Chains, Pins, Rings, Pencils, Lockets, of all kinds; Silver Ware, Clocks, Perfumery, Brushes, Soaps, Plated Ware, Castors, Fruit Baskets, &c., which we will sell for CASH at New York prices. Mr. E. W. NEFF, of this city, has taken charge of the Watch repairing department, and will spare no pains to give satisfaction to our customers.

july 6-tf E J. BALDWIN & CO.

D. CRAIGHEAD. R. BROWNING.

CRAIGHEAD & BROWNING,

Dealers in all kinds of

Drugs, Medicines, Surgical Instruments, Paints, Oils, Chemicals, Varnishes, Dye Stuffs, Glassware Window Glass, Brushes, Cosmetics, Spices, Cigars, Tobacco, Perfumery, &c.,

WASHINGTON STREET,

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

ALL are respectfully invited to call and examine our stock and prices, as we feel confident we can render satisfaction both as to prices and quality of articles. Great care is taken in the selection of articles, in reference to their purity, as we endeavor at all times to keep such articles as are strictly pure and genuine. Every article will be waranted as represented. Orders from Physicians and others promptly attended to. Particular attention given to filling Prescriptions and compounding Medicines, which, in all cases, shall receive the personal attention of one of the firm. june 30

HANNAMAN & DUZAN,

DEALERS IN

DRUGS AND MEDICINES,

Surgical Instruments, Paints, Oils, Varnishes, Dye Woods, Medical and Window Glass, Brushes, Perfumery, Soaps, &c.

Washington, 3 doors west of Pennsylvania St.,

june 30 1y INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

W. W. ROBERTS,

Druggist and Apothecary.

Wholesale and Retail Dealer in

DRUGS, MEDICINES, PAINTS, OILS, AND DYE STUFFS, BRUSHES, FANCY GOODS, AMERICAN AND FRENCH WINDOW GLASS, &c.

WASHINGTON ST., INDIANAPOLIS.

Physicians, Country Merchants, and the people generally, are invited to examine his stock, which will be sold at the lowest cash price.

☞ QUALITY WARRANTED TO SUIT. ☜

june 22 4m

COMMERCIAL COLLEGE,

(Late Commercial Institute,)

Of Indianapolis,

Established March 31, 1851.

INCORPORATED, 1853.

W. McK. SCOTT, A. M., Founder and President.

JAMES C. HAYDEN, (Late Professor in Bacon's Mercantile College, Cincinnati.)

PROF. OF BOOK-KEEPING ANL PENMANSHIP.

THE Session will commence at College Hall as follows:

1st Session on the first Monday of September.
2d Session on the 1st Monday of November.
3d Session on the 1st Monday of January.
4th Session on the 1st Monday of March.
5th Session on the 1st Monday of May.

Having secured, permanently, the services of the distinguished Professor above named, and leased for a term of years the commodious and beautiful Hall formerly known as CONCERT HALL, but now named COLLEGE HALL, which is to be fitted up in a style of great elegance, taste, and convenience, the President would say, that this College now offers advantages superior to all others, for imparting a sound, thorough, and accomplished business education

COURSE OF STUDIES.

The Course of Studies, as enlarged, will be as follows, viz:

1 Book-Keeping, by Single and Double Entry, in all its various branches, and its application to all kinds of business.
2. The Laws, Customs, and Usages of Trade and Commerce.
3. Mercantile Arithmetic, upon the short and easy system of cancelation, (taught in no other College.)
4. Commercial Law, in a series of Lectures, thorough and systematic.
5. Business Penmanship.
6. Commercial Correspondence.
7. Lectures upon Banking, Political Economy, and other subjects valusble to the business man.

EXPENSES.

Cards of Admission, invariably in advance, or secured, $25; Diplomas $3; Stationery $5; Boarding $2 50 per week; incidentals, at option of student, $15. Making entire expenses about $75.

On application, a Catalogue will be furnished, giving full particulars.

All letters will receive prompt attention on being directed, post-paid, to

june 8 W. McK. SCOTT, President.

"God never made his works for man to mend." DR. FRANKLIN.

KIER'S ROCK OIL.

A NEW AND MOST IMPORTANT REMEDY FOR DISEASE.

DISCOVERED IN 1849.

IS drawn from a deep well near Pittsburgh—has been used with remarkable success in Ohio and Pennsylvania, and more Eastern States—and is now working its way West. An opportunity is now offered to the Afflicted for testing it. Where known and tried, it at once makes firm friends, and cures which are eloquent in its praise. Certificates of its power to heal are at hand—but we know well, reader, that such evidence, to have weight with you, now-a-days, must be in your own neighborhood—You have only to try the Oil to be satisfied—it will SPEAK FOR ITSELF.

We have no war with the legion of Nostrums and Specifics of the day—we know but little about them—some say they are good for nothing. However that may be, the

Petroleum

will not be suppressed and kept back by reason of the above nostrums—duty and inclination both forbid it.

Those who are afflicted, are respectfully invited to get a Circular and look over the Directions for

Ague, Rheumatism, Piles, Diarrhœa, Flux, Tooth Ache, Burns, Worms, Scrofula, Coughs, Bronchitis, Croup, Old Sores, Cholera Morbus, Contractions of the Limbs and Joints, Sore Eyes, Blindness, Costiveness, Dyspepsia, and other Diseases.

By that time you may say, "it cures too much." But recollect it is not a HUMAN INVENTION, but compounded by Nature's master hand—and Nature does not do her work by halves.

The Oil is used both internally and externally.

As AGUE, SORE EYES, PILES, RHEUMATISM, and SCROFULA are so common in many parts of the West, we are constrained to say, that while this Oil will cure and relieve other diseases, it has been and is constantly used with most complete success in these cases.

☞ Price 50 cents per Bottle (half pint.)

Beware of all Rock Oil preparations, as some persons are offering a spurious article. Look for S. M. KIER'S name written on the label of the bottle.

For sale by the Druggists throughout Indiana, and by TOMLINSON BROTHERS, J P. POPE & Co., S. ROSENGARTEN, WM. TILLEY, and at wholesale by W. W. ROBERTS, Indianapolis, Indiana.

R. M. LYON, Fort Wayne,

may25 10w Proprietor in the Western States.

SOMETHING NEW.

LATHROP & STEVENS, Wholesale and Retail Dealers in BOOTS AND SHOES, at the West room in the Bates House, Washington Street, Indianapolis.

We are now opening a new and splendid stock of Boots and Shoes of every variety and style, which we are receiving direct from the manufacturers.—We design to keep constantly on hand a good assortment of the best quality of goods manufactured, which we can warrant to give satisfaction to all who may give them a trial. We will sell by the case, dozen, or single pair, at low prices for cash.—Our stock consists in part of Gents' fine Cloth, silk warp, glove kid, buck, patent calf, and enameled Gaiters and Ties of every variety and style; Ladies' fine silk warp Gaiters, Buskins, Ties, Slippers and Boots; Misses' ditto; Men's calf, goat, kip, and thick Boots and Brogans; Boys' and Youths' ditto; assorted Ladies, kid, goat and calf Boots and Buskins; Misses' ditto. Also every variety of Children's Shoes. Come and see for yourselves.

LATHROP & STEVENS,

may 25 4w Indianapolis, Indiana.

TEMPERANCE INN,

Bloomington, Indiana.

J. & S. M. ORCHARD, PROPRIETORS.

TRAVELLERS will find it to their advantage to call and try the accommodation of the TEMPERANCE INN. Stage office for all the different routes, in connection with this House. may25 6m ¶

THE LATEST WONDER of the 19th CENTURY.

DR. G. W. BENNETT'S

Celebrated Eye-Balm,

A SPECIFIC FOR CHRONIC, SORE, INFLAMED, AND WEAK EYES.

Prepared only by Dr. George W. Bennett, and for sale by Merchants and Druggists generally.

THIS Balm is an excellent and certain cure for sore and inflamed Eyes, in all cases of Psoroic, Scrofulous, and Purulent Opthalmia, and what is commonly termed wild hairs in the eye-lids. It is a specific in Infantile, Purulent, and Scrofulous Inflamed, and Sore Eyes, and all in the various diseases of the Eyes, that prevail among the human family, in every climate. It will be found a sovereign remedy if properly applied.

W. W. ROBERTS, Indianapolis, Ind. General Agent for State of Indiana, to whom all orders must be addressed.

Price---Twenty-five Cents.

I warrant the above Balm to cure if the directions are strictly observed, or return the money.

june 22 4m G. W. BENNETT.

REAL ESTATE AND GENERAL AGENCY OFFICE,

INDIANAPOLIS, INDIANA.

UNDER THE CONTROL OF W. M'K. SCOTT,

Attorney & Counsellor at Law, and Notary Public.

The attention of the Agency will be devoted,

First— To the collection of debts and the payment of Taxes for non-residents in any county in the State. Also, the redemption of Lands sold for Taxes, sale, purchase or lease of Lands, purchase of adverse claims, examination and perfection of Title, &c., &c.

Second—To the prosecution of claims against the General Government, procuring Land Warrants, Patent Rights, and Pensions under the various Pension Laws, &c.

Third—All other Miscellaneous agencies as may be intrusted to the care of this office.

Fourth—The taking of Depositions and Attestation of all instruments requiring a seal

In all cases requiring an outlay of money for the benefit of individuals, the requisite funds must be transmitted in advance.

Prompt attention to all letters on business that are pre-paid. Address W. M'K. SCOTT,

Real Estate and General Agent,

jan 5-1y Indianapolis, Ind.

ADAMS & CO'S EXPRESS.

WE are now running a daily line East and West, accompanied by special messengers, and with the speed of the mails, running our own cars with the passenger trains.

Packages will be received at the cars up to the time of starting, and at our office until 1 o'clock each day.

We are prepared to transport packages, bank notes and specie, to and from any of the eastern cities, also, Louisville, Frankfort, and Lexington, Ky., St. Louis, Mo., or any points on the Ohio and Mississippi rivers; and to and from Terre Haute, and all intermediate points, and to forward freight from Terre Haute up and down the Wabash.

In addition to these, we have the most complete arrangements for transporting packages to and from California and Europe.

Exchange on England, Ireland, and Scotland, for sale, payable at any bank in the kingdom.

Foreign passage tickets; by Grinnell, Minturn & Co.'s line to Liverpool and London, constantly on hand, and for sale at the lowest rates.

Notes, drafts, and bills collected in any of the Eastern or Western cities

Orders for goods to be returned by Express, sent free. Our rates of charges have been greatly reduced, and the public will find this a safe and expeditious method of transportation.

Indianapolis, June 30, 1852. ADAMS & CO.

Office in Indianapolis in Journal Building, west side Pennsylvania Street.

Office open during business hours.

june30 1y C. WOODWARD, Agent.

The Cheapest Illustrated Paper for the Young.

PRICE ONLY TEN CENTS A YEAR, or nearly three papers for one cent, where 100 copies are taken.

Twenty-six numbers a year, and each number illustrated with from three to seven engravings.

The Youth's Penny Gazette,

A strictly Religious and Moral Paper, is published by the AMERICAN SUNDAY SCHOOL UNION and is designed to furnish the Children and Youth of the United States with reading matter, in a popular form, for the improvement of Mind and Heart.

It is published (not monthly, nor weekly, but) every other week, or twenty-six numbers in a year. It is religious but unsectarian, and the matter is carefully prepared with a view to the habits, character and prospects of American Youth

TERMS OF THE PENNY GAZETTE.

$10 a year, in advance, for 100 copies, to one address. $5 a year, in advance, for 40 copies, to one address. $3 a year, in advance, for 20 copies, to one address. Single subscriptions, 25 cents per year.

TERMS BY MAIL, POSTAGE PAID.

☞ When the postage is paid at the place of mailing, the terms are very low. For $15 remitted, we will send 100 copies of the paper for one year, to one address—we paying postage. For $7 remitted, we will send 40 copies of the paper to one address, for one year—we paying postage. For $3 50 remitted, we will send 20 copies of the paper for one year, to one address—we paying postage. Less than 20 cannot be sent at this cheap rate.

Subscriptions received at the Society's House, No. 146 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.

Feb 16 3w G. S. SCOFIELD, Agent.

TO BUILDERS.

North Western Christian University.

THE Building Committee of the Board of Directors of the North-Western Christiana University, propose contracting for the west wing of the University Building, to be put up on the University grounds in the vicinity of Indianapolis.

Sealed Proposals in detail, with prices affixed for doing the work necessary to the completion of the said Wing, will be received until the 19th day of July next, and may be handed to the undersigned, or to J. T. Cox. Secretary of the Company, at the Book Store of Cox & Mathes, in Indianapolis.

The materials and work to be according to the plan, drawings and specifications prepared by Wm. Tinsley, Architect, which may be seen and examined at his room, on the east side of Pennsylvania street, three doors north of the north-east Diagonal, in Indianapolis. The specifications have been materially changed and modified, so as to reduce the cost of the building.

Proposals for the whole combined, would be preferred; but will be received for the different parts and portions thereof separately. The whole to be completed and fit for use by the first day of September, 1854.

Payments will be made as the work progresses, at such short periods as may suit the covenience of the Contractors. Bond and security will be required for the performance of the work.

In behalf of the Building Committee:

OVID BUTLER,

President of the Board of Directors.

June 10, 1853. june 22 3w

LITTLE, DRUM & ANDERSONS

WHOLESALE DEALERS IN

STAPLE AND FANCY DRY GOODS, BOOTS, SHOES, HATS, CAPS, STATIONERY, NOTIONS, TRIMMINGS, GROCERIES, HARDWARE, QUEENSWARE, AND GLASSWARE,

North side of Washington Street,

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

WE are receiving Country Produce of all descriptions, and paying the highest market price. Dealers visiting Indianapolis are respectfully invited to call and examine our stock and prices, both for Produce and Merchandise generally. june30 tf

JAMES HALL,

MERCHANT TAILOR,

No. 2. Temperance, Hall, Indianapolis,

Manufactu'ng & Clothing Emporium,

Wholesale and Retail Dealer in Ready Made Clothing, Cloths, Cassimers, Vestings, Trimmings, Trunks, Sachels, Canes, Umbrellas, Hats, Caps, a every description of Gentlemen's Furnishing.

Also:

General Agency for the sale of GRAND AND SUBORDINATE REGALIA, EMBLEMS, COSTUMES, &C., FOR THE ORDERS OF MASONS, ODD FELLOWS, TEMPLE OF HONOR, SON, DAUGHTERS, AND CADETS OF TEMPERANCE. oct27 1y

The American Life and Health Insurance Company.

Office—No. 7, South Third St., Philadelphia.

Officers.

LEONARD JEWELL, President.
JAMES PEACOCK, Treasurer,
JOHN C. SIMS, Sec'y and Actuary.
THOS. S. SMITH, Solicitor

JOHN F. BIRD, FRED. A. FICKARDT, } Medical Examiners.

CHARLES WOODWARD, Indianapolis, Ind., General Agent for the State of Indiana.

THIS Company issues policies at Total Abstinence Rates, Joint stock Rates, and at Mutual Rates, which for $1000 on the life of a person 30 years of age, are as follows:

Age.	Total Abstinence.	Joint Stock.	Mutual
30	$15.40	$19.60	$23.60

A further table of Rates will be furnished at the Office.

The condition in Total Abstinence rates (believed to be the lowest in the Union,) is entire forfeiture upon the departure of the Insured from Total Abstinence in its strictest sense.

Policies at Joint Stock and Mutual rates, contain no condition except as usual in Life Insurance.

HEALTH INSURANCE DEPARTMENT.

All Moneys received from the Insured, for Annual Premiums, after deducting expenses, will be divided among the Sick

The Public have for some time been familiar with the subject of Life and Health Insurance, but it is obvious that too little thoughts has been given to the latter. LIFE Insurance benefits our successors, while HEALTH Insurance directly benefits ourselves. It makes provision for a time of sickness, when the products of a man's industry are cut off, and want unites with Disease to aggravate his distress. It is at this gloomy period, when he is prostrated and helpless, and when despondency would otherwise overwhelm him, that the holder of a Health Insurance Policy will realize its benefits.

RATES, under 50 years of age,

$2,00	per year,	for	$2,00	per week.
3,00	"	"	3,00	"
4,00	"	"	4,00	"
5,00	"	"	5,00	"
6,00	"	"	6,00	"

Over fifty and under sixty.

$2,50	per year,	for	$2,50	per week.
3,75	"	"	3,00	"
5,00	"	"	4,00	"
6,25	"	"	5,00	"
7,50	"	"	6,00	"

When the Fund shall amount to Three Dollars and upwards for every person insured and sufficient to warrant an additional distribution, the weekly allowances will be increased in accordance with the Rules of the Policy.

All the members of a Temple or Division insured at greatly reduced rates.

Applications for Agencies in any of the cities or towns in the State, should be made to the undersigned, post paid, or in person.

As Agent for the above Company, I am prepared to receive applications for Policies at any of the above rates.

CHARLES WOODWARD, Agent,

At ADAMS & CO.'S Express Office.

J. L. MOTHERSHEAD, Medical Examiner.

june 30 '52-1y

Ohio Life Insurance Company,

Capital $100,000.

JOINT STOCK AND MUTUAL,

CINCINNATI.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS.

Wm. Burnet, Jno. N. Ridgway, Chas. Goodman, S. Robert, E. S. Haines, Jno. M. Blair, J. W. Donohue, Eden B. Reeder, Wm. Person.

WM. BURNET, President.

S. W. REEDER, Sec'y J. W. DONOHUE, Vice Pres't

Office in Reeder's Building, Third street, between Almy's and City Bank.

This Company insures Lives at the lowest rates consistent with safety, either upon the Joint Stock or Mutual plan.

In the Joint Stock Department, premium payable quarterly, semi-annually or annually. On the Mutual plan, one-half the premium paid in Cash, the balance by a note bearing six per cent. interest—the interest only payable annually. Persons insuring on the mutual plan, participate in the profits of the Company in that department.

The undersigned having been appointed agent for the above Company, is prepared to fill applications for Life Insurance, on favorable terms.

Any information on the subject and pamphlets explaining the nature and utility of Life Insurance, furnished without charge, at the office of the Agent.

C. WOODWARD, Agent.

Office at Adam's & Co.'s Express Office, Journal Building, Pennsylvania street, Indianapolis, Ind.

june 30, '52-1y.

Railroad City Book Store.

COX & MATHES,

South side of Washington, between Illinois and Meridian streets,

INDIANAPOLIS, INDIANA.

AT wholesale and retail, Standard and Miscellaneous Works, Law, and Medical Books, School Books, Plain and Fancy Stationery. Blank Books, Wall Papers, &c., &c. mar 2

CHEAP WATCHES & JEWELRY.

Good Gold Watches at $24!

WE are now in our new Room No. 1, Palmer House, with a lot of beautiful Watches and Jewelry which we are selling lower than ever heretofore sold in Indianapolis, for instance we sell

Good 18 K Case Gold Lepines at $24.
" 18 K " " Levers at $28.
" Silver Anchor Levers $12 to $18.
" " Cylenders, $9 to $12.
" " Quarter's $6 to $10.

In addition to the above we have a fine assortment of other description of Watches all of which we will sell lower than any other firm dare sell in the place. I have in my employ a very superior Watch Repairer who will always be on on hand to do watch repairing of every description. Mr. Michot has worked in Geneva, Paris, New York and other large cities and has had great experience in his Branch of the business. All Watches warranted for one year, and the money in all cases refunded, provided they do not give entire satisfaction.

feb9 tf E. W. NEFF.

SMALL CHANGE.

THE undersigned is prepared to furnish Merchants and others with three cent pieces from the United States Mint at Philadelphia, free of transportation, in sums of 30, 60, and 90 dollars, upon deposit of Gold or Eastern Exchange. Also cents and half cents, upon payment of frieght on gold to Philadelphia, or on Eastern Exchange free of freight.

C. WOODWARD, Agent,

june 30 Adams & Co.'s Express.

A CHANCE TO MAKE MONEY.

Profitable and honorable Employment!

THE Subscriber is desirous of having an agent in each county and town of the Union. A capital of from $5 to $10 only will be required, and anything like an efficient, energetic man can make from three to five dollars per day; indeed some of the Agents now employed are realizing twice that sum. Every information will be given by addressing, (postage paid) WM. A. KINSLER,

june 15 3w ¶ Box 601, Philadelphia P. O.

THE ILLUSTRATED MAGAZINE OF ART.

THE five numbers of this Magazine which are published, place it at the head of publications of this kind No expense will be spared to make it in every respect worthy of the name, the "Illustrated Magazine of Art. The Engravings which are preparing for the future numbers are in the hands of first-class American and European Artists.

A Series of most interesting Tales will appear in it. "The School of Life," written and Illustrated by ANNA MARY, daughter of William and Mary Howitt, will shortly appear; also, "The Dead Bridal," an historical romance, illustrative of the most interesting period in the history of the Venetian Republic, by JONATHAN FREEKE SLINGSBY, of the Dublin University Magazine; contributions, too, from WILLIAM and MARY HOWITT, PERCY B. ST. JOHN, and other writers of distinction in America and Europe

The following is a brief outline of the plan of the Magazine:

I. The Historical Department will abound with picturesque representations of the most remarkable events which have occurred in this and other countries; accompanied with interesting anecdotes and details from the pen of the most eminent writers of the day. This department will contain several splendid engravings, designed by the first artists of the world, and engraved in the highest style of modern art.

II. The Men and Women of the Age. This department will consist of beautifully executed portraits of the leading characters of the age, especially of those who figure on the stage of humanity as the world's benefactors. Each portrait will be accompanied by an interesting biographical sketch

III. The Wonders of Natural History, Botany, and other sciences, will be developed in choice Engravings of Beasts, Birds, Fishes, Insects, Forest Trees, Flowers, Geological and Fossil Specimens, &c., with accompanying descriptions.

IV. The Triumphs of Architectural Art will be displayed in exquisitely finished representations of Cathedrals, Churches, Palaces, and other models of ancient and modern Architectural Art.

V. The Works of the Great Masters, selected from the principal Galleries of Art in the World. In general, the portrait of the Master will be given, accompanied with a highly finished engraved copy of his chef d'œuvre.

VI. The Scientific Portions will be rendered highly interesting by the familiar explanations, and the numerous diagrams which will accompany each subject.

VII. Manufactures. The principal manufacturing processes in use will be fully explained by minute details, and an abundance of beautiful engravings.

VIII. Machinery and Inventions will have due attention paid to them, and be described by numerous appropriate engravings.

IX. The Literary Department, independently of the various articles accompanying the illustrations, will comprise original and interesting narratives, contributed by the most popular writers of the day, with numerous illustrations.

In every respect, the "Illustrated Magazine of Art," will be decidedly

SUPERIOR TO ANY MAGAZINE OF THE DAY.

Each Monthly part will contain at least Thirty superb Engravings, four of which will be printed separately, on supefine Plate Paper.

The greatest care will be manifested in every department of production. The Paper will be of the first manufacture, and the Ink supplied from the celebrated Printing Ink Establishment of Messrs. Lawson & Co., of Paris. Six of the monthly portions, when completed, will form a volume which, for interest, originality, value and beauty, will defy competition. It will not only be an interesting family book, but a rich ornament for the drawing-room table, and a pleasant companion in the study.

The parts will appear on the First of every Month at Twenty-five Cents each.

ALEXANDER MONTGOMERY,

may 25 17 Spruce Street, New-York.

SPLENDIDLY ILLUSTRATED WORKS.

THE ALPS, SWITZERLAND, SAVOY AND LOMBARDY.

With the Magazine for June will be ready, Part I., price Twenty-five Cents, of a Magnificent Work to be completed in Twelve Monthly Parts, entitled

THE ALPS, SWITZERLAND, SAVOY AND LOMBARDY, with an account of the most recent Ascents to Mont Blanc, &c. By the Rev. Charles Williams. This work, when completed, will form a large thick Volume, in Imperial Octavo, containing upwards of Three Hundred beautiful Engravings, descriptive of the peculiar Scenery of those most interesting portions of Europe, with the Occupations of the Inhabitants, &c., &c.

Cassell's Natural History.

On the First of July will commence

CASSELL'S NATURAL HISTORY, which for variety, beauty and completeness, will claim to be considered as a first-class work, upon this most interesting subject. The First volume will be devoted to the Feathered Tribe of the Creation and will contain upwards of Three Hundred Engravings, in the first style of Art. The volume will be completed in Twelve Monthly Parts, Imperial Octavo. Price 25 cents each.

History of England.

On the First of July will appear Part I., price 25 cts. of THE ILLUSTRATED HISTORY OF ENGLAND, from the earliest period on record to the present time. Edited by ROBERT FERGUSON, LL. D.

This History, which is intended to form a great National Work, will extend to Four Volumes, Imperial Octavo; each Volume to be completed in Twelve Monthly Parts, price 25 cents each. The Work will comprehend the Political, Civil, and Domestic History of the Nation, and its Progress in Civilization, Literature, Art, &c. It will be profusely Illustrated with Engravings from Designs by GILBERT, PHILLIPPOTEAUX, WILLIAMS, and others. Representations of the most remarkable Events will be worked separately upon Plate Paper. The Portraits will form a complete Gallery, not only of the Monarchs, but of those individuals whose names are prominent in England's History. Also, Antiquities, including Autographs, Buildings, Costume, Furniture, Arms, Coins, Monuments, Manufactures &c., of each Epoch.

History of Hungary.

July First will be published, in one Handsome Volume, Imperial Octavo, price, One Dollar and Twenty-five Cents, in Cloth Boards,

THE ILLUSTRATED HISTORY OF HUNGARY, AND THE MAGYARS, from the Earliest Period to the clos of the late War. By EDWARD LAWRENCE GODKIN. The Volume will be Illustrated with One Hundred highly finished Engravings, including representations of the principal Battles; Portraits of the early Kings, and of the Statesmen and Generals who figured in the War of Independence; Costumes of the Peasantry, &c.; Views of the chief Towns and Fortresses, &c.; with an accurate Description of the Manners and Customs of the People, their Literature, Commerce, Arts, &c.

ALEXANDER MONTGOMERY,

may25 Publisher, 17 Spruce Street, New-York.

MANSION HOUSE,

Cambridge City, Indiana.

J. CUNNINGHAM, Proprietor.

TRAVELLERS

Will find it to their advantage to call and try the accommodation of the MANSION HOUSE.

STAGE OFFICE also in connection with this House.

may 4 6m

INDIANA STATE LIBRARY

TEMPERANCE CHART.

A Weekly Journal:---Devoted to Temperance, Morality, Education, Literature, Useful Arts, Science, General Intelligence, &c.

J. W. GORDON, M. D., EDITOR.] ORGAN OF THE GRAND DIVISION OF INDIANA. [JOHN H. OHR, PRINTER.

VOL. III. INDIANAPOLIS, IND., WEDNESDAY, JULY 13, 1853. NO. 3.

THE TEMPERANCE CHART,

IS PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY, BY THE GRAND DIVISION, S. of T. OF INDIANA.

Edited by J. W. Gordon, M. D.

To whom all Communications and Subscriptions must be addressed, post-paid.

OFFICE—in second story of Temperance Hall Building, Washington St., Indianapolis.

TERMS:

Single copy, one year, ... 75 cts.

☞ In advance in all cases,

TERMS OF ADVERTISING.—Circulation 4000 copies.

One Squre, (12 lines,) for one week,	$0 50
" " for each subsequent insertion,	25
" " for 3 months,	3 00
" " for 6 months,	5 00
" " for 1 year without alteration,	8 00
" " for 1 year, with changes,	12 00

A reduction made on larger advertisements.
Cuts double the above rates.
Advertisements must be handed in by Saturday, of each week, to insure insertion.
Applications for advertising, or for any kind of Printing for the Order, must be made to

J. H. OHR, Indianapolis.

MISCELLANEOUS.

From the Tecumseh Herald.

Female Influence, or THE ELOQUENCE OF A TEAR.

A TEMPERANCE TALE, BY A LADY.

'Come, Maria, said Helen Graves to her sister, as she placed her work in her basket and pushed it aside, do let me once more try to persuade you to suspend your efforts at moral reform for one evening, and go with me to this party. Mrs. Randall will not accept your apology, and I have resolved I will not go without you.'

'Please, Helen, do not urge me farther, rejoined Maria. You do not know how much I regret this party must come off this evening, for I do really wish to attend it. But I cannot, unless I violate my word, and neglect an evident duty.'

'There it goes, duty forever, said Helen, as she took the poker and applied it most energetically to the grate. Why, Maria, we can hear nothing from you but evident duty, scruples of conscience, moral accountability, individual responsibility, and all such sort of things.' But laying aside her firearms, and softening somewhat in manner, she added, 'Come, sister, do give up some of your singular notions, and act a little more like other people. Do not feel obliged to take the whole human family under your care, to convert and keep sober too—and who do you think will drink one drop less of rum, gin, or brandy, if you do attend this temperance meeting to-night. What do you suppose one solitary woman can effect in this cause?'

'Pardon me, sister, one solitary woman acted with tremendous effect, when through the appetite she lured man from the path of rectitude. Ah, Helen, our sex has had a mighty agency in spreading moral desolation over our fair earth, and should we not combine our influence, and use every effort to redeem it from this curse? I do verily believe that we can do as much perhaps, even more than the other sex, and I am confident the progress of reformation will be slow, until we learn to appreciate our own influence, and use it as we ought.'

'Oh, Maria, what an enthusiast! But, if you do really feel this weight of responsibility, why not seek to gain the public ear? Why not strive with woman's winning accent to reclaim the thoughtless, erring multitude? I am sure you are admirably fitted for a public lecturer, for you can scarcely converse ten minutes on this subject, without surprising us with an outburst of eloquence? 'No, no, Helen, if woman would succeed in her mission, she must keep within the sphere assigned her by her Creator. Her voice would lose all its melody, if extended beyond its proper key, in order to fill our crowded halls. But thank the Good Being, it is most admirably attuned to song, and I am to have the privilege of singing temperance this evening.'

'Oh! I begin to understand this matter; you have received a commission to sing this evening? Now, Maria, this can easily be accomplished by proxy, I can soon arrange this affair, and get one to take your place, who can sing as loud and long as yourself.'

'No, Helen,' said Maria, after a little hesitation, my place cannot be filled by another, but in order to explain and to shield myself from the charge of downright obstinacy, I must divulge what I designed to conceal from you, as I thought you might question the propriety. This meeting is held in a distant part of the city, on —— street; the Temperance Reform does not reach it, and the friends of the cause are making an effort to carry it to them. No pains have been spared to make the meeting interesting; and to add to its attractions, they have called in the aid of music, and the services of some ladies were solicited, who consented to go if I would make one of the number.'

'Is it possible, you have consented to sing to those drunken rowdies in that literal Sodom to-night?'

'I have engaged to sing, but I hope my audience will not be so drunk but they can listen. But, my dear sister, what makes this part of our city a literal Sodom, but this very evil that we are trying to remove?'

'Maria Graves, I think your parents' interference should prevent this reckless adventure.'

'I beg your pardon, Helen, my parents' approbation was secured before I consented to go. Don't be so displeased, are we not commanded to go out into the highways and hedges?'

'Not to seek such a rabble as you are to entertain to-night,' said Helen, interrupting her. 'No, indeed, we read, the Lord rained fire and brimstone from heaven, and consumed such outright.'

'But, by the way, Maria, who is to accompany you? I do wonder if you have managed to enlist Edward Mansfield in your Quixotic expedition?'

'I have apprized Mr. Mansfield of my engagement, and urged him not to attend the party, but he insists on accompanying me, and I shall say no more to dissuade him.'

'Well, this is really too vexatious; Edward is so jovial and entertaining in company. But, poor fellow, his fate is sealed; you have thrown the noose—he is completely in your powar, and I venture to say he has taken his last social glass with his young companions. But pray, Maria, let me inquire what kind of hospitality you design to extend to your guests, when you become mistress of an establishment of your own?'

'No such hospitality as will tend to convert a friend who enters our doors in full possession of his intellect, into a maniac, or idiot, as he leaves. No, Helen, we will give him nothing to paralyze his physical powers, and perchance. lay him beside the swine in the gutter, ere he reaches his home.'

'Bravo! really pathetic. But, Maria, is this matter arranged to the mutual satisfaction of both parties? Has your future husband consented to yield this point entirely to your own discretion? Don't calculate too much on your influence—Hymen's bonds do not always render it more secure.'

'I know it, Helen, but I have no fears on this score. Since my first acquaintance with Edward Mansfield, he has known me an uncompromising, decided advocate for temperance—he knows I consider it wrong to offer stimulants as a beverage to guests, and do you think he would urge our union if he designed to wound my feelings by introducing this custom into his own family? No, his nature is too kind, too generous; I know he will not do it. No such pernicious custom will be established under our roof—we will raise our standard, Total abstinence from all thot can intoxicate.'

'Be it so, but let me assure you, I am thankful my conscience is not in your keeping. No, Maria, I shall never maneuvre to deprive a husband of a glass of wine with a friend. You know very well, if I had not every assurance that the habits of James Headly were perfectly correct, I should not have encouraged his visits, and if he reserves the privilege of entertaining his friends as he chooses, we shall not quarrel. And with regard to these temperance lectures, I must say, I have no particular fondness for them—the subject has become stale, actually stale, and I say again, I find no interest whatever in a temperance meeting.'

'Dear sister, let us drop this subject,' said Maria, with some emotion. 'We cannot agree, but may Heaven grant that you may never have cause to regret your reckless indifference to it. Let us recollect, that we are soon to leave parents and home. with all its fond endearments, and in the far West we must become all in all to each other.'

The tear glistened in Helen's eye at this allusion, but before she could reply, the conversation was interrupted by the entrance of others.

We will leave our young friends to prepare for their respective entertainments, while we formally introduce to our readers their affianced companions, to whom allusion has been made. James Headly and Edward Mansfield were preparing for the bar, at the Cambridge Law School. They were considered young men of fine talents and acquirements, and of irreproachable character; they had been chosen friends from the commencement of their collegiate course, and had determined to study the same profession, seek the same location, and unite their interests in the transaction of business; but recent associations had bound them still more closely together, as each had selected from the same family his future companion.

James Headly had been attracted by the unusual beauty and accomplishments of Helen Graves, and thus introduced Edward Mansfield to the society of her sister.

We will not enter upon the comparative merits of these young ladies, as our story will somewhat elucidate their characters. We will merely add, that Helen was decidedly beautiful, and consequently, surrounded by admirers, and we do not say this flattery made her either vain or selfish, yet it was evident when her own gratification came in competition with the interests of others, self predominated. Maria had less personal attractions than her sister, and was not subject to the constant intrusion of those who are governed by no sense but that of sight. Although she had all the comforts and luxuries of wealth at her command, she did not live merely to enjoy these blessings and to congratulate herself that she was more fortunate and happy than many others; she cast her eyes abroad, and perceived sufferings to be relieved, and wrongs to be redressed. As she made these observations, her heart was moved with compassion and sympathy, and she resolved to consecrate her influence and efforts to the cause of philanthropy and benevolence.

When Edward Mansfield first met Maria Graves, in the company of her gay, fascinating sister, he could not suppress the thought that his friend had taken the first prize. But he did not long retain this opinion—he was charmed with her graceful manner, and fine convarsational powers; he admired her cultivated intellect, and was impressed with the uniform expression of kindly feeling, which disclosed a heart alive to the interests of her fellow-creatures.

As he continued his visits, he could discover some new beauty in feature or expression of countenance, until he began to wonder that he had ever considered her otherwise than handsome. He soon discovered her decided aversion to the use of stimulants as a beverage—this occasioned some little regret and uneasiness. He had been trained to think the moderate use of these luxuries as entirely innocent, and had practised accordingly. He heartily wished the object of his increasing regard was not quite so ultra in her views on the subject of temperance, but he well knew, from her apparent decision of character, she would make no compromise, at the risk of avowed principle. A silent conflict ensued in the breast of Edward Mansfield. On the one side, his former habits, some little inclination, and above all, the claims of hospitality plead for continued self-indulgence. On the other, his affection for Maria Graves, and his consciousness of the entire safety of the course she advised, urged him to yield the point. But he was not long in working out this question of loss and gain. He deliberately resolved, that no obstacle on his part should prove a barrier to their union, and if his society presented no attraction to his former companions, except when lured by the fumes of the wine-cup, then farewell. He had not, however, formally communicated this decision to Maria, when she had occasion to announce her engagement to attend the temperance meeting previously mentioned. He could not but admire the self-denial she manifested on the occasion, and though he could not avoid one lingering glance at the lively, social enjoyment he must forego, yet he resolved to accompany her.

And now, while we leave Helen Graves at her toilet, adding new adornments to her lovely person, and James Headly, waiting to introduce to the gay, admiring circle the belle of the evening, we find Edward Mansfield and Maria wending their way to a distant part of the city, to a temperance meeting. In the course of their walk, they came to a group of youths at the corner of the street, among whom Mansfield recognixed as a fellow-student.

'There' said he, 'is a friend of mine, who must reform his habits, for he is on the high way to ruin.'

'On the high way to ruin!' exclaimed Maria, as she slackened her pace; 'and would you pass him by and give no warning? Let us try to persuade him to accompany us.'

'Ah no, Maria, he is exceedingly sensitive—he would be highly offended if we should even allude to temperance in the presence of others. I dare not single him out.'

'Mr. Mansfield, would you not single him out if you saw the house in flames over his head—we must not pass him by.'

Fortunately, the company now separated, and there was no necessity for being personal, for his young friend came immediately in contact with them.

[CONTINUED IN OUR NEXT.]

Has not Temperance Progressed?

Few will doubt that there has been some progress, but there are many who have no idea to what extent the habits of the people of the Uuited States—of New England especially—have changed since the commencement of the Temperance Reformation. Seaman, in his valuable Essays on the Progress of Nations, estimates from reliable data, the consumption of intoxicating liquors in the United States at different periods, thus:

	1810.	1840.	1850.
Free population in millions,	6	14.57	20.1
Consumed as a beverage, in millions of gallons,	30.3	42.43	48·5
Equal for each person in gallons to	5	2.9	2.4

Thus it will be seen that the average quantity consumed, to each person in the whole United States, is less than half as great as it was in 1810—or previous to 1825, for there was no diminution before the latter period. This reduction has mainly taken place in the northern States; thus the statistics of these alone would show a much greater proportional diminution. Since the year 1840, some effect in this direction has been produced in the southern States, and they are rapidly awakening to the necessity of further effort, and will soon take a stand by the side of the earlier moving States.

It will be seen that in 1850 the average consumption was five-tenths of a gallon less than in 1840, a diminution of about one-sixth in the comparative consumption. The next decade of years will work a much greater change. It will witness the legal prohibition of the sale of intoxicating beverages in all the States, and as a primary agent in the great work, this will do wonders. The sale outlawed all over the land! The legitimate operation of the law and a more correct public opinion, which is sure to prevail as a consequence, wherever the outlawry is once accomplished, will speedily annihilate it. The mere adoption generally of a prohibitory law and its thorough enforcement, will not in itself accomplish the reformation. But there is a moral power in the act of placing this destructive agent under ban. So long as the license system is tolerated, the practice of drinking is guarded as something worthy to be perpetuated—an air of sanctity surrounds it, and it is shorn of its deformity. Remove the legal sanction, prohibit the sale, and you place the evil and its concomitants in their true light.—The youth regards it differently—the thing deserving prohibition is more to be avoided than that, which, while it is restrained, is still carefully retained. How much moral effect is produced by saying, as the license system does in substance—Rum-selling and rum-drinking are the source of enormous evils; therefore Tom, Dick, and Harry shall not all sell, but if Tom will pay a reasonable fee for the permit, he may sell as much as he pleases? Perhaps, however, the question is taken into consideration—and the license laws usually contemplate it—which is the most upright man of the trio? Well, suppose Tom is. Now how do you operate on his stock of morality. You tell him it is expected that he will not sell to those who abuse the stuff; but at the same time you put a premium upon an indiscriminate sale. You give him a profitable business, if sales are made, and tell him that he must be very cautious about those sales. He must be almost immaculate, (granting that the moderate use of liquors is proper), if he does not consult his own pocket rather than your advice. But we are straying from our subject to a point which has been too often argued to need our aid.—Our object was simply to call attention to the proofs of progress as an incentive to renewed zeal in the work. The tokens are all encouraging, and we need not falter. Much has been accomplished, yet much remains to be done. Let our motto, then, still be, ONWARD!

☞ Much stress has been laid by our opponents upon the fact that E. C. Delavan, an early champion of the Reform, refused to sanction the principles of the Maine Law. It is true he did object to it. Although, as early as 1834, when his liquors were analyzed by a distinguished chemist, he felt impelled by a sense of duty to have his whole stock (amounting to several thousand dollars) destroyed, he was chary of allowing that government had a right to act upon the same principle. But he has now come out plainly and manfully in favor of the Maine Law. In a lengthy letter to the New York State Register, after detailing the considerations which have hitherto led him to refrain from supporting the Maine Law, he says:

"After deeply reflecting on the subject, I have come to the conclusion that it is of God, and that those honestly contending for it are acting in conformity to his will. That public opinion is opposed to this law in our cities and large towns is, I believe. true. But in the rural districts is is, I believe equally true that it is already decidedly in its favor; and I can not feel that the fashionable usages of cities, or the pecuniary gain of those engaged in this most nefarious traffic, should control the acts and jeopardize the interests of the entire community. I do, therefore, re-enter this great conflict with the liquor power, and shall devote what little energy I retain to the furtherance of a reform which has been so successfully commenced.

* * * *

"I have hitherto had some doubts with regard to an immediate prohibitory law: but I have now come to the conclusion, that it is the duty of the government, to protect the other classes of community against the oppression of those engaged in the traffic, to place, in behalf of every class, every justifiable barrier in the way of transgression. By licensing every drinking house, vice of the worst kind is encouraged; by closing them, a great amount of evil is prevented. Government should not lead the people into temptation, but on the contrary, as far as possible, remove temptation from them."

THE SECRET OF MATRIMONIAL HAPPINESS.—Zachokke, in one of his tales, gives the following advice to a bride:

"In thy first solitary hour after the ceremony, take the bridegroom and demand a solemn vow of him, and give him a vow in return. Promise one another sacredly, never, not even in jest, to wrangle with each other; never to bandy words or indulge in the least ill-humor. Never, I say, never! wrangle in jest, for putting on an air of ill humor merely to tease, becomes earnest by practice. Mark that! Next, promise each other, sincerely and solemnly, never to keep a secret from each other, under whatever pretext, with whatever excuse it might be. You must continually and every moment, see clearly into each other's bosom. Even when one of you has committed a fault, wait not an instant, but confess it freely—let it cost tears, but confess it. And as you keep nothing secret from each other, so, on the contrary, preserve the privacies of your house, marriage state and heart, from father, mother, sister, brother, aunt, and all the world.—You two, with God's help, build your own quiet world; every third or fourth one whom you draw into it with you will form a party, and stand between you two.—That should never be. Promise this to each other. Remember the vow at each temptation. You will find your account in it. Your souls will grow as it were to each other, and at last will become as one. Ah! if many a young pair had, on their wedding day, known this secret, how many a marriage were happier than, alas! they are."

What causes such a miscalculation in the amount of gratitude which men expect for the favors they have done, is, that the pride of the giver and that of the receiver can never agree as to the value of the benefit.

In the adversity of our best friends we often find something which does not displease us.

We easily console ourselves for the disgrace of our friends when it serves to signalize our affection for them.

INDIANA STATE LIBRARY INDIANAPOLIS

TEMPERANCE CHART.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.
WM. HANNAMAN, C. E. BABB,
JAMES HALL, R. T. BROWN,
JOHN B. ABBETT.

WEDNESDAY, JULY 13, 1853.

☞ Acknowledgments are necessarily crowded over till the next.

Dillsboro' Again.—Our friends at Dillsboro' are determined to sustain the Chart. Nobly have they come up to the rescue. Though but a small village our list there is larger than in many of our cities. Many places have done well; but Dillsboro' excels them all. Who can beat her? Let all try.

Short Articles.—A Brother, for whom we entertain the highest opinion, desires us to cut our articles short, especially during the warm days. The suggestion is a good one; but we have no short-hand method of thinking, and short articles are most conveniently written when we have only short thoughts. He suggests several articles on the same subject. This will do where it does not separate the naturally united; but at any rate we will strive to please the brother.

Sister Junia.—Our Sister Junia, of the Locomotive. seems to have taken it ill that we should have intimated that neighbor Brown, of the Sentinel, was an old woman, as if that were a worse term of reproach than others. Now, Sister, comfort yourself—we only meant to compare him to a certain class of old women, and did not wish to be understood as speaking of the whole sex; and you will certainly allow, that the Editor of the Sentinel isn't like any thing else, if he isn't like an old woman of the particular class alluded to. We ask your pardon, however, and hope you will suspend your thnnder. We wish peace with all the world and the rest of mankind—aye, and womankind too.—Please let us alone, Sister.

New Watch and Jewelry Store.—An unavoidable press of business prevented our calling the attention of the public to the advertisement of E. J. Baldwin & Co., last week; but we are pleased to do so now. We have examined the stock of these gentlemen, and do not hesitate to say, that it is superior to any heretofore offered to our citizens. Their splendid room in the "Bates House," on the corner of Washington and Illinois streets, is worthy of their stock, which is an honor also to the room. All persons wishing fine jewelry and the best of every thing in their line can not fail to be pleased by calling on these gentlemen, and profited also. The establishment is both an ornament and honor to the "Hoosier City." We say, go to Baldwin's for jewelry!!

Watches repaired on the shortest notice, and in the best manner at this store.

Nuisance.—On the Fourth, the street at the North-west corner of the "Wright House," in this city, was, many times during the day, almost impassable. The worst men of the city, and all the region round about, assembled there, like green flies swarming upon some foul carcase. Ever and anon they descended into the cellar, always to reascend more degraded than ever. We are informed, that their speech insulted decency; their appearance outraged manhood; and their tainted breath infected the pure air of heaven until it was almost irrespirable. It is a shame and an outrage. that the proprietors of that house do not respect the public enough to abate the nuisance. If the public will exercise a proper self-respect, they will abate not only the nuisance, but its proprietors. Let it be seen to.

The Fourth of July.

The anniversary of American Independence was duly celebrated in our city, by the Sabbath Schools and Firemen. The Schools held their celebration first; the Firemen afterwards; and both were alike honorable to the parties engaged in them. At the former many things well calculated to stir men's blood were seen. Among them not the least moving were the different banners and their devices. In some of these the sentiment of devotion was the prevailing one; in others that of patriotism; and in others, others still. The most touching and appropriate emblem was the portrait of General Washington. At least, so it appeared to us. Of all our illustrious men, he alone is, and ever has been, an object of universal respect and esteem to every American. When he shall cease to maintain his position in the American heart, that heart will have ceased to be American. Another emblem big with meaning—linking the past and the future of our country—was observed: it was a representation of the execution of the Maine Law—a knocking in of the heads of the rum-barrel, and letting the poison out. There were, we suppose, over two thousand children in procession.

The Declaration was read by R. M. Hall in an appropriate style; and a beautiful and eloquent oration pronounced by Wm. W. Wallace, Esq. The celebration closed without a single accident, on ill feeling.

Immediately after the Sabbath Schools left the ground, the different Fire Companies of the city came upon it, and celebrated the event of our Independence in an appropriate style. The Declaration was read in the most happy manner by Dr. A. M. Hunt; and an excellent Oration delivered by J. N. Sweetzer, Esq., in which the manifest destiny doctrines of a portion of our political humbuggers received a just and manly rebuke. This celebration, too, had no accident—and no liquor or drunkenness on the ground. The day passed off pleasantly, and, we trust, profitably to all our people, whose patriotism recurred to the scenes of '76, to renew its strength and hope.

The National Division.

Few sessions of the National Division have had more important duties to perform than the one just closed at Chicago, Illinois. Many questions of the highest moment to the Order have been decided; and not least among them is the adoption of an entire New Ritual. This is said to be equal or superior to any thing of the kind in the world. We have been pleased to learn, that an esteemed Brother of our own State has the honor of being the author of the greater portion of it. A nobler monument, or one more likely to remain to all generations, could not be erected to his honor. The marble may crumble, and brass rust down, but such a memento will endure to the latest generations.

The members of the National Division held a meeting in the park, which was addressed by M. W, P. O'Neall, aud P. M. W. P. Cary, of Ohio, with great force and effect.

The next session will be held at St. John's, New Brunswick, on the third Wednesday in June next.

Hon. David McDonald.—This distinguished jurist has avowed publicly his opinion that it is beneath the dignity of the legal profession for its members to engage in the defence of those who are guilty of violating the liquor Law. He would not accept a fee at their hands. Let lawyers all take this high stand, and it will aid materially in elevating the standard of professional merit and public morals.

While on this subject it may be proper to say, that while the friends of the liquor traffic never forget their cause, temperance men are quite forgetful of theirs. It is said that the Whisky Interest paid John Pettit $500 for his services in the case now pending in the Supreme Court from the Wabash, in which he labors to prove our law unconstitutional. How much have the Temperance men of the State made up for Messrs. Taylor & Coburn, of this city, for far abler services on their side? It is high time such things should be attended to. Let a fund be raised and set apart to pay attorneys' fees in such cases.

The Fourth at Highland,

The Fourth was celebrated by the friends of Temperance at Highland, in Clay county, in a spirited and becoming manner.—The friends met in the morning, had an oration and then a dinner. In the afternoon they again convened at the stand, and were again addressed by various speakers, until near sunset. We had the pleasure of offering them a brief argument in favor of a prohibitery law, and urging its necesity upon them. They are ripe for such a law; and we have no doubt if the question were separated from every other question and submitted to the people to-day, it would be carried as triumphantly as in Michigan. We received a number of names for the Chart, and the promise of many more. The day passed off with the best feelings among all parties; and all retired full of hope that a better time for our State is near at hand.

We looked into some of the coal mines, and shall notice them more at length in our next.

Parricide.—On Friday evening, the 1st inst., a young man by the name of Mawhinney, murdered his father, in Vigo county, near Cloverland, on the Terre Haute and Indianapolis Railroad. The circumstances, as related to us, are as follows:—A gentleman called on the old man to buy his sheep, and offered him $1.25 a head for them. The old man asked $1.50, and would not take less.—His son—a grocery-keeper well drunk—was present; and began to abuse the old man, because he would not take what he was offered for his sheep. A quarrel ensued, and the son drew his knife and stabbed his father several times, wounding him mortally. The old man, finding himself wounded, entreated his son to make his escape, and save himself from the punishment due his crime.

Such cases need no comment. They plead tbe cause of prohibition "trumpet tongued." Shall they plead in vain?

The Kind of Men who Sell Liquor.

A sister of Dr. J. A. Kelly, who had gone to a grocery in, Milwood, Knox county, Ohio, to persuade her brother, the doctor, to leave it, was rudely ordered to leave the place by the Rummy; upon which she threw two stones among the decanters, breaking some of them, and then started home. The Liquor Fiend seized his revolver, and following her into the street, discharged four barrels at her, one of which took effect in her thigh, from which the ball cannot be dislodged; and another inflicted a similar injury upon another person, who was sitting on his porch some distance from the groggery. The wounds are said to be very painful. The rum-seller was arrested and held to bail in the sum of $2,000. He will, probably, get to learn an honest trade in the penitentiary of the State he has disgraced. Yet all our whisky vendors are as mean and cowardly as he; and would shoot a defenceless woman just as soon.

Drunkenness on the Fourth.—It is said by the oldest citizen, that there has seldom been more drunkenness in our city on any previous Fourth, than the one just past. The city was full of rowdies, blackguards, and ruffians; and a number of fights was the result. Our marshal and his deputy have thus, whether they will or no, employment thrust upon them. Instead of laboring to remove the cause, they will now feast upon its effects. This, too, is discharging official duty. O surely our marshal is a phœnix—rara avis in terras. When comes such another?

A. M. Hunt & Co.—These gentlemen have opened a new Auction Room where the Post Office used to be, and in future auction sales will be held there of all the necessaries and comforts of life. We are pleased to learn, that although a consignment of liquors was tendered them for sale, they declined it. This should be remembered by the good people of our city; for it shows that although

> "'Tis not in mortals to command success,
> They'll do more—they'll deserve it."

Ladies' Christian Annual.—The July number of this cheap and excellent monthly is on our table. It merits the support of all the friends of pure literature and sound morals. The ladies of the West will not fail to patronize it.

Let Conscience Rule.

Who has not been tempted even by the voice of friendship to sell the right for the profitable—to sacrifice what is just for what will pay? As if it were not enough that poverty should pinch us; and necessity, through the little ones dependent upon us, mutely plead for bread, professed friends must join in the crusade against conscience, and ask that its decisions be disregarded. Outspoken honesty, upright truth, must be silent and crawl, or must starve. And is that really the state of affairs in this land of free men, free thoughts, and free speech? Will the truth not bear to be spoken; or, if spoken, will it starve the speaker? So we have often been told; but still we can not believe it. We know it is the opinion of the world commercial—of the men whose chief end is to get money—and of that still baser class—their adulators and slaves. But these all are engaged in the defence of their Diana.—The craft of the former is endangered by a different opinion; and, for the latter, it requires less exertion to remain the tame slaves they are, than to break their chains and exercise the prerogatives of freemen. These float for the time, on the surface of the stream social, while the pure water which, like froth, they hide, is still pure, and deep, and strong beneath. The present, too, is an age of only surface-depth; and hence the surface awes the opinions and conduct of the unbelieving. This constantly renews the bubbles as they burst; and keeps up the evils of which it is generated. Thus are we controlled by mere illusions; for what is a fashionable surface-bubble, whether political or religious, in church or state, or, indeed, anywhere else, but an illusion and a mockery?

It is high time that there should be an end of these things—high time, at least, that the voice of friendship should cease to tempt the pure in heart from the paths of virtue, into those of base compliance with the evils that curse our country.—Strength itself may fall when lured to the precipice by the syren voice of the trusted. This form of temptation usually comes from the friendly in the form of a lesson, solely for our good. They point us, now to bright prospects of political preferment, and whisper that these are ours, if we but yield to their kindly suggestions, and abandon the right, or stifle the voice, ever calling out for utterance from within us. Again, the wants of our families, and the necessity of providing something for our old age, are gravely presented; and the attainment of both only suspended upon the small condition, that we shall conform to the opinions of others and abandon our own—that we shall sing the praises of some popular Diana, although we know and feel in our very souls, that it is a base idol—and no true God. Plenty and popularity thus bought, would be to us no better than a golden sarcophagus and splendid monument; for we should be really dead to the only life we desire to live—a life of independence and usefulness, in which self-respect should still subsist as part and parcel of our being.

But we are not so faithless as to doubt the ultimate triumph of the True and Right: and while contending for it, we shall be content with our dinner of herbs and love therewith. We have no fear but that we shall fare as well as he, who came into the world "to save sinners;" and who has said: "Seek ye first the kingdom of God and his righteousness; and all these things shall be added unto you."

The Whisky Celebration.—At Cloverland the Fourth was celebrated a la Bacchanal. This celebration sprung up in opposition to that at Highland; and is thought to have originated in the patriotism of a Whisky Fiend who had a barrel of bad whisky, that he wished to sell. Be that as it may, the result was worthy of the spirit that gave it birth; for scarcely had the cloth been removed after dinner, and these Pat-Riots began to guzzle their toasts, when they began to do battle against each other, and finished their celebration in a row, several finding themselves prisoners to the violated law.—When will men abandon the way of the transgressor! It is hard.

It is not so dangerous to do evil to the generality of men as to do them too much good.

The World's Unity.

We live in a strange world; and when we speak of the world, we mean not to be understood as referring to the land and water that compose the physical globe we inhabit; but the men and women whom God has created "of one blood" to dwell on the earth. Philosophers have almost mastered the difficulties interposed between them and the earth; and the different sciences which relate to its origin, development, structure, and destiny, show that the strange and new are becoming less and less frequent, and that ere long man will be able to see in the elements and forces of the physical world only familiar acquaintances. But in the other sense, to understand the world presents a task of far greater difficulty. Few, even of the wisest, have solved that problem—few, now engaged in its solution, will be successful. With its features—many of them at least—all men are more or less familiar: and to many it has even been permitted to read deeper revelations, tending to throw light on the more recondite functions by which the race exists and acts as a race—a world. How few, however, with this light inviting them forward, have dared to think, that with all its fragmentary efforts and antagonistic struggles, the action of the world has always had one manner, and one purpose—the attainment of one goal—the Good, the True, the Perfect? The masses have never dreamed of it; the wise have eschewed it as an illusion unworthy of their wisdom. They have been willing to admit the unity of tendency of a single people, or of a family of peoples allied in origin, religion, commerce, and laws; but to embrace the idea of all the peoples of the world being parts of "one stupendous whole"—each influencing each, and all advancing together, to the same consummation, has hitherto transcended the scope of their efforts at generalization.

Men see the world acting, changing, suffering, and enjoying only in parts; to-day, the cloud of grief and falling tear; to-morrow, the light of hope and smile of joy; but seldom or never deem all these things but parts of one great system of compensation and progress. Yet, seen or unseen, appreciated or not, it is even so. In the moral as in the physical universe, there is no break in the net-work of universal relation and dependence. Every act of every man has its relation to every other act of the same agent, and separately and together, each and all, relate to and influence the conduct of all others, either in its causes or results. The man of to-day—no matter how obscure soever he may be—thus acts upon those who have gone before no less than upon those who shall come after him. His thoughts and actions either increase or retard the tendencies existing at the time he begins to think and act: and what are these tendencies but the embodied thoughts and deeds of "the gone before?" In either case, he influences for good or ill the future of his race. From this position, man can not extricate himself: and if he is responsible for the manner in which he fills it to a Power above himself, and that responsibility is in the ratio of tbe grandeur of the trust, how careful should we all be to fill it in a becoming manner—for the profit—not for the disprofit of the world!

But it may be said, that if we are all acting together, moving in one direction to "one destiny," it is unbecoming and improper for some to find fault with, and labor to correct, the conduct of others. But it may be replied, that it is only upon this condition that we advance. If those who now labor for the advancement of others in knowledge and virtue, and thus leave the world better and nearer its destiny than they find it, were to cease, not only would the results of their labors upon others be lost, but their omission to perform their duty according to their own conception of it, wonld destroy virtue in themselves, and thus doubly retard the progress and development of the race.—Every man is, therefore, responsible not only for the vicious actions he may prevent, but also for the virtuous ones he may do. But the faithful discharge of duty in endeavoring to correct the evils of the times in which we live, is the best discipline for our own natures. The struggle with one wrong, strengthens the soul for still nobler efforts; and the memory of victories past stimulates it to new and nobler endeavors in the same field of glory. It has been through struggles only that the race has hitherto advanced. Difficulties have been removed, obstacles overcome, enemies vanquished; but still, the end is not yet. The standard of opposition to the world's ideal still floats on many a strong tower, from which the self-confident and defiant shout of the foeman is heard. But the stars on that standard have long since grown dim, and that shout of defiance lost its terror to the assailant. The tower of the foes of man is built upon sand; and the rain is already descending, the floods coming, the winds blowing and beating upon it, and the All-wise has declared that it shall fall. Champions of the Right, take heart, and be comforted; for if God be for you, who can be against you?

Correspondence.

For the Temperance Chart.

The Indiana Cadet.

The undersigned, with much regret, announces to the friends of the Indiana Cadet, that its publication has, for the present, been suspended.

The causes which have led to this result are partially of a private nature, and the remainder would, if given to the world, prove unsatisfactory. Under these circumstances, the Editors prefer to bear the entire censure that may be heaped upon them, until the next meeting of the Grand Section, when the whole subject will be reported to that body.

It affords us great pleasure to say, that the paper has not been suspended for want of patronage. In many parts of the State the Cadets have battled manfully for the paper; and the Daughters—ever ready to confer a favor upon the Order—in a number of cities and towns, have aided in extending the subscription list. We could mention many persons to whom we are especially obliged; but will content ourselves with saying that Manlius Hobson, of Utica Section, No. 103, has favored us with the largest list of subscribers, and that the Sisters of Perrysville Union, No. 48, D. of T., stand at the head of those Daughters who have been pleased to aid the undertaking.

The finances of the concern will be settled as fast as possible, so that we hope no one will complain about not "getting his money back," until he hears from us. We will not consent to receive the little amounts due us from hundreds of our subscribers, as it will be more trouble to us and them than it is worth.

The effort to establish a Cadet paper in Indiana has demonstrated one point heretofore considered doubtful, viz., The Order can support a paper. This fact will be abundantly proven by papers which will be presented to the Grand Section.

The Sixth Annual Session of the Grand Section will commence at the State Capital, in October next, two days before the meeting of the Grand Division S. of T. The day of the meeting of the G. D. is not yet determined, but will probably be at an early day. Let every W. P., P. W. P., W. D., W. A., und P. W. A., in the State be on hand on the morning of the assembling of the Gsand Section, with his credentials carefully prepared according to the Constitution of the Grand Section.—The subject of a Grand National Section, the adoption of a new Ritual, with Degrees, &c., the Indiana Cadet, the question whether young ladies should be admitted to regular membership or not, and a host of other interesting and important matters are there to be discussed and settled. No Section should allow herself to be unrepresented in that assembly.

In conclusion, we tender to the officers of the G. S., to many of W. P.'s, and others, officers and brethren of ihe Subordinete Sections, to as many of the Daughters of Temperance as have aided our undertaking, and to many editors, in every part of the Union, who have favored us with exchanges without asking us to "puff the difference," we tender our heartfelt thanks, and bid them all adieu.

J. C. McCollough & Co..
Editors af Indiana Cadet.

Improvement of the Mind.

BY T. S. ARTHUR.

We often find two persons who have been equally well educated at school, one of whom is greatly in advance of the other in points of intelligence. This does not always arise from the superior ability of one, but because one of them had read, thought, and observed more than the other.

What we gain at school, is only the means of becoming wise and useful. If we let it lie inactive in our mied, it will do us no good. How quickly does a young lady lose her power over the piano if she neglects the instrument! How soon is a language forgotten if we do not attempt to write or speak it! And this is true of nearly everything that is acquired at school. It lies merely in the outer court of the memory, and does not enter and make any permanent impression upon the mind, till it is practiced and made useful in every-day life.

We often hear it said of a woman in society, that she is a well-educated woman, and the inference usually is, that she has received a liberal education at school.—But the remark means nothing but that she is a reading, observing, and reflecting woman.

Hundreds have their memories crowded with the rudiments of an education that lie there as inactive as food in the stomach of a dyspeptic, and they imagine themselves to be well educated—but it is all imagination. To be well educated is something very different from this.

All real improvement of the mind commences at the time we first begin to think for ourselves—and this is after we have left school. At school we merely acquire the means to be used in the true and higher order of education which every one must gain for himself. It matters not how many studies a young lady may have pursued at school, nor how thoroughly she may have mastered all she attempted to learn, if after leaving school she does not read, observe, and exercise her thinking faculties, she will never make an intellectual woman.

In every company a young lady will find two classes of persons, distinctly separated from each other. If she mingles with those of one class, she will find their conversation to consist almost entirely of light and frivolous remarks on people's habits, dress, and manners, with the occasional introduction of a graver theme that is quickly set aside or treated with a levity entirely at variance with its merits. But if she mingle with those of the other class, she finds herself at once upon a higher plane, and be impressed with the pleasing confidence that she has a mind that can think and feel interested in subjects of a general and more weighty interest. An hour spent with one class leaves the mind obscure and vacant—while an hour spent with the other, elevates, expands, and strengthens its powers, and causes it to see in a clearer atmosphere.

With one or the other of these classes, a young lady is almost sure to identify herself and rise into an intelligent woman, or remain nearly upon the level she at first occupied. We need not say how important it is for her to identify herself with the right class. Of course, her own tastes and preferences will have much to do in this matter. But, if she incline toward the unthinking and frivolous, she will be wise if she resist such an inclination, and compel herself for a time to mingle with those who look upon life with an eye of rational intelligence, and seek to live to some good purpose. The mental food received during the time she thus compels herself to mingle with them, will create an appetite that unsubstantial gossip and frothy chit-chat can no longer satisfy.

The importance and necessity of reading need hardly be affirmed. Its use is fully understood and admitted. But there is great danger of enervating the mind by improper reading.

For a young girl to indulge much in novel reading is a very serious evil. Few of the popular novels of the day are fit to go into the hands of a young and imaginative girl. Apart from the false views of life which they present, and the false philosophy which they too often inculcate, they lift an inexperienced reader entirely above the real, from whence she has too little inclination to come down—and whenever she does come down she is unhappy, because she finds none of the ideal perfections around her with which her imagination has become filled, but is forever running into rude contact with something that shocks her over-refined sensibilities. Her own condition in life she will be in great danger of contrasting with that of some favorite heroine of romance. If she does this, she will be almost sure to make herself miserable. A young lady who indulges much in novel reading, never becomes a woman of true intelligence. She may be able to converse fluently, and to make herself at times a very agreeable companion, even to those who are greatly her superiors, but she has no strength of intellect, nor has she right views of life.

All works of fiction, however, are not bad. Where the author's aim is to give right views of life, and to teach true principles, if he possesses the requisite abilities to execute his design well, will do great good. The reading of works of this kind forms not only a healthy mental recreation, but creates a true sympathy in the mind for virtuous actions, and inspires emulation in good deeds. It is by means of this kind of writing that the broadest contrasts between right and wrong are made, and so presented to the reader that he cannot but love the one while he abhors the other. Who can read one of Miss Sedgwick's admirable little books,—"The Poor Rich Man, and the Rich Poor Man," "Live and Let Live," or "Home,"—without rising from its perusal with healthier views of life, and a more earnest desire in all things to do justice and love mercy? Of this class of books there are a great many. The novels and tales of Miss Edgeworth, Miss Bremer, Miss Hewitt, and Mrs. Opie, are good, and may be read with not only pleasure but profit by every young lady. The time spent in reading will not be lost. Indeed some portion of the time occupied in reading just such books is necessary to a well-balanced mind. In reading history, we sympathize only with masses of people, or admire some powerful leader. Books of philosophy lift the mind up into an abstract region of thought, and poetry warms, inspires, and delights the imagination and refines the taste. All these are necessary to right intellectual culture, they form the very ground work, solid walls, and inward garniture of a well-educated mind. But if reading be confined to these alone, there is danger of becoming cold and unsympathizing—of living in an intellectual world more than in a real world of people, with like thoughts and affections with ourselves. It is here that well-wrought fiction comes in with a humanizing tendency, giving to man a love for his fellow-man, and inspiring him with a wish to do good.

In history, travels, and biogrephy, we see man on the outside, as it were, and regard him at a distance as a thinking and effective being, but in fiction we perceive that he is fashioned in all things as we are—that he has like hopes and fears, joys and sorrows, and like aspirations after the good and the true, and we are gradually led to feel with and for him as a brother—we hold him by the hand, we look into his face, we see the very pulsations of his heart. All this is very good—all this is necessary to the true formation of character.

But, for a young lady to limit her reading to this order of books, or even spend a large portion of the time allotted to reading, to their perusal, will hinder her advancement in mental improvement.—She will be very apt, also, to sink into the mere waste of sympathy towards ideal personages, without seeing in them types of real classes that are in the world and all around her.

All right improvement of the mind will depend upon the leading motive which a young lady has in view when she reads, thinks, or observes, with a careful eye, what passes around her. If her end be to acquire the power of conversing intelligently on various topics, and of exhibiting an acquaintance with books in order to appear well in society, or to gain the reputation of being an intellectual or well-read woman, her advancement will not be as real as she supposes. All knowledge has its appropriate sphere of action, and that is the doing of something useful—and till it comes into this, its true sphere, it never rises into intelligence. If, therefore, a woman read and think, merely with an end to be thought wise, she never becomes more than a mere pedant, who betrays, on all occasions, the shallowness of her pretensions; but, if she use the truth she acquires in seeking to advance the cause of truth for the sake of the power it gives to do good, then is she in the way of becoming intelligent and wise.

A woman of true intelligence is a blessing at home, in her circle of friends, and in society. Wherever she goes, she carries with her a health-giving influence.—There is a beautiful harmony about her character that at once inspires a respect which soon warms into love. The influence of such a woman upon society is of the most salutary kind. She strengthens right principles in the virtuous, incites the selfish and indifferent to good actions, and gives to even the light and frivolous a taste for food more substantial than the frothy gossip with which they seek to recreate their minds.

To give particular rules for self-improvement, and to specify the books to be read, and the order of reading them, is a thing not easily done. Indeed, what would be a right order for one to pursue, would not suit another; and therefore, we shall not attempt to lay down any rules on this subject. Extensive reading is all very good; but right thinking on what we read, even if the amount be smaller, is far better.

The only sound advice we are prepared to give is, for a young lady to suffer herself to be attracted toward the class of intelligent persons which she will always find in society, and to which we have alluded in this chapter. If she permit herself to become interested in the subjects that interest them, and be guided by what they maily approve, she will find no difficulty in the choice of books. And if she seek improvement more from a love of truth than to be thought intelligent, she will soon be able to see truth so clearly in the light of her own understanding, as to be at no loss in making right discriminations on nearly all subjects that are presented to her mind.—Advice to Young Ladies on their Duties and Conduct in Life.

The Contest.

The struggle between the friends of temperance and the domination of alcohol is every day increasing. In the State of Michigan, the allies of the whisky traffic and the friends of sobriety have a hand to hand contest at the polls in July. From the best information we can obtain, there is but little room to doubt that temperance will triumph as it did in Vermont and Rhode Island, only a little more so. The advocates of the traffic dread nothing more than to submit the question of prohibition to the people.

In Ohio, Kentucky, and Tennessee, the people are now moving in favor of electing Maine-Law men to their legislatures, and their chances of success are good. Men of all political parties are throwing off their party shackles, and are resolving to go for Maine Law men first, their party afterward.

There never has been a question, either of State or national policy, in which political parties have been divided in opinions, involving such momentous interests as the traffic in intoxicating drinks. People are beginning to see this, and to govern themselves accordingly.

Politicians who, not long since were disposed to ridicule the idea that these "temperate fanatics" could ever accomplish anything politically, see it, too, and are beginning to tremble, and whiningly beseech temperance men not to mix the cause with politics. It is too good a cause to be found in such bad company. They are strongly in favor of temperance, are agreed to all that temperance men ever have done, and entreat them to go no farther or they will ruin the cause.

In New York, many of the towns, at their spring election, elected men to office who were opposed to granting licenses. This shows a healthy temperance sentiment, but we are not sufficiently acquainted with the laws of the State on this subject, to know precisely what effect this will have on the cause.

In Indiana there is a law authorizing townships and corporations to decide by ballot whether the traffic shall be allowed, and many of them voted against it at the late election.

Pennsylvania, New Jersey, and Maryland, are wide awake and moving for the Maine Law, but we are not well posted up in regard to their prospects for success.

Connecticut and New Hampshire stand alone without a prohibitory law among the New England States. But there are noble souls there who are battling manfully for the right. With their labors and the blessed effects of the law in surrounding States, alcohol will soon be outlawed in the "land of the pilgrims."

In all the States not enumerated in this article, there is a growing sentiment in favor of prohibitory laws, and the time is not far distant when the curse of Intemperance will be driven from our land.

Geology of the Sierra Nevada.—A State geological survey of the mountains forming the eastern boundary of California, has been made, and a report presented to Legislature of that State, by Prof. Trask. In addition to gold, he has found silver; principally towards the South, sometimes associated with copper and gold, in quartz, in the form of a sulphuret, and also with galena and zincblende. Copper is found widely distributed on the western side of the range. Platinum exists in as large quantities as gold, and in almost every part of the mountains it is frequently combined with other minerals, which it resembles, and is not therefore easily detected; from its commercial value it will undoubtedly prove a great source of future profit. Chromium is also found in great quantities in some sections, frequently in large irregular masses, weighing from 20 to 60 lbs; in other localities it is seen running in veins through serpentine rocks.—The presence of this mineral appears to prevent vegetation; as the districts where it is found are invariably barren. Phe chromium alone, in these mountains, Prof. Trask considers worth as much as the gold; it is used in the production of colors, of which chrome yellow is a familiar reshlt.

☞ A fine little girl, a particular friend of ours, was watching intently the manœuvres of an urchin with a tiny wheelbarrow; and thought aloud, supposing herself unheard, as follows:

"Oh, dear!" said she, "I don't see why I ain't a little boy! I wish I was a boy! I don't care! I think he might let me take his 'heelbarro, no matter I are a little girl!"—Cleveland Herald.

The Lily says, the above is a good answer to those who contend that there is a natural difference between boys and girls in their tastes and choice of amusements. We believe this difference is all the effect of education. Leave little girls free to act out nature, and they will romp and play with wheelbarrows, rolling hoops, and flying kites as naturally as boys. Many a little girl has reason to wish she was a boy, when she is restrained in her childish sports, and chided for doing this or that, because she is a girl, while she sees her little brother enjoy perfect freedom of action because he is a boy. Give the girls a "'heelbarrow" too, and let them run and romp as much as they please, and our word for it they will be healthier and happier than when made to sit upon a stool, and made to attend a doll-baby all day; but be sure that their dress is adapted to their sports, both in material, length and looseness.

Moral Reflections, Sentences, and Maxims.

There are divers sorts of hypocrisy in grief. In one, under pretext of lamenting the loss of a person who is dear to us, we lament ourselves, we lament the dimunition of our advantages, of our pleasure, of our consideration. We regret the good opinion that was entertained of us. Thus the dead get the credit of tears which are only shed for the living. I call this a species of hypocrisy, because in this sort of grief we deceive ourselves. There is another kypocrisy which is not so innocent, inasmuch as it imposes on all the world.—It is the affliction of certain persons who aspire to the distinction of a striking and perpetual grief. After time, which consumes all things, has put a stop to the sorrow they really feel, they obstinately continue their tears, their complaints and their sighs. They assume a doleful demeanor, and labor to persuade others by all their actions that their sorrow will only terminate with their lives. This miserable and fatiguing vanity is generally met with in ambitious women. As their sex bars them from all the paths of glory, they strive to render themselves celebrated by the display of inconsolable grief. There is yet another species of tears which have very petty sources, which flow easily, and as easily are dried: we weep to acquire the reputation of a tender heart; we weep to be pitied; we weep to be wept over; in fine, we weep to avoid the shame of not weeping.

Nothing flatters our pride so much as the confidence of the great, because we regard it as the result of our merit, without considering that it most frequently arises merely from vanity or from inability to keep a secret.

It may seem that self-love is the dupe of good-nature, and that it forgets itself whenever we are laboring for the advantage of others. Nevertheless, it is taking the surest road to reach our objects; it is lending on usury under pretence of giving; it is in fact gaining over every one by a subtle and delicate method.

No man deserves to be praised for his goodness unless he has strength of character to be wicked. All other goodness is generally nothing but indolence or impotence of will.

We may say of agreeableness, as distinct from beauty, that it consists in a symmetry of which we know not the rules, and a secret conformity of the features to each other, and to the air and complexion of the person.

Coquetry is the essential characteristic, and the prevalent humor of women; but they do not all practise it, because the coquetry of some is restrained by fear or by reason.

We often inconvenience others, when we fancy we can never possibly do so.

We are very far from being acquainted with the whole of our will.

Nothing is impossible: there are ways which lead to every thing; and if we had sufficient will we should always have sufficient means.

The sovereign ability consists in knowing thoroughly the value of things.

It is as common to see a change of tastes, as it is uncommon to see a change of inclinations.

Married

On the 7th inst., by the Elder Love H. Jamison, at his resikence in this city, Mr. Joseph A. Goree and Miss Emma M. Robinson.

CONSTITUTION AND BY-LAWS,

WE are still prepared to print Constitution and By-Laws, where the alterations are few from the copy recommended by the Grand Division, at the following rates:

100 copies, (or less)	$5 00
200 "	8 00
300 "	10 00

We will pay the postage on all ordered from us.

☞ All orders accompanied by the cash, will be promptly attended to.

Address, JOHN H. OHR,
Indianapolis, Indiana.

CHARTERS.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR A DIVISION S. OF T.

(Date.)

The undersigned inhabitants of ——, believing the Order of the Sons of Temperance to be well calculated to extend the blessings of total abstinence, and promote the general welfare of mankind, respectfully petition the Grand Division of the —— of ——, to grant them a Charter to open a new Division, to be called the —— Division, No. —, Sons of Temperance, of the —— of ——, to be located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves, individually and collectively, to be governed by the rules and usages of said Grand Division, and also, by those of the National Division.

Enclosed is the Charter Fee, $5 00. Books, $2 00.

This must be signed by at least eight persons of good character and standing in community, and sent to C. WOODWARD, G. S., Indianapolis, Ind, free of postage.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR A TEMPLE.

(Date.)

The undersigned, believing the Temple of Honor to be well calculated to cement more firmly our fraternal relations, and add to the general prosperity of the cause of Temperance, respectfully petition the Grand Temple of the —— of ——, to grant them a Charter to open a new Temple, to be called the —— Temple of Honor, No. —, of the —— of ——, to be located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves individually and collectively, to be governed by the rules and usages of the Grand Temple, and also by those of the Order at large.

Enclosed is the Charter Fee, $20 00.

To be directed to the G. W. R., free of postage.

This must be signed by at least twenty persons of good standing, and if not known to the G. W. T. or G. W. R., must send satisfactory references.

J. H. OHR, G. W. R.

Indianapolis, Ind.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR CADETS OF TEMPERANCE.

The undersigned, boys of ——, believing the Order of Cadets of Temperance to be well calculated to extend the blessings of total abstinence, and promote the general welfare of mankind, respectfully petition the Grand Section of the State of Indiana, to grant them a charter to open a new Section, to be called the —— Section, No. ——, Cadets of Temperance, of the State of Indiana, to be located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves, individually and collectively to be governed by the rules and usages of said Grand Section, and also those of the acting Head of the Order.

Enclosed is the fee for Charter, R. B.'s and officers' cards, $5 00.

It must also be stated whether the applicants are members of the Order or not; if they are, of what Section. The application to be directed to the Grand Secretary, free of postage.

It must also be certified by a W. P. or P. W. P, that the W. Patron elect is a Son of Temperance in good standing.

Address (post paid) HENRY OHR, G. S., C. o T., Indianapolis, Indiana.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR DAUGHTERS OF TEMPERANCE.

(Date.)

The undersigned, inhabitants of ——, believing the Order of the Daughters of Temperance to be well calculated to extend the blessings of Total Abstinence, and promote the general welfare of mankind, respectfully petition the Grand Union to grant them a charter to open a new Union to be called the —— Union, No. —, D. of T., of the State of Indiana, located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves, individually and collectively, to be governed by the rules and usages of said Grand Union.

Enclosed is the Charter Fee, $5 00.

The above must be signed by at least eleven females, of proper age and good standing in community.

Address (post paid,) Mrs. ELIZA RICHMOND, G. S. S., Indianapolis, Indiana.

New Watch and Jewelry Store.

No 1, Bates House, Washington Street,

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

WE have now open the largest and best assortment of fine Watches and rich Jewelry ever offered in this city, to which we invite the examination of the public.

Our stock is all new—selected with great care, and comprises Watches, Diamond Work, Chains, Pins, Rings, Pencils, Lockets, of all kinds; Silver Ware, Clocks, Perfumery, Brushes, Soaps, Plated Ware, Castors, Fruit Baskets, &c., which we will sell for CASH at New York prices. Mr. E. W. NEFF, of this city, has taken charge of the Watch repairing department, and will spare no pains to give satisfaction to our customers.

july 6-tf E J. BALDWIN & CO.

D. CRAIGHEAD. R. BROWNING.

CRAIGHEAD & BROWNING,

Dealers in all kinds of

Drugs, Medicines, Surgical Instruments, Paints, Oils, Chemicals, Varnishes, Dye Stuffs, Glassware Window Glass, Brushes, Cosmetics, Spices, Cigars, Tobacco, Perfumery, &c.,

WASHINGTON STREET,

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

ALL are respectfully invited to call and examine our stock and prices, as we feel confident we can render satisfaction both as to prices and quality of articles. Great care is taken in the selection of articles, in reference to their purity, as we endeavor at all times to keep such articles as are strictly pure and genuine. Every article will be waranted as represented. Orders from Physicians and others promptly attended to. Particular attention given to filling Prescriptions and compounding Medicines, which, in all cases, shall receive the personal attention of one of the firm. june 30

HANNAMAN & DUZAN,

DEALERS IN

DRUGS AND MEDICINES,

Surgical Instruments, Paints, Oils, Varnishes, Dye Woods, Medical and Window Glass, Brushes, Perfumery, Soaps, &c.

Washington, 3 doors west of Pennsylvania St.,

june 30 1y INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

W. W. ROBERTS,

Druggist and Apothecary.

Wholesale and Retail Dealer in

DRUGS, MEDICINES, PAINTS, OILS, AND DYE STUFFS, BRUSHES, FANCY GOODS, AMERICAN AND FRENCH WINDOW GLASS, &c.

WASHINGTON ST., INDIANAPOLIS.

Physicians, Country Merchants, and the people generally, are invited to examine his stock, which will be sold at the lowest cash price.

☞ QUALITY WARRANTED TO SUIT. ☜

june 22 4m

COMMERCIAL COLLEGE,

(Late Commercial Institute,)

Of Indianapolis,

Established March 31, 1851.

INCORPORATED, 1853.

W. McK. SCOTT, A. M., Founder and President.

JAMES C. HAYDEN, (Late Professor in Bacon's Mercantile College, Cincinnati,)

PROF. OF BOOK-KEEPING AND PENMANSHIP.

THE Session will commence at College Hall as follows:

1st Session on the first Monday of September.
2d Session on the 1st Monday of November.
3d Session on the 1st Monday of January.
4th Session on the 1st Monday of March.
5th Session on the 1st Monday of May.

Having secured, permanently, the services of the distinguished Professor above named, and leased for a term of years the commodious and beautiful Hall formerly known as CONCERT HALL, but now named COLLEGE HALL, which is to be fitted up in a style of great elegance, taste, and convenience, the President would say, that this College now offers advantages superior to all others, for imparting a sound, thorough, and accomplished business education

COURSE OF STUDIES.

The Course of Studies, as enlarged, will be as follows, viz:

1 Book-Keeping, by Single and Double Entry, in all its various branches, and its application to all kinds of business.
2. The Laws, Customs, and Usages of Trade and Commerce.
3. Mercantile Arithmetic, upon the short and easy system of cancelation, (taught in no other College.)
4. Commercial Law, in a series of Lectures, thorough and systematic.
5. Business Penmanship.
6. Commercial Correspondence.
7 Lectures upon Banking, Political Economy, and other subjects valusble to the business man.

EXPENSES.

Cards of Admission, invariably in advance, or secured, $25; Diplomas $3; Stationery $5; Boarding $2 50 per week; incidentals, at option of student, $15. Making entire expenses about $75.

On application, a Catalogue will be furnished, giving full particulars.

All letters will receive prompt attention on being directed, post-paid, to

june 8 W. McK. SCOTT, President.

"God never made his works for man to mend." DR. FRANKLIN.

KIER'S ROCK OIL.

A NEW AND MOST IMPORTANT REMEDY FOR DISEASE.

DISCOVERED IN 1849.

IS drawn from a deep well near Pittsburgh—has been used with remarkable success in Ohio and Pennsylvania, and more Eastern States—and is now working its way West. An opportunity is now offered to the Afflicted for testing it. Where known and tried, it at once makes firm friends, and cures which are eloquent in its praise. Certificates of its power to heal are at hand—but we know well, reader, that such evidence, to have weight with you, now-a-days, must be in your own neighborhood.—You have only to try the Oil to be satisfied—it will SPEAK FOR ITSELF.

We have no war with the legion of Nostrums and Specifics of the day—we know but little about them—some say they are good for nothing. However that may be, the

Petroleum

will not be suppressed and kept back by reason of the above nostrums—duty and inclination both forbid it.

Those who are afflicted, are respectfully invited to get a Circular and look over the Directions for

Ague, Rheumatism, Piles, Diarrhœa, Flux, Tooth Ache, Burns, Worms, Scrofula, Coughs, Bronchitis, Croup, Old Sores, Cholera Morbus, Contractions of the Limbs and Joints, Sore Eyes, Blindness, Costiveness, Dyspepsia, and other Diseases.

By that time you may say, "it cures too much." But recollect it is not a HUMAN INVENTION, but compounded by Nature's master hand—and Nature does not do her work by halves.

The Oil is used both internally and externally.

As AGUE, SORE EYES, PILES, RHEUMATISM, and SCROFULA are so common in many parts of the West, we are constrained to say, that while this Oil will cure and relieve other diseases, it has been and is constantly used with most complete success in these cases.

☞ Price 50 cents per Bottle (half pint.)

Beware of all Rock Oil preparations, as some persons are offering a spurious article. Look for S. M. KIER'S name written on the label of the bottle.

For sale by the Druggists throughout Indiana, and by TOMLINSON BROTHERS, J P. POPE & Co., S. ROSENGARTEN, WM. TILLEY, and at wholesale by W. W. ROBERTS, Indianapolis, Indiana.

R. M. LYON, Fort Wayne,

may25 10w Proprietor in the Western States.

SOMETHING NEW.

LATHROP & STEVENS, Wholesale and Retail Dealers in BOOTS AND SHOES, at the West room in the Bates House, Washington Street, Indianapolis.

We are now opening a new and splendid stock of Boots and Shoes of every variety and style, which we are receiving direct from the manufacturers.—We design to keep constantly on hand a good assortment of the best quality of goods manufactured, which we can warrant to give satisfaction to all who may give them a trial. We will sell by the case, dozen, or single pair, at low prices for cash.—Our stock consists in part of Gents' fine Cloth, silk warp, glove kid, buck, patent calf, and enameled Gaiters and Ties of every variety and style; Ladies' fine silk warp Gaiters, Buskins, Ties, Slippers and Boots; Misses' ditto; Men's calf, goat, kip, and thick Boots and Brogans; Boys' and Youths' ditto; assorted Ladies, kid, goat and calf Boots and Buskins; Misses' ditto. Also every variety of Children's Shoes. Come and see for yourselves.

LATHROP & STEVENS,

may 25 4w Indianapolis, Indiana.

TEMPERANCE INN,

Bloomington, Indiana.

J. & S. M. ORCHARD, PROPRIETORS.

TRAVELLERS will find it to their advantage to call and try the accommodation of the TEMPERANCE INN. Stage office for all the different routes, in connection with this House. may25 6m ¶

THE LATEST WONDER of the 19th CENTURY.

DR. G. W. BENNETT'S

Celebrated Eye-Balm.

A SPECIFIC FOR CHRONIC, SORE, INFLAMED, AND WEAK EYES.

Prepared only by Dr. George W. Bennett, and for sale by Merchants and Druggists generally.

THIS Balm is an excellent and certain cure for sore and inflamed Eyes, in all cases of Psoroic, Scrofulous, and Purulent Opthalmia, and what is commonly termed wild hairs in the eye-lids. It is a specific in Infantile, Purulent, and Scrofulous Inflamed, and Sore Eyes, and all in the various diseases of the Eyes, that prevail among the human family, in every climate. It will be found a sovereign remedy if properly applied.

W. W. ROBERTS, Indianapolis, Ind. General Agent for State of Indiana, to whom all orders must be addressed.

Price---Twenty-five Cents.

I warrant the above Balm to cure if the directions are strictly observed, or return the money.

june 22 4m G. W. BENNETT.

REAL ESTATE AND GENERAL AGENCY OFFICE,

INDIANAPOLIS, INDIANA.

UNDER THE CONTROL OF W. M'K. SCOTT, Attorney & Counsellor at Law, and Notary Public.

The attention of the Agency will be devoted,

First—To the collection of debts and the payment of Taxes for non-residents in any county in the State. Also, the redemption of Lands sold for Taxes, sale, purchase or lease of Lands, purchase of adverse claims, examination and perfection of Title, &c., &c.

Second—To the prosecution of claims against the General Government, procuring Land Warrants, Patent Rights, and Pensions under the various Pension Laws, &c.

Third—All other Miscellaneous agencies as may be intrusted to the care of this office.

Fourth—The taking of Depositions and Attestation of all instruments requiring a seal

In all cases requiring an outlay of money for the benefit of individuals, the requisite funds must be transmitted in advance.

Prompt attention to all letters on business that are pre-paid. Address W. M'K. SCOTT,

Real Estate and General Agent,

jan 5-1y Indianapolis, Ind.

ADAMS & CO'S EXPRESS.

WE are now running a daily line East and West, accompanied by special messengers, and with the speed of the mails, running our own cars with the passenger trains.

Packages will be received at the cars up to the time of starting, and at our office until 1 o'clock each day.

We are prepared to transport packages, bank notes and specie, to and from any of the eastern cities, also, Louisville, Frankfort, and Lexington, Ky., St. Louis, Mo., or any points on the Ohio and Mississippi rivers; and to and from Terre Haute, and all intermediate points, and to forward freight from Terre Haute up and down the Wabash.

In addition to these, we have the most complete arrangements for transporting packages to and from California and Europe.

Exchange on England, Ireland, and Scotland, for sale, payable at any bank in the kingdom.

Foreign passage tickets; by Grinnell, Minturn & Co.'s line to Liverpool and London, constantly on hand, and for sale at the lowest rates.

Notes, drafts, and bills collected in any of the Eastern or Western cities

Orders for goods to be returned by Express, sent free. Our rates of charges have been greatly reduced, and the public will find this a safe and expeditious method of transportation.

Indianapolis, June 30, 1852. ADAMS & CO.

Office in Indianapolis in Journal Building, west side Pennsylvania Street.

Office open during business hours.

june30 1y C. WOODWARD, Agent.

The Cheapest Illustrated Paper for the Young.

PRICE ONLY TEN CENTS A YEAR, or nearly three papers for one cent, where 100 copies are taken.

Twenty-six numbers a year, and each number illustrated with from three to seven engravings.

The Youth's Penny Gazette,

A strictly Religious and Moral Paper, is published by the AMERICAN SUNDAY SCHOOL UNION and is designed to furnish the Children and Youth of the United States with reading matter, in a popular form, for the improvement of Mind and Heart.

It is published (not monthly, nor weekly, but) every other week, or twenty-six numbers in a year. It is religious but unsectarian, and the matter is carefully prepared with a view to the habits, character and prospects of American Youth.

TERMS OF THE PENNY GAZETTE.

$10 a year, in advance, for 100 copies, to one address. $5 a year, in advance, for 40 copies, to one address. $3 a year, in advance, for 20 copies, to one address. Single subscriptions, 25 cents per year.

TERMS BY MAIL, POSTAGE PAID.

☞ When the postage is paid at the place of mailing, the terms are very low. For $15 remitted, we will send 100 copies of the paper for one year, to one address—we paying postage. For $7 remitted, we will send 40 copies of the paper to one address, for one year—we paying postage. For $3 50 remitted, we will send 20 copies of the paper for one year, to one address—we paying postage. Less than 20 cannot be sent at this cheap rate.

Subscriptions received at the Society's House, No. 146 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.

Feb 16 3w G. S. SCOFIELD, Agent.

TO BUILDERS.

North Western Christian University.

THE Building Committee of the Board of Directors of the North-Western Christiana University, propose contracting for the west wing of the University Building, to be put up on the University grounds in the vicinity of Indianapolis.

Sealed Proposals in detail, with prices affixed for doing the work necessary to the completion of the said Wing, will be received until the 19th day of July next, and may be handed to the undersigned, or to J. T. Cox, Secretary of the Company, at the Book Store of Cox & Mathes, in Indianapolis

The materials and work to be according to the plan, drawings and specifications prepared by Wm. Tinsley, Architect, which may be seen and examined at his room, on the east side of Pennsylvania street, three doors north of the north-east Diagonal, in Indianapolis. The specifications have been materially changed and modified, so as to reduce the cost of the building.

Proposals for the whole combined, would be preferred; but will be received for the different parts and portions thereof separotely. The whole to be completed and fit for use by the first day of September, 1854.

Payments will be made as the work progresses, at such short periods as may suit the covenience of the Contractors. Bond and security will be required for the performance of the work.

In behalf of the Building Committee:

OVID BUTLER,

President of the Board of Directors.

June 10, 1853. june 22 3w

LITTLE, DRUM & ANDERSONS

WHOLESALE DEALERS IN

STAPLE AND FANCY DRY GOODS, BOOTS, SHOES, HATS, CAPS, STATIONERY, NOTIONS, TRIMMINGS, GROCERIES, HARDWARE, QUEENSWARE, AND GLASSWARE,

North side of Washington Street,

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

WE are receiving Country Produce of all descriptions, and paying the highest market price. Dealers visiting Indianapolis are respectfully invited to call and examine our stock and prices, both for Produce and Merchandise generally. june30 tf

JAMES HALL,

MERCHANT TAILOR,

No. 2. Temperance, Hall, Indianapolis,

Manufactu'ng & Clothing Emporium,

Wholesale and Retail Dealer in Ready Made Clothing, Cloths, Cassimers, Vestings, Trimmings, Trunks, Sachels, Canes, Umbrellas, Hats, Caps, a every description of Gentlemen's Furnishing.

Also:

General Agency for the sale of GRAND AND SUBORDINATE REGALIA, EMBLEMS, COSTUMES, &c., FOR THE ORDERS OF MASONS, ODD FELLOWS, TEMPLE OF HONOR, SON, DAUGHTERS, AND CADETS OF TEMPERANCE. oct27 1y

The American Life and Health Insurance Company.

Office—No. 7, South Third St., Philadelphia.

Officers.

LEONARD JEWELL, President.
JAMES PEACOCK, Treasurer.
JOHN C. SIMS, Sec'y and Actuary.
THOS. S. SMITH, Solicitor

JOHN F. BIRD, FRED. A. FICKARDT, } Medical Examiners.

CHARLES WOODWARD, Indianapolis, Ind., General Agent for the State of Indiana.

THIS Company issues policies at Total Abstinence Rates, Joint stock Rates, and at Mutual Rates, which for $1000 on the life of a person 30 years of age, are as follows:

Age.	Total Abstinence.	Joint Stock.	Mutual
30	$15.40	$19.60	$23.60

A further table of Rates will be furnished at the Office.

The condition in Total Abstinence rates (believed to be the lowest in the Union,) is entire forfeiture upon the departure of the Insured from Total Abstinence in its strictest sense.

Policies at Joint Stock and Mutual rates, contain no condition except as usual in Life Insurance.

HEALTH INSURANCE DEPARTMENT.

All Moneys received from the Insured, for Annual Premiums, after deducting expenses, will be divided among the Sick

The Public have for some time been familiar with the subject of Life and Health Insurance, but it is obvious that too little thoughts has been given to the latter. LIFE Insurance benefits our successors, while HEALTH Insurance directly benefits ourselves. It makes provision for a time of sickness, when the products of a man's industry are cut off, and want unites with Disease to aggravate his distress. It is at this gloomy period, when he is prostrated and helpless, and when despondency would otherwise overwhelm him, that the holder of a Health Insurance Policy will realize its benefits.

RATES, under 50 years of age,

$2.00	per year,	for	$2.00	per week.
3,00	"	"	3,00	"
4,00	"	"	4,00	"
5,00	"	"	5,00	"
6,00	"	"	6,00	"

Over fifty and under sixty.

$2,50	per year,	for	$2,50	per week.
3,75	"	"	3,00	"
5,00	"	"	4,00	"
6,25	"	"	5,00	"
7,50	"	"	6,00	"

When the Fund shall amount to Three Dollars and upwards for every person insured and sufficient to warrant an additional distribution, the weekly allowances will be increased in accordance with the Rules of the Policy.

All the members of a Temple or Division insured at greatly reduced rates.

Applications for Agencies in any of the cities or towns in the State, should be made to the undersigned, post paid, or in person

As Agent for the above Company, I am prepared to receive applications for Policies at any of the above rates.

CHARLES WOODWARD, Agent,

At ADAMS & CO.'S Express Office.

J. L. MOTHERSHEAD, Medical Examiner.

june 30 '52-1y

Ohio Life Insurance Company,

Capital $100,000.

JOINT STOCK AND MUTUAL,

CINCINNATI.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS.

Wm. Burnet, Jno. N Ridgway, Chas. Goodman, S. Robert, E. S. Haines, Jno. M. Blair, J W. Donohue, Eden B Reeder, Wm. Person.

WM. BURNET, President.

S. W. REEDER, Sec'y J. W. DONOHUE, Vice Pres't

Office in Reeder's Building, Third street, between Almy's and City Bank.

This Company insures Lives at the lowest rates consistent with safety, either upon the Joint Stock or Mutual plan.

In the Joint Stock Department, premium payable quarterly, semi-annually or annually. On the Mutual plan, one-half the premium paid in Cash, the balance by a note bearing six per cent. interest—the interest only payable annually. Persons insuring on the mutual plan, participate in the profits of the Company in that department.

The undersigned having been appointed agent for the above Company, is prepared to fill applications for Life Insurance, on favorable terms.

Any information on the subject and pamphlets explaining the nature and utility of Life Insurance, furnished without charge, at the office of the Agent.

C. WOODWARD, Agent.

Office at Adam's & Co's Express Office, Journal Building, Pennsylvania street, Indianapolis, Ind.

june 30, '52-1y.

Railroad City Book Store.

COX & MATHES,

South side of Washington, between Illinois and Meridian streets,

INDIANAPOLIS, INDIANA.

AT wholesale and retail, Standard and Miscellaneous Works, Law, and Medical Books, School Books, Plain and Fancy Stationery, Blank Books, Wall Papers, &c., &c. mar 2

CHEAP WATCHES & JEWELRY.

Good Gold Watches at $24!

WE are now in our new Room No. 1, Palmer House, with a lot of beautiful Watches and Jewelry which we are selling lower than ever heretofore sold in Indianapolis, for instance we sell

Good 18 K Case Gold Lepines at $24.
" 18 K " " Levers at $28.
" Silver Anchor Levers $12 to $18.
" " Cylenders, $9 to $12.
" " Quarter's $6 to $10.

In addition to the above we have a fine assortment of other description of Watches all of which we will sell lower than any other firm dare sell in the place. I have in my employ a very superior Watch Repairer who will always be on on hand to do watch repairing of every description. Mr. Michot has worked in Geneva, Paris, New York and other large cities and has had great experience in his Branch of the business. All Watches warranted for one year, and the money in all cases refunded, provided they do not give entire satisfaction.

feb9 tf E. W. NEFF.

SMALL CHANGE.

THE undersigned is prepared to furnish Merchants and others with three cent pieces from the United States Mint at Philadelphia, free of transportation, in sums of 30, 60, and 90 dollars, upon deposit of Gold or Eastern Exchange. Also cents and half cents, upon payment of frieght on gold to Philadelphia, or on Eastern Exchange free of freight.

C. WOODWARD, Agent,

june 30 Adams & Co.'s Express.

A CHANCE TO MAKE MONEY.

Profitable and honorable Employment!

THE Subscriber is desirous of having an agent in each county and town of the Union. A capital of from $5 to $10 only will be required, and anything like an efficient, energetic man can make from three to five dollars per day; indeed some of the Agents now employed are realizing twice that sum. Every information will be given by addressing, (postage paid) WM. A. KINSLER,

june 15 3w ¶ Box 601, Philadelphia P. O.

THE ILLUSTRATED MAGAZINE OF ART.

THE five numbers of this Magazine which are published, place it at the head of publications of this kind No expense will be spared to make it in every respect worthy of the name, the "Illustrated Magazine of Art. The Engravings which are preparing for the future numbers are in the hands of first-class American and European Artists.

A Series of most interesting Tales will appear in it. "The School of Life," written and Illustrated by ANNA MARY, daughter of William and Mary Howitt, will shortly appear; also, "The Dead Bridal," an historical romance, illustrative of the most interesting period in the history of the Venetian Republic, by JONATHAN FREKE SLINGSBY, of the Dublin University Magazine; contributions, too, from WILLIAM and MARY HOWITT, PERCY B. ST. JOHN, and other writers of distinction in America and Europe

The following is a brief outline of the plan of the Magazine:

I. The Historical Department will abound with picturesque representations of the most remarkable events which have occurred in this and other countries; accompanied with interesting anecdotes and details from the pen of the most eminent writers of the day. This department will contain several splendid engravings, designed by the first artists of the world, and engraved in the highest style of modern art.

II. The Men and Women of the Age. This department will consist of beautifully executed portraits of the leading characters of the age, especially of those who figure on the stage of humanity as the world's benefactors. Each portrait will be accompanied by an interesting biographical sketch

III. The Wonders of Natural History, Botany, and other sciences, will be developed in choice Engravings of Beasts, Birds, Fishes, Insects, Forest Trees, Flowers, Geological and Fossil Specimens, &c., with accompanying descriptions.

IV. The Triumphs of Architectural Art will be displayed in exquisitely finished representations of Cathedrals, Churches, Palaces, and other models of ancient and modern Architectural Art.

V. The Works of the Great Masters, selected from the principal Galleries of Art in the World. In general, the portrait of the Master will be given, accompanied with a highly finished engraved copy of his chef d œuvre.

VI. The Scientific Portions will be rendered highly interesting by the familiar explanations, and the numerous diagrams which will accompany each subject.

VII. Manufactures. The principal manufacturing processes in use will be fully explained by minute details, and an abundance of beautiful engravings.

VIII. Machinery and Inventions will have due attention paid to them, and be described by numerous appropriate engravings.

IX. The Literary Department, independently of the various articles accompanying the illustrations, will comprise original and interesting narratives, contributed by the most popular writers of the day, with numerous illustrations.

In every respect, the "Illustrated Magazine of Art," will be decidedly

SUPERIOR TO ANY MAGAZINE OF THE DAY.

Each Monthly part will contain at least Thirty superb Engravings, four of which will be printed separately, on supefine Plate Paper

The greatest care will be manifested in every department of production. The Paper will be of the first manufacture, and the Ink supplied from the celebrated Printing Ink Establishment of Messrs. Lawson & Co., of Paris Six of the monthly portions, when completed, will form a volume which, for interest, originality, value and beauty, will defy competition. It will not only be an interesting family book, but a rich ornament for the drawing-room table, and a pleasant companion in the study.

The parts will appear on the First of every Month at Twenty-five Cents each.

ALEXANDER MONTGOMERY,

may 25 17 Spruce Street, New-York.

SPLENDIDLY ILLUSTRATED WORKS.

THE ALPS, SWITZERLAND, SAVOY AND LOMBARDY.

With the Magazine for June will be ready. Part I., price Twenty-five Cents, of a Magnificent Work to be completed in Twelve Monthly Parts, entitled

THE ALPS, SWITZERLAND, SAVOY AND LOMBARDY, with an account of the most recent Ascents to Mont Blanc, &c. By the Rev. Charles Williams. This work, when completed, will form a large thick Volume, in Imperial Octavo, containing upwards of Three Hundred beautiful Engravings, descriptive of the peculiar Scenery of those most interesting portions of Europe, with the Occupations of the Inhabitants, &c., &c.

Cassell's Natural History.

On the First of July will commence

CASSELL'S NATURAL HISTORY, which for variety, beauty and completeness, will claim to be considered as a first-class work, upon this most interesting subject. The First volume will be devoted to the Feathered Tribe of the Creation and will contain upwards of Three Hundred Engravings, in the first style of Art. The volume will be completed in Twelve Monthly Parts, Imperial Octavo. Price 25 cents each.

History of England.

On the First of July will appear Part I., price 25 cts. of THE ILLUSTRATED HISTORY OF ENGLAND, from the earliest period on record to the present time. Edited by ROBERT FERGUSON, LL. D.

This History, which is intended to form a great National Work, will extend to Four Volumes, Imperial Octavo; each Volume to be completed in Twelve Monthly Parts, price 25 cents each. The Work will comprehend the Political, Civil, and Domestic History of the Nation, and its Progress in Civilization, Literature, Art, &c. It will be profusely Illustrated with Engravings from Designs by GILBERT, PHILLIPPOTEAUX, WILLIAMS, and others. Representations of the most remarkable Events will be worked separately upon Plate Paper. The Portraits will form a complete Gallery, not only of the Monarchs, but of those individuals whose names are prominent in England's History. Also, Antiquities, including Autographs, Buildings, Costume, Furniture, Arms, Coins, Monuments, Manufactures &c., of each Epoch.

History of Hungary.

July First will be published, in one Handsome Volume, Imperial Octavo, price, One Dollar and Twenty-five Cents, in Cloth Boards,

THE ILLUSTRATED HISTORY OF HUNGARY, AND THE MAGYARS, from the Earliest Period to the clos of the late War. By EDWARD LAWRENCE GODKIN. The Volume will be Illustrated with One Hundred highly finished Engravings, including representations of the principal Battles; Portraits of the early Kings, and of the Statesmen and Generals who figured in the War of Independence; Costumes of the Peasantry, &c.; Views of the chief Towns and Fortresses, &c.; with an accurate Description of the Manners and Customs of the People, their Literature, Commerce, Arts, &c.

ALEXANDER MONTGOMERY,

may25 Publisher, 17 Spruce Street, New-York.

MANSION HOUSE,

Cambridge City, Indiana.

J. CUNNINGHAM, Proprietor.

TRAVELLERS

Will find it to their advantage to call and try the accommodation of the MANSION HOUSE.

STAGE OFFICE also in connection with this House.

may 4 6m

INDIANA STATE LIBRARY

TEMPERANCE CHART.

A Weekly Journal:---Devoted to Temperance, Morality, Education, Literature, Useful Arts, Science, General Intelligence, &c.

J. W. GORDON, M. D., Editor.] ORGAN OF THE GRAND DIVISION OF INDIANA. [JOHN H. OHR, Printer.

VOL. III. INDIANAPOLIS, IND., WEDNESDAY, JULY 20, 1853. NO. 4.

THE TEMPERANCE CHART,

IS PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY, BY THE GRAND DIVISION, S. of T. OF INDIANA.

Edited by J. W. Gordon, M. D.

To whom all Communications and Subscriptions must be addressed, post-paid.

Office—in second story of Temperance Hall Building, Washington St., Indianapolis.

TERMS:

Single copy, one year,..... 75 cts.

☞ In advance in all cases,

TERMS OF ADVERTISING.—Circulation 4000 copies.

One Squre, (12 lines,) for one week,	$0 50
" " for each subsequent insertion,	25
" " for 3 months,	3 00
" " for 6 months,	5 00
" " for 1 year without alteration,	8 00
" " for 1 year, with changes,	12 00

A reduction made on larger advertisements.
Cuts double the above rates.
Advertisements must be handed in by Saturday, of each week, to insure insertion.
Applications for advertising, or for any kind of Printing for the Order, must be made to

J. H. OHR, Indianapolis.

MISCELLANEOUS.

From the Tecumseh Herald.

Female Influence, or THE ELOQUENCE OF A TEAR.

A TEMPERANCE TALE, BY A LADY.

[CONTINUED.]

'Good evening! good evening, friend Wilkins,' said Mansfield. 'Let me introduce you to Miss Graves, by this fine moonlight.'

'How do you do, Miss Graves,' responded the other, with a fine bow and friendly shake of the hand.

'But, Mansfield, where on earth are you rambling? Just stop and give an account of yourself.'

'I trust not beyond proper bounds, as I find you in our travels; but to reply, we are bound to a temperance meeting.'

'A temperance meeting! ha, ha, ha!' shrugging his shoulders; 'rather a chilling terminus for a cold winter night. But where is your destination?'

'To ——, on —— street.'

'Hi, ho! why, my friend, I would not risk my morals there one evening.'

'Not a very inviting place, we admit.' observed Maria, 'but Mr. Mansfield goes there under my protection, and I will guarantee the same to you, Mr. Wilkins.'

'Thank you, thank you—an object of itself.'

'Better come along,' said Mansfield, 'I hear we are to have a celebrated lecturer.'

'Ah, but I have no opinion of these eloquent speakers. They somehow have the power to control the will for the time being, compel a man to walk straight up, sign away his rights, and then when he happens to want a little of the needful, why he has a certain written document poked into his face, or conscience, at any rate.'

'Oh, I go as much to hear the music as anything,' said Mansfield.

'Music! bless me, how can you raise music in such a place as that?'

'I don't know; I am not on the committee of arrangements; it is enough for me to know that my companion is to be vocalist on the occasion.'

'Enough said, you take me prisoner, Miss Graves; but please don't lure me to the water's brink to-night.'

'Why, you take me so by surprise, that you give me no opportunity to take—oh, I mean—to make any preparation whatever.'

When the company reached the place of meeting, it was evident that Maria was considered an important personage in the affair. Some two or three stood at the door waiting her approach, and while one conducted her companions to seats, she was led by another to a platform raised for the choir. She was scarcely seated, before it sent forth a soul-inspiring song, that sent a thrill through the whole house. Crowds who lingered around the doors, were lured within the walls. But none felt more deeply interested than our reckless young friend. He listened with deep emotion for a few moments, and then seizing the arm of his friend, said,

'Mansfield, you sinner, you have got me into a tight place—I cannot endure this—you know

"Music so softens and disarms the mind,
That not an arrow can resistance find."'

The speaker surveyed his audience, and it needed but a glance to show that many before him had been debased and impoverished by intemperance. His soul was stirred within him, and his words were fitly spoken, for it was soon evident that his hearers, if devoid of all else, retained hearts to feel. Mansfield listened with intense interest, and when the speaker portrayed individual influence and responsibility, he thought if he had no other incentive, he should pledge himself in order to try to save his friends. But when he proceeded to portray the incipient stages of intemperance, that secret inclination, that asks for a little at this time, and but a little more at another, he thought perhaps he had better take the pledge to save himself.

He watched with deep anxiety the effect upon his fellow-student; his merriment and witticisms had ceased, and he sat apparently engaged in deep, serious thought, while the unbidden tear would sometimes escape from the eye. Ah! could he be induced from this hour to deny himself, and commence a different course! Shall I, thought he, try the art of persuasion? No, let me first try the influence of example.

When the lecture was closed the pledge of total abstinence from all that can intoxicate, was read to the audience—a request was made for signatures—Edward Mansfield arose and led the way, and how cheerfully he advanced when he heard the quick footstep of his friend just behind him. How the mist had now cleared away, as the light of truth burst forth upon his moral vision. Could he longer question the expediency of an enterprize that had been so signally blessed in the rescue of the companion, on whom remonstrance and entreaty had been lavished in vain. But not him alone, but the throng now following his example, impatient, as it were, to reach the city of refuge, ere the man-slayer should arrest their flight. This was a new scene for him to witness; new emotions sprung up in his bosom, and he resolved to atone, if possible, for his past neglect, by his future efforts in the cause of temperance.

But, gentle reader, what do you imagine were the feelings of our young heroine on this occasion? Were the votaries of fashion in that gay throng, who thought to dissuade her from this errand of love, as happy at this moment as Maria Graves? Could the most envied in that group experience the pleasure that filled her bosom, as she thought some wretched home might henceforth be happy, some prisoner might from this hour be free. How her very heart leaped for joy, to see the wayward stranger brought thither by her efforts, plucked as a brand from the burning; and how prompt in devising plans to secure his safety. If she rejoiced thus over those on whom she had no claim, what must have been her emotions, when she saw him, to whom she had confided her heart with its holiest love, and for whom she must soon forego all the fond endearments of a father's house, voluntarily pledge himself to such a course, that whatever ills might lurk in her pathway through life, she would never be made wretched by his intemperance, she never could become

'That lowly thing, the DRUNKARD'S wife.'

We will now pass over some few years in our history, and with this lapse of time, transfer our readers to a distance of some hundreds of miles. We now find James Headly and Edward Mansfield located in a flourishing town in the western part of Illinois, partners in business, and becoming somewhat eminent in their profession. They have been equally successful in the attainment of wealth, and each can congratulate himself on possessing a home of his own, the result of his own industry and enterprise. Their dwellings stand side by side, distinguished by their peculiar taste and elegance, and superintended by those whom each had chosen as the companion of his future adventures. James Headly has but one child, a son of six years of age; and Edward Mansfield has a son near the same age, and two daughters younger. As these families are united in their several interests, and by the ties of relationship, it is natural they should sympathize in their views and course of conduct. But there was one subject that occasioned some little difference of opinion, the same that drew forth the discussion at the commencement of our story. When Edward Mansfield became a resident of the West, he did not forget his previous resolution, to exert his influence in the cause of temperance, but became one of its most zealous advocates.—The friends of reform rallied around him, and he led them on in their efforts, to suppress the evils caused by the use of intoxicating liquors. Thus he had labored from year to year, never remitting his efforts, nor pausing to inquire how his popularity might be affected by his course. But his colleague pursued a course somewhat different; although equally energetic, and solicitous to promote the public welfare in every other respect: yet, with regard to the temperance reform, he was decidedly non-intervention in his course of conduct. But we will do him the justice to state, that he never entered into the views of its opponents—he was too humane and conscientious to do that, and when urged to cooperate with others, would decline in the most courteous manner, expressing his deep regret that it was not in his power, giving a most plausible excuse, that as his partner was so efficient in his efforts, he felt it to be a duty to give him the opportunity, and he must necessarily remain at home, to transact their ordinary business. No, James Headly never opposed the cause of temperance—he simply let it alone.

We are not prepared to state how far this prudent, non-committal system, had aided his political interests, in securing a seat in the State Legislature, we will only add, he was the succesful candidate; and if there is no possible way to find out his principles on this contested point, as he is now receiving the congratulations of his friends, we will be excused if we pry somewhat into family affairs, and report a private conversation between Mrs. Headly and her little son, to learn something respecting his practice, with regard to this matter.

'O mother!' said little George, as he entered the room and found Mrs. Headly making more than usual preparations for dinner. 'Who is comiug here to-day? Why, here are three plates more than we need. Who is it, mother? Please tell me.'

'Don't interrupt me, my son; I am very busy: I have but just heard we are to have company; sit down and be quiet, and I will answer your inquiries, as soon as I have time.'

George took his seat in the corner, quietly watching operations, revolving in his mind who could be coming; he thought, at length, that arrangements must be complete, he should now be put in possession of the secret, when he saw his mother unlock the sideboard, and take out a decanter of wine. Springing from his seat, he exclaimed,

'O mother, you need not tell me who are coming now; I know who are coming; I know all about it.'

'Why, my son,' said his mother, as she disposed of her wine, and called him to her; 'what has led to this wonderful discovery—who do you suppose are to dine with us?'

'Why, some of father's particular friends, I expect: some gentleman in public life.'

'What,' said his mother, laughing outright, 'why are they to be gentlemen in public life?'

'Now, I will tell you, mother, why I think so: don't you remember, the other day, when some gentlemen dined with us, you had that same black bottle on the table, and don't you remember, Aunt Maria happened in just as father was filling their glasses, and don't you remember she came back when they were gone, and talked a long time about it, and mother, I thought you got a little angry, for Aunt Maria cried.'

'Oh no, my son, mother was not angry; but what has all that to do with our company to-day?'

'Just let me tell you, mother: don't you remember you said, as father was now getting into public life, if his particular friends entertained him with wine when he was abroad, he must do the same to them when they came to see him—don't you remember it, mother?'

'Well, George, you seem to remember other things better than you did your spelling lesson this morning; but, come, if you wish to dine with these gentlemen, you say are to be here, you must brush your hair, and make yourself ready.'

'I will, mother; but just tell me, what do you mean by gentlemen in public life; I don't understand it.'

'Well, my dear, they are persons whom the people choose, and send to a particular place, to make our laws.'

'To make our laws, mother! Why, I shouldn't think such peeple would drink wine. I tell you, if I was there, I would make a law nobody should get drunk. O mother! if you could only see how Jack Smith beats his poor little Johnny, when he gets drunk, you would just speak to these gentlemen to make a law about it. But, mother!' as if startled with a new idea, 'are you not afraid these gentlemen may drink too much themselves? Oh, please take that off the table; for I would feel so bad if they should get drunk and whip their little boys when they go home.'

'Now, George, you must not detain me a moment longer—go at once and do as I bid you.'

'O mother, while I think of it, just please let me tell you what I heard at uncle Edward's the other day. May I, mother?'

The curiosity of the mother was excited, and he was permitted to proceed.

'It seems to me it was the very day after Aunt Maria was here, I was over there playing marbles with Cousin Henry, and Uncle Edward and Aunt Maria were sitting in the porch talking, and I thought they were talking about father. Well, I just thought I would know what they were saying about him, so I told Henry I was tired playing, and was standing beside Aunt Maria, putting my marbles into my bag, when Uncle Edward looked straight towards our house, and shaking his head, he said, "Well, peor man, there is trouble ahead of him." Just then, Aunt Maria drew me up to her, and pushing back my hair, she kissed me, and then a tear fell on my forehead, right there, mother, and I felt just like crying myself. Now, what made Uncle look fo sober, and Aunt Maria cry?'

'Why, my child, how can I tell what they were talking about. Are you ready to obey me now—but stop, George, as there will be so many at the table, if you choose, you may go over and dine with your cousin to-day. Be a a good boy, my son, don't be noisy.'

It is needless to say, the proposed visit had more attractions for little George than company, State laws, or temperance, and Mrs. Headly was left to entertain their friends, with fear of his comments upon the propriety of their course.

[CONTINUED IN OUR NEXT.]

The Lost and the Living.

BY FANNY FERN.

The husband's tears may be few and brief,
He may woo and win another;
But the daughter clings with unchanging grief
To the image of her mother.

But a fleeting twelvemonth had passed since the heart (that for years had beat against his own) was for ever stilled, when Waltor Lee brought again a fair young creature to share his widowed home. No father, nor mother, brother, nor sister, claimed any part of the orphan heart that he coveted and won. No expense or pains had he spared to decorate the mansion for her reception. Old and familiar objects, fraught with the tenderest associations, had been removed to make way for the upholsterers choicest fancies. There was no picture left upon the wall, with sweet, sad, mournful eyes, to follow him with silent reproach. Every thing was fresh and delightful as the new-born joy that filled his heart.

'My dear Edith,' said he, fondly pushing back the hair from her forehead; 'there should be no shadow in your pathway, but I have tried in vain to indnce Nelly to give you the welcome you deserve; however, she shall not annoy you, I shall compel her to stay in the nursery till she yield to my wishes.'

'Oh, no! don't do that,' said the young stepmother, anxiously; 'I think I understand her. Let me go to her, dear Walter,' and she tripped lightly out of the room, and left him to himself.

Walter Lee looked after her retreating figure with a lover-like fondness. The room seemed to grow suddenly darker when the door closed after her. Reaching out his hand, he almost unconsciously took up a book that lay near him. A slip of paper fluttered out from between the leaves, like a white-winged messenger.—The joyous expression of his face faded into one of deep sorrow, as he read it.—The handwriting was his child's mother's. It ran thus:

'Oh, to die, and be forgotten! This warm heart, cold—these active limbs, still—these lips, dust! Suns to rise and set, flowers to bloom, the moon, the silver leaf and tree around my dear home; the merry laugh, the pleasant circle—and I not here! The weeds choking the flowers at my headstone; the several tresses of sunny hair forgotten in their envelope; the sun of happiness so soon absorbing the dew-drop of sorrow! The cypress changed for the orange wreath! Oh, no; don't quite forget: close your eyes sometimes, and bring before you the face that once made sunshine in your home: feel, again, the twining clasp of loving arms; the lips that told you (not in words) how dear you were. O Walter, don't quite forget! From Nellie's clear eyes, let her mother's soul still speak to you! MARY LEE.'

Warm tears fell upon the paper as Walter Lee folded it back. He gave himself time to rally, and then glided gently up to the nursery door. It was partially open. A little fairy creature of some five summers stood in the middle of the floor. Her tiny fiace was half hidden in sunny curls. Her little pinafore was full of toys, which she grasped tightly in either hand.

'No, you are not my mamma,' said the child. 'I want my own dead mamma, and I am sorry papa brought you here.'

'Oh, don't say that,' said the young stepmother, 'don't call me mamma, if it gives you pain, dear. I am quite willing you should love your own mamma better than me.'

Nelly looked up with a pleasant surprise.

'I had a dear mamma and papa, once,' she continued; 'and brothers and sisters, so many and so merry! but they are all dead, and sometimes my heart is very sad; I have no one to love me now hut my papa and you.'

Nellie's eyes began to moisten; and taking one after another of the little souvenirs and toys from her pinafore, she said, 'And you won't take away this—and this, that my dead mamma gave me?'

'No, indeed, dear Nellie!'

'And you will let me climb in my papa's lap, as I used to; and put my cheek to his, and kiss him as much as ever I can, won't you?'

'Yes, yes, my darling.'

Walter Lee could hear no more—his heart was full.

What! Mary's child pleading with a stranger, for room in her father's heart! In the sudden gush of this new fountain of tenderness, had he forgotten or overlooked the claims of that helpless little one! God forbid! From Nellie's clear eyes let her mother's soul speak to you.—Aye, and it did!

When next Walter Lee met his young bride it was with a chaste tenderness.—Nellie's loving little heart was pressed closely against his own. He was again 'her own papa.' No, he did not quite forget.—Olive Branch.

A ROMANCE.—An instance of constancy in affection came to our ears a day or two since, of which we cannot forbear making note. A son of Erin, who has been absent from the home of his fathers, for thirty-five years, on Monday came from Butler county, and met in this city the "lady of his love," to whom he had pledged his affections in early youth. Three thousand miles of water had not dampened the ardor of his attachment, and immediately upon their meeting he renewed the offer of his heart's treasures. The proposal was accepted, and soon the twain were made one by the "silken tie that binds two willing hearts." Their heads were becoming whitened by the frosts of time, but yet they remained true to each other. Though far, far asunder, heart answered unto heart, and the clinging affection but ripened with the lapsing of years. Search the records of the world, and where shall we find a parallel to this? May the dews of Heaven dlstil gently upon them as they wander hand in hand down life's vale, and may no dimming cloud obscure the sunshine of their happiness.—Ledger.

A WIFE.—When a man of sense comes to marry, it is a companion whom he wants, and not an artist. It is not merely a creature who can paint, and play, and sing, and dance. It is a being who can comfort and counsel him; one who can reason and reflect, and feel and judge, and discourse and discriminate; one who can assist him in his affairs, lighten his sorrows, purify his joys, strengthen his principles, and educate his chrildren.—Such is the woman who is fit for a mother and the mistress of a family. A woman of the former description may occasionally figure in a drawing room, but is entirely unfit for a help-mate to man, and to "train up a child in the way he should go."

There are some persons on whom their faults sit well, and others who are made ungraceful by their good qualities.

INDIANA STATE LIBRARY INDIANAPOLIS

TEMPERANCE CHART.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.
WM. HANNAMAN, C. E. BABB,
JAMES HALL, R. T. BROWN,
JOHN B. ABBETT.

WEDNESDAY, JULY 20, 1853.

To Correspondents.—Letters will be attended to in our next.

Sister Junia.—We regret that we have not been able to please our sister. We asked a suspension of hostilities, and were entirely willing to submit to the chains of the victor, not deeming that in this civilized age, the captive must suhmit to torture in addition to humility. But it seems we were mistaken. It is not enough that we have passed under the yoke—the faggot, rack, and red-hot pincers must be applied. Truly our sister's humanity astonishes us!

"The flesh will quiver when the pincers tear."

And if your victim should, in writhing under the infliction, break his chain, he might not so easily become your captive again.

All that Sister Junia says of fair young brides, care-worn old women, and the like, is well enough; but really we are at a loss to know what it has to do with neighbor Brown's likeness to a particular class of old women, that modesty (?) will not allow us to name, lest our sister should deem us guilty of an unpardonable outrage. It is sufficient for our defence against our dear Sister, that a most gifted lady, whose genius is an honor to our country, has said, that, "although women are not so frequently mean as men, yet when they are mean, they are meaner than men can become." Sister, that is a lady's opinion—the editor of one of the best periodicals in our Union. Now, our sin was, to think and say, too, that our neighbor had done for himself like the old women of this class. A few years ago you might have sent "Barnum word;" for we have been informed since we came into this city as a dweller, that such an old woman then infected its borders. You have lived here longer, dear sister, and of course know better than we, whether such specimens are worthy of being defended by the powerful pen of our chaste and gifted Sister Junia.

The Blind Asylum.

On entering the Blind Asylum one day last week with a gentleman from the South-eastern portion of the State, and and seeing the mournful aspect of its unfortunate inmates, he remarked, that it was not in the hearts of the people of Indiana to say it should be closed for want of funds. All they wanted, to come to its rescue, was to know its necessity. We then entirely concurred with him, and have yet seen no sufficient reason to change our opinion. To scatter the pupils of the institution, we can but regard as a great injury to the unfortunate. If the blow fell upon the authors of the extravagance complained of, we would say, let it fall; but the children, gathered up from all parts of the State, have had no hand in it, and upon their defenceless heads it is to burst with all its horrors.

We have been informed that others of our benevolent institutions have been sustained by loans on individual security, in anticipation of the liberality of the Legislature. The anticipation in such cases was never disappointed. So it would be, if the present emergency of the Blind Asylum were met in the same way. The sum required could easily be raised. Half the effort made in that behalf that is made every day to build railroads, would more than do it. If the trustees are too poor to run the risk, either in spirit or in purse, the door is not shut against private benefactions. How small an effort on the part of His Excellency, the Governor, would it require to effect an object so desirable.—He knows enough of the people of Indiana to be assured, that he who has appealed to their liberality so often with success, would not be denied when appealing to them in behalf of the unfortunate Blind.—Did ever a more glorious opportunity offer for a display of those qualities that ally men to the Divine nature? How grand a spectacle would it present to an admiring people—to an approving Creator! Have we no Parker among our merchants—or do they not all make one Parker in deeds of heavenly charity? We can not believe it. They only wait the appeal from the right quarter. Let our Governor, who has done so much and so well for Indiana, make the appeal, and all will be well.—Then, too, it will be said: "Many actions have elicited our esteem, but this commands our love. It is the noblest deed of all!"

Our Cause.

The cause of Temperance is flourishing in nearly all the parts of the State from which we hear; and especially where by vigilance on the part of officers, the law against the traffic in spirituous liquors is duly enforced. We are daily in the receipt of letters from such places, informing us that the groggeries are dried up, and all their most prominent evils suppressed. This would be the case everywhere, if the law was administered by faithful men.—But, unfortunately, some places are cursed with whisky-guzzling officers, and notwithstanding the will of the people has been expressed in favor of the suppression of the traffic, they are still groaning under its evils. Among these places, none stand out more prominently than the State capital. There has been no time since we knew this city, when there were so many unmistakeably clear evidences of the abundant sale of liquor as at present. All the prominent evils that follow in the train of the traffic are, of course, present. Fights' robberies, and homicides have made their appearance, as a part of our bill of fare, and promise soon to be daily occurrences. The people should remember hereafter that without officers, the best law is powerless. Let them hereafter elect men.

Thomas Gennaty.—Aonther Whisky Death.—On last Saturday night a week ago, Thomas Gennaty received his death at the house of Timothy Quinn and Roger Mullen. His death was manifestly occasioned by violence; his skull was severely fractured, and considerable clots of blood accumulated on the brain, besides other appearances of rough usage. There has been an investigation, but the evidence was conflicting in its character, and the parties charged with the crime were consequently dis-charged from custody.—One fact, however was proven, and that was, that whether murdered by men or killed by accident, his death may be referred to the Liquor Fiend; for he had been so drunk for three days before, that he ate but one meal during the time, aud was thought to be in a state approaching delirium tremens just before he received his death. The witnesses for the defence stated that his death was occasioned by falling down stairs; those for the State, that there was a fight in the house, and that Gennaty was afterwards thrown out on the ground insensible. We do not know who is right.

Ladies at Elections.—Tha ladies of Grand Rapids, Michigan, attended the polls on the 20th, to urge their husbands and their brothers to vote for the Maine Law. They were of course successful.—In Leoni, the ladies also came out, and the town gave 206 of a majority for the law. Go it, ladies! It is you and your children it most interests; and even if it does no other good, it will warm up many a lone, cold hearth! Hit him again, ladies. The hydra must be annihilated—not only his teeth and claws must be drawn and shorn, but his whole carcase must be destroyed. The poison is destined to go overboard. It has too long held the sway, and a terrible sway it has been, as many a poor family can testify. We hope your sisters everywhere will follow your good example. Years ago we said this cause must triumph when the ladies shall take it up in right good earnest. Women are strongest!—Dollar Times.

We clip the foregoing from the Times, and commend it to the daughters of Indiana, as an example worthy of imitation. While it exhibits the power of female influence, it forcibly appeals to all who, possessing, have heretofore failed to exercise that power. Let the ladies enter this field of labor, and on all oecasions meet and oppose the destroyer, and a few years will see the end. It is worth while at least to make the experiment. Try what can be done for the "Hoosier State."

Coal! Coal!!

There will be no necessity for our citizens to want coal during the coming winter, as they did many times during last. The mines of Clay county were not then fairly opened; now they are, and our citizens will not have any difficulty in procuring a good article, and in sufficient quantities.

We visited the mines of the Highland Coal Company, composed of Andrew Johnson, O. P. Badger, H. E. Cowgill, A. D. Beasly, J. H. Graham, and H. Armstrong, of Putnam county, and from a careful inspection of the premises, are satisfied that this company alone could supply our entire city with ease. They have a large tract of coal land; the mines are now in good condition, and but a short distance from the railroad. This, we were assured, will be rendered still shorter by a branch railroad running directly to the mines, thus enabling this company at all times to throw their coals into the market. Mr. Johnson, a member of the company, and now its agent, a man of first-rate business qualifications, will, we are confident, meet promptly all orders; and in the quality give entire satifaction to his patrons.—Should other companies fail the coming winter as last, it would be well for our citizens to remember the Highland Coal Company. Mr. Ross, of this city, is its agent here.

Slaves.

"They are slaves who fear to speak,
For the fallen and the weak;
They are slaves who will not choose
Hatred, scoffing and abuse,
Rather than in silence shrink
From the truth they needs must think:
They are slaves who dare not be
In the right with two or three."

We commend the foregoing lines to the serious consideration of every one who desires to form a manly eharacter. They form a text upon which a sermon might be delivered that would cause the ears of this might-loving and majority-serving generation to tingle. How many slaves there are! How few that dare speak in behalf of the weak against the strong, of the poor against the rich, of the right against the wrong! Let the young learn that it is only by asserting their own individuality and manhood, and by doing what their hearts and consciences prompt that they can ever become truly free. It would be well for every young American to learn these lines by heart, and then learn to hate the slaves they define with entire hatred. Such a course would kill off, in a generation, a large number of the men who now rule the freemen of our country. We have forgotten that

"Who governs freemen should himself be free."

Let us relearn and practice upon that lesson.

☞ The Abolition organ comes up manfully to the support of Dr. Gordon, and eulogizes him and his course as editor of the Temperance Chart. Gordon's abuse of Governor Wright, the State Sentinel, and the Democratic party generally, is music to the organ grinders of Abolitionism. The same paper publishes the Doctor's anti-slavery views.

Straws tell the course of the wind, with as much correctness as one of Maury's improved charts. Gordon is the Independent candidate for Reporter of the decisions of the Supreme Court, in opposition to Albert G. Porter, the present incumbent. "Independent," in that sense, is a very comprehensive term. It means Whig, Abolition, Freesoil, Maine Law, or any thing else to get the votes. Splicing teams. The "Vail" is a flimsy concern. It is like the thin, white tissue coats worn by some of our dandies—the black breeches show through. The people will understand this eulogistic endorsement about this time, to mean something more than temperance: yes, they will.—State Sentincl.

And so it seems that one of the means employed by the Sentinel to defeat Temperance principles and prostrate Temperance men is to pervert the truth of honest men to false purposes. But "the people understand this—yes, they will," neighbor—no mistake.

Triumph of Liberty.

It was not our good fortune to hear the Ode on the Triumph of Liberty, read by Mr. Ballard, at the Fireman's Celebration in this city on the Fourth, but we have since procured a copy, and are much pleased with the thoughts and imagery it contains. It opens with the scene of Paradise before it was "lost," and carries us along the stream of time until the triumphant establishment of freedom in America. There are manifest indications of fine poetical ability in every part of the poem; but there is also, here and there, manifest indications of haste, if not of carelessness, in the structure of the lines.

After glancing at the happy condition of the world before the Fall, and the darkness and oppression that followed, the poet thus presents the brightness of the reign of freedom in Greece:

"Long, Long successive ages roll away
Before the dawning of that day,
When Grecian glory, like a meteor bright,
And blazing, burst from a dark night.
Oh, blest and hallowed day in freedom's reign:
Statesmen, are big with eloquence and claim
Each one to be thy friend, and from the sod
Temples arise in which thou art a god;
Embowered porticoes with wildest music ring,
For Poesy is there, with wreaths to crown the King."

After following the stream of history until the establishment of freedom in America, he thus apostrophizes his theme:

"Freedom, what triumphs thine! While kingdoms rise and sink
Beneath the flood, and rulers only think
Of war—while empires come and go,
Like morning mist, sunshine, and Winter's snow,
Thou hast been rearing up an empire vast,
Whose columns reach the clouds, and cast
Their shadows o'er the thrones of kings,
And from its mighty dome hope's cresset flings
A flood of glorious light o'er every land,
Where darkness veils the moral sky of man.
So Greece with ruins ivy-crown'd and gray,
Beholds its brilliant flame, and with Bozzaris they
Who feel once more the warmth of Freedom's fires,
Strike for the green graves of their sires;'
And monarchs on their iron heels, reel to and fro,
Beneath the rampant fury of an equal foe."

The conclusion is beautiful, but necessarily crowded out. We are pleased with the poem as a whole, and regard it as an offering of promise. Its author is a very young man, and requires but time to take a high stand in the ranks of the gifted.—We are sure he will yet make his mark, and trust he will pursue his career with reference to his gifts and vocation as a writer of song; for we know of no holier mission than that of the true poet. His is a patent from the Creator that no human power—not poverty itself can cancel.—It is too noble a gift to be suffered to rust, or be idly cast aside. The universe is interested in its fate, and woe for its possessor if he allows it to be rudely extinguished in the choke-damps of the world into which it it has been cast—that it might improve and beautify the world that can not always comprehend it.

What our Neighbors say of us!

The following, which we clip from the Deeocrat, shows the opinion of our neighbors of our course, in conducting the Chart. Let the State Sentinel bark again. On such terms with all our immediate neighbors, we are not likely to suffer from an animosity that knows no bounds, and is governed by no principle of respect for the truth.

The Temperance Chart.—This excellent temperance paper, published in this city, under the editorial charge of Dr. J. W. Gordon, commenced a new volume a week or two since. We can but express the hope that the friends of temperance throughout the State will use their utmost influence to secure a large circulation to the Chart for the volume now commenced. Let it be well sustained. It is the only paper expressly devoted to the subject in the State, and it would be a disgrace to the temperance men of the state, if it should not be well sustained.

Mr. Gordon has made the Chart one of the very best of that clase of papers in the country. He is an excellent writer, and comes up te the discussien of all topics connected with the temperance reformation, with entire fearlessness, and yet with candor and impartiality. There is no crouching to wealth or aristocracy, no screening of sins or errors on account of party affinities, political or religious.—While his shafts have been pointed with unerring aim at those who make the manufacture of drunkards, and widows and orphans, a professional business, those have not escaped who, while professing temperance, have done acts injurious to the cause they profess a desire to promote. We were about to express our regret that on account of the independence of the Chart, and its fidelity to the cause of truth and righteousness, the leading organ of the Democratic party in this State has swern vengeance against it, and vowed that so long as it is conducted by its present editor, the Democracy shall not support it, if it can prevent it. But wherever the Sentinel and its course on the subject of temperance is known, its opposition will do no harm. Ever since it has been conducted by its present editor, the State Sentinel has exerted a decided influence against temperance. This is well known, and we cannot believe temperance Democrats will be influenced by it to withhold their patronage from tde Chart.

The charge of Mr. Brown that the Chart has been used by Dr. Gordon to favor Whiggery and oppose Democracy, or that he has called Democratic officeholders to account because of their Democracy, is utterly without foundation, and has grown out of mere personal hostility of the Sentinel editor to the editor of the Chart.

In the present state of the temperance cause in this State, it is all important to keep up a good and fearless paper. The main battle has yet to be fought. The law of last winter, as we predicted, from present appearances will fail to accomplish any good. Further legislation will be demanded, and we must have a paper which will have the independence and manliness to present the subject fully and fearlessly before the public.

The Celebration at New Winchester.

Monday last was a great gala day at New Winchester, in this county. A large procession, consisting of the New Winchester, Hendricks, North Salem, New Maysville, Brownsburg, and Jamestown Divisions of the Sons of Temperance, and the Danville Union of Daughters and Section of Cadets, was formed in the village and marched out to a beautiful grove north of the Baptist church, where an appriate prayer was offered by the Rev. Jacob Reynerson, after which the Declaration of Independence was read by Esquire Campbell.

After the reading of the Declaration, Dr. Thompson, of Indianapolis, the orator of the day, made his appearance on the stand, and delivered an eloquent and affecting Temperance Address. We feel quite certain that every friend of the Temperance cause who heard it. will loathe, more than ever, the degrading traffic in intoxicating drinks. After the conclusion of the Address, the crowd partook of a sumptuous repast, prepared for the occasion, and again repaired to the stand, where they were treated to a short but eloquent and appropriate address from our young townsman, Francis L. Neff. Esquire Campbell was called up at the conclusion of Mr. Neff's address, and entertained the crowd for some half an hour with a humorous address, after which the crowd dispersed.

The large crowd that assembled on the occasion, and the interest with which the speeches were listened to, proved, not only that the toils and hardships of our forefathers are yet remembered by a grateful posterity. but that our country is soon to be freed from a tyrant more unmerciful tban the one our fathers of '76 drove from our shores.

May God hasten tbe day when King Alcohol's reign shall be at an end, and when our country shall, in truth, be "great, glorious, and free."

The day in Danville was rather a dull one, a large number of our citizens having gone out to New Winchester. An effort was made, in the afternoon, to get up "an old-fashioned" celebration of martial music, reading the Declaration of Independence, speeches, &c. A reader was appointed, the drums brought out and tuned, and a fifer in the country sent for; but, like a good boy, he declined leaving bis wheat, which he was engaged in cutting, and so the thing was no go. In the evening, however, the fifer having made his appearance, the drums were re-paraded, some old muskets brought out, and a regular celebration, a la olden time, followed. The steps in front of the clerk's office were selected as the rostrum, and from thence we had first, the Declaration from a young gentleman named German, of Ohio; and secondly, a brief but eloquent speech by P. S. Xenneey, Esq., after which the crowd fell into a line, and marched to the music of the fife and drum for a while and then adjourned.—Danville Advertisea.

Melancholy.—The news that the Blind Asylum is to be closed for nearly a year fell heavy on the ears of our people. It is a sad event, and one not creditable to Indiana. When one looks at the splendid building and thinks that it is shut against those for whom it was built—no matter by whose fault—he can not avoid thinking of the "whited sepulchres." Let us not again talk of being eyes to the blind, nor raise the cup of hope to the lip with one hand, that we may dash it down with the other.

What appears to be generosity is often nothing but a disguised ambition, which despises petty interests in order to reach greater ones.

Correspondence.

For the Chart.

MR. EDITOR:—Never having known of of any correspondence from this county to the THE CHART, in reference to the Temperance cause, I have been, for some time past, threatening to send you a brief account of it, as it is amongst the people generally. My design in this epistle is not, however, to give you this account, although a true representation would, doubtless, be desirable upon the part of all good temperance readers of the Chart, and well-wishers for the success of Temperance, but to say a few words concerning the Strawtown celebration upon the Fourth.

A few months ago this (Noblesville) Division was called upon to organize one at Strawtown; and accordingly it went. At that time Strawtown was considered the hardest place in Hamilton county.—Whisky, or liquid fire, vendors had become so audacious, that, without reserve, they hoisted their signs of "Whisky for sale here." When such is the case you may well imagine the state of community.

But the Sons of Temperance organized: it was enough! Sudden and glorious was the change. It seemed an antidote applied in the proper time and place, even reclaiming some of the "workers of iniquity," placing them upon the exalted platform of TEMPERANCE, binding them there by the tender cords of "Love, Purity, and Fidelity."

Noblesville and Westfield Divisions were there, and, without exceptions, it was the pleasantest celebrations I ever attended. Truly it was a goodly sight to see the Temperance banners floating upon the buxom air. Although they were emblems of but declared independence, or freedom, yet I imagined we were free from the tyrant's rule, as no drunken revelries were seen—none to disturb, "or e'en mar" the exercises of the day.

Rev. Mr. Rogers and D. C. Chipman, Esq., gave praiseworthy addresses on the occasion; after which a free dinner was eagerly partaken of. The Sons there are all alive. Without assistance from any other Division, or any of the community, they bore the expenses.

Strawtown has gained a decided victory over the influence of the enemy, that tells upon the morals of her citizens.

Dare any one assert that the Sons "have lost their influence"—that they are mere ostentatious societies, after such results? and this is but one amongst hundreds of such cases. There is a class of persons who, bound somewhat by reason, will admit that they have at times done good, but that as soon as the "excitement" dies away, the members fall into a state of "don't-care-tiveness," and that the floodgates of intemperance are again opened having double force. This is too true.—Man upon all things, evil excepted, is found to fall into a state of lethargy.—Whatever moral effects may have been accomplished are sure to lose ground, where the means of its effects have become lukewarm, and where there is a great, powerful, contending force agninst it.—This is the case in the Temperance Reformation. Alcohol and his followers are laying in ambush at this time to pounce upon Strawtown Division as soon as they are off their guard. I tremble for the almost inevitable result; a result, however, that is almost universal throughout the land.—If every victory gained by the Temperance Organizations was permanent, then might we cheer up—then might our expectations be strong of freeing the land of intemperance; but as long as the enemy is allowed to roam at large, just so long will the effects of "moral suasion" be overcome by the enemy; and that, too, "in an hour when they know not." Thus we see that without prohibition, it is impossible to gain a universal and final victory!

"Prohibition! prohibition!
Let us form a coalition."

D. E. C.

Noblesville, July 7, 1853.

Readiness to believe evil without sufficient examination is the result of pride and indolence. We wish to find people guilty, and we do not wish to give ourselves the trouble of examining into the crimes.

From the Southern School Journal.

Importance of Education.

We hope the following remarks by Mr. Thurston, late Superintendent of Public Instruction in Maine, will be deliberately pondered. We borrow the extract from the Journal of Education, published in that State.

In view of the blessings great and innumerable, handed down to us by our fathers, we are placed under the most binding obligations to fit and prepare our children, by their education, to transmit the same heaven-born blessings untarnished to future generations. The elements of physical, mental, and moral wealth now in our possession are exciting the anxious solicitude of every philanthropist in Christendom; for it requires no prophetic eye to foresee the momentous consequences depending on the solution that we shall give to this great problem of self-government. Nor does it take any unusual discernment to perceive the connection between this problem and our system of public instruction. Hence it is that one of the great leading ideas of the age, at least as far as our country is concerned, is the idea of a universal education—an education not partial, not superficial, but thorough, embracing the full development of the whole man, body, mind, and soul—an education which is the result of all those influences that surround the human being from infancy to mature age, whether these influences originate with the parent or the teacher, the school house or the church, the living voice or the written page—whether they act on the physical, mental, or moral nature, or on those mysteries existing between the body and the mind—an education that is good or bad, perfect or imperfect, complete or defective, just in proportion as it directs and develops all the powers and faculties in obedience to the laws which God has established. It is this idea of an education around which cluster all the experience of the past, the varied phenomena of the present, and the most cherished anticipations for the future; and if we as a State, as a component part of the Union, falter in the least, in urging forward the realization of these cherished anticipations, we shall prove false to the memory of the great and good who have transmitted to us our rich inheritance—false to every dictate of enlightengd humanity—false to ourselves and recreant to our God.

Besides, an education of some kind every one will have. It is not at the option of the community to decide whether an individual shall be educated or not. Every child that grows up in society must and will be educated. Neither his own volition, nor the respect of the parent or the State, can in any wise prevent it. If he is not educated in the public school, by the private teacher, at the domestic fireside, a thousand genial influences that ought to surround every child, he will be educated in the streets, in the tippling shops, in the gambling house, in the brothel, the jail, or the prison. It is the kind of education only that is at the option of the parent, the community, the State. And of the different kinds, there is almost an infinite gradation—from that which makes a brute to that which makes a man; from that which makes a demon to that which makes an angel. Yes, that embryo being, that bundle of fibres almost without mental phenomena, or moral condition, that bundle of fibres which constitutes the raw material in education if fearfully and wonderfully made—having tendencies and capacities pointing to the farthest verge of good or evil, capacities of unlimited virtue or vice, of unbounded happiness or misery—its animated soul has pinions, by which it may soar to the loftiest height, or descend to the lowest depth—a voice that may join in the sweetest symphonies of angels, or grate harsh discord into the blasphemies of demons. To develop these powers and capacities, to direct this soul in its upward or downward flight, to tune this voice to harmony or discord is the proviuce of education.

And whilst it is true that every child has tendencies and capacities capable of development to an unlimited extent—whilst it is true that these powers and capacities must and will be developed for good, or for evil, as they should not be, it is equally true that the kind of development will always precisely correspond to the means used to secure the object. Man, the whole man, body, and soul, as far as any human agencies are concerned, is the result of certain forces, the effect of a chain of causes: and the character of the result produced will always correspond to the elements and processes used in the production. This we regard as an axiom requiring no proof, needing no argument, admitting of no doubt; illustration could not make it more clear, reasoning could not enforce it; the history of the human race confirms it, and divine revelation sanctions it. "Train up a child in the way he should go, and when he is old he will not depart from it." The declaration is positive. There is no doubt or contingency expressed or implied.

If we go back, in imagination, a few years, we behold the millions of human beings who are now on the stage of action just entering existence—so ignorant, so speechless, so helpless, that we might almost persuade ourselves that a mistake had been made, and they had been ushered into the wrong world. So similar in body, in mind, and in moral condition, that the difference could scarcely be discerned. But where are they now? Some are expiating their crimes in cells and dungeons; others are moral luminaries, shedding light and truth, from horizon to horizon; some are beating and bruising themselves against the bars of a maniac's cage; others, with an intellect as keen as that of angels, are tracing the laws of the solar system; some are enveloped in ignorance and superstition; others are solving the mightiest problems that science presents; some are groveling in the most servile conditions; others are holding high converse in the nation's hall, where the destinies of millions are arbitrated. But whence this mighty change? Whence this wonderful transformation in these ignorant, speechless, helpless beings? Whence this contrast in the condition of those so similar, once so nearly equal? The change, the transformation, the contrast, has been produced by the agency of laws as certain in their operation, and as infallible in their results, as the laws that govern the relation of cause and effect in chemistry, in agriculture, in the mechanic arts, or in any of the departments of life. These are truths that can neither be controverted nor denied. Is it not of some consequence, then, that the Legislature, the parent, the teacher, should understand the laws and conditions in obedience to which these good or these bad results are to be produced.

Milton's Death-Bed.

John Milton, the chief of poets, held the post of Latin Secretary under Cromwell. At the Restoration, he was, of course, dismissed from his office. He was now poor and blind, and to these afflictions Charles II. added political persecution. He fined him, and doomed his writings on liberty to be publicly burned. Nothing daunted by these fierce and multiplied trials, the great poet retired into private life, evoked his mighty genius, and produced "Paradise Lost!" But after he had endured the ills of poverty several years, Charles, feeling the need of his matchless talents, invited him to resume his former post, with all its honors, emoluments, and court favors. But Milton knew that the price of this honor must be silence on the great question of human liberty. Therefore, he did not hesitate a moment. It was a strong temptation—the bribe was splendid. By merely keeping silence he could have honor, abundance, and high position, in exchange for poverty, persecution, and neglect! But this could not be. The poet loved truth too well; his soul was too noble, too sincere, too firm in its allegiance to God and liberty, to barter away its right to condemn tyranny for place or gold. Hence, he spurned the royal offer, clung to his principles and his poverty, until death called his free soul to enter its congenial heaven. And so gentle was the summons; so sweetly was the unruffled spirit in the hour of dissolution, that his friends knew not the precise moment of his death.

How sublimely beautiful the grand old poet stands out before the mind in this fact! Harassed, tried, aged, and blind; having the power to turn the enmity of a royal despotism into favor, by simply refraining to speak and write on the liberties of mankind, he grows majestic in his poverty, as he nobly spurns the bribe in obedience to the voice of duty. For the truth's sake he holds fast to poverty and obscurity. To maintain the right of free speech, he sacrifices himself, and defies the power of the king. Noble Milton!—As the author of Paradise Lost, seated in his study, surrounded by the sublime creations of his genius, he wears an aspect of sublimity; but in that act of fidelity to God and liberty, his attitude is far more grand, sublime, and beautiful. As the first of poets, he shines resplendent with intellectual lustre; as the scorner of the royal bribe, he exhibits the moral grandeur of faithful man—he fills our ideal of the man of faith, standing defiant and unawed by human power, because upheld by an immovable trust, and by an unconquerable allegiance to the invisible God. Well did the ancient heathen exclaim of a good man, in similar circumstances:—"See a sight worthy of God!"—Zion's Herald.

THE SALE OF MOUNT VERNON.—Washington, June 15.—The National Intelligencer confirms the report of the sale of Mount Vernon; price $200.000. It is stipulated that Washington's remains are never to be removed. There is a reservation allowing the Government ta re-purchase. It was bought by Northern and Southern capitalists.

True eloquence consists in saying all that is necessary, and nothing but what is necessary.

It is a great ability to be able to conceal one's ability.

From the London Times.

The Maine Liquor Law in England.

It is very interesting to us who sit in old Europe, following old methods of government as a matter of course, to see what can be attempted and done by a people really and immediately self-governing.—We may doubt and disapprove of some things done by our republicen brethren across the Atlantic, and think that we should not like this, or the other liability or custom of theirs; but it is to be hoped that we can cordially admire and honor certain occasional achievements of theirs, which are quite beyond any thing we can effect, or dream of effecting. We can really hardly know any thing more striking than tbe history of the rapid abolition of the vice of drunkenness in several of the States of the American Union; and it is with feelings of the deepest respect that we desire to direct the attention of our countrymen to the action of the State of Maine with regard to that vice.

The Maine Liquor Law was obtained by the simple determination of the majority to abolish intemperance in the form of drink. They did it through the ballot-boxes—by electing temperance men to the Legislature. For many years valuable experience had been accruing. The ordinary temperance movement had been tried there as elsewhere in the Union; and with the same partial success. The success can never be more than partial where temptation and conflict remain. As long as rum and gin shops stand open, and the smell of spirits is in the air, the weak and wavering will suffer under conflict with temptation, and often fall; physicians will tell in private of the increase of solitary drinking—the worst of all, and the "pledged" will be in a lower state than ever—having added perjury to their first weakness. It appears, from experience, that it is a miserable mistake to expect so serious ahd difficult a process as self-control from such a stimulus as association in a temperance society, and thus it turned out in Maine, as elsewhere. So the Legislature was looked to, not to limit and regulate the sale of intoxicating liquors; not to institute a stringent licensing system, but to prohibit utterly the sale of intoxicating liquors for drink within the bounds of the State.

Every city and town is required or permitted to appoint annually, through its municipal officers, an agent, who is licensed for the year, and under responsibility to the magistracy, to sell spirits for the purposes of the mechanic arts and medicine; and, up to this time, it appears that a sufficient supply is obtained for all such purposes by this provision. And in every other way, the law appears to work as well as a prohibitory law ever does, and certainly to the benefit of society within that State. A dram shop may be opened here and there, just outside of the boundary line of the State; and a citizen here and there may import a cask of spirits, and give away the contents among those who will do him some favor in return; but these are small matters. There is a general purification—the smell is not in the air—the dram shops are not open before the eyes—the temptation does not beset the will—the struggle does not perplex and weary the brain and the conscience. The social results are so clear that the example has been followed.—Rhode Island has followed in the wake of Maine, and also has Massachusetts, with the exception of Boston, where the municipal authorities strong in vested interests, still hold out. The doubt was, at first, whether a law so stringent could stand—whether the second year would not undo the work of the first. It appears not. Experienced American citizens believe that it would now be impossible to get the law repealed.

The first sentiment of Englishmen on hearing this story seems to be amazement that citizens will submit to such a law.—They feel that there would be danger to our liberties if such a law could pass our Parliament and Throne to-morrow. No doubt: but this is because we do not, as a people, desire it. If the Americans were not self-governed, they would rebel sooner than admit of legislation so stringent.—But they are self-governed, and therein lies the chief interest of the whole matter. They decreed for themselves first, the universal education which disgusted them with drunkenness, and warned them to save the next generation from it; and they next decreed, the exclusion of what they consider a physical, moral, and social poison. It has been the act as of a spirited man who, while disposed to resent dictation as to his personal habits, imposes a law on himself, and submits thus to a discipline which he would spurn if it came upon him in any other way. Our fellow-citizens cannot but watch with deep interest the development of this very strong transatlantic experiment.

There is as much eloquence in the tone of voice, in the eyes, and in the air of a speaker, as in his choice of words.

Magnanimity despises every thing to gain every thing.

Moral Reflections, Sentences, and Maxims.

All the sentiments have a tone of voice, gestures, and countenances, peculiar each to itself; and this conformity, as it is good or bad, agreeable or disagreeable, causes people to be pleasing or displeasing.

In all the professions every one affects a particular look and exterior, in order to appear what he wishes to be thought, so that it may be said the world is made up of appearances.

Gravity is a mystery of the body, invented to conceal the defects of the mind.

Flattery is a false coin, which only derives its currency from our vanity.

Civility is a desire to receive it in turn, and to be accounted well bred.

The education commonly given to the young is a second self-love with which they are inspired.

There is no passion in which self-love reigns so powerfully as in love; and we are often more disposed to sacrifice the peace of the loved object than to lose our own.

What is called liberality is most often only the vanity of giving, which we like better than the thing we give.

Pity is often a perception of our own misfortunes in those of others; it is a clever foresight of the evils into which we may fall. We succor others in order to engage them to succor us in similar circumstances; and the services we render them are, to speak properly, a good which we do to ourselves by anticipation.

Narrowness of mind is the cause of obstinacy—we do not easily believe what is beyond our sight.

It is deceiving ourselves to fancy that it is only the violent passions, such as ambition and love, which can triumph over the others. Indolence, all languid as it is, nevertheless is frequently their master; it spreads its dominion over all the designs and all the actions of life, and thus destroys and insensibly consumes the passions and the virtues.

The fidelity shown by the generality of men is only an invention of self-love to attract confidence—it is a means of raising ourselves above others, and of becoming depositaries of the most important affairs.

Interest brings into play every sort of virtue and of vice.

Humility is often only a feigned submission, of which we make use to render others submissive. It is an artifice of pride which abases in order to exalt itself; and though it transforms itself in a thousand different ways, it is never better disguised and more capable of deceiving than when it conceals itself under the garb of humility.

Acknowledgments.

John Hicks, at Pleasant Spring, for the Chart, 75c.; W. M. Lowman, Darlington, for Chart, $7.50; Geo. Lowe, Eagle Village, $6.00; Seth R. Allen, $4.00; Clarissa Keeler, Pleasant View, 75c.; G. W. McNaught, Morgantown, $3.00; A. T. Suark, Wabash, $1: Noblesville, $7.50; Pleasant View, $18.00; Matamora, $2; F. Adkinson, Crittenden, Ky., $1.00:—Miss R. Hays, Columbus, Ind., 75c.; H. Dills, Guilford, Ind., $5.00; W. Howbert, Mount Healthy, $4.00; A. J. Haven, New Maysville, $5.00; D. Sherfy, Perrysville, $6.00; Lewisville, Ind., $3.00; S. B. Gilmore, Manhattan, $7.00; J. Humphreys, Vevay, 75c.; John T. Jackson, New Albany, $3; Geo. Rogers, Lafayette, $4.50; J. W. Eggleston, $4.00; James Halsey, Clarksburgh, $3.75: A. Swaim, Swaim's Mills, $3.00; Americus, $2.25; C. Woodward, $7.50; L. C. Perkins, Lebanon, $7.00; J. Kenover, Huntington, $5.00; W. G. McGlashon, $6.75; J. F. Walker, Evansville, $3.00; J. E. Loveless, $9.00; G. Baily, Huntsville, $5.00; Wm. Howlett, Mount Healthy, $1.25; A. F. Glossbrinner, Jeffersonville, $4.00; J. C. Patton, Princeton, $6.00; D. Mack, Toronto, $9.00; John Harris, Russellville, $7.00; W. P. Clark, $11.24; E. J. Judkins, Greenfield, $12.00; S. Bowers, $0.30; Wm. Nicholson, Crawfordsville, $21.00.

GO, AND DO LIKEWISE!

CONSTITUTION AND BY-LAWS,

WE are still prepared to print Constitution and By-Laws, where the alterations are few from the copy recommended by the Grand Division, at the following rates:

100 copies, (or less)	....	$5 00
200 "	.....	8 00
300 "	.....	10 00

We will pay the postage on all ordered from us.

☞ All orders accompanied by the cash, will be promptly attended to.

Address, JOHN H. OHR,
Indianapolis, Indiana.

CHARTERS.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR A DIVISION S. OF T.

(Date.)

The undersigned inhabitants of ——, believing the Order of the Sons of Temperance to be well calculated to extend the blessings of total abstinence, and promote the general welfare of mankind, respectfully petition the Grand Division of the —— of ——, to grant them a Charter to open a new Division, to be called the —— Division, No. —, Sons of Temperance, of the —— of ——, to be located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves, individually and collectively, to be governed by the rules and usages of said Grand Division, and also, by those of the National Division.

Enclosed is the Charter Fee, $5 00. Books, $2 00.

This must be signed by at least eight persons of good character, and standing in community, and sent to C. WOODWARD, G. S., Indianapolis, Ind., free of postage.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR A TEMPLE.

(Date.)

The undersigned, believing the Temple of Honor to be well calculated to cement more firmly our fraternal relations, and add to the general prosperity of the cause of Temperance, respectfully petition the Grand Temple of the —— of ——, to grant them a Charter to open a new Temple, to be called the —— Temple of Honor, No. —, of the —— of ——, to be located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves individually and collectively, to be governed by the rules and usages of the Grand Temple, and also by those of the Order at large.

Enclosed is the Charter Fee, $20 00.

To be directed to the G. W. R., free of postage.

This must be signed by at least twenty persons of good standing, and if not known to the G. W. T. or G. W. R., must send satisfactory references.

J. H. OHR, G. W. R.

Indianapolis, Ind.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR CADETS OF TEMPERANCE.

The undersigned, boys of ——, believing the Order of Cadets of Temperance to be well calculated to extend the blessings of total abstinence, and promote the general welfare of mankind, respectfully petition the Grand Section of the State of Indiana, to grant them a charter to open a new Section, to be called the —— Section, No. ——, Cadets of Temperance, of the State of Indiana, to be located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves, individually and collectively to be governed by the rules and usages of said Grand Section, and also those of the acting Head of the Order.

Enclosed is the fee for Charter, R. B.'s and officers' cards, $5 00.

It must also be stated whether the applicants are members of the Order or not; if they are, of what Section. The application to be directed to the Grand Secretary, free of postage.

It must also be certified by a W. P. or P. W. P, that the W. Patron elect is a Son of Temperance in good standing.

Address (post paid) HENRY OHR, G. S., C. o T., Indianapolis, Indiana.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR DAUGHTERS OF TEMPERANCE.

(Date.)

The undersigned, inhabitants of ——, believing the Order of the Daughters of Temperance to be well calculated to extend the blessings of Total Abstinence, and promote the general welfare of mankind, respectfully petition the Grand Union to grant them a charter to open a new Union to be called the —— Union, No. —, D. of T., of the State of Indiana, located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves, individually and collectively, to be governed by the rules and usages of said Grand Union.

Enclosed is the Charter Fee, $5 00.

The above must be signed by at least eleven females, of proper age and good standing in community.

Address (post paid,) Mrs. ELIZA RICHMOND, G. S. S., Indianapolis, Indiana.

New Watch and Jewelry Store.

No 1, Bates House, Washington Street,
INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

WE have now open the largest and best assortment of fine Watches and rich Jewelry ever offered in this city, to which we invite the examination of the public.

Our stock is all new—selected with great care, and comprises Watches, Diamond Work, Chains, Pins, Rings, Pencils, Lockets, of all kinds; Silver Ware, Clocks, Perfumery, Brushes, Soaps, Plated Ware, Castors, Fruit Baskets, &c., which we will sell for CASH at New York prices. Mr. E. W. NEFF, of this city, has taken charge of the Watch repairing department, and will spare no pains to give satisfaction to our customers.

july 6-tf E J. BALDWIN & CO.

D. CRAIGHEAD. R. BROWNING.

CRAIGHEAD & BROWNING,

Dealers in all kinds of

Drugs, Medicines, Surgical Instruments, Paints, Oils, Chemicals, Varnishes, Dye Stuffs, Glassware Window Glass. Brushes, Cosmetics, Spices, Cigars, Tobacco, Perfumery, &c.,

WASHINGTON STREET,
INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

ALL are respectfully invited to call and examine our stock and prices, as we feel confident we can render satisfaction both as to prices and quality of articles. Great care is taken in the selection of articles, in reference to their purity, as we endeavor at all times to keep such articles as are strictly pure and genuine. Every article will be waranted as represented. Orders from Physicians and others promptly attended to. Particular attention given to filling Prescriptions and compounding Medicines, which, in all cases, shall receive the personal attention of one of the firm. june 30

HANNAMAN & DUZAN,

DEALERS IN

DRUGS AND MEDICINES,

Surgical Instruments, Paints, Oils, Varnishes, Dye Woods, Medical and Window Glass, Brushes, Perfumery, Soaps, &c.

Washington, 3 doors west of Pennsylvania St.,

june 30 1y INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

W. W. ROBERTS,

Druggist and Apothecary.

Wholesale and Retail Dealer in

DRUGS, MEDICINES, PAINTS, OILS, AND DYE STUFFS, BRUSHES, FANCY GOODS, AMERICAN AND FRENCH WINDOW GLASS, &c.

WASHINGTON ST., INDIANAPOLIS.

Physicians, Country Merchants, and the people generally, are invited to examine his stock, which will be sold at the lowest cash price.

☞ QUALITY WARRANTED TO SUIT. ☜

june 22 4m

COMMERCIAL COLLEGE,

(Late Commercial Institute,)

Of Indianapolis,

Established March 31, 1851.

INCORPORATED, 1853.

W. McK. SCOTT, A. M., Founder and President.

JAMES C. HAYDEN, (Late Professor in Bacon's Mercantile College, Cincinnati,)

PROF. OF BOOK-KEEPING AND PENMANSHIP.

THE Session will commence at College Hall as follows:

1st Session on the first Monday of September.
2d Session on the 1st Monday of November.
3d Session on the 1st Monday of January.
4th Session on the 1st Monday of March.
5th Session on the 1st Monday of May.

Having secured, permanently, the services of the distinguished Professor above named, and leased for a term of years the commodious and beautiful Hall formerly known as CONCERT HALL, but now named COLLEGE HALL, which is to be fitted up in a style of great elegance, taste, and convenience, the President would say, that this College now offers advantages superior to all others, for imparting a sound, thorough, and accomplished business education

COURSE OF STUDIES.

The Course of Studies, as enlarged, will be as follows, viz:

1. Book-Keeping, by Single and Double Entry, in all its various branches, and its application to all kinds of business.
2. The Laws, Customs, and Usages of Trade and Commerce.
3. Mercantile Arithmetic, upon the short and easy system of cancelation, (taught in no other College.)
4. Commercial Law, in a series of Lectures, thorough and systematic.
5. Business Penmanship.
6. Commercial Correspondence.
7. Lectures upon Banking, Political Economy, and other subjects valusble to the business man.

EXPENSES.

Cards of Admission, invariably in advance, or secured, $25; Diplomas $3; Stationery $5; Boarding $2 50 per week; incidentals, at option of student, $15. Making entire expenses about $75.

On application, a Catalogue will be furnished, giving full particulars.

All letters will receive prompt attention on being directed, post-paid, to

june 8 W. McK. SCOTT, President.

"God never made his works for man to mend."
DR. FRANKLIN.

KIER'S ROCK OIL.

A NEW AND MOST IMPORTANT REMEDY FOR DISEASE.

DISCOVERED IN 1849.

IS drawn from a deep well near Pittsburgh—has been used with remarkable success in Ohio and Pennsylvania, and more Eastern States—and is now working its way West. An opportunity is now offered to the Afflicted for testing it. Where known and tried, it at once makes firm friends, and cures which are eloquent in its praise. Certificates of its power to heal are at hand—but we know well, reader, that such evidence, to have weight with you, now-a-days, must be in your own neighborhood.—You have only to try the Oil to be satisfied—it will SPEAK FOR ITSELF.

We have no war with the legion of Nostrums and Specifics of the day—we know but little about them—some say they are good for nothing. However that may be, the

Petroleum

will not be suppressed and kept back by reason of the above nostrums—duty and inclination both forbid it.

Those who are afflicted, are respectfully invited to get a Circular and look over the Directions for

Ague, Rheumatism, Piles, Diarrhœa, Flux, Tooth Ache, Burns, Worms, Scrofula, Coughs, Bronchitis, Croup, Old Sores, Cholera Morbus, Contractions of the Limbs and Joints, Sore Eyes, Blindness, Costiveness, Dyspepsia, and other Diseases.

By that time you may say, "it cures too much." But recollect it is not a HUMAN INVENTION, but compounded by Nature's master hand—and Nature does not do her work by halves.

The Oil is used both internally and externally.

As AGUE, SORE EYES, PILES, RHEUMATISM, and SCROFULA are so common in many parts of the West, we are constrained to say, that while this Oil will cure and relieve other diseases, it has been and is constantly used with most complete success in these cases.

☞ Price 50 cents per Bottle (half pint.)

Beware of all Rock Oil preparations, as some persons are offering a spurious article. Look for S. M. KIER'S name written on the label of the bottle.

For sale by the Druggists throughout Indiana, and by TOMLINSON BROTHERS, J. P. POPE & Co., S. ROSENGARTEN, WM. TILLEY, and at wholesale by W. W. ROBERTS, Indianapolis, Indiana.

R. M. LYON, Fort Wayne,
may25 10w Proprietor in the Western States.

SOMETHING NEW.

LATHROP & STEVENS, Wholesale and Retail Dealers in BOOTS AND SHOES, at the West room in the Bates House, Washington Street, Indianapolis.

We are now opening a new and splendid stock of Boots and Shoes of every variety and style, which we are receiving direct from the manufacturers.—We design to keep constantly on hand a good assortment of the best quality of goods manufactured, which we can warrant to give satisfaction to all who may give them a trial. We will sell by the case, dozen, or single pair, at low prices for cash.—Our stock consists in part of Gents' fine Cloth, silk warp, glove kid, buck, patent calf, and enameled Gaiters and Ties of every variety and style; Ladies' fine silk warp Gaiters, Buskins, Ties, Slippers and Boots; Misses' ditto; Men's calf, goat, kip, and thick Boots and Brogans; Boys' and Youths' ditto; assorted Ladies, kid, goat and calf Boots and Buskins; Misses' ditto. Also every variety of Children's Shoes. Come and see for yourselves.

LATHROP & STEVENS,
may 25 4w Indianapolis, Indiana.

TEMPERANCE INN, Bloomington, Indiana.

J. & S. M. ORCHARD, PROPRIETORS.

TRAVELLERS will find it to their advantage to call and try the accommodation of the TEMPERANCE INN. Stage office for all the different routes, in connection with this House. may25 6m ¶

THE LATEST WONDER of the 19th CENTURY.

DR. G. W. BENNETT'S Celebrated Eye-Balm.

A SPECIFIC FOR CHRONIC, SORE, INFLAMED, AND WEAK EYES.

Prepared only by Dr. George W. Bennett, and for sale by Merchants and Druggists generally.

THIS Balm is an excellent and certain cure for sore and inflamed Eyes, in all cases of Psoroic, Scrofulous, and Purulent Opthalmia, and what is commonly termed wild hairs in the eye-lids. It is a specific in Infantile, Purulent, and Scrofulous Inflamed, and Sore Eyes, and all in the various diseases of the Eyes, that prevail among the human family, in every climate. It will be found a sovereign remedy if properly applied.

W. W. ROBERTS, Indianapolis, Ind. General Agent for State of Indiana, to whom all orders must be addressed.

Price---Twenty-five Cents.

I warrant the above Balm to cure if the directions are strictly observed, or return the money.

june 22 4m G. W. BENNETT.

REAL ESTATE AND GENERAL AGENCY OFFICE,

INDIANAPOLIS, INDIANA.

UNDER THE CONTROL OF W. M'K. SCOTT, Attorney & Counsellor at Law, and Notary Public.

The attention of the Agency will be devoted,

First—To the collection of debts and the payment of Taxes for non-residents in any county in the State. Also, the redemption of Lands sold for Taxes, sale, purchase or lease of Lands, purchase of adverse claims, examination and perfection of Title, &c., &c.

Second—To the prosecution of claims against the General Government, procuring Land Warrants, Patent Rights, and Pensions under the various Pension Laws, &c.

Third—All other Miscellaneous agencies as may be intrusted to the care of this office.

Fourth—The taking of Depositions and Attestation of all instruments requiring a seal

In all cases requiring an outlay of money for the benefit of individuals, the requisite funds must be transmitted in advance.

Prompt attention to all letters on business that are pre-paid. Address W. M'K. SCOTT,

Real Estate and General Agent,
jan 5–1y Indianapolis, Ind.

ADAMS & CO'S EXPRESS.

WE are now running a daily line East and West, accompanied by special messengers, and with the speed of the mails, running our own cars with the passenger trains.

Packages will be received at the cars up to the time of starting, and at our office until 1 o'clock each day.

We are prepared to transport packages, bank notes and specie, to and from any of the eastern cities, also, Louisville, Frankfort, and Lexington, Ky., St. Louis, Mo., or any points on the Ohio and Mississippi rivers; and to and from Terre Haute, and all intermediate points, and to forward freight from Terre Haute up and down the Wabash.

In addition to these, we have the most complete arrangements for transporting packages to and from California and Europe.

Exchange on England, Ireland, and Scotland, for sale, payable at any bank in the kingdom.

Foreign passage tickets; by Grinnell, Minturn & Co.'s line to Liverpool and London, constantly on hand, and for sale at the lowest rates.

Notes, drafts, and bills collected in any of the Eastern or Western cities

Orders for goods to be returned by Express, sent free. Our rates of charges have been greatly reduced, and the public will find this a safe and expeditious method of transportation.

Indianapolis, June 30, 1852. ADAMS & CO.

Office in Indianapolis in Journal Building, west side Pennsylvania Street.

Office open during business hours.

june30 1y C. WOODWARD, Agent.

The Cheapest Illustrated Paper for the Young.

PRICE ONLY TEN CENTS A YEAR, or nearly three papers for one cent, where 100 copies are taken.

Twenty-six numbers a year, and each number illustrated with from three to seven engravings.

The Youth's Penny Gazette,

A strictly Religious and Moral Paper, is published by the AMERICAN SUNDAY SCHOOL UNION and is designed to furnish the Children and Youth of the United States with reading matter, in a popular form, for the improvement of Mind and Heart.

It is published (not monthly, nor weekly, but) every other week, or twenty-six numbers in a year. It is religious but unsectarian, and the matter is carefully prepared with a view to the habits, character and prospects of American Youth.

TERMS OF THE PENNY GAZETTE.

$10 a year, in advance, for 100 copies, to one address. $5 a year, in advance, for 40 copies, to one address. $3 a year, in advance, for 20 copies, to one address. Single subscriptions, 25 cents per year.

TERMS BY MAIL, POSTAGE PAID.

☞ When the postage is paid at the place of mailing, the terms are very low. For $15 remitted, we will send 100 copies of the paper for one year, to one address—we paying postage. For $7 remitted, we will send 40 copies of the paper to one address, for one year—we paying postage. For $3 50 remitted, we will send 20 copies of the paper for one year, to one address—we paying postage. Less than 20 cannot be sent at this cheap rate.

Subscriptions received at the Society's House, No. 146 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.

Feb 16 3w G. S. SCOFIELD, Agent.

TO BUILDERS.

North Western Christian University.

THE Building Committee of the Board of Directors of the North-Western Christiana University, propose contracting for the west wing of the University Building, to be put up on the University grounds in the vicinity of Indianapolis.

Sealed Proposals in detail, with prices affixed for doing the work necessary to the completion of the said Wing, will be received until the 19th day of July next, and may be handed to the undersigned. or to J. T. Cox. Secretary of the Company, at the Book Store of Cox & Mathes, in Indianapolis.

The materials and work to be according to the plan, drawings and specifications prepared by Wm. Tinsley, Architect, which may be seen and examined at his room, on the east side of Pennsylvania street, three doors north of the north-east Diagonal, in Indianapolis. The specifications have been materially changed and modified, so as to reduce the cost of the building.

Proposals for the whole combined, would be preferred; but will be received for the different parts and portions thereof separotely. The whole to be completed and fit for use by the first day of September, 1854.

Payments will be made as the work progresses, at such short periods as may suit the covenience of the Contractors. Bond and security will be required for the performance of the work.

In behalf of the Building Committee:

OVID BUTLER,
President of the Board of Directors.

June 10, 1853. june 22 3w

LITTLE, DRUM & ANDERSONS

WHOLESALE DEALERS IN

STAPLE AND FANCY DRY GOODS, BOOTS, SHOES, HATS, CAPS, STATIONERY, NOTIONS, TRIMMINGS, GROCERIES, HARDWARE, QUEENSWARE, AND GLASSWARE,

North side of Washington Street,

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

WE are receiving Country Produce of all descriptions, and paying the highest market price. Dealers visiting Indianapolis are respectfully invited to call and examine our stock and prices, both for Produce and Merchandise generally. june30 tf

JAMES HALL,

MERCHANT TAILOR,

No. 2. Temperance, Hall, Indianapolis,

Manufactu'ng & Clothing Emporium,

Wholesale and Retail Dealer in Ready Made Clothing, Cloths, Cassimers, Vestings, Trimmings, Trunks, Sachels, Canes, Umbrellas, Hats, Caps, a every description of Gentlemen's Furnishing.

Also:

General Agency for the sale of GRAND AND SUBORDINATE REGALIA, EMBLEMS, COSTUMES, &C., FOR THE ORDERS OF MASONS, ODD FELLOWS, TEMPLE OF HONOR, SON, DAUGHTERS, AND CADETS OF TEMPERANCE. oct27 1y

The American Life and Health Insurance Company.

Office—No. 7, South Third St., Philadelphia.

Officers.

LEONARD JEWELL, President.
JAMES PEACOCK, Treasurer,
JOHN C. SIMS, Sec'y and Actuary.
THOS. S. SMITH, Solicitor

JOHN F. BIRD, FRED. A. FICKARDT, } Medical Examiners.

CHARLES WOODWARD, Indianapolis, Ind., General Agent for the State of Indiana.

THIS Company issues policies at Total Abstinence Rates, Joint stock Rates, and at Mutual Rates, which for $1000 on the life of a person 30 years of age, are as follows:

Age.	Total Abstinence.	Joint Stock.	Mutual.
30	$15.40	$19.60	$23.60

A further table of Rates will be furnished at the Office.

The condition in Total Abstinence rates (believed to be the lowest in the Union,) is entire forfeiture upon the departure of the Insured from Total Abstinence in its strictest sense.

Policies at Joint Stock and Mutual rates, contain no condition except as usual in Life Insurance.

HEALTH INSURANCE DEPARTMENT.

All Moneys received from the Insured, for Annual Premiums, after deducting expenses, will be divided among the Sick

The Public have for some time been familiar with the subject of Life and Health Insurance, but it is obvious that too little thoughts has been given to the latter. LIFE Insurance benefits our successors, while HEALTH Insurance directly benefits ourselves. It makes provision for a time of sickness, when the products of a man's industry are cut off, and want unites with Disease to aggravate his distress. It is at this gloomy period, when he is prostrated and helpless, and when despondency would otherwise overwhelm him, that the holder of a Health Insurance Policy will realize its benefits.

RATES, under 50 years of age,

$2,00	per year,	for	$2,00	per week.
3,00	"	"	3,00	"
4,00	"	"	4,00	"
5,00	"	"	5,00	"
6,00	"	"	6,00	"

Over fifty and under sixty.

$2,50	per year,	for	$2,50	per week.
3,75	"	"	3,00	"
5,00	"	"	4,00	"
6,25	"	"	5,00	"
7,50	"	"	6,00	"

When the Fund shall amount to Three Dollars and upwards for every person insured and sufficient to warrant an additional distribution, the weekly allowances will be increased in accordance with the Rules of the Policy.

All the members of a Temple or Division insured at greatly reduced rates.

Applications for Agencies in any of the cities or towns in the State, should be made to the undersigned, post paid, or in person.

As Agent for the above Company, I am prepared to receive applications for Policies at any of the above rates.

CHARLES WOODWARD, Agent,
At ADAMS & CO.'S Express Office.

J. L. MOTHERSHEAD, Medical Examiner.

june 30 '52-1y

Ohio Life Insurance Company,

Capital $100,000.

JOINT STOCK AND MUTUAL,

CINCINNATI.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS.

Wm. Burnet, Jno. N. Ridgway, Chas. Goodman,
S. Robert, E. S. Haines, Jno. M. Blair,
J. W. Donohue, Eden B. Reeder, Wm. Person.

WM. BURNET, President.

S. W. REEDER, Sec'y J. W. DONOHUE, Vice Pres't

Office in Reeder's Building, Third street, between Almy's and City Bank.

This Company insures Lives at the lowest rates consistent with safety, either upon the Joint Stock or Mutual plan.

In the Joint Stock Department, premium payable quarterly, semi-annually or annually. On the Mutual plan, one-half the premium paid in Cash, the balance by a note bearing six per cent. interest—the interest only payable annually. Persons insuring on the mutual plan, participate in the profits of the Company in that department.

The undersigned having been appointed agent for the above Company, is prepared to fill applications for Life Insurance, on favorable terms.

Any information on the subject and pamphlets explaining the nature and utility of Life Insurance, furnished without charge, at the office of the Agent.

C. WOODWARD, Agent.

Office at Adam's & Co.'s Express Office, Journal Building, Pennsylvania street, Indianapolis, Ind.

june 30, '52-1y.

Railroad City Book Store.

COX & MATHES,

South side of Washington, between Illinois and Meridian streets,

INDIANAPOLIS, INDIANA.

AT wholesale and retail, Standard and Miscellaneous Works, Law, and Medical Books, School Books, Plain and Fancy Stationery, Blank Books, Wall Papers, &c., &c. mar 2

CHEAP WATCHES & JEWELRY.

Good Gold Watches at $24!

WE are now in our new Room No. 1, Palmer House, with a lot of beautiful Watches and Jewelry which we are selling lower than ever heretofore sold in Indianapolis, for instance we sell

Good 18 K Case Gold Lepines at $24.
" 18 K " " Levers at $28.
" Silver Anchor Levers $12 to $18.
" " Cylenders, $9 to $12.
" " Quarter's $6 to $10.

In addition to the above we have a fine assortment of other description of Watches all of which we will sell lower than any other firm dare sell in the place. I have in my employ a very superior Watch Repairer who will always be on on hand to do watch repairing of every description. Mr. Michot has worked in Geneva, Paris, New York and other large cities and has had great experience in his Branch of the business. All Watches warranted for one year, and the money in all cases refunded, provided they do not give entire satisfaction.

feb9 tf E. W. NEFF.

SMALL CHANGE.

THE undersigned is prepared to furnish Merchants and others with three cent pieces from the United States Mint at Philadelphia, free of transportation, in sums of 30, 60, and 90 dollars, upon deposit of Gold or Eastern Exchange. Also cents and half cents, upon payment of frieght on gold to Philadelphia, or on Eastern Exchange free of freight.

C. WOODWARD, Agent,
june 30 Adams & Co.'s Express.

A CHANCE TO MAKE MONEY.

Profitable and honorable Employment!

THE Subscriber is desirous of having an agent in each county and town of the Union. A capital of from $5 to $10 only will be required, and anything like an efficient, energetic man can make from three to five dollars per day; indeed some of the Agents now employed are realizing twice that sum. Every information will be given by addressing, (postage paid) WM. A. KINSLER,
june 15 3w ¶ Box 601, Philadelphia P. O.

THE ILLUSTRATED MAGAZINE OF ART.

THE five numbers of this Magazine which are published, place it at the head of publications of this kind No expense will be spared to make it in every respect worthy of the name, the "Illustrated Magazine of Art. The Engavings which are preparing for the future numbers are in the hands of first-class American and European Artists.

A Series of most interesting Tales will appear in it. "The School of Life," written and Illustrated by ANNA MARY, daughter of William and Mary Howitt, will shortly appear; also, "The Dead Bridal," an historical romance, illustrative of the most interesting period in the history of the Venetian Republic, by JONATHAN FREKE SLINGSBY, of the Dublin University Magazine; contributions, too, from WILLIAM and MARY HOWITT, PERCY B. ST. JOHN, and other writers of distinction in America and Europe

The following is a brief outline of the plan of the Magazine:

I. The Historical Department will abound with picturesque representations of the most remarkable events which have occurred in this and other countries; accompanied with interesting anecdotes and details from the pen of the most eminent writers of the day. This department will contain several splendid engravings, designed by the first artists of the world, and engraved in the highest style of modern art.

II. The Men and Women of the Age. This department will consist of beautifully executed portraits of the leading characters of the age, especially of those who figure on the stage of humanity as the world's benefactors. Each portrait will be accompanied by an interesting biographical sketch

III. The Wonders of Natural History, Botany, and other sciences, will be developed in choice Engravings of Beasts, Birds, Fishes, Insects, Forest Trees, Flowers, Geological and Fossil Specimens, &c., with accompanying descriptions.

IV. The Triumphs of Architectural Art will be displayed in exquisitely finished representations of Cathedrals, Churches, Palaces, and other models of ancient and modern Architectural Art.

V. The Works of the Great Masters, selected from the principal Galleries of Art in the World. In general, the portrait of the Master will be given, accompanied with a highly finished engraved copy of his chef d œuvre.

VI. The Scientific Portions will be rendered highly interesting by the familiar explanations, and the numerous diagrams which will accompany each subject.

VII. Manufactures. The principal manufaciuring processes in use will be fully explained by minute details, and an abundance of beautiful engravings.

VIII. Machinery and Inventions will have due attention paid to them, and be described by numerous appropriate engravings.

IX. The Literary Department, independently of the various articles accompanying the illustrations, will comprise original and interesting narratives, contributed by the most popular writers of the day, with numerous illustrations.

In every respect, the "Illustrated Magazine of Art," will be decidedly

SUPERIOR TO ANY MAGAZINE OF THE DAY.

Each Monthly part will contain at least Thirty superb Engravings, four of which will be printed separately, on supefine Plate Paper.

The greatest care will be manifested in every department of production. The Paper will be of the first manufacture, and the Ink supplied from the celebrated Printing Ink Establishment of Messrs. Lawson & Co., of Paris. Six of the monthly portions, when completed, will form a volume which, for interest, originality, value and beauty, will defy competition. It will not only be an interesting family book, but a rich ornament for the drawing-room table, and a pleasant companion in the study.

The parts will appear on the First of every Month at Twenty-five Cents each.

ALEXANDER MONTGOMERY,
may 25 17 Spruce Street, New-York.

SPLENDIDLY ILLUSTRATED WORKS.

THE ALPS, SWITZERLAND, SAVOY AND LOMBARDY.

With the Magazine for June will be ready, Part I., price Twenty-five Cents, of a Magnificent Work to be completed in Twelve Monthly Parts, entitled

THE ALPS, SWITZERLAND, SAVOY AND LOMBARDY, with an account of the most recent Ascents to Mont Blanc, &c. By the Rev. Charles Williams. This work, when completed, will form a large thick Volume, in Imperial Octavo, containing upwards of Three Hundred beautiful Engravings, descriptive of the peculiar Scenery of those most interesting portions of Europe, with the Occupations of the Inhabitants, &c., &c.

Cassell's Natural History.

On the First of July will commence

CASSELL'S NATURAL HISTORY, which for variety, beauty and completeness, will claim to be considered as a first-class work, upon this most interesting subject. The First volume will be devoted to the Feathered Tribe of the Creation and will contain upwards of Three Hundred Engravings, in the first style of Art. The volume will be completed in Twelve Monthly Parts, Imperial Octavo. Price 25 cents each.

History of England.

On the First of July will appear Part I., price 25 cts. of THE ILLUSTRATED HISTORY OF ENGLAND, from the earliest period on record to the present time. Edited by ROBERT FERGUSON, LL. D.

This History, which is intended to form a great National Work, will extend to Four Volumes, Imperial Octavo; each Volume to be completed in Twelve Monthly Parts, price 25 cents each. The Work will comprehend the Political, Civil, and Domestic History of the Nation, and its Progress in Civilization, Literature, Art, &c. It will be profusely Illustrated with Engravings from Designs by GILBERT, PHILLIPPOTEAUX, WILLIAMS, and others. Representations of the most remarkable Events will be worked separately upon Plate Paper. The Portraits will form a complete Gallery, not only of the Monarchs, but of those individuals whose names are prominent in England's History. Also, Antiquities, including Autographs, Buildings, Costume, Furniture, Arms, Coins, Monuments, Manufactures &c., of each Epoch.

History of Hungary.

July First will be published, in one Handsome Volume, Imperial Octavo, price, One Dollar and Twenty-five Cents, in Cloth Boards,

THE ILLUSTRATED HISTORY OF HUNGARY, AND THE MAGYARS, from the Earliest Period to the clos of the late War. By EDWARD LAWRENCE GODKIN. The Volume will be Illustrated with One Hundred highly finished Engravings, including representations of the principal Battles; Portraits of the early Kings, and of the Statesmen and Generals who figured in the War of Independence; Costumes of the Peasantry, &c.; Views of the chief Towns and Fortresses, &c.; with an accurate Description of the Manners and Customs of the People, their Literature, Commerce, Arts, &c.

ALEXANDER MONTGOMERY,
may25 Publisher, 17 Spruce Street, New-York.

MANSION HOUSE, Cambridge City, Indiana.

J. CUNNINGHAM, Proprietor.

TRAVELLERS

Will find it to their advantage to call and try the accommodation of the MANSION HOUSE.

STAGE OFFICE also in connection with this House.

may 4 6m

INDIANA STATE LIBRARY

TEMPERANCE CHART.

A Weekly Journal:---Devoted to Temperance, Morality, Education, Literature, Useful Arts, Science, General Intelligence, &c.

J. W. GORDON, M. D., EDITOR.] ORGAN OF THE GRAND DIVISION OF INDIANA. [JOHN H. OHR, PRINTER.

VOL. III. INDIANAPOLIS, IND., WEDNESDAY, JULY 27, 1853. NO. 5.

THE TEMPERANCE CHART,
IS PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY, BY THE GRAND DIVISION, S. of T. OF INDIANA.

Edited by J. W. Gordon, M. D.
To whom all Communications and Subscriptions must be addressed, post-paid.
OFFICE—in second story of Temperance Hall Building, Washington St., Indianapolis.

TERMS:
Single copy, one year, ... 75 cts.
☞ In advance in all cases,

TERMS OF ADVERTISING.—Circulation 4000 copies.

One Squre, (12 lines,) for one week,	$0 50
" " for each subsequent insertion,	25
" " for 3 months,	3 00
" " for 6 months,	5 00
" " for 1 year without alteration,	8 00
" " for 1 year, with changes,	12 00

A reduction made on larger advertisements.
Cuts double the above rates.
Advertisements must be handed in by Saturday, of each week, to insure insertion.
Applications for advertising, or for any kind of Printing for the Order, must be made to
J. H. OHR, Indianapolis.

MISCELLANEOUS.

From the Tecumseh Herald.

Female Influence, or THE ELOQUENCE OF A TEAR.

A TEMPERANCE TALE, BY A LADY.

[CONTINUED.]

We now enter upon a new era in the history of James Headly. He has entered upon his political career, and new scenes, new trials, await him. He must resign his quiet, peaceful home, for a season, and find another among strangers. But he could not consent to be separated from his family, and insisted on their accompanying him. But he found difficulties attending this change, which he had not taken into consideration. He had recently adopted the custom of presenting stimulants as a beverage, but it was to those only who had proffered it to him in his recent canvass, previous to his election.—Now, he was placed where it was the established custom, and as he could plead no pledge on his part as an excuse, there was no alternative, he must adopt this popular custom, and Mrs. Headly, good, dutiful wife, did not quarrel with him. She had now a fine opportunity to test the expediency of a measure, which had been questioned for many years by her sister.—She had no fears for her husband; he had no thirst whatever for stimulants. But not thus with many who partook of the tempting beverage. Her heart sickened, as she witnessed the fearful effects on some, who were evidently becoming victims to habits of intemperance. And must her darling boy be constantly exposed to this contagion? What fearful apprehensions would at times force themselves upon her mind—how frequently the words of the poet would rush back upon her memory,

"Vice is n monster of so frightful mein,
As to be hated, needs but to be seen;
But seen too oft, familiar with her face,
We first endure, then pity, then embrace."

Unhappy woman, we pity you, but we must reflect upon your folly—one word of kind expostulation with that husband, who never denied a wish of your heart, would have prevented this uneasiness; but that word was withheld; 'Ye knew your duty, and ye did it not.' She saw the danger of her situation, and was constantly on the alert to counteract any bad influence, ever portraying the evils of excess in glowing colors. George listened with due respect. but was at the same time making his own comments upon the practice; his mother was somewhat disturbed to hear him give it as his candid opinion, that wine was not so had as she represented, for he noticed instead of making the gentlemen cross. that it made some of them so happy, they hardly knew what they were about. But she was still more startled to find him trying the effect upon himself, and hear his announcement, that he really found it pretty good. This, of course, drew forth warning aod threatening on the part of the mother; and we are sorry to state, the offence was repeated, and the good woman felt it to be a duty to inflict the penalty. Dear little George, he could not exactly understand the propriety of this course, but deliberated long and seriously upon it, and then turning to his mother with all the simplicity of his years, inquires:

'When I get to be a Senator, mother, can't I drink just as much as I choose?'

By continued efforts, however, on the part of Mrs. Headly, her son was taught that this luxury was not designed for his use, provided there was the least danger of being detected by his mother. She sometimes hoped he would eventually become proof against this temptation, by being so frequently exposed, and yet obliged to deny himself. But she did not know the facts in this case; she did not know he took every advantage of her absence, watching the opportunity to drain the contents of the glass, if his falher had occasion to entertain a friend.

When Headly had served in the State legislature several years, he was elected representative to the United States Congress. George had now arrived at his thirteenth year, and was considered a boy of uncommon promise. No pains had been spared in his moral and intellectual culture, and, except the example to which we have alluded, he had been trained in the way he should go—but in this particular, his friends had forgotten the old adage, 'actions speak louder than words.'

When James Headly was making arrangements to repair to Washington, he still insisted on retaining the society of his wife and son. Mrs. Headly had secret misgivings as to the propriety of placing her son in a situation, in which he might see intemperance, in all its deformity, tolerated in high places of honor. Edward Mansfield and his wife viewed this period as an important crisis in the life of George, and kindly offered to take him into their family, and extend their guardianship over him during the absence of his parents; but this offer was declined. The parents could not listen to the separation—they knew there were some evils to be apprehended by the removal, but they could also foresee many advantages, and they trusted their precepts and influence would be a sufficient protection from the prevailing vices of the capitol.

We will now leave this family to be duly installed in the honors, and initiated into the amusements and follies of the gay metropolis, while we take a glance at the family of Edward Mansfield. Public life had no attractions for him, he cheerfully yielded up its honors to those who were willing to forego the pleasures of home, and endure its perplexities and trials; while his companion had become the popular statesman, he had secured the reputation of an honest lawyer—a name perhaps more difficult to attain than that of Congressman. When his duties called him away from his family, he was assured his children were under the care of one who never slumbered over their interests. If the mother had not taken her children abroad to learn human nature, she had taught them to turn their eyes within, and know themselves. She carefully watched every development of character—what was wrong, promptly corrected, and while she guarded every avenue to temptation, she cultivated with the most assiduous care the noble and self-denying virtues, while she gave line upon line, precept upon precept, she did not counteract the effect of these instructions by her own example.—It was from such a teacher her son, Henry Mansfield, had been taking lessons at home, while his cousin, George Headly, had been in a measure educated abroad, and early brought in contact with the fashions and follies of the day.

But we must turn from this delightful survey of maternel influence, and domestic happiness, to follow our young hero in his advance into public life. His parents had scarcely become located at the capitol before they became fully aware of the perilous situation in which they had placed their son. How sincerely they regretted they had ever entertained their friends with any thing that could intoxicate, for they feared, with all their precautions and admonitions, their only son had acquired a fondness for intoxicating liquors. He always assured them that he never indulged in the proscribed article, but could they trust his word? He had now arrived at an age that he could not at all times remain under the watchful eye of his mother; he must be exposed to society, whether good or bad, and how far did he withstand temptation? How cautiously did the anxious mother repair to the couch of her slumbering boy, and bend over him with a throbbing heart, fearing she might learn the truth of her apprehensions. But an incident occurred not long before the close of the session, that placed this question beyond a doubt. Mr. Headly received a visit from an old political friend, who was accompanied by his son, with whom George was acquainted—this afforded him much pleasure, and he spared no pains to amuse and entertain his young companion. Shortly after they left, George became suddenly ill, and his mother was much alarmed, but before medical aid could be procured, the cause of his indisposition was discovered—he was intoxicated. He had aimed to follow the example of his parents, by extending the accustomed hospitality, and while drinking too freely to the health of his friend, he had somewhat impaired his own.

'My son! my son!' exclaimed the frantic mother, 'how could you do thus, and disobey my positive orders?'

'Don't be so distressed, mother,' said the poor boy, scarcely able to articulate, 'I did-didn't think you would care, as it was my par-partic-particular friend.'

He was soon relieved, by ejecting this poisonous draught, and sank into repose; his mother took her seat by his side—her feelings were indescribable. His apology for his conduct, given merely to palliate the offence, had been like an arrow to her heart. The inconsistency of their course was too apparent, and she found too late, that precept was of but little value, unless enforced by example. The apprehension that the evil done her son was irreparable, filled her with anguish. Conscience waked up memory to its duty, and unwelcome recollections of the past rushed in upon her, like the succession of waves upon the tempest-tossed mariner. The earnest ejaculation of that sister, that she might never have cause to regret the folly of her course, was vividly brougt to mind. Ah! she remembrs, too, when that same dear boy, in his artless innocence, besought her to take the liquid poison from their table; she reflected, also, upon the evils of intemperance presented constantly to her view. She beheld men of talent and distinction convened to legislate for the interests of their country, and many, alas! debased, demoralized by this pernicious habit. True, they might be very tenacious of political rights and national honor, but their example would tend to enslave to habit, tarnish honor, and subvert all order and national prosperity. She reflected, too, upon the perverted state of the public morals of our country, that made her persist in conferring her honors on persons of intemperate habits; and she remembered, too, that thus her own dear husband compromised principle to some extent, when he would gain public favor. Her heart sickened at this retrospect—scalding tears followed each other in quick succession, and she resolved to awake in earnest to to this subject, and secure her son, if possible, from threatened ruin.

From this period, the gay society and scenes around her lost all their charms; there was a secret grief, a deep anxiety of heart that she could not disclose, and she longed to exchange the gay metropolis for the domestic happiness and quietude of her own home.

[CONTINUED IN OUR NEXT.]

Our Work.

BY J. G. ADAMS.

"Oh take the pledge, who have not—think!
Let conscience speak to-day;
For ye may win the sot from drink,
If ye but lead the way."—Cold Water Melodies.

We have reason for high thanksgiving when we learn what has been effected, when we realize what is now going on for temperance, in our land; when we consider how the tide of popular feeling has turned, and that whereas it was once somewhat respectable for respectable men to keep at a respectable distance from an advocacy of the temperance cause, now this very cause is one of the most popular among us—drawing into it the high and lowly, the distinguished and undistinguished, of all classes in society. So be it henceforth! We give praise to heaven that the reformed inebriate, just snatched from the drunkard's grave, and placed on the high rock of deliverance and victory—the industrieus mechanic, the thriving merchant, the professional man, the legislator—our judges, governors, and leading men, each and all, are induced to be free and ready witnesses to the holy effect, to the onward march and anticipated triumph of the Temperance Reform. Our frequent meetings, our increased publications, our new accessions of the old and middle-aged, and especially our numerous and well-trained Cold-Water Armies, our continual agitation of the subject in the varieties of ways ever known or about to be known to this people of expedients, are all so many living and breathing indications that we are in the midst of one of the grandest moral revolutions the world has ever seen since "the morning stars sang together." The little one has become a thousand; the small one a great people. In a survey of the past we have reason to exclaim, "The Lord hath done great things for us, whereof we are glad!" And in contemplation of the future. to thank God and take courage."

But our zeal and interest are not to go out in words of joy for the past, nor in boastings for the future. We must labor, individually, and now is the time for it—now, when all things are ready—when the moral creation seems groaning and waiting for the continued still greater manifestation of this heavenly Reform! We must labor by precept—by example—by words in public and private. In the thoroughfares of life, and by its waysides and hedges—in the work shop, farm house, counting room, pulpit, and hall of legislation—when we go out and when we come in—lie down or rise up—everywhere and at all times should we be abounding in this work of the Lord.

This is my idea: I would call attention to this present laboring time. And my chief reason for urging this idea is the fact, that, although Temperance is marching proudly onward, its enemy is not dead—no not dead! The demon lives—not only in that black and smoking distillery, where death and destruction send out their hosts and squadrons of man-consumers—not only in that array of cider-barrels where the solitary farmer seeks at home that frequent stimulant which by and by will work his downfall at some other fount more deadly and swifter in its work of ruin—but he lives, moves, and yet strives to have his respectable being in our fashionable circles—in our wine-drinking companies—at our popular hotels, and summer resorts, where move many of those who are among the last (for reasons which need not now be named) to be prompted by the voice of public opinion, if that voice is against their error, folly, or sin. Here is where the reform is needed; and here should its voice be heard; not only once or twice in some eloquent, because well-worded and well-arranged address; but often—by example, conversation, friendly appeal, discussion, serious or jocose—in any laudable manner by which the old tyrant-king Alcohol may receive ad additional elbowing or push-polite from professedly refined society.

The words applied by our noblest poet to Freedom, may be addressed with peculiar adaptedness, at the present time, tc Temperance, in view of her future conflict and triumph:

"Thy enemy, although of reverend look,
Hoary with many years, and far obeyed,
Is later born than thou; and as he meets
The grave defiance of thy elder eye,
The usurper trembles in his fastnesses.
Thou shalt wax stronger in the lapse of years,
But he shall fade into a feebler age—
Feebler, yet subtler; he shall weave his snares,
And spring them on thy careless steps, and clap
His withered hands, and from their ambush call
His hordes to fall upon thee. He shall send Quaint maskers, forms of fair and gallant mien,
To catch thy gaze, and uttering graceful words,
To charm thine ear; while his sly steps, by stealth,
Twine round thee threads of steel, light thread on thread,
That grow to fetters; or bind down thy arms;
With chains concealed in chaplets. Oh! not yet
Mays't thou unbrace thy corslet, or lay by
Thy sword; not yet, O TEMPERENCE! close thy lids
In slumber; for thine enemy never sleeps,
And thou must watch and combat, till the day
Of the new earth and heaven!"

Now let us keep our eye on this item of duty. Just so far as we have an influence in that society where intoxicating drinks are used, as if in polite and fashionable disrespect of temperance principles, let our voices ever be set to the tune of "Down with Alcohol! Death to Wine the mocker!" and let our example show that there is something yet to be encountered and overcome before wine-bibbing can ever become really fashionable as in years gone by. Temperance friends—"old men and maidens, young men and cbildren"—what say ye to this? Amen? If so, then see to yourselves the next time you encounter, in fashionable life, at home or abroad, in public or private, this fiery enemy of righteousness.

Again: Let us give special heed to the pledge. The pledge! This, taken by our influential men of society, will tend greatly to strengthen the Temperance Cause.—This, it is acknowledged on all hands, is the safety-boat amid the wrecks and ruins of intemperance around us. Total abstinence from all that can intoxicate! Let each individual come up to this, and our work is done. Who, in this advanced stage of the Temperance Reform, will turn away from it, because, forsooth, fashion in high life, or any other kindred influence, may cry, "Hold?" Out upon such fashion, if it stand in the way of man's true elevation and happiness! Out upon it, say we; and let all the people respond, Amen!

The Wrong must fall.

All things conspire to overturn a wrong. Every advance of man is hostile to it.—Reason is hostile; religion is its deadly foe; the new-born generation will assail it, and it must fail. Of old it was written, "Though hand join in hand, the wicked shall not prosper," and the world's wide walls, from the remotest bounds of peopled space, laugh out their loud and long "Amen!" Let Iniquity be never so old and respectable, get all the most eminent votes, have the newspapers on her side, guns fired at her success, it all avails nothing; for this is God's world, not a devil's, and His eternal word has gone forth that Right alone shall last for ever and for ever.

O young man, now in the period of the passions, reverence your Conscience. Defer that to no appetite, to no passion, to no foolish compliance with other men's ways, to no ungodly custom, even if it become a law. Ask always, "Is it right for me?" Be brave and self-denying for conscience' sake. Fear not to differ from men; keeping your modesty, keep your integrity also. Let not even your discretion consume your valor. Fear not to be scrupulously upright and pure; be afraid neither of men's hate, nor even of their laugh and haughty scorn, but shudder at the thought of tampering with your sense of right, even in the smallest matters.—The Flesh will come up with deceitful counsels; the Spirit teaching the commandments of God; give both their due. Be not the senses' slave, but the soul's free man.

O brother man, who once wert young, in the period of ambition or beyond it, if such a time there be, can you trust the selfishness, the caprice, the passions, and the sin of men, before your own conscience, renounce the law of God for the customs of men? When your volcanic mountain has been capped with snow, Interest, subtler than all the passions of the flesh, comes up to give her insidious counsel. "On our side," says she, "is the applause of men; feasting is with us; the wise and prudent are here also, yea, the ancient and honorable, men much older than thy father; and with gray hairs mottling thy once auburn head, wilt thou forsake official business, its solid praise, and certain gain, for the phantom of natural duty, renounce allegiance to warm human lies for the cold truth of God remote and far!" Say, "Get thee behind me," to such counsellors; "I will not stain my age by listening to your subterranean talk."

O brother man, or old or young, how will you dare come up before your God and say: "O Lord, I heard, I heard thy voice in my soul, at times still and small, at times a trumpet talking with me of the Right, the Eternal Right, but I preferred the low counsels of the flesh; the commands of Interest I kept; I feared the rich man's decorous rage; I trembled at the public roar, and I scorned alike my native duty and thy natural law. Lo, here is the talent Thou gavest me, my sense of right. I have used each other sense, this only have I hid, it is eaten up with rust, but thus I bring it back to Thee. Take what is thine!" Who would thus dare to sin against Infinite Justice? Who would wish to sin against it when it is also Infinite Love, and the law of right is but the highway on which the Almightiness of the Father comes out to meet his prodigal, a great way off, penitent and returning home, or unrepentant still, refusing to be comforted, and famishing on draff and husks, while there is bread of heavenly life, enough and yet to spare, comes out to meet us, to take us home, and to bless us for ever and for ever?

BE TRUE AND COURAGEOUS.—There is nothing like courage in misfortune, next to faith in God, and in his overruling providence, a man's faith in himself is his salvation. It is the secret of all power and success. It is the secret of all good luck. It makes a man strong as the pillar of iron, or elastic as the springing steel.—And while others bow to chance and accident, he makes chance and accident bow to him; and he moulds them to his purposes, and harnesses them to the car of his fortune.

STATE LIBRARY INDIANAPOLIS

TEMPERANCE CHART.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.
WM. HANNAMAN, C. E. BABB,
JAMES HALL, R. T. BROWN,
JOHN B. ABBETT.

WEDNESDAY, JULY 27, 1853.

Temperance Camp Meetings.

There will be a Temperance Camp Meeting held at Matamora, in Franklin county, Indiana, on the 10th and 11th days of August next. A number of speakers will be present, from our own and other States; and a grand rally may be expected. Let all who can, turn out. We must destroy the Destroyer—ruin the Ruiner, or be ruined and destroyed ourselves.

Another Camp Meeting will be held at Dayton, Tippecanoe county, Indiana, on the 19th and 20th days of August, where much to interest, instruct, and improve the people will not fail to be present. The cause of Prohibition is the people's cause, and they will attend to it. Let all the people attend who feel interested in obtatning a good prohibitory law—sufficient to put an end to the horrors of the liquor traffic.

Celebration of the Fourth at Cloverland.—We noticed the celebration of the Fourth at Cloverland as a whisky celebration, and referred to some incidents tending to show that it was such. We have since been informed that we were misinformed in regard to its character, and are willing, of course, to make the amende honorable. We received a letter from one of the citizens of that place fully acquitting the people there, of any participation in the disgraceful scenes alluded to. Our correspondent says, that there was no liquor on the ground except what was brought there by citizens of Terre Haute, and that the breach of the peace was the result of this liquor; and occasioned by two citizens of that place who quarrelled and fought. The toasts were not drunk in the usual old way, no liquor being employed for that purpose. In other words, the celebration was in all respects a Temperaace celebrution. That is what we are informed, and we give it to our readers with entire satisfaction.

This celebration, then, may be taken as another indication of the improvement of public opinion in the neighborhood of Cloverland; for we are informed by one who knows the place well, and is worthy of the fullest credit; that but a short time ago there were no less than ten barrels of whisky sold there per week. Now that was pretty strong for a village of from fifty to one hundred inhabitants; and taken in connection with this Temperance celebration, indicates a great and ameliorating change in the opinions and habits of the citizens. We certainly hope that the temperance manifested on the Fourth will become the habit of these people, and that if the worm of the still is still alive in the village, it will be killed off by the spirit of refoim.

Liquor Traffic.—The Wabash Commercial says the whisky sellers of that place have been considerably disturbed by the Court of Common Pleas which is now in session there. The Commercial adds:

"The first case was against Peter Struble, who was fined at the first lick some forty dollars, and upon his refusal to give bail was taken to jail, where he continued about twenty-four hours, when he was bailed, and the first thing he did after returning from the jail was to burst in the head of his whisky barrel, and pour out the liquor into the street where it was fired. Peter is, no doubt, satisfied with his experience in the liquor trade. The prosecutor and the Court deserve much praise for their righteous proceedings.

It is impossible to love a second time what we have once really ceased to love.

Call for a State Temperance Convention.

A State Temperance Convention will be held at Madison, Jefferson county, Indiana, beginning on the 28th of September next, and continuing as long as it may determine.

It is expected that the People will be represented. The work is theirs, and they will attend to it. For this purpose, we hope, primary meetings of the people will be called in all parts of the State, to select delegates to represent them.

Let each city, town, and county send their representatives; and let them bring together the experience of the people they represent, in reference to the enormous evils of intemperance.

Examine your records, search your public journals, tax your recollections for public outrages in your respective districts, trace each to its cause, and then report the result. This will place a mighty weapon in the hands of the friends of our cause, and close the mouth of opposition.

Nothing short of Prohibition absolute and entire, will secure our State from the evils of drunkenness. Let us bring before the public such an array of facts as will satisfy the people that Prohibition is the true—the only true policy for Indiana.

Other States are advancing more rapidly in this glorious path of progress than ours. Let us awake to our own interest and emulate their noble achievements. Let Michigan and Ohio see and feel that Indiana is worthy to share the blessings and glory of Prohibition with them. A sober people have more than half achieved the right to be esteemed a great people.

Come, then, every body—the aged and young—the rich and poor—men of all professions, trades, and employments—politicians and people—come all—join us in ascertaining the Right, that all may do it when ascertained.

Come, and let our neighbors see and feel that we are determined to shake off the evils of a system arising from the utter selfishness of those engaged in it.

Let it be an occasion long to be remembered as the "Great Convention at Madison,"—fruitful in the propagation of good and the suppression of evil—glorious as a landmark of Progress, in the advance of a virtuous and free people.

John A. McClung,
Wm. Wilson,
John C. Steele,
John O'Kane,
William Hannaman,
Charles Woodward,
J. W. Gordon,
} State Central Committee.

Universal Moral Panacea.—The Yankee Blade proposes the following remedy for the ills of the flesh and the spirit, composed of "leaves," "plants," and "roots," which, if taken without a wry face, will make any man respectable and happy.

Leave off drinking.
Leave off smoking.
Leave off chewing.
Leave off swearing.
Leave the g'hals alone.
Plant your pleasure in the home circle.
Plant your business in some honorable employment.
Plant your faith in truth.
Root your habits in industry.
Foot your feelings in benevolence.
Root your affections in God.
For directions see the Holy Scriptures and beware of counterfeit creeds and quack theologians.

A Verdict.—The following is a correct copy of a verdict returned in an assault and battery case tried last week in the Court of Common Pleas in Lawrence county. The orthography even is not changed in the slightest:

"When a man invites his neighbor and shakes a bottle of whiskey at him, and begins to abuse him, that is a sufficient assault to gustify a battery; "Wexe's meditation on the Bogs," page 340. We, thereupon, find not guilty."

Fatal Affray.—Another fatal affray took place a few miles from Terre-Haute on Wednesday last. Dr. James W. Gordon, of West Union, Parke county, Ind., was killed in an encounter by a half brother of his, named Livingston, a lawyer of Lawrence county, Kentucky. The difficulty originated about a girl which had been left by Livingston at Gordon's some months since, and who Livingston claimed the guardianship of. The case was submitted to the Mayor of Terre-Haute, without argument, who acquitted the defendant upon the ground of self-defence.

What is Virtue?

To fill in a proper and becoming manner the station in which a wise Creator has mercifully placed him, will always be regarded by every true man as the highest and grandest aim of human effort. Its attainment, however, seems scarcely less difficult than desirable. Hence few have fully attained it.

Two conditions must be filled by him who, with any good hope of success, would exalt the standard of his ambition so high. Without knowledge and moral purity the pursuit is vain, and can only result in disappointment. Virtue alone can secure to her votary a triumph so exalted, and virtue can exist and flourish only in the soul which goodness has purified and knowledge illuminated. A man may intend right, but he is virtuous only to the extent of his knowledge; and, again, he may know all that is known to man, yet if he do not intend right, he will forever remain opposed to the empire of virtue—an alien and a stranger to its beneficent influences and enjoyments.

Virtue refers to our relations as intelligent and immortal beings, accountable to our Creator for our conduct. It implies that these relations must be understood and respected: that the law established for their protection shall be observed in such a manner as to bring home to him who keeps its obligations, the consciousness that he does so, and to those who are the objects of his actions the blessings which always follow the steps of the virtuous.

The will of the Creator is the law of all relations recognized by Him as either necessary or proper to the consummation of his benevolent purposes. Every relation, therefore, which, in the order of creation, we sustain to our fellow-creatures—whether below, on a level with, or above ourselves—brings us directly into relationship with Him who is the Author of all subordinate relations; and thus every obligation arising from these subordinate relations, is enforced by the high and solemn consideration, that it is linked with an obligation to Him also. To fail in our duty to one of the least of His creatures,—with whom a law far higher than any human law has associated us,—is, therefore, to come short also of our duty to the Author of that law.

Every voluntary action of our lives refers to that law, and, according to its precepts, is either virtuous or vicious, as it is in accordance with or in violation of them. A law, however, must be known before it can be obeyed; for that is no obedience which does not follow an approving mind. It is the mind that keeps or violates law; and wherever that fails, there, also, the penalties of the law should cease. Hence it is clear that as to know the law precedes obedience to the law, and as obedience goes before or leads to virtue, there can be no virtue beyond our knowledge.

But it may be asked, what if a man intending to do right but ignorant whether a proposed line of action be so or not, accidentally fill the letter of the law? Is he not, therefore, virtuous?

He may be, or the contrary, according to circumstances. If his ignorance is the result of unavoidable necessity he is fairly not responsible for it or its consequences. But certainly he can not be regarded as a virtuous man, so far as he may even fortunately yet ignorantly meet the requirements of the law; for, not realizing his obedience, he remains unconscious of discharging any duty; while he can not altogether escape the pangs arising from a fear of coming short of it.

Evory virtuous action is two-fold in its influences: it carries blessing to its objects, while it strengthens and purifies the mind of him who performs it. In such case, however, the intention would so far redeem the act as to save it from the category of vicious ones. In the second place: if a man's ignorance be due to his own default, then his conduct, although it may chance to fall under that class of actions to which our attention is now directed, as complying with the letter of the law, can not be regarded in so favorable a light as that of him whose ignorance is unavoidable. He might have known his duty, but would not. He must, therefore, stand by the side of him who knew his duty, and did it not. The shadow of his guilty ignorance rests upon all he does, and hides both it and him from the sunlight that ever shines npon the heaven-illumined path of virtue.

Every action, therefore is virtuous or not, as it is in accordance with the will of the Creator or otherwise. That is the law. Having bestowed a rational and moral nature upon man, and given him this law for his government, the elements of virtue were brought together; and all that remained for its development was that each should exercise its legitimate functions.

These elements of virtue may be conveniently brought before the mind in the order of their importance. Thus arranged they stand as follows:

1. The law—the Divine will which, as already remarked, pervades the whole universe—meeting us in all its relations, challenging our admiration and commanding our obedience whithersoever we turn.

2. The apprehension or knowledge of this law on the part of its subject; for, as already observed, knowledge precedes obedience.

3. The approbation of the law as the source of all obligation; and the accompanying intention to obey its requirements; and

4. An actual and habitual conformity to its demands.

Whenever in the conduct of any man or association these elements are found, virtue exists and flourishes. It is in such persons and communities also that you may expect its fruits.

Liquor Law in Connecticut.—The prohibitory Liquor Bill has been lost in the Legislature of Connecticut, and a substitute bill, for the suppression of tippling shops, has passed the House, 108 to 98. The following synopsis of the new bill is given by the New Haven Register:

"It provides that licenses to sell by wholesale or retail, may be granted by the Selectmen of towns, and the Common Councils of cities, and last for one year. Every person so licensed, is to pay into the treasury not less than $25, nor more than $100, at the discretion of the granting power. Duly licensed taverns are not to be subjected to this tax. Selling without a license, to subject the offenders to a fine of $50 for the first offence, $100 for the second, and $100 and imprisonment in the county jail for the third offence.—No person can sell adulterated wines or liquors; conviction for that offence forfeits his license and the money paid for it, and brings a fine of $200. None but taverners can sell to be drank on the premises; no person can sell to persons addicted to habits of intoxication, knowing him to be a common drunkard; no liquor can be sold by the glass on public occasions, in tents, booths, or open fields—nor shall a license be granted to any person for such a purpose."

The Liquor Law.—This law is working wonders down East, as the following extract from a letter by an apothecary dweling in Portland will show:

"A man came running into my store a day or two since, as if something dreadful was the matter—with eyes started wide open, and his countenance flushed and excited. He grabbed off his hat and ran in behind the counter, where I was, and exclaiming with such emphasis that my hair stood on end:

'For God's sake, my friend, do look on the top of my head!—what is it—what's on my head?'

"I looked and told him I saw nothing. He yelled out:

"'Why, you fool, can't you see I've got HAIR on my head!'

"And then turned on his heel and ran out of the shop again at great speed. I stood meditating for about five minutes, when on looking about me, I espied that two pint bottles of alcohol had disappeared!"

Gold an Evil.—The Boston Atlas thus concludes a long and able article upon the increase of gold, and its effects upon the commerce and condition of the world:

"One effect, we believe, is sure to result from the discovery of gold, which, of itself, must be an evil in community. It will engender a morbid thirst for gain in the breasts of thousands—create a feverish desire to leave the fields of ordinary industry, and embark in visionary schemes to make a fortune at once. And while the abundance of gold will induce commercial enterprise, the heavy importations of articles of luxury, and 'trifles light as air,' will. we fear, induce many who can but ill afford it, to indulge in extravagance, and 'spend their money for that which is not bread, and their labor for that which satisfieth not.'"

Foreign Items.

By the Arabia we have Liverpool dates to June 2d. The report that Persia was about sending an army to the aid of Turkey is confirmed. If the aspect of affairs has at all changed, since the last advices, the change bears more of a warlike aspect. The French and Englsh fleets are still at Besika. Telegraphic dispaches from Paris state that the news of the rejection of the Czar's ultimatum had reached St. Petersburg on the 24th ult., when the Emperor made a personal declaration to the English and French Embassadors, expressed in the strongest language. He stated that even the destruction of his fleets would not prevent him from invading Turkey, and obtaining reparation. The fourth division of the Russian army was ordered to enter Moldavia, and the Ruscian force on the Black Sea amounts to 16,000 men.—The Emperor complains bitterly of the conduct of the English Premier, and had sent forward peremptory instructions to the Russian Minister at London to confine himself to official intercourse with the British Secretary of State. The Paris Bourse was materially affected by this intelligence, and the three per cents declined more than one per cent. By the overland mail from the East, no news of a definite character had been received from Rangoon. At Calcutta trade was dull. The advices from China are to the 6th of May. It was rumored that the rebels had recaptured Nankin, and were moving toward Pekin.

The news from the Australian mines is satisfactory; but provisions were enormously high.

By the latest foreign advices we learn that a force of 12,000 Russian troops have entered Jassy, a city of Moldavian Turkey.

The Earthquake in Persia.—On the 1st of May the city of Shiraz in Persia, and not Ersoroune, as printed by us last week, was destroyed, with twelve thousand of its inhabitants, by the shock of of an earthquake. This is the second city in Persia, and in former years had a population of 40,000 persons, but an earthquake in 1824 nearly destroyed it. It was formerly a place of great beauty, and is celebrated by the Persian poet, Hafiz, who was a native of Shiraz, for its beauty and fertility. Since the earthquake of 1824 it has greatly declined in both, most of its public structures having been ruined by that calamity.

There are rumors afloat of secret attempts on the life of Louis Napoleon.—One evening a number of ropes were discovered stretched across the road to Saint Cloud, intended to trip up the horses of the imperial carriage. It is said the Empress is very nervous when she rides out with him.

The salary from the British Government to Queen Victoria is about $3,000,000 a year. His Holiness, the Pope, has about the same. This is at the rate of about $9,500 a day, or, going on the supposition that the Pope's average work-days equal about the number of Sabbaths in a year, he receives some $60,000 a day.—Surely Pius ought to live on so liberal a salary. Why could he not help some of the tens of thousands of blind and broken-legged beggars that swarm in and about Rome, Naples, and other of the most sanctified and holy of the Catholic cities?

The prohibition against reading Macaulay's History has been revoked at Rome, "it being found, on further examination, that there was a sufficient amount of abuse of the Church of England in the book, to overbalance all its liberalism, and render it safe reading for Romanists."

Official returns from Silesia, Prussia, show that during the past year 809 Catholics had become Protestants, and 508 Catholic parents had their children baptized in the Protestant faith.

Professor Charles Caldwell, the oldest physician in the United States, died, at his residence, in Louisville, on Saturday, July 9th.

The Boston Herald gives the confession of a dealer in the ardent in that city, who has been sending off varieties down East since the renowned Maine Law passed.—He has packed kegs of liquor in molasses casks, headed them in, and filled up with molasses; he has packed them in sugar boxes, filled around with sugar; he has packed them in oil casks, filled around with water; he has placed a piece of spoge, saturated with oil, over the bung, and covered with a pice of tin, so that when the cask is rolled over, a little oil will be squeezed out, thus deceiving the most knowing; he has packed them in cheese casks, leaving a hole in the head, through which a cheese, "white oak," was visible. Such is the ingenuity of trade—thus does necessity stimulate invention. The truth is, it is a very difficult thing to "head the critter."—Madison Banner.

Magnanimity is well enough defined by its name; nevertheless, we may say that it is the good sense of pride, and the most noble way of earning praise.

Duty vs. Business.

It is the function of conscience to discover to men the moral law of God. It will not do this with infallible certainty, for, at its best estate, neither conscience nor any other faculty of man is absolutely perfect, so as never to mistake. Absolute perfection belongs only to the faculties of God. But conscience, like each other faculty, is relatively perfect,—is adequate to the purpose God meant it for. It is often immature in the young, who have not had time for the growth and ripening of the faculty, and in the old, who have checked and hindered its development. Here it is feeble from neglect, there from abuse.—It may give an imperfect answer to the question, What is absolutely right?

Now, though the conscience of a man lacks the absolute perfection of that of God, in all that relates to my dealing with men, it is still the last standard of appeal. I will hear what my friends have to say, what public opinion has to offer, what the best men can advise me to, then I am to ask my own conscience, and follow its decision; not that of my next friend, the public, or the best of men. I will not say that my conscience will always disclose to me the absolutely right, according to the conscience of God, but it will disclose the relatively right, what is my conviction of right to-day, with all the light I can get on the matter; and as all I can know of the absolute right is my conviction thereof, so I must be true to that conviction. Then I am faithful to my own conscience, and faithful to my God. If I do the best thing I can know to-day, and to-morrow find a better one and do that, I am not to be blamed, nor to be called a sinner against God, because not so just to-day as I shall be to-morrow. I am to do God's will soon as I know it, not before, and to take all possible pains to find it out; but am not to blame for acting childish when a child, nor to be ashamed of it when grown up to be a man. Such is the function of conscience.

Having determined what is absolutely right, by the conscience of God, or at least relatively right, according to my conscience to-day, then it becomes my duty to keep it. I owe it to God to obey his law, or what I deem his law; that is my duty. It may be uncomfortable to keep it, unpopular, contrary to my present desires, to my passions, to my immediate interests; it may conflict with my plans in life: that makes no difference. I owe entire allegiance to my God. It is a duty to keep His law, a personal duty, my duty as a man. I owe it to myself, for I am to keep the integrity of my own consciousness; I owe it to my brother, and to my God. Nothing can absolve me from this duty, neither the fact that it is uncomfortable or unpopular, nor that in conflicts with my desires, my passions, my immediate interests, and my plans in life. Such is the place of conscience amongst other faculties of my nature.

I believe this is all perfectly plain, but now see what it leads to. In the complicated relations of human life, various rules for the moral conduct of men have been devised, some of them in the form of statute laws, some in the form of customs, and, in virtue of these rules, certain artificial demands are made of men, which have no foundation in the moral nature of man: these demands are thought to represent duties. We have the same word to describe what I ought to do as subject to the law of God, and what is demanded of me by custom, or the statute. We call each a duty. Hence comes no small confusion: the conventional and official obligation is thought to rest on the same foundation as the natural and personal duty. As the natural duty is at first sight a little vague, and not written out in the law book, or defined by custom, while the conventional obligation is well understood, men think that in case of any collision between the two, the natural duty must give way to the official obligation.

For clearness' sake, the natural and personal obligation to keep the law of God as my conscience declares it, I will call Duty; the conventional and official obligation to comply with some custom, keep some statute, or serve some special interest, I will call Business. Here, then, are two things—my natural and my personal duty, my conventional and official business. Which of the two shall give way to the other,—personal duty or official business? Let it be remembered that I am a man first of all, and all else that I am is but a modification of my manhood, which makes me a clergyman, a fisherman, or a statesman; but the clergy, the fish, and the State, are not to strip me of my manhood. They are valuable in so far as they serve my manhood, not as it serves them. My official business as clergyman, fisherman, or statesman, is always beneath my personal duty as man. In case of any confiict between the two, the natural duty ought to prevail and carry the day before the official business; for the natural duty represents the permanent law of God, the absolute right, justice, the balance-point of all interests: while the official business represents only the transient conventions of men, some partial interest; and besides, the man who owes the personal duty is immortal, while the officer who performs the official business is but for a time. At death, the man is to be tried by the justice of God, for the deeds done, and character attained, for his natural duty, but he does not enter the next life as a clergyman, with his surplice and prayer-book, or a fisherman, with his angles and net, nor yet as a statesman, with his franking privilege, and title of honorable and member of Congress. The officer dies, of a vote or a fever. The man lives for ever. From the relation between a man and his occupation, it is plain, in general, that all conventional and official business is to be overruled by natural personal duty. This is the great circle, drawn by God, and discovered by conscience, which girdles my sphere, including all other smaller circles, and itself included by none of them. The law of God has eminent domain every where, over the private passions of Oliver and Charles, the special interests of Carthage and of Rome, over all customs, all official business, all precedents, all human statutes, all treaties between Judas and Pilate, or England and France, over all the conventional affairs of one man or of mankind. My own conscience is to declare that law for me, yours for you, and is before all private passions, or public interests, the decision of majorities, and a world full of precedents. You may resign your office, and escape its obligations, forsake your country, and owe it no allegiance, but you can not move out of the dominions of God, nor escape where conscience has not eminent domain.

See some examples of a conflict between the personal duty and the official business. A man may he a clergyman, and it may be his official business to expound and defend the creed which is set up for him by his employers, his bishop, his association, or his parish, to defend and hold it good against all comers; it may be, also, in a certain solemn sort, to please the audience, who come to be soothed, caressed, and comforted,—to represent the average of religion in his society, and so to bless popular virtues and ban unpopular vices, but never to shake off or even jostle with one of his fingers the load of sin, beloved and popular, which crushes his hearers down till they are bowed together and can in no wise lift themselves up; unpopular excellence he is to call fanaticism, if not infidelity. But his natural duty as a man, standing in this position, overrides his official business, and commands him to tell men of the false things in their creed, of great truths not in it: commands him to inform his audience with new virtue, to represent all of religion he can attain, to undo the heavy burthens of popular sin, private or national, and let the men oppressed therewith go free. Excellence, popular or odious, he is to commend by its own name, to stimulate men to all nobleness of character and life, whether it please or offend. This is his duty, however uncomfortable, unpopular, against his desires, and conflicting with his immediate interests and plans of life. Which shall he do? His official business, and pimp and pander to the public lust, with base compliance serving the popular idols, which here are Money and Respectability, or shall he serve his God? That is the question. If the man considers himself substantially a man, and accidentally a clergyman, he will perform his natural duty; if he counts the priesthood his substance, and manhood an accident of that, he will do only his official business.

I may be a merchant, and my official business may be to buy, and sell, and get gain; I may see that the traffic in ardent spirits is the readiest way to accomplish this. So it becomes my official business to make rum, sell rum, and by all means to induce men to drink it. But presently I see that the common use of it makes the thriving unthrifty, the rich less wealthy, the poor miserable, the sound sick, and the sane mad; that it brings hundreds to the jail, thousands to the almshouse, and millions to poverty and shame, producing an amount of suffering, wretchedness, and sin, beyond the power of man to picture or conceive. Then my natural duty as man is very clear, very imperative. Shall I sacrifice my manhood to money?—the integrity of my consciousness to my gains by rum-selling? That is the question.—And my answer will depend on the fact, whether I am more a man or more a rum-seller. Suppose I compromise the matter, and draw a line somewhere between my natural duty as man, and my official business as rumseller. and for every three cents that I make by iniquity, give one cent to the American Tract Society, or the Board for Foreign Missions, or the Unitarian Association, or the excellent Society for Premoting the Gospel among the Indians (and others) in North America.—That does not help the matter; business is not satisfied, though I draw the line never so near to money; nor conscience, unless the line comes up to my duty.

I am a citizen, and the State says,—"You must obey all the statutes made by the proper authorities; that is your official business!" Suppose there is a statute adverse to the natural law of God, and the convictions of my own conscience, and I plead that fact in abatement of my obligation to keep the statute, the State says, "Obey it, none the less, or we will hang you. Religion is an excellent thing in every thing except politics; there it seems to make men mad." Shall I keep the commandment of men, or the law of my God?

A statute was ones enacted by King Pharaoh for the destruction of the Israelites in Egypt; it was made the official business of all citizens to aid in their destruction: "Pharaoh charged all his people, saying, Every son that is born ye shall cast into the river, and every daughter ye shall save alive." It was the official business of every Egyptian who found a Hebrew boy to throw him into the Nile,—if he refused, he offended against the peace and dignity of the kingdom of Egypt, and the form of law in such case made and provided. But if he obeyed, he murdered a man. Which should he obey, the Lord Pharaoh, or the Lord God? That was the question. I make no doubt that the priests of Osiris, Orus, Apis, Isis, and the judges, and the justices of the peace and quorum, and the members of Congress of that time said, "Keep the king's commandment, O ye that worship the crocodile and fear the cat, or ye shall not sleep in a whole skin any longer!" So said every thing that loveth and maketh a lie.

King Charles II. made a statute some one hundred and ninety years ago, to punish with death the remnant of the nine-and-fifty judges who had brought his father's head to the block, teaching kings that they had a joint in their necks." He called on all his subjects to aid in the capture of these judges. It was made their official business as citizens to do so; a reward was offered for the apprehension of some of them "alive or dead;" punishment hung over the head of any who should harbor or conceal them. Three of these regicides, who had adjudged a king for his felony, came to New England.—Many Americans knew where they were, and thought the condemnation of Charles I. was the best thing these judges ever did. With that conviction ought they to have delivered up these fugitives, or afforded them shelter? In time of peril, when officers of the English government were on the lookout for some of these men, a clergyman in the town where one of them was concealed, preached, it is said, on the text, "Bewray not him that wandereth," an occasional sermon, and put the duty of the man far before the business of the citizen. When Sir Edmund Andros was at New Haven looking after one of the judges, and attended public worship in the same meeting-house with the fugitive, the congregation sung an awful hymn in his very ears.

Would the men of Connecticut have done right, bewraying him that wandered, and exposing the outcast, to give up the man who had defended the liberties of the world and the rights of mankind against a tyrant,—give him up because a wanton king, and his loose men and loose women, made such a commandment? One of the regicides dwelt in in peace eight-and-twenty years in New England, a monument of the virtue of the people.

Of old time the Roman statute commanded the Christians to sacrifice to Jupiter; they deemed it the highest sin to do so, but it was their official business as Roman citizens. Some of them were true to their natural duty as men, and took the same cross Jesus had borne before them; Peter and John had said at their outset to the authorities—"Whether it be right in the sight of God to hearken unto you more than unto God, judge ye." The Emperor once made it the official business of every citizen to deliver up the Christians. But God made it no man's duty. Nay, it was each man's duty to help them. In such cases what shall a man do? You know what we think of men who comply basely, and save their life with the loss of their soul. You know how the Christian world honors the saints and martyrs, who laid down their lives for the sake of truth and right; a handful of their dust, which was quieted of its trouble by the headsman's axe seventeen hundred years ago, and is now gathered from the catacombs of Saint Agnes at Rome—why it is enough to consecrate half of the Catholic churches in New England. As I have stood among their graves, have handled the instruments with which they tasted of bitter death, and crumbled their bones in my hands—I keep their relics still with reverend awe—I have thought there was a little difference between their religion and the pale decency that haunts the churches of our time, and is afraid lest it lose its dividends, or its respectability, or hurt its usefulness, which is in no danger.

Do I speak of martyrs for conscience' sake? To-day is St. Maurice's day, consecrated to him and the "Thebæan legion." Maurice appears to have been a military tribune in the Christian legion, levied in the Thebais, a part of Egypt.—In the latter part of the third century this legion was at Octodurum, near the little village of Martigni, in Valais, a Swiss Canton, under the command of Maximian, the associate emperor, just then named Herculeus, going to fight the Bagaudæ.—The legion was ordered to sacrifice to the gods after the heathen fashion. The soldiers refused; every tenth man was hewn down by Maximian's command. They would not submit, and so the whole legion, as the Catholic story tells us, perished there on the 22d of September, fifteen hundred and fifty-three years ago this day. Perhaps this account is not true; it is probable that the number of martyrs is much exaggerated, for six thousand soldiers would not stand still and be slaughtered without striking a blow. But the fact that the Catholic church sets apart one day in the calendar to honor this alleged heroism, shows the value men put on fidelity to conscience in such cases.

Good Politics from a Bishop.

Bishop Doane, of New Jersey, at the late Anniversary of Burlington College, made an able and interesting address to the young men under his charge, from which we take the following paragraphs, touching political duties and education:

"It is the duty of the young American to imbue himself with the principles of the Constitution. Party divisions are the danger of our day; and parties are now no longer for principles, but for the spoils.—It is a mortifying thing, to say that our present administration—to which I cheerfully accord my unreserving confidence—has spent more time, and taken more trouble, in the distribution of the offices under the government, than in considering the domestic interests and foreign policy of the country. I do not lay il to them as an administration. It is the sin and curse of the times. Government has really come to be considered an institution to distribute patronage. And this within six and sixty years. I seriously regard it as the most disgraceful and most dangerous error of the age. Unless it be corrected, it will first corrupt and then destroy the Republic. The remedy for it is in the simple, earnest, child-like reference to the Constitution. I do not think it is a misuse of sacred history, to say this is the wood by which the bitter waters of our Marah must be sweetened. Officers, indeed, there must be to carry on a govnrnment. But office is the instrument alone; and they who hold it but incidents. The end is the public virtue, and the public happiness; the human means, the faithful application of our incomparable Constitution. Such of a truth, it is—a legacy from our forefathers, scarcely second to the freedom which enabled them to make it—and to perpetuate which they made it.—Let the young American study the Constitution. Let him imbue himself with its principles. Let him contemplate them, in action, as they were seen and felt in Adams, Hancock, Franklin, and Washington. And let him resolve to live by it as they did; and, if need be, to die for it, as they were prepared to do. So shall it be worth while to be Amerieans. So shall the name of the Young American go down to after ages—an inheritance for ever. And so shall other names and other nations, while they admire our virtues, be emulous of our example, until 'American' shall be the watchword and war-cry of true liberty throughout the world.

"Let the Young American labor for the highest education he can reach. At college, if he can get there. If not, at the best school. When there is no school for him, there is Franklin's garret above him, and Franklin's example before him. The great Samuel Lee, Professor of Arabic in the University of Cambridge, was a journeyman carpenter. But he loved learning; and he pursued it as lovers do.—When he had earned enough, he bought a book. When he had mastered it, he sold it and procured another. And so on.—And he became among the most distinguished of the learned men of Europe.—It is a lesson which every one may learn, and every one apply. And with so much more ease at this time, when books are so accessible and cheap. Only let the Young American eschew the light and fashionable reading of the day. The best of it is sillabub and sugar-candy. Too much of It is arsenic and prussic acid. It is a fault of the Young American to neglect and abuse his physical constitution. And, unhappily, it is not confined to the industrious student. The hours of recreation, when the mind should be relieved and the body invigorated, are given to the last novel. And health and strength are wasted, while the mind is diluted, and the moral principle perplexed, if not perverted."

Why People Drink.

Mr. A. drinks because his doctor has recommended him to take a little; Mr. B. because his doctor ordered him not, and he hates quackery; Mr. C. takes a drop because be is wet; Mr. D. because he is dry; Mr. E. because he feels something rising in his stomach; Mr. F. because he feels a kind of sinking in his stomach;—Mr. G. because he is going to see a friend off to Oregon; Mr. H. because he has got a friend come home from California; Mr. I. because he is so hot; Mr. K. because he is cold; Mr. L. because he has got a pain in his head; Mr. M. because he has got a pain in his side; Mr. N. because he has got a pain in his back; Mr. O. because he has got a pain in his chest; Mr. P. because he has got a pain all over him; Mr. Q. because he feels light and happy; Mr. R. because he feels heavy and miserable; Mr. S. because he has married; Mr. T. because he isn't; Mr. V. because he likes to see his friends around him; Mr. W. because he has got no friends, and enjoys a glass by himself; Mr. X. because his uncle left him a legacy; Mr. Y. becanse his aunt cut him off without a shilling; Mr. Z.—we should be happy to inform our readers what Mr. Z.'s reasons are for drinking, but, on putting the question to him, he was found to be too drunk to answer.

Horrible.—Two men in Illinois, near Lacon, came to a terrible death last week. A companion had stolen a bottle of liquor, as he supposed, which he handed them for a treat. They both drank of it in such haste, that its pungency and deadly power were not discovered until too late to avert the evil. It turned out to be nitric acid, diluted in rain water; said to have been procured for the purpose of galvanizing.—But a moment elapsed before they fell to the earth, overwhelmed with the most intense and excruciating pain. They rolled and tumbled, and clawed their faces and the earth with both hands, indicating, by the contortions of their bodies and groaning, all that agony which would ensue if they had swallowed red hot coals. Death soon ensued.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

A Happy World.—This is a happy world: who says to the contrary is a fool, or something worse. There is everything to make us happy. The land, sea, and sky, contribute to our enjoyment. The man who has a good heart sees pleasure where a bad person beholds nothing but gloom. The secret, then, in being happy and enjoying this glorious world is to possess a virtuous heart. Who is the most cheerful and contented man in your neighborhood? The man who is the most honored and possesses the greatest riches?—No—it is he who has nothing but a kind and good heart. Nothing ruffles his temper or disturbs his repose. The morning sky, the evening cloud, the rolling waters, the blooming landscape, the teeming forests, and fields of snow, give him pleasures others never dream of. It is he whose mind is "led from nature up to nature's God," and every day that he lives, he is as contented and happy as it is possible for man to be.

Depend upon it, the world is a beautiful one, and contains a thousand sources of enjoyment which they can only see and feel whose hearts are pure, and whose lives correspond to the word of eternal truth.

What makes us often discontented with negotiators is, that they almost always abandon the interest of their friends for that of the success of the negotiation, which becomes their own, from the credit of having succeeded in their undertaking.

Acknowledgments.

Of Z. Lloyd, at Kent, 25c.; W. Millikin, Manchester$9.00; E. P. Hammond, Columbus, $9.00; A. W. Gilmore, Lanesville, $2.00; B. Russell, Logansport, $2.25c.; C. Woodward, Eugene, $2.50; S. Tuttle, Orange, $6.00; L. Johnson, Lafayette, $18.75; J. W. Eggleston, Dillsboro, $3.00; Hendricks, D. S. of T., Danville, $1.00; J. Harris, Russellville, $1.50; J. P. Tucker, Annapolis, $3.00; D. S. McKee, Carrollton, Ky., $3.00; J. A. McManus, Newcastle, $15.00; C. P. Birch, Prairie Ridge, $1.00; Moses Baker, Monroe, $1.00; T. Lawton, Columbus, $6.00; C. Woodward, Shelbyville, $3.00; T. Cookins, Lauramie, $6.00; J. H. Ohr, New Harmony, $1.50; J. Hampt, Newtown, $1.00; R. M. Allens, Williamsport, Ind., 75c.; T. J. Williams, Wabash, $1.; J. M. Justice, Camden, $7.00; D. W. Reed, Hagerstown, $6.00; T. Parvin, Indianapolis, $3.75: A. Cleaver; Brandywine, $5.25; T. Auter, Groves, $3.00; W. W. Hill, Vincennes, $9.00; A. T. Wood, North Madison, $3.00; Wm. Worthington, Attica, $2.25; of P. M. at Reddington, $7.50; M, P. Alpha, Charlestown, $2.25; J. H. Summers, Nicholsonville, 75c.

CONSTITUTION AND BY-LAWS,

WE are still prepared to print Constitution and By-Laws, where the alterations are few from the copy recommended by the Grand Division, at the following rates:

100 copies, (or less) $5 00
200 " 8 00
300 " 10 00

We will pay the postage on all ordered from us.

☞ All orders accompanied by the cash, will be promptly attended to.

Address, JOHN H. OHR,
Indianapolis, Indiana.

CHARTERS.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR A DIVISION S. OF T.

(Date.)

The undersigned inhabitants of ——, believing the Order of the Sons of Temperance to be well calculated to extend the blessings of total abstinence, and promote the general welfare of mankind, respectfully petition the Grand Division of the —— of ——, to grant them a Charter to open a new Division, to be called the —— Division, No. —, Sons of Temperance, of the —— of ——, to be located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves, individually and collectively, to be governed by the rules and usages of said Grand Division, and also, by those of the National Division.

Enclosed is the Charter Fee, $5 00. Books, $2 00.

This must be signed by at least eight persons of good character and standing in community, and sent to C. WOODWARD, G. S., Indianapolis, Ind., free of postage.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR A TEMPLE.

(Date.)

The undersigned, believing the Temple of Honor to be well calculated to cement more firmly our fraternal relations, and add to the general prosperity of the cause of Temperance, respectfully petition the Grand Temple of the —— of ——, to grant them a Charter to open a new Temple, to be called the —— Temple of Honor, No. —, of the —— of ——, to be located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves individually and collectively, to be governed by the rules and usages of the Grand Temple, and also by those of the Order at large.

Enclosed is the Charter Fee, $20 00.

To be directed to the G. W. R., free of postage.

This must be signed by at least twenty persons of good standing, and if not known to the G. W. T. or G. W. R., must send satisfactory references.

J. H. OHR, G. W. R.

Indianapolis, Ind.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR CADETS OF TEMPERANCE.

The undersigned, boys of ——, believing the Order of Cadets of Temperance to be well calculated to extend the blessings of total abstinence, and promote the general welfare of mankind, respectfully petition the Grand Section of the State of Indiana, to grant them a charter to open a new Section, to be called the —— Section, No. ——, Cadets of Temperance, of the State of Indiana, to be located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves, individually and collectively to be governed by the rules and usages of said Grand Section, and also those of the acting Head of the Order.

Enclosed is the fee for Charter, R. B.'s and officers' cards, $5 00.

It must also be stated whether the applicants are members of the Order or not; if they are, of what Section. The application to be directed to the Grand Secretary, free of postage.

It must also be certified by a W. P. or P. W. P, that the W. Patron elect is a Son of Temperance in good standing.

Address (post paid) HENRY OHR, G. S., C. o T., Indianapolis, Indiana.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR DAUGHTERS OF TEMPERANCE.

(Date.)

The undersigned, inhabitants of ——, believing the Order of the Daughters of Temperance to be well calculated to extend the blessings of Total Abstinence, and promote the general welfare of mankind, respectfully petition the Grand Union to grant them a charter to open a new Union to be called the —— Union, No. —, D. of T., of the State of Indiana, located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves, individually and collectively, to be governed by the rules and usages of said Grand Union.

Enclosed is the Charter Fee, $5 00.

The above must be signed by at least eleven females, of proper age and good standing in community.

Address (post paid,) Mrs. ELIZA RICHMOND, G. S. S., Indianapolis, Indiana.

New Watch and Jewelry Store.

No 1, Bates House, Washington Street,

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

WE have now open the largest and best assortment of fine Watches and rich Jewelry ever offered in this city, to which we invite the examination of the public.

Our stock is all new—selected with great care, and comprises Watches, Diamond Work, Chains, Pins, Rings, Pencils, Lockets, of all kinds; Silver Ware, Clocks, Perfumery, Brushes, Soaps, Plated Ware, Castors, Fruit Baskets, &c., which we will sell for CASH at New York prices. Mr. E. W. NEFF, of this city, has taken charge of the Watch repairing department, and will spare no pains to give satisfaction to our customers.

july 6-tf E J. BALDWIN & CO.

D. CRAIGHEAD. R. BROWNING.

CRAIGHEAD & BROWNING,

Dealers in all kinds of

Drugs, Medicines, Surgical Instruments, Paints, Oils, Chemicals, Varnishes, Dye Stuffs, Glassware Window Glass, Brushes, Cosmetics, Spices, Cigars, Tobacco, Perfumery, &c.,

WASHINGTON STREET,

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

ALL are respectfully invited to call and examine our stock and prices, as we feel confident we can render satisfaction both as to prices and quality of articles. Great care is taken in the selection of articles, in reference to their purity, as we endeavor at all times to keep such articles as are strictly pure and genuine. Every article will be waranted as represented. Orders from Physicians and others promptly attended to. Particular attention given to filling Prescriptions and compounding Medicines, which, in all cases, shall receive the personal attention of one of the firm. june 30

HANNAMAN & DUZAN,

DEALERS IN

DRUGS AND MEDICINES,

Surgical Instruments, Paints, Oils, Varnishes, Dye Woods, Medical and Window Glass, Brushes, Perfumery, Soaps, &c.

Washington, 3 doors west of Pennsylvania St.,

june 30 1y INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

W. W. ROBERTS,

Druggist and Apothecary.

Wholesale and Retail Dealer in

DRUGS, MEDICINES, PAINTS, OILS, AND DYE STUFFS, BRUSHES, FANCY GOODS, AMERICAN AND FRENCH WINDOW GLASS, &c.

WASHINGTON ST., INDIANAPOLIS.

Physicians, Country Merchants, and the people generally, are invited to examine his stock, which will be sold at the lowest cash price.

☞ QUALITY WARRANTED TO SUIT. ☜

june 22 4m

COMMERCIAL COLLEGE,

(Late Commercial Institute,)

Of Indianapolis,

Established March 31, 1851.

INCORPORATED, 1853.

W. McK. SCOTT, A. M., Founder and President.

JAMES C. HAYDEN, (Late Professor in Bacon's Mercantile College, Cincinnati,)

PROF. OF BOOK-KEEPING AND PENMANSHIP.

THE Session will commence at College Hall as follows:

1st Session on the first Monday of September.
2d Session on the 1st Monday of November.
3d Session on the 1st Monday of January.
4th Session on the 1st Monday of March.
5th Session on the 1st Monday of May.

Having secured, permanently, the services of the distinguished Professor above named, and leased for a term of years the commodious and beautiful Hall formerly known as CONCERT HALL, but now named COLLEGE HALL, which is to be fitted up in a style of great elegance, taste, and convenience, the President would say, that this College now offers advantages superior to all others, for imparting a sound, thorough, and accomplished business education

COURSE OF STUDIES.

The Course of Studies, as enlarged, will be as follows, viz:

1 Book-Keeping, by Single and Double Entry, in all its various branches, and its application to all kinds of business.

2. The Laws, Customs, and Usages of Trade and Commerce.

3. Mercantile Arithmetic, upon the short and easy system of cancelation, (taught in no other College.)

4. Commercial Law, in a series of Lectures, thorough and systematic.

5. Business Penmanship.

6. Commercial Correspondence.

7. Lectures upon Banking, Political Economy, and other subjects valusble to the business man.

EXPENSES.

Cards of Admission, invariably in advance, or secured, $25; Diplomas $3; Stationery $5; Boarding $2 50 per week; incidentals, at option of student, $15. Making entire expenses about $75.

On application, a Catalogne will be furnished, giving full particulars.

All letters will receive prompt attention on being directed, post-paid, to

june 8 W. McK. SCOTT, President.

"God never made his works for man to mend."
DR. FRANKLIN.

KIER'S ROCK OIL.

A NEW AND MOST IMPORTANT REMEDY FOR DISEASE.

DISCOVERED IN 1849.

IS drawn from a deep well near Pittsburgh—has been used with remarkable success in Ohio and Pennsylvania, and more Eastern States—and is now working its way West. An opportunity is now offered to the Afflicted for testing it. Where known and tried, it at once makes firm friends, and cures which are eloquent in its praise. Certificates of its power to heal are at hand—but we know well, reader, that such evidence, to have weight with you, now-a-days, must be in your own neighborhood.—You have only to try the Oil to be satisfied—it will SPEAK FOR ITSELF.

We have no war with the legion of Nostrums and Specifics of the day—we know but little about them—some say they are good for nothing. However that may be, the

Petroleum

will not be suppressed and kept back by reason of the above nostrums—duty and inclination both forbid it.

Those who are afflicted, are respectfully invited to get a Circular and look over the Directions for

Ague, Rheumatism, Piles, Diarrhœa, Flux, Tooth Ache, Burns, Worms, Scrofula, Coughs, Bronchitis, Croup, Old Sores, Cholera Morbus, Contractions of the Limbs and Joints, Sore Eyes, Blindness, Costiveness, Dyspepsia, and other Diseases.

By that time you may say, "it cures too much." But recollect it is not a HUMAN INVENTION, but compounded by Nature's master hand—and Nature does not do her work by halves.

The Oil is used both internally and externally.

As AGUE, SORE EYES, PILES, RHEUMATISM, and SCROFULA are so common in many parts of the West, we are constrained to say, that while this Oil will cure and relieve other diseases, it has been and is constantly used with most complete success in these cases.

☞ Price 50 cents per Bottle (half pint.)

Beware of all Rock Oil preparations, as some persons are offering a spurious article. Look for S. M. KIER'S name written on the label of the bottle.

For sale by the Druggists throughout Indiana, and by TOMLINSON BROTHERS, J. P. POPE & CO., S. ROSENGARTEN, WM. TILLEY, and at wholesale by W. W. ROBERTS, Indianapolis, Indiana.

R. M. LYON, Fort Wayne,

may25 10w Proprietor in the Western States.

SOMETHING NEW.

LATHROP & STEVENS, Wholesale and Retail Dealers in BOOTS AND SHOES, at the West room in the Bates House, Washington Street, Indianapolis.

We are now opening a new and splendid stock of Boots and Shoes of every variety and style, which we are receiving direct from the manufacturers.—We design to keep constantly on hand a good assortment of the best quality of goods manufactured, which we can warrant to give satisfaction to all who may give them a trial. We will sell by the case, dozen, or single pair, at low prices for cash.—Our stock consists in part of Gents' fine Cloth, silk warp, glove kid, buck, patent calf, and enameled Gaiters and Ties of every variety and style; Ladies' fine silk warp Gaiters, Buskins, Ties, Slippers and Boots; Misses' ditto; Men's calf, goat, kip, and thick Boots and Brogans; Boys' and Youths' ditto; assorted Ladies, kid, goat and calf Boots and Buskins; Misses' ditto. Also every variety of Children's Shoes. Come and see for yourselves.

LATHROP & STEVENS,

may 25 4w Indianapolis, Indiana.

TEMPERANCE INN,

Bloomington, Indiana.

J. & S. M. ORCHARD, PROPRIETORS.

TRAVELLERS will find it to their advantage to call and try the accommodation of the TEMPERANCE INN. Stage office for all the different routes, in connection with this House. may25 6m ¶

THE LATEST WONDER of the 19th CENTURY.

DR. G. W. BENNETT'S

Celebrated Eye-Balm.

A SPECIFIC FOR CHRONIC, SORE, INFLAMED, AND WEAK EYES.

Prepared only by Dr. George W. Bennett, and for sale by Merchants and Druggists generally.

THIS Balm is an excellent and certain cure for sore and inflamed Eyes, in all cases of Psoroic, Scrofulous, and Purulent Opthalmia, and what is commonly termed wild hairs in the eye-lids. It is a specific in Infantile, Purulent, and Scrofulous Inflamed, and Sore Eyes, and all in the various diseases of the Eyes, that prevail among the human family, in every climate. It will be found a sovereign remedy if properly applied.

W. W. ROBERTS, Indianapolis, Ind. General Agent for State of Indiana, to whom all orders must be addressed.

Price---Twenty-five Cents.

I warrant the above Balm to cure if the directions are strictly observed, or return the money.

june 22 4m G. W. BENNETT.

REAL ESTATE AND GENERAL AGENCY OFFICE,

INDIANAPOLIS, INDIANA.

UNDER THE CONTROL OF W. M'K. SCOTT, Attorney & Counsellor at Law, and Notary Public.

The attention of the Agency will be devoted,

First—To the collection of debts and the payment of Taxes for non-residents in any county in the State. Also, the redemption of Lands sold for Taxes, sale, purchase or lease of Lands, purchase of adverse claims, examination and perfection of Title, &c., &c.

Second—To the prosecution of claims against the General Government, procuring Land Warrants, Patent Rights, and Pensions under the various Pension Laws, &c.

Third—All other Miscellaneous agencies as may be intrusted to the care of this office.

Fourth—The taking of Depositions and Attestation of all instruments requiring a seal

In all cases requiring an outlay of money for the benefit of individuals, the requisite funds must be transmitted in advance.

Prompt attention to all letters on business that are pre-paid. Address W. M'K. SCOTT,

Real Estate and General Agent,

jan 5-1y Indianapolis, Ind.

ADAMS & CO'S EXPRESS.

WE are now running a daily line East and West, accompanied by special messengers, and with the speed of the mails, running our own cars with the passenger trains.

Packages will be received at the cars up to the time of starting, and at our office until 1 o'clock each day.

We are prepared to transport packages, bank notes and specie, to and from any of the eastern cities, also, Louisville, Frankfort, and Lexington, Ky., St. Louis, Mo., or any points on the Ohio and Mississippi rivers; and to and from Terre Haute, and all intermediate points, and to forward freight from Terre Haute up and down the Wabash.

In addition to these, we have the most complete arrangements for transporting packages to and from California and Europe.

Exchange on England, Ireland, and Scotland, for sale, payable at any bank in the kingdom.

Foreign passage tickets; by Grinnell, Minturn & Co.'s line to Liverpool and London, constantly on hand, and for sale at the lowest rates.

Notes, drafts, and bills collected in any of the Eastern or Western cities.

Orders for goods to be returned by Express, sent free. Our rates of charges have been greatly reduced, and the public will find this a safe and expeditious method of transportation.

Indianapolis, June 30, 1852. ADAMS & CO.

Office in Indianapolis in Journal Building, west side Pennsylvania Street.

Office open during business hours.

june30 1y C. WOODWARD, Agent.

The Cheapest Illustrated Paper for the Young.

PRICE ONLY TEN CENTS A YEAR, or nearly three papers for one cent, where 100 copies are taken.

Twenty-six numbers a year, and each number illustrated with from three to seven engravings.

The Youth's Penny Gazette,

A strictly Religious and Moral Paper, is published by the AMERICAN SUNDAY SCHOOL UNION and is designed to furnish the Children and Youth of the United States with reading matter, in a popular form, for the improvement of Mind and Heart.

It is published (not monthly, nor weekly, but) every other week, or twenty-six numbers in a year. It is religious but unsectarian, and the matter is carefully prepared with a view to the habits, character and prospects of American Youth

TERMS OF THE PENNY GAZETTE.

$10 a year, in advance, for 100 copies, to one address. $5 a year, in advance, for 40 copies, to one address. $3 a year, in advance, for 20 copies, to one address. Single subscriptions, 25 cents per year.

TERMS BY MAIL, POSTAGE PAID.

☞ When the postage is paid at the place of mailing, the terms are very low. For $15 remitted, we will send 100 copies of the paper for one year, to one address—we paying postage. For $7 remitted, we will send 40 copies of the paper to one address, for one year—we paying postage. For $3 50 remitted, we will send 20 copies of the paper for one year, to one address—we paying postage. Less than 20 cannot be sent at this cheap rate.

Subscriptions received at the Society's House, No. 146 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.

Feb 16 3w G. S. SCOFIELD, Agent.

TO BUILDERS.

North Western Christian University.

THE Building Committee of the Board of Directors of the North-Western Christiana University, propose contracting for the west wing of the University Building, to be put up on the University grounds in the vicinity of Indianapolis.

Sealed Proposals in detail, with prices affixed for doing the work necessary to the completion of the said Wing, will be received until the 19th day of July next, and may be handed to the undersigned. or to J. T. Cox. Secretary of the Company, at the Book Store of Cox & Mathes, in Indianapolis.

The materials and work to be according to the plan, drawings and specifications prepared by Wm. Tinsley, Architect, which may be seen and examined at his room, on the east side of Pennsylvania street, three doors north of the north-east Diagonal, in Indianapolis. The specifications have been materially changed and modified, so as to reduce the cost of the building.

Proposals for the whole combined, would be preferred; but will be received for the different parts and portions thereof separotely. The whole to be completed and fit for use by the first day of September, 1854.

Payments will be made as the work progresses, at such short periods as may suit the covenience of the Contractors. Bond and security will be required for the performance of the work.

In behalf of the Building Committee:

OVID BUTLER,

President of the Board of Directors.

June 10, 1853. june 22 3w

LITTLE, DRUM & ANDERSONS

WHOLESALE DEALERS IN

STAPLE AND FANCY DRY GOODS, BOOTS, SHOES, HATS, CAPS, STATIONERY, NOTIONS, TRIMMINGS, GROCERIES, HARDWARE, QUEENSWARE, AND GLASSWARE,

North side of Washington Street,

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

WE are receiving Country Produce of all descriptions, and paying the highest market price. Dealers visiting Indianapolis are respectfully invited to call and examine our stock and prices, both for Produce and Merchandise generally. june30 tf

---

JAMES HALL,

MERCHANT TAILOR,

No. 2. Temperance, Hall, Indianapolis,

Manufactu'ng & Clothing Emporium,

Wholesale and Retail Dealer in Ready Made Clothing, Cloths, Cassimers, Vestings, Trimmings, Trunks, Sachels, Canes, Umbrellas, Hats, Caps, a every description of Gentlemen's Furnishing.

Also:

General Agency for the sale of GRAND AND SUBORDINATE REGALIA, EMBLEMS, COSTUMES, &C., FOR THE ORDERS OF MASONS, ODD FELLOWS, TEMPLE OF HONOR, SON, DAUGHTERS, AND CADETS OF TEMPERANCE. oct27 1y

---

The American Life and Health Insurance Company.

Office—No. 7, South Third St., Philadelphia.

Officers.

LEONARD JEWELL, President.
JAMES PEACOCK, Treasurer,
JOHN C. SIMS, Sec'y and Actuary.
THOS. S. SMITH, Solicitor

JOHN F. BIRD, FRED. A. FICKARDT, } Medical Examiners.

CHARLES WOODWARD, Indianapolis, Ind., General Agent for the State of Indiana.

THIS Company issues policies at Total Abstinence Rates, Joint stock Rates, and at Mutual Rates, which for $1000 on the life of a person 30 years of age, are as follows:

Age.	Total Abstinence.	Joint Stock.	Mutual.
30	$15.40	$19.60	$23.60

A further table of Rates will be furnished at the Office.

The condition in Total Abstinence rates (believed to be the lowest in the Union,) is entire forfeiture upon the departure of the Insured from Total Abstinence in its strictest sense.

Policies at Joint Stock and Mutual rates, contain no condition except as usual in Life Insurance.

HEALTH INSURANCE DEPARTMENT.

All Moneys received from the Insured, for Annual Premiums, after deducting expenses, will be divided among the Sick

The Public have for some time been familiar with the subject of Life and Health Insurance, but it is obvious that too little thoughts has been given to the latter. LIFE Insurance benefits our successors, while HEALTH Insurance directly benefits ourselves. It makes provision for a time of sickness, when the products of a man's industry are cut off, and want unites with Disease to aggravate his distress. It is at this gloomy period, when he is prostrated and helpless, and when despondency would otherwise overwhelm him, that the holder of a Health Insurance Policy will realize its benefits.

RATES, under 50 years of age,

$2,00	per year,	for	$2,00	per week.
3,00	"	"	3,00	"
4,00	"	"	4,00	"
5,00	"	"	5,00	"
6,00	"	"	6,00	"

Over fifty and under sixty.

$2,50	per year,	for	$2,50	per week.
3,75	"	"	3,00	"
5,00	"	"	4,00	"
6,25	"	"	5,00	"
7,50	"	"	6,00	"

When the Fund shall amount to Three Dollars and upwards for every person insured and sufficient to warrant an additional distribution, the weekly allowances will be increased in accordance with the Rules of the Policy.

All the members of a Temple or Division insured at greatly reduced rates.

Applications for Agencies in any of the cities or towns in the State, should be made to the undersigned, post paid, or in person.

As Agent for the above Company, I am prepared to receive applications for Policies at any of the above rates.

CHARLES WOODWARD, Agent,

At ADAMS & CO.'S Express Office.

J. L. MOTHERSHEAD, Medical Examiner.

june 30 '52-1y

Ohio Life Insurance Company,

Capital $100,000.

JOINT STOCK AND MUTUAL,

CINCINNATI.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS.

Wm. Burnet, Jno. N. Ridgway, Chas. Goodman, S. Robert, E. S. Haines, Jno. M. Blair, J. W. Donohue, Eden B. Reeder, Wm. Person.

WM. BURNET, President.

S. W. REEDER, Sec'y J. W. DONOHUE, Vice Pres't

Office in Reeder's Building, Third street, between Almy's and City Bank.

This Company insures Lives at the lowest rates consistent with safety, either upon the Joint Stock or Mutual plan.

In the Joint Stock Department, premium payable quarterly, semi-annually or annually. On the Mutual plan, one-half the premium paid in Cash, the balance by a note bearing six per cent. interest—the interest only payable annually. Persons insuring on the mutual plan, participate in the profits of the Company in that department.

The undersigned having been appointed agent for the above Company, is prepared to fill applications for Life Insurance, on favorable terms.

Any information on the subject and pamphlets explaining the nature and utility of Life Insurance, furnished without charge, at the office of the Agent.

C. WOODWARD, Agent.

Office at Adam's & Co.'s Express Office, Journal Building, Pennsylvania street, Indianapolis, Ind.

june 30, '52-1y.

Railroad City Book Store.

COX & MATHES,

South side of Washington, between Illinois and Meridian streets,

INDIANAPOLIS, INDIANA.

AT wholesale and retail, Standard and Miscellaneous Works, Law, and Medical Books, School Books, Plain and Fancy Stationery, Blank Books, Wall Papers, &c., &c. mar 2

CHEAP WATCHES & JEWELRY.

Good Gold Watches at $24!

WE are now in our new Room No. 1, Palmer House, with a lot of beautiful Watches and Jewelry which we are selling lower than ever heretofore sold in Indianapolis, for instance we sell

Good 18 K Case Gold Lepines at $24.
" 18 K " " Levers at $28.
" Silver Anchor Levers $12 to $18.
" " Cylenders, $9 to $12.
" " Quarter's $6 to $10.

In addition to the above we have a fine assortment of other description of Watches all of which we will sell lower than any other firm dare sell in the place. I have in my employ a very superior Watch Repairer who will always be on on hand to do watch repairing of every description. Mr. Michot has worked in Geneva, Paris, New York and other large cities and has had great experience in his Branch of the business. All Watches warranted for one year, and the money in all cases refunded, provided they do not give entire satisfaction.

feb9 tf E. W. NEFF.

SMALL CHANGE.

THE undersigned is prepared to furnish Merchants and others with three cent pieces from the United States Mint at Philadelphia, free of transportation, in sums of 30, 60, and 90 dollars, upon deposit of Gold or Eastern Exchange. Also cents and half cents, upon payment of frieght on gold to Philadelphia, or on Eastern Exchange free of freight.

C. WOODWARD, Agent,

june 30 Adams & Co.'s Express.

A CHANCE TO MAKE MONEY.

Profitable and honorable Employment!

THE Subscriber is desirous of having an agent in each county and town of the Union. A capital of from $5 to $10 only will be required, and anything like an efficient, energetic man can make from three to five dollars per day; indeed some of the Agents now employed are realizing twice that sum. Every information will be given by addressing, (postage paid) WM. A. KINSLER,

june 15 3w ¶ Box 601, Philadelphia P. O.

THE ILLUSTRATED MAGAZINE OF ART.

THE five numbers of this Magazine which are published, place it at the head of publications of this kind No expense will be spared to make it in every respect worthy of the name, the "Illustrated Magazine of Art. The Engavings which are preparing for the future numbers are in the hands of first-class American and European Artists.

A Series of most interesting Tales will appear in it. "The School of Life," written and Illustrated by ANNA MARY, daughter of William and Mary Howitt, will shortly appear; also, "The Dead Bridal," an historical romance, illustrative of the most interesting period in the history of the Venetian Republic, by JONATHAN FREKE SLINGSBY, of the Dublin University Magazine; contributions, too, from WILLIAM and MARY HOWITT, PERCY B. ST. JOHN, and other writers of distinction in America and Europe.

The following is a brief outline of the plan of the Magazine:

I. The Historical Department will abound with picturesque representations of the most remarkable events which have occurred in this and other countries; accompanied with interesting anecdotes and details from the pen of the most eminent writers of the day. This department will contain several splendid engravings, designed by the first artists of the world, and engraved in the highest style of modern art.

II. The Men and Women of the Age. This department will consist of beautifully executed portraits of the leading characters of the age, especially of those who figure on the stage of humanity as the world's benefactors. Each portrait will be accompanied by an interesting biographical sketch.

III. The Wonders of Natural History, Botany, and other sciences, will be developed in choice Engravings of Beasts, Birds, Fishes, Insects, Forest Trees, Flowers, Geological and Fossil Specimens, &c., with accompanying descriptions.

IV. The Triumphs of Architectural Art will be displayed in exquisitely finished representations of Cathedrals, Churches, Palaces, and other models of ancient and modern Architectural Art.

V. The Works of the Great Masters, selected from the principal Galleries of Art in the World. In general, the portrait of the Master will be given, accompanied with a highly finished engraved copy of his chef d œuvre.

VI. The Scientific Portions will be rendered highly interesting by the familiar explanations, and the numerous diagrams which will accompany each subject.

VII. Manufactures. The principal manufacturing processes in use will be fully explained by minute details, and an abundance of beautiful engravings.

VIII. Machinery and Inventions will have due attention paid to them, and be described by numerous appropriate engravings.

IX. The Literary Department, independently of the various articles accompanying the illustrations, will comprise original and interesting narratives, contributed by the most popular writers of the day, with numerous illustrations.

In every respect, the "Illustrated Magazine of Art," will be decidedly

SUPERIOR TO ANY MAGAZINE OF THE DAY.

Each Monthly part will contain at least Thirty superb Engravings, four of which will be printed separately, on supefine Plate Paper.

The greatest care will be manifested in every department of production. The Paper will be of the first manufacture, and the Ink supplied from the celebrated Printing Ink Establishment of Messrs. Lawson & Co., of Paris. Six of the monthly portions, when completed, will form a volume which, for interest, originality, value and beauty, will defy competition. It will not only be an interesting family book, but a rich ornament for the drawing-room table, and a pleasant companion in the study.

The parts will appear on the First of every Month at Twenty-five Cents each.

ALEXANDER MONTGOMERY,

may 25 17 Spruce Street, New-York.

SPLENDIDLY ILLUSTRATED WORKS.

THE ALPS, SWITZERLAND, SAVOY AND LOMBARDY.

With the Magazine for June will be ready, Part I., price Twenty-five Cents, of a Magnificent Work to be completed in Twelve Monthly Parts, entitled

THE ALPS, SWITZERLAND, SAVOY AND LOMBARDY, with an account of the most recent Ascents to Mont Blanc, &c. By the Rev. Charles Williams. This work, when completed, will form a large thick Volume, in Imperial Octavo, containing upwards of Three Hundred beautiful Engravings, descriptive of the peculiar Scenery of those most interesting portions of Europe, with the Occupations of the Inhabitants, &c., &c.

Cassell's Natural History.

On the First of July will commence

CASSELL'S NATURAL HISTORY, which for variety, beauty and completeness, will claim to be considered as a first-class work, upon this most interesting subject. The First volume will be devoted to the Feathered Tribe of the Creation and will contain upwards of Three Hundred Engravings, in the first style of Art. The volume will be completed in Twelve Monthly Parts, Imperial Octavo. Price 25 cents each.

History of England.

On the First of July will appear Part I., price 25 cts. of THE ILLUSTRATED HISTORY OF ENGLAND, from the earliest period on record to the present time. Edited by ROBERT FERGUSON, LL. D.

This History, which is intended to form a great National Work, will extend to Four Volumes, Imperial Octavo; each Volume to be completed in Twelve Monthly Parts, price 25 cents each. The Work will comprehend the Political, Civil, and Domestic History of the Nation, and its Progress in Civilization, Literature, Art, &c. It will be profusely Illustrated with Engravings from Designs by GILBERT, PHILLIPPOTEAUX, WILLIAMS, and others. Representations of the most remarkable Events will be worked separately upon Plate Paper. The Portraits will form a complete Gallery, not only of the Monarchs, but of those individuals whose names are prominent in England's History. Also, Antiquities, including Autographs, Buildings, Costume, Furniture, Arms, Coins, Monuments, Manufactures &c., of each Epoch.

History of Hungary.

July First will be published, in one Handsome Volume, Imperial Octavo, price, One Dollar and Twenty-five Cents, in Cloth Boards,

THE ILLUSTRATED HISTORY OF HUNGARY, AND THE MAGYARS, from the Earliest Period to the clos of the late War. By EDWARD LAWRENCE GODKIN. The Volume will be Illustrated with One Hundred highly finished Engravings, including representations of the principal Battles; Portraits of the early Kings, and of the Statesmen and Generals who figured in the War of Independence; Costumes of the Peasantry, &c.; Views of the chief Towns and Fortresses, &c.; with an accurate Description of the Manners and Customs of the People, their Literature, Commerce, Arts, &c.

ALEXANDER MONTGOMERY,

may25 Publisher, 17 Spruce Street, New-York.

MANSION HOUSE,

Cambridge City, Indiana.

J. CUNNINGHAM, Proprietor.

TRAVELLERS

Will find it to their advantage to call and try the accommodation of the MANSION HOUSE.

STAGE OFFICE also in connection with this House.

may 4 6m

INDIANA STATE LIBRARY

TEMPERANCE CHART.

A Weekly Journal:---Devoted to Temperance, Morality, Education, Literature, Useful Arts, Science, General Intelligence, &c.

J. W. GORDON, M. D., EDITOR.] ORGAN OF THE GRAND DIVISION OF INDIANA. [JOHN H. OHR, PRINTER.

VOL. III. INDIANAPOLIS, IND., WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 3, 1853. NO. 6.

THE TEMPERANCE CHART,
IS PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY, BY THE GRAND DIVISION, S. of T. OF INDIANA.

Edited by J. W. Gordon, M. D.
To whom all Communications and Subscriptions must be addressed, post-paid.
OFFICE—in second story of Temperance Hall Building, Washington St., Indianapolis.

TERMS:
Single copy, one year, ... 75 cts.
☞ In advance in all cases,

TERMS OF ADVERTISING.—Circulation 4000 copies.

One Squre, (12 lines,) for one week,	$0 50
" " for each subsequent insertion,	25
" " for 3 months,	3 00
" " for 6 months,	5 00
" " for 1 year without alteration,	8 00
" " for 1 year, with changes,	12 00

A reduction made on larger advertisements.
Cuts double the above rates.
Advertisements must be handed in by Saturday, of each week, to insure insertion.
Applications for advertising, or for any kind of Printing for the Order, must be made to
J. H. OHR, Indianapolis.

MISCELLANEOUS.

From the Tecumseh Herald.

Female Influence, or THE ELOQUENCE OF A TEAR.

A TEMPERANCE TALE, BY A LADY.

[CONTINUED.]

It was not long after the return of James Headly from Washington before he publicly connected himself with the Temperance Society. It occasioned some little conjecture respecting the supposed cause of his change of conduct, but no one thought of attributing it to parliamentary eloquence or customs.

But he found his son was not yet prepared for such a measure; George had somehow got the impression that it would be his privilege to indulge his appetite when be arrived at manhood, especially if he attained a public station in life, and he had no intention of signing away this right, ere he came in possession of his liberty.—Expostulation was vain, he declined with a perseverance that did ample honor to that trait of character in his parents. Mrs. Headly was sadly disappointed, still she resolved to do everything, and deny herself anything, that was necessary for his benefit—she would not again remove him from the restraints of home, and hoped that the time that intervened before he entered upon a collegiate course, might correct his errors. But that time came too soon—George was still incorrigible—perfectly obedient to his parents in every other respect, yet, in this one particular, he preferred to follow their previous example, rather than their present wishes.

George Headly and Henry Mansfield had entered upon their seventeenth year, and were now to commence a literary course. That period had arrived, so important in the life of a youth, when he leaves the home of his childhood. to be exposed to the contamination of vice, and runs the fearful risk of bartering moral principle for mental attainment. But the parents of Henry Mansfield had no apprehensions of an unfavorable result, with regard to their son—they had most conscientiously obeyed the injunction, 'train up a child in the way he should go,' and they confidently relied on the promise attached, 'when he is old he will not depart from it.' How different were the feelings of the other parents; James Headly would have gladly exchanged all his public honors for the simple security that his son would never bring disgrace upon himself and parents, by an improper course.—The conduct of these young men in college can be anticipated. The habits of industry and application that Henry had formed rendered him an indefatigable student; he had been trained to detest vice in every form, and inspired with sufficient moral courage to resist temptation, even at the risk of the displeasure of his young companions. The lessons he had been taught in economy and self-denial, he now aimed to practice, and by pursuing a regular, consistent course, he secured the particular regard and confidence of his instructors.

George Headly possessed many noble traits of character; he was liberal and generous to a fault, and was admired by all for his social qualities, good humor and vivacity. When he applied himself closely to study, his progress was rapid, and none could excel him—but he had acquired such a fondness for society and pleasure, that his mind was easily diverted, and his course irregular. His parents watched him with a solicitude that none but parents can feel—his letters were frequent and affectionate, but his requests for funds were rather too frequent to suit their views of strict economy. This apprehension was not lessened, when they compared his expenditures with his cousin's, but still hoped a little more experience would correct any indiscretions of this kind. They soon learned his popularity among his young companions, but this proved in some measure a source of regret, as they were repeatedly urged to consent to his spending his vacations abroad, or to his being accompanied by some favorite friend on his visits at home. This was a privation, and they secretly feared he would lose his attachment for the society of his parents.—They marked the contrast in the course of his cousin—home had lost none of its attractions for Henry Mansfield, he enjoyed society, but none contributed so much to his happiness as that of his parents and sisters.

The cousins had entered their senior years before any prominent irregularities were discovered in George Headly. Henry had ever acted as monitor, secretly advising him, when he thought there was danger of his being led astray, and never remitting his efforts in his behalf. But these wholesome restraints were now to cease. George had, from the first, aimed to attain the highest honors of his class; this had been the height of his ambition; and his friends had so often assured him of success, that he had scarcely a doubt upon this subject. But his favorites were not permitted to decide this question—he was disappointed, and had the extreme mortification of seeing his cousin bear off the palm.

Henry now became the object of envy, rather than confidence, and he avoided his society. His reckless companions now increased their influence and efforts to lead him further astray, and he now began to indulge, without restraint, in habits of intemperance. All efforts to restrain and restore him were fruitless, while he was led on by his vicious companions from one excess to another. Henry perceived that matters would soon terminate in an expulsion from college, and found it his painful duty to inform his parents of his defection, but ere there could be any interposition on their part, George Headly, with some other of his companions, were suspended from the privilege of college.

It is not necessary to portray the distress of his parents—but their home and hearts were open to receive their erring son. George was truly penitent for his errors, and resolved on immediate amendment, and his parents now hoped he would give them some security to that effect.—During his absence the temperance movement had assumed a new form; an association had been organized, denominated the Sons of Temperance, and they hoped this institution would present sufficient attractions to bring him under its influence. George assured his parents of his determination to abstain wholly from stimulants, but contended this could be effected without the foolish formality of a written pledge. After spending a few months with his parents, in which he used every effort to inspire their hopes, and regain their confidence, at his own urgent request, he was sent to an eastern university to acquire the profession of law.

Henry Mansfield, on his return from college, remained with his father, to prosecute the same study, and at the close of two years was admitted to the bar. His fine talents, united with his superior literary attainments and unblemished reputation, brought his services into immediate demand, and he was soon located as a junior partner in a law office in the city of Philadelphia. It was with no ordinary emotion he exchanged his happy home, with all its domestic charms, for the strife and commotion of a crowded city. But this sacrifice was now required—he must enter upon the stage of life, he has a part to act in its varied scene, and henceforth, it must be his great aim to have this part well performed. His parents had trained him long and carefully for this very object, and their fond hopes must not be disappointed. He had been absent but a few months, when he related an incident in one of his letters, which was peculiarly gratifying to his parents, and we will present it to our readers in his own words:

'In the course of our professional duties we had occasion to attend court in an adjoining county, and were invited, with other gentlemen of the bar, to dine with the judge of the court. As I was introduced to my host, he gave me a scrutinizing look and said:

'"Young man, just tell me if your father's name was Edward Mansfield?"

'"It is," was the reply.

'"And your mother's, Maria Graves, before marriage?"

'Being answered in the affirmative, he grasped my hand, and with a voice trembling with emotion, he added:

'"My dear sir, let me assure you, you are a welcome guest in my house; I am under infinite obligations to those parents, indeed I am; but take seats, gentlemen, take seats. You may call this something of a scene, but let me get over this momentary excitement, and I will tell you a story, which I trust you will receive as an apology. The father of this young gentleman, Edward Mansfield, studied law at the same time with myself, at Cambridge. I can assure you we were congenial spirits, and often sought enjoyment in our leisure hours together, and sometimes over a glass of Madeira; but he was differently constituted from myself, he could take twice the amount that I could and stand erect, walk straight, and laugh heartily, at any accidental zigzag movement of mine. Once, however, I do remember he was for a short time a little absent minded, as he started from the house without his hat, but with this exception, he went through every trial of his powers most triumphantly, and kept the reputation of being a real steady fellow. But all at once, there came a marvellous change over this same Edward Mansfield; he had no time now for amusement, so pressed with his correspondence, reading, &c.—What can the matter be? was the constant inquiry among the pleasure-loving class. The mystery was at length solved—he had become deeply interested in a young lady not far distant. But what if he is, may he not take an occasional glass with a club of friends, and visit the ladies too? Why, some some of these fair ones take no exceptions whatever at pretty strong alcoholic perfumery. Not thus his lady love—she seemed to have as much instinctive fear of the pollution of such an atmosphere as the camels of Arabia of the desolating sirocco. Well, it was with extreme regret that we gave up our jovial friend, but neither persuasion nor taunts could induce him to make one in our revels; and, not content with depriving us of his company, he began to turn censor, and give a few words of admonition now and then. This did not please me; and I gave him some severe rebuffs, and he ceased to remonstrate; but I am coming to the end of my story. In my rambles, one evening, I suddenly came across Edward Mansfield and the said Miss Graves, piously marching on to a temperance meeting. I could have dismissed friend Edward without much difficulty, but the lady tried the art of moral suasion, and indeed I could not be so ungallant as to decline an invitation to accompany them. What cannot a sensible, nobleminded woman effect, when she goes to work in the right way. Ah, gentlemen, it was woman saved me from the premature, inglorious grave of the drunkard. And shall I not welcome the son of such a mother? But my story—I soon found myself in a regular temperance meeting—it was a new place for me—I had withstood all argument and expostulation, but now there was no retreat, no alternative, I must sit and listen. If the speaker had been acquainted with my personal history, he could not have portrayed it in more glowing colors; he traced my course step by step, until he proved to a demonstration I was an intemperate man. And then he well knew how to touch the most tender spot in my heart, when he suggested the idea, that perhaps the spirit of some sainted mother might witness, with intense interest, the results of that evening. I can assure you, gentlemen, he touched a chord that vibrated to my inmost soul. Well did I remember the hour, when but a child, my mother called me to her dying couch, and warned me of this deadly evil—what thrilling reminiscences of the past rushed in upon my mind. I resolved to reform—but stop, let me reconsider this resolution; will this friendly monitor at my side, who can indulge himself with impunity, will he lead the way, or will he be content to preach self-denial, while I am compelled to practice it. This question excited quite a tumult in my bosom—my better judgment urged me to pledge myself to total abstinence, yet, notwithstanding these pleadings, I recklessly resolved that I would not give my signature, if his was withheld; but when I saw him the first to respond to the invitation, I sprang to my feet, and could have shouted, victory! victory! I have signed many mportant articles in my past life, but the signature of that evening has blessed every day of my subsequent life. It places me before you, gentlemen, in the possession of health, a competence of the wealth of this world, an affectionate devoted family, and above all, with a hope of a glorious immortality. And now, gentlemen, I leave you to decide, whether it it not pardonable to betray some grateful emotions at this unexpected interview with our young friend, as it brings back the recollection of past events so vividly to mind. But come, gentlemen, dinner is announced, and this long story is an apology, in advance, for the absence of a certain article, that some might expect on my table."

'My dear parents,' continued Henry, 'you can hardly conceive the pleasure I enjoyed in listening to this narrative. I well knew I had the best of parents, but to hear such encomiums from the lips of a stranger, when I was so far removed from you, caused this to be one of the happiest hours of my life; and you little know the interest that has accumulated for your own son, from this investment of temperance principle so many years ago. Judge Wilkins is attempting to remunerate your kindness, by his special interest in my welfare, and as I am young and inexperienced, his influence and guardianship will be an essential aid. He gives me free access to his library, and invites me to make his house my home, whenever I seek relaxation from business. May I never prove myself unworthy of such kindness, nor tarnish the name of my honored parents.'

We will now leave our young friend, with his fine prospects, and kind patronage, to renew the history of his cousin.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

1776 and 1853--America then and now.

Seventy-seven years ago, a brave body of patriotic men promulgated to the world a statement of the intolerable grievances under which the United British American Colonies had long labored, and in a document of remarkable ability, declared the provinces they represented henceforth independent of the mother country. The bell that proclaimed this resolute expression of self-reliance, proclaimed at the same time the birth of a nation, whose subsequent career of unbroken prosperity is the most marvellous event of the nineteenth centnry. At that time the Anglo-American population, scattered over a vast extent of territory, numbered but three millions of souls. At the breaking out of the Revolutionary War, the most westerly frontier settlement was a cluster of log houses around Fort Pitt, at the confluence of the Allegheny with the Monongahela. Beyond this point the whole Ohio valley, though claimed by France, was in possession of various Indian tribes, who, for many years subsequently, vainly endeavored to compel the whites to fix the boundary of their encroachments to the Northern bank of the Ohio river. But the red warriors who attempted to stay the advancing tide of population, were themselves overwhelmed in the unequal struggle, and the Anglo-Saxons of the present day not only lord it over tke Ohio and Mississippi valleys, but have traversed the Rocky Monntains, and built their habitations upon the gold coast of the Pacific.—The thirteen weak though resolute colonies, which in 1776 bade defiance to the power of England, have expanded into thirty-one wealthy and powerful States, and four Territorial Governments, and have increased in population from three to twenty mllions. In three quarters of a century, or within the lifetime of a single generation, an infant Republic has grown up to vigorous manhood, and the weakling, whom France, to avenge the loss of her Canadian possessions, aided with men, money, and munitions of war, now stands as prominently forward among the principalities of the earth, that the policy of the United States has become a primary element in the studies of European statesmen.

The future destiny of such a nation, offering to emigrants so many avenues to wealth, and equalizing the pressure of population by the safety-valve of the public lands, is indeed worthy of profound study both at home and abroad; for, in the coming years, a contest will inevitably arise between Republican America and Despotic Russia, the gigantic representative nations of the two great principles by which the people of the world are governed.

Already America, mighty in wealth and population, standing midway between the East and the West, holds in her hand the direction of the commerce of both.—Isolated from the troubles which agitate the monarchies of Europe, we take no part in their political controversies, and we will distinctly fordid them obtaining any future foothold, either by treaty or conquest, upon the shores of this continent, we keep ourselves aloof, and suffer them to settle their quarrels among themselves. There can be no question that the course of policy known as the Monroe Doctrine, is absolutely demanded by the laws which govern our expansion, for long before all Europe shall become Cossack, all the continent of America will be Republican and Anglo-Saxon.

In the mean time, however, if we should be called upon to assist some European nation or other in its struggle for liberty, the question will arise, whether, as a people proud of our freedom, we should be content with merely expressing our sympathy with the revolutionary movement, or whether we ought to aid that movement by more substantial means. The subject is, in some respects, a delicate one; but to the independent thinker it can have but one aspect. If we believe that "life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness," are the unalienable rights of men, and that the enjoyment of these rights can only be attained under Republican institutions, then, whenever we find a people aiming at the restoration of privileges so precious, and who, at the same time, are fitted for self-government, it would be our bounden duty to assist such a people, even though our intervention embroiled us with all the crowned heads of Europe; and we should be traitors to that liberty which has made us what we are, if we turned a deaf ear to the cries of the oppressed, and, like the Levite of old, crossed over to the other side of the way.

One or two grave questions at this moment arise, which it may be well to refer to—Will slave institutions affect in the future our vitality as a Republic? And to what extent can we expand our territorial limits without weakening the integrity of the confederation? These are interrogatories of so serious a character, that a calm discussion of them, in all their bearings, would be of infinite service at the present time, not only as a guide to our future policy, but also as instructive to such as advocate schemes which, bearing upon these important questions, might be found upon examination, false in their premises and pernicious in ther results.—Arthur's Home Gazette.

One Acre.

Mr. Mitchell has but one single acre of pine land, with a sandy loam soil, which, with that adjacent, was sold fifteen years ago. covered with timber, for six dollars per acre; more recently, and since the timber has been removed—and this by the way, brought the owner $60 per acre clear of expense—the Deacon pnrchased one acre for $80—a very handsome advance, one would say, from its former value. And so it was; but the increase in value did not stop then, for if he owned the land to-day, it would take five hundred as good dollars as ever came from Philadelphia mint to purchase it. Mr. M. has cultivated it four years, and during that time has put upon it manure which cost him about $32.33. He has upon it about one hundred and sixty plum trees, embracing a great variety—the Jefferson, the Washington, the Lombard, &c.; some twenty-five choice and thrifty apple trees, grafted and budded; numerous pears, mostly the Bartlett; some five hundred quince, from which to furnish excellent stocks for engrafting; grapes, the Isabella, the Tewksbury, and native; and such a variety of vegetables, &c., as we have seldom seen.

Let us here record one fact for the benefit of farmers, especially on dry and sandy land. Mr. Mitchell subsoiled his ground thirteen or fourteen inches deep, and thoroughly pulverized the soil, some portions of which he spaded; and in all the severe drought, of which farmers so much complained, he suffered scarcely the least injury.

The profits of this acre cannot be much less than $100 per year, and this, too, when no profit is derived from the fruit trees, as they are all from the seed or bud within four years. We hope to see Deacon M. at our county meeting in Weare, on Thursday, and to hear him speak of the profits of farming.—Granite Farmer.

STATE LIBRARY INDIANAPOLIS

TEMPERANCE CHART.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.
WM. HANNAMAN, C. E. BABB,
JAMES HALL, R. T. BROWN,
JOHN B. ABBETT.

WEDNESDAY, AUG. 3, 1853.

The presentation speech from the sisters of Dillsborough will appear in due time.

THEODORE SEDGWICK, ESQ.—This gentleman formerly wrote a valuable work on the "Measure of Damages," in which he clearly proved that damages are measurable commodities. In his recent speech to the President, at the opening of the Crystal Palace, he labored with equal, or even greater, success to prove that Flattery is immeasurable.

The "Indiana Cadet" has passed into the hands of BRO. A. L. SEWALL, of the "Torchlight," at Greencastle, with which last named paper it will in future be united. We have received a letter from Bro. Sewall to this effect. All subscribers to the Cadet will, therefore, look in future toward Greencastle for their paper. Long may it flourish, for it is in worthy hands.

SISTER JUNIA.—A parting word. Junia accepted our qualification of the general language employed in our article against the man of the Sentinel. We are not disposed now to let her take it back. She stands confessedly the defender of practices and characters that now put her beyond the pale of our forbearance.

Who or what she may be is not quite so questionable to us as she may suppose. She has dealt in curses too long not to be found out by her brood, which in the language of the proverb "still return home to roost." Our "data are quite sufficient for us to publish to the world" more than Junia may deem known to any person save herself. We are familiar not only with her where-, but also her how-abouts. Her mask is too thin to shield her from the eye of discovery. It is gauzy, very.

"The brazen mask in which her face is drest,
Like a gauze mantle on a lady's breast,
Still tends in modest coyness to reveal
The beauties 'tis intended to conceal."

In regard to our personal sufferings, we would inform the sister that we inhaled hartshorn, and it greatly bereaved us. Adios.

HARPER'S MONTHLY.—This Magazine, for August, has been laid upon our table, and, from a cursory view of its contents, well sustains its previous reputation. Its "Bleak House" is one story too high, and a feet—a feet and a half or two feet—too long for our taste, if Chas. Dickens, "Author of Notes," &c., did build it. Away with such stuff! Otherwise we commend the Magazine to public favor. It can be had, at all times, at the "Railroad City Bookstore," Cox & Mathes; and we are glad to say, that many better things in the same line can be found there also.

PARLOR MAGAZINE.—This is a Western publication, got up under the direction and superintendence of JETHRO JACKSON, at Cincinnati. Mr. Jackson was a dear friend of ours "lang syne," and if we had no other reason for desiring success to his undertaking, that is quite sufficient. But that is the least part of its merits. The Magazine speaks for itself. It is becomingly introduced; and, if it has not "put its best foot foremost," it will stand at once as high as any publication of the kind, east or west.

TERMS, IN ADVANCE:

Single copy,	$2 00
Five copies,	9 00
Ten copies,	17 00
Twenty copies,	30 00
Thirty copies,	40 00
Fifty copies,	50 00

Cox & Mathes, Agents, Railroad City Bookstore.

Our Opinion of Them.

What shall we say of the men employed by the whisky maker or vendor? Are they innocent?

It is a principle of law that the principal is chargeable with all his agent does within the scope of his authority. There is no question then that all that is done by the agents of the maker and vender of drams is both morally and legally done by themselves, and they are responsible for it. But is the agent, therefore, released from responsibility? If the business were no violation of the moral law then he might be. But when a principal employs an agent to do an act, malum in se—wrong in itself—both are principals, and responsible as such. A employs B to kill C. He does it. Both are murderers. So decides the law, and so had decided conscience and God before man had made any law.

To make or vend liquors as a beverage, is wrong in itself. No one who is clothed and in his right mind denies that any longer. Well, this fact conceded, and the position, in a moral point of view, occupied by all the employees of a maker and vendor of intoxicating liquors is fixed, also.—Principal and agent are alike guilty. But how far back does this guilt extend? Beyond the retailer of drams—the tapster? Could he sell, if he could not buy first? Could he buy, if there were no wholesale vendor? Could the whole-saler sell if there were no maker? And could the maker continue to make, if our farmers refused to feed his gigantic INFERNAL MACHINE for the destruction of souls.

O Brother man! are you engaged in this business, either as principal or agent? If so, you are guilty of all the blood that lies at its door! If you are so low as to be the tapster, out upon it, there's blood upon your skirts. Nor less so, if you are clerk to the maker or his immediate depository—the wholesale dealer. The price of blood pays you all. The base coin, filched from the widow and the orphan by the tapster, pays you all alike. Your business is a tide of evil of which the manufacturer is the fountain. This tide flows ever upon society, undermining its prosperity and happiness, drowning men in perdition, and families in ruin; and you know it. But, then, you know, also, that in returning it washes back the golden sands of your neighbor's wealth to you; and that is your reason for "making earth a desert."

Is there no blood mingled with the returning tide? And will God not remember when he makes inquisition for blood? Then the pious clerk, at fifty dollars per month, will stand alike guilty with his employer. Bought to sin, for gold. He had his price. So had Judas.

Aurora.

This little city was still in a state of war at the last accounts. Bro. Sullivan has carried the war home—into Africa. We are sorry that what was originally a moral combat, tends in the hands of some of the combatants to degenerate into a personal one. They even spell each other's names without capitals, as if they were common nouns. But, then, they speak of each other in terms that would, if specific difference is anything, make them proper and particular nouns in any other part of the world except Aurora, and, perhaps, there too.

"Let dogs delight to bark and bite,
For God has made them so;
Let bears and lions growl and fight,
For 'tis their nature too.
But children, you should never let
Such angry passions rise,
Your little hands were never made
To tear each other's eyes."

Well, they wasn't.

The Liquor Vendor worse than the Thief.

The moral guilt of the liquor vendor is admitted by all. He does not deny it himself. His defense no longer involves the position that his business is right. The farthest either he or his friends pretend to go, is that it would be followed by some one else, were he to abandon it, and all its evils thus entailed upon society. He may as well enjoy its profits as any one else. Without reference, then, to the consequences of his traffic, in what respect does his position differ from that of any other criminal? Take, for example, the thief. He sees his neighbor's pocket-book, containing his fortune—all he has—laying in the road. Well, he says to himself, "here is property which does not belong to me, but if I do not take it some one else will; and thus the owner will lose just as much as if I took it, and I will not be benefitted. I might as well have it—and a little better—than any one else. And surely, the owner must be an unreasonable man to complain of me; for he would lose just as much if I never touched his pocket-book." So he takes the treasure, and becomes rich, while his neighbor is beggared. All goes very well for a while. The thief—a mere scullion in heart and head—enters at once into the social circle of the upper ten; and he who is by nature a serf, and by practice and habit a scoundrel and a thief, sits down with becoming dignity with the elite of the land—themselves being judges—their equals. And why not? Is he not their equal? Most certainly, since money—no matter how got—is their standard of manhood. But while he takes this position among those who had once spurned him, the man whose wealth he has stolen slides as suddenly down from the circles of the upper tens, to the circles of the lower ten thousands. Time passes, and the villain seems established in the fruits of his villainy, and his sudden metamorphosis forgotten. But the eye of discovery tracks home the theft, and the accuser lays down the burthen of the crime on his door-sill. Suspicion wags her tongue at his mushroom reputation, and it dies; the law by its ministers seizes him, and drags him to justice; and the recent pet of the rich and well-to-do slides into a felon's cell, there to end his dream of the glories of Upper-ten-dom.

All say the catastrophe is but a proper sequel to such a beginning. "The law allows it, and the court awards it." He was a THIEF, and such was his end as should follow that character.

Compare this case with that of the dram-seller. In what do they differ? The defence in both cases is the same in principle. There is a difference; but, although we have selected a hard case of theft, who does not perceive that the odds in point of criminality, are fearfully against the liquor vendor?

Regarded with reference to the injured victim, there is hardly a comparison. In the example, property only has been taken without consideration. The man has not been injured in his manhood—in his essential self. His incident only—a very important one, we grant—has been taken away; and thus, perhaps, in the eyes of a heartless world, the man has been depreciated. But this incident was made for man—not man for it. He was before it—and can and will survive it—all the false life and opinion of the pegging-awl, and goose and bodkin aristocracy of the world to the contrary notwithstanding. Not so, in the case of the liquor vendor. Fair dealing implies mutuality of interest between the traders—demands that something valuable shall be given for something valuable. But does this mutuality exist between the dram-seller and his customer? Does the latter receive a fair equivalent for his cash? Who pretends he does? And this, too, all question of the purity of the liquors aside. If he did, the LIQUOR FIEND would have to spend a longer time in working his passage into respectability (?) than at present. But the purchaser not only does not receive value for his money, he gets absolutely worse than nothing, and the vendor knows it. In proof, contemplate for a few years the relative positions of the vendor and his customer. The former begins with n barrel of bad whisky, and a few tumblers—his whole stock in trade—except a conscience already debased to the demon standard; the latter is wealthy, honored and honorable—the possessor of a generous heart, and a conscience void of offence. They begin together. Let us now suppose five years to have passed, and how do they stand. We leave our readers to draw their own pictures at this time, from their observations of men and manners.—If the rich man has become a pauper and perished in the gutter, or worse still, a felon, and died upon the scaffold in expiation of his crime—his fortune has been carefully husbanded by the liquor merchant, who is now rich and pious—a retired plunderer of other men's fortunes, and poisoner of public morals—pretending to make atonement for past errors by a few long sighs, and many long public prayers, without one act of restoration—one deed of justice toward his victim or any one else. Again, we ask, who is the greater criminal? The fortune changes owners, just as in the case of the thief, but there ends the comparison. All the evils of drunkenness—public and private—physical and spiritual—individual and social—temporal and eternal—declare the deeds of the liquor merchant more culpable before the CREATOR than those of the thief. What, then, has shielded him from a punishment adequate to his crime?

We have, in the present article, been induced to compare the thief with the liquor vendor, not because that category of criminals is more nearly similar to the other, than some others; but out of tender mercy to the man of drams. In conclusion, we ask that every thief—great or small—taken or untaken—in the penitentiary or out of it—will pardon the comparison. We feel sensible of having done him injustice.

Wealth, no Test of Manhood.

Just as man ceases to be governed by the principle of selfishness, and adopts that of benevolence, is he exalted in the scale of being. Mere intellect, however great its original endowments and vast its acquirements, stripped of the moral qualities by which man is allied to the divine nature, can never elevate its possessor. On the contrary, if such intellect is under the control of selfishness only, the greater its power the more nearly manifestly is its possessor allied to the Ruler of the Pit. The Son of the Morning is but an exemplification of the dependent condition of mere mind, upon a nobler power. Though placed at the head of the heavenly hosts, and gifted beyond his compeers, he fell "lightning from heaven," because he yielded to selfishness; and from the ranks of the highest, became the vilest and lowest being of the universe—a culprit more degraded as he was intellectually greater than all others. This thought was, perhaps, in the poet's mind, when he described Lord Bacon as "The wisest, brightest, meanest of mankind."

In looking around us, then, upon the men of the present, and forming an estimate of their position in the moral world, the amount of this world's treasure each may have amassed can never become even an indication of his elevation. On the other hand, it is prima faciæ an evidence of his degradation. If he is vastly rich, it calls for positive evidence of good works toward mankind and an honest method of acquisition on his part, to meet the presumption it raises against him. For wealth is not acquired without effort, nor saved, unless in very fortunate circumstances, without some small spice of selfishness—often only by an utter disregard of every thing else but selfishness.

All the money getting and hoarding, therefore, of time—the greatest fortunes—should be regarded as sources of distrust, by their possessors, rather than of pride. There is no sign of true manhood in the well rounded estate, the overflowing coffer, the splendid equipage, and 'a' that.' A man wherever found is higher than them all, even if in rags, or in utter nakedness. The whisky manufacturer or vender who never did a deed in his life, in the regular course of his business, without being controlled from beginning to end, by motives of selfishness, and no other consideration whatever, can acquire wealth; and would be, if that were manhood, a man. But is he, therefore, worthy of that name originally bestowed on the image of God? In what respect is he like God? In charity—in deeds of love and mercy? God makes His sun to shine on the just and unjust, and sends rain upon the evil and the good. But what does the maker and vendor of drams? He takes the hard earned wealth of the poor and the needy, plucks the bread from the mouth of famished women and children and leaves them to starve, beg or steal. He gathers wealth, and comfort and beauty around him and his, and spreads poverty, wretchedness and death upon all who come within the range of his withering influences. Away, therefore, with wealth as a test of manhood. It is, too, often the child of selfishness; and selfishness is from beneath—of the Pit. Yet this same quality of selfishness must, to be consistent, appropriate not only all the wealth, or nearly so, of the world, but also the best pews at our churches, and professedly, at least, nearly all the religion that is in the world. It finds great occasion of joy in all its ways, and mocks at the poor and needy who cry for bread. It sits afront the altar and sings the praises of Him who said, "the foxes have holes, and the birds of the air have nests, but the Son of Man has not whereon to lay his head," while its "hired servants"—better in all the essentials of manhood than itself—set without, and watch the horses. Thus does it, as of old, mock Him whom it vainly pretends to worship; and who would spurn its lip-service as then, if again on earth, telling its dupes—"It is written, my house shall be called a house of prayer; but ye have made it a den of thieves."

News Items.

FOREIGN.—It is said that at a Cabinet Council held in London, on the 2d ult., the Ministers sat nearly five hours, and that it was determined that the British and French fleets were to enter the Dardanelles together, as a counter move to that of Russia. It is still hoped, however, that the peace of Europe will be preserved.

Mrs. H. Beecher Stowe has gone to Geneva, where, it is said, she intends to reside for some time.

Robert Sands has received a premium from the Royal Institution for the Preservation of Life from Shipwreck, for his exertions at the wreck of the ship William and Mary.

Smith O'Brien was residing at a hotel in New Norfolk, in March last; John Mitchell, at Richmond; and Doherty was acting-surgeon at St. Mary's Hospital, Hobart Town—all well.

The French government protests against the interference of Russia in the affairs of Turkey; and claims to have the same right to interfere in behalf of the Roman Catholic Church, that Nicholas has in behalf of the Greek Church.

European despotisms, spiritual and temporal, still continue to inflict pains and penalties on all who are too liberal to submit to their ungodly abuses of power.—Thus, the Countess Blanche Telekey has been sentenced to ten years' imprisonment for communicating with the patriots abroad, while her governess and female attendants have been sentenced thirteen months' imprisonment for no other reason than being associated with her as friends.

It is said that the recent movements of Russia have united with England and France, Austria also, in opposition to her. This is almost, if not altogether incredible, when we remember that Austria is indebted to Russia for existence.

At last advices from Vera Cruz (the 8th ult.,) cholera was raging in that city; and the black vomit was also making terrible ravages—the physicians not being able to save more than ten in one hundred of those attacked.

The Mexican government has imposed a new oath on all its employees, which, among other things, requires them to maintain the independence of the nation, and the integrity of her territory: a Gordian knot which the invader's sword will easily untie.

The Trait d' Union says:—"If war is imminent in Europe, we think it may be considered equally so under certain circumstances between the United States and Mexico."

The Isthmus of Tehauntepec has been declared a separate territory. Minititlan is to be its capital.

DOMESTIC.—Franklin C. Gray, aged 45 years, a wealthy merchant of San Francisco, recently threw himself before a train from New York, at the New Rochelle Depot, and was crushed to atoms. He is said to have had a yearly income of $36,000.

Three men went over the Falls of Niagara on Monday evening, the 18th ult. "Two of the men—one named Andrew Hanneman, the other a stranger—were hurled at once over the foaming sheet; the third, Joseph Avery, caught hold of a stump in his fearful passage, and clung to it until Tuesday afternoon, when he went over the Falls at 6 o'clock. He attempted to swim to a small island, but failed to reach it. He raised himself up to his full height, gave a shriek, waved his arms wildly, and disappeared."

Correspondence.

For the Temperance Chart.

FRIEND GORDON: — The Temperance Cause is still the theme of my heart, although I do not figure now as conspicuously as heretofore. The School-room and my ministerial duties engross my entire time and attention for the present.— My friends abroad will appreciate my excuse. Besides, we have in this community those who are both able and willing to lead off and manage the great and glowing enterprise, and I yield it to them cheerfully, but when at "a lift," I trust I shall ever be found at my post, battling for the right. I have travelled hundreds of miles, and made as many Temperance speeches, and should have been glad to have consecrated myself entirely to the work and the ministry. I tendered my services, at the request of my friends, to the Grand Division more than once, but it always seemed to say that it could be better served; and I trust and hope that it has; so, in some measure, I feel excused from going abroad to lecture. Indeed I can not now do so, but will occasionally speak forth with my pen what is in my head and heart, and give a word of admonition and of encouragement as time and circumstances demand and admit.

Our glorious Fourth having just gone by, I place as your disposal an "Ode," gotten up for a similar occasion, a few years ago. Perhaps it might be read and sung now as appropriately and with as much interest as then. Here it is, and it will speak for itself. Meantime you may expect to hear from me again soon.

Our friends here are firm in the cause, and all things considered, "the battle goes well."

Respectfully and fraternally yours,

A. J. COTTON.

Manchester, July 8, 1853.

ODE

FOR A FOURTH OF JULY TEMPERANCE CELEBRATION.

BY A. J. COTTON.

AIR—Auld Lang Syne.

The Temperance ball! the Temperance ball!
Let's keep it on the roll,
Till doggeries and demijohns
Are cracked from pole to pole;

And every "Still-tub" in the land
Be knocked the other side up,
And spill the swill that makes the "bane"
"That sparkles in the cup."

The stream of death that issues forth
From every smoking Still
Is blighting all our brightest hopes,
And all our prisons fill.

Oh think it o'er!—mature it well;
That "fip" upon thy corn
May crush the hopes of many friends,
And leave them quite forlorn.

Our fathers fought, and bled and died,
Despising ease or gain;
And to be worthy of those sires,
We all should do the same.

Shall WE claim kindred to those men,
Who live alone for self?
And scatter woe, disease, and death
To treasure up our pelf?

Nay: starve "the Worm" of every still,
Convert your grain to bread,
And send it round from door fo door
Till all the poor are fed.

Ye topers and ye tipplers, too,
Though late, you are "in time,"—
The second Declaration's here—
Oh! come you up and "sign."

Throw off at once the galling yoke
King Alcohol imposes;
He drains your purse—pollutes your breath,
And burns to red your NOSES!

"Hope of my country," dear young men,
Oh come! and "sign the Pledge:"
'Twill save your country, save you too,
As thousands can allege.

Disease and death lurk in the bowl,
The mind 'twill shatter too;
How can you then preserve your trust
That soon will fall to you?

The destiny of "Church and State"
Will in your hands be placed,
And if unholy, drunken men,
Both sure will be disgraced.

Our Stripes and Stars will very soon
Be trusted to your care:
May you be ready to receive,
And keep them bright and fair.

Let old and young—let boys and girls;
Like "Hannibal," come up,
And swear eternal hate to him—
The FOE that's in the cup.

Ye blushing Fair lend us your aid—
Your's is a potent charm—
You rule the men who rule the State—
You can avert the harm.

Oh! never let it be forgot
The price that freedom cost;
But pledge with us your lives, your all—
It never shall be lost.

Oh wield the power which Nature gives,
To dry these founts of woe—
The sorrows of "a drunkard's wife,"
Oh may you never know.

Then roll it on! "that Temperance ball!"
And keep it on the roll,
Till doggeries and demijohns
Are crushed from pole to pole.

For the Chart.

Tribute o Respect.

At a regular meeting of the Penn Division, No. 219, Sons of Temperance, of the town of Camden, Jay county, Indiana, the following Preamble and Resolutions were unanimously adopted:

Whereas it has pleased the Allwise Creator, in his infinite wisdom, to take from our brotherhood, and this stage of action, our beloved brother, Edmund Smith, who died at his residence in Penn township, in this county, on Monday evening, the 11th inst., And Whereas, by this dispensation we recognize the loss of one of our most worthy brothers, his bereaved family the loss of a kind father and affectionate husband, and the neighborhood a good citizen; therefore

Resolved, That it becomes us as dependent beings to bow with deep submission to the will of Almighty God, and to acknowledge his mercy and justice in all his dealings with the children of men, and to bow with humble reverence to every dispensation of his providence; yet we can not but express our deep regret for the loss of our friend and brother, and deplore the vacancy thus created in our ranks, and the loss the community has sustained in the death of Brother Smith, yet we are consoled with the belief that our loss is his eternal gain.

Resolved, That we deeply sympathize with the widow and family of our deceased brother, in the sorrowful dispensation of Providence, and pray that the Great Patriarch above may keep them from the many snares that beset his children whilst sojourning in this land of mortality.

Resolved, That as a mark of our respect for the deceased brother, the members of this Division wear the usual badge of mourning for thirty days.

Resolved, That the R. S. furnish a copy of the above Resolutions to the family of the deceased, insert them in the Minutes of the meeting, and forward a copy to the editors of the Portland Journal, and the Temperance Chart, with a request that they be published.

ISRAEL ALLMON, R. S.

Cayuga Chief on the Maine Law.

Our ueighbor of the Standard is unfortunate in his article against the Maine Law. Not one of his arguments can stand a moment. The ablest pens are powerless when in the wrong.

Government does not always make "provisions for indemnification," when private property is destroyed. Congress says, destroy the whiskey upon the Indian reservations. The gambler's tables and the counterfeiter's dies are destroyed. The ship and cargo, if thought best for the public health, are sunk. The bone-boiling establishment, soap-factory, slaughter house, etc., are removed. And did any one ever hear of the owners being indemnified for their loss? Is not private property thus destroyed? Is such policy trenching upon men's liberties? Has any man a right to pursue any business, however honorable even in itself, which endangers the public health or peace? Does government indemnify for the powder it finds kept in violation of law? Or do people complain of its destruction, as trenching on their liberties? Why compel men to muzzle dogs?—or why kill without indemnification, if found unmuzzled?

It is too late in the day to spend time upon the assumed unconstitutionality of the Maine Law principle. Our highest court has decided that question, independent of the legislation of ages gone by. Any State has the power to regulate, or utterly prohibit the traffic, if the happiness or safety of the people demand such prohibition.

Such is one of the highest and noblest aims of civil government. When it fails to do that, it is a curse—an engine of oppression and wrong. When a long list of minor evils are prohibited, property confiscated, and men punished by fine and imprisonment for the public good, it is nonsense to plead liberty and property, against a principle when brought to bear against the "scum of all villanies."

True, we cannot legislate men into temperance. Such is not the object of legislation. We can legislate so as to prevent men from directly creating intemperance. The cause removed, and the effects will take take care of themselves. Neither can we legislate a hatred of gambling, counterfeiting, peddling of obscene books, etc. Yet would it be "expedient" to drop all our penal statutes against these evils and depend upon "persuasion" and "argument" alone? When all our prohibitory and protective laws are swept by the board, and such means are triumphantly brought to bear upon the pirates on the high seas, the incendiary with his torch in hand, or the murderer with the glare of his blade flashing at the throat of his victim, we will believe that human nature has strangely changed, and that purity, innocence and weakness may safely walk through a world of angels. Our penal statutes would be no more needed, and those of Divine Legislation would appear as the relics of a barbarous and wicked age. If we are not to legislate upon a question which jeopardizes all that is good on earth, it seems to us the Great Lawgiver has made a sad mistake in enacting penal statutes for the government of mankind.

Honeyed words are good in their place. But at this late day, rumsellers have no more right to demand that they alone shall be used against them, than a horde of criminals of lesser guilt. The idea of putting an end to intemperance by "argument" and "persuasion" alone, would excite a smile of derision from every rumseller in the land. The voice of childhood would as soon drive away the famished tiger from the tender feast. An injured people have too long visited penal vengeance upon the effects of intemperance, and used honeyed words upon the cause. That system of warfare is ended.

Fixed Facts in Agriculture.

1. All lands on which the clover, or the grasses are grown, must either have lime in them naturally, or the mineral must be artificially supplied. It matters but little whether it be supplied in the form of stone lime, oyster lime, or marl.

2. All permanent improvement in land must look to lime as its basis.

3. Lands which have been long in cultivation will be benefited by the application of the phosphate of lime, and it is unimportant whether the deficiency is supplied in the form of bone dust, guano, native phosphate of lime, composed of fish, ashes, or that of oyster-shell lime, or marl, if the land need liming also.

4. No lands can be preserved in a high state of fertility, unless clover and the grasses are cultivated in the course of rotation.

5. Mould is indispensable to every soil; and a healthy supply can alone be preserved through the cultivation of clover, and the grasses, the turning in of green crops, or by the application of compost rich in the elements of mould.

6. All the highly concentrated animal manures are increased in value, and their benefits prolonged by their admixture with salt, or plaster, or pulverized charcoal.

7. Deep plowing greatly improves the productive powers of every kind of soil that is not wet.

8. Subsoiling sound land, that is, land that is not wet, eminently conduces to increase production.

9. All wet land should be drained.

10. All grain crops should be harvested before the grain is thoroughly ripe.

11. Clover as well as the grasses intended for hay, should be mowed when in bloom.

12. Sandy lands can be most effectually improved by clay. When such land requires liming or marling, the lime or marl is most beneficially applied when made into compost with clay.

13. The chopping or grinding of grain to be fed to stock, operates as a saving of at least twenty-five per cent.

14. To manure or lime wet lands is to throw manure, lime, and labor away.

15. Shallow plowing operates to impoverish the soil, while it decreases production.

16. By stabling and shedding stock through the winter, a saving of one-fourth the food may be effected—that is, one-fourth less food will answer, than when such stock may be exposed to the inclemencies of the weather.

If you would relish your food, work for it; if you would enjoy raiment, pay before you wear it; if you would sleep soundly, take a clear conscience to bed with you.

David and Jonathan.

FROM THE GERMAN OF HERDER.

When the son of Jesse, worn out with the cares of his kingdom and anxiety about his children, slept on his death-bed, lo! there came first to meet him in the dark walls of death, Jonathan, the friend of his youth. "Our bond is for ever," said he to the shade of the old king, but I cannot reach forth to thee my right hand, for thou art spotted with blood—with the blood of my father's house, and even laden with the sighs of my own son. Follow me."

And David followed the heavenly youth. "Ah!" said he to himself, "a hard lot is the life of men, and a harder still the life of kings: would I had fallen as thou didst, O Jonathan, with an innocent heart, in the spring-time of my life; or would that I had remained a shepherd, singing among the flowers of Bethlehem. A blessed life hast thou lived in Paradise: why did I not die with thee!"

"Murmur not," said Jonathan, "against Him who gave thee the crown of his people, and made thee father of an everlasting kingdom. I saw thy work and thy woes, and I have waited for thee here." Then he led him to a stream in Paradise.— "Drink," said he, "of this well, and all thy cares shall be forgotten. Wash in the stream, and thou shalt become young, and fairer than thou wert in thy youth when I won thy love, and we swore fidelity to one another. But dip deep into it; it flows like silver, and must purify thee with fire." David drank from the well and washed in the crystal stream. The draught washed away the cares of earth; but the waves of the stream passed deeply through him; they glowed within him until he became radiant with purity like his heavenly friend.

Jonathan reached a harp to the new-born youth, and under the Tree of Life, he sang more sweetly than here below.— "David and Jonathan, lovely in their lives, in death are not divided. Lighter than eagles, swifter than the roe upon the hills. Ye daughters of Israel, weep for us no more; we are clad in the glory of our youth. My joy is in thee, my brother Jonathan: when below, I had joy and delight in thee; and here, still in thy love, I find the love of our youth." They kissed one another, and now indivisible, they renewed their covenant forever.—Baltimore Protestant.

No Good Deed Lost.

Philosophees tell us that since the creation of the world, not one single particle of matter has ever been lost. It may have passed into new shapes—it may have been combined with other elements—it may have floated away in smoke or vapor, but it is not lost. It will come back again in the dew-drop or the rain—it will spring up in the fibre of the plant, or paint itself on the rose-leaf. Through all its transformations, the eye of God follows it, and his providence watches over and directs it still. Even so it is with every holy thought or heavenly desire, or humble aspiration, or generous and self-denying effort. It may escape our observation—we may be unable to follow it—but it is an element of the moral world, and it is not lost. It has winged a petition to heaven, that will bring down an answer. It has distilled a blessing on some sorrowing heart, like a dew-drop on a thirsty leaf. It has passed into the inner life of the soul, and, like the sap of the vine, fed the tendrils that have clasped the promise. It has shed around it a fragrance of hallowed devotion that has gladdened the desert into a paradise. It has risen as incense before the Throne, and been accepted at the Mercy-seat. No! not one element of Christian self-denial—not one struggle for higher attainment in the divine life, though it had no witness but the Omniscient eye, is ever lost. It has its record. It will have its resurrection. Undiscoverable as the buried seed, the clods have no tomb that can hold it. It may seem to sleep in its grave as Jesus did. But it will not die there. It will come forth—an angel of blessing—and if your life has been full of such deeds they will throng like a heavenly company about your after years, and sing around your dying bed life's evening song, in music that seems to gush forth on your raptured ear from the world of glory.—N. Y. Evangelist.

SCOLDING.—It is as natural for some people to scold, as to breathe. They could not live if denied the blessed pastime of dealing in such language. Even when unprovoked, their words are as sharp as a two-edged sword. To say that we had rather hear thunder is a feeble comparison. We had rather hear a gong, especially if it calls to dinner. We once knew a child who actually cried because his mother neglected to scold him for pounding the cat's tail with a boot jack. The truth is, that children become so accustomed to scolding that they look upon it as a matter of course. We never knew a scolding parent who could make a child mind without a hickory goad or broom-stick. He moves only when knocked end ways. Reader, do you scold? Who cares a red cent for what you say?—Holyoke Freeman.

Moral Reflections, Sentences, and Maxims.

We take exceptions to judges who are in the last degree interested, and yet we are quite willing that our reputation and our fame should depend on the judgment of men who are all opposed to us, either from jealousy, or from prejudice, or from want of intelligence; it is only to induce them to decide in our favor that we peril in so many ways our repose and our lives.

Scarcely any man is clever enough to know all the evil he does.

Honor acquired is security for that which should be acquired.

Youth is perpetual intoxication; it is the the fever of reason.

We like to divine others, but we do not like to be divined ourselves.

Some people obtain the approbation of the world, whose only merit consists in the vices which serve to carry on the commerce of life.

Preserving the health by too strict a regimen is a wearisome malady.

Absence diminishes moderate passions and increases great ones, as the wind extinguishes tapers and adds fury to fire.

Good nature. which boasts of so much sensibility, is often stifled by the most petty interest.

Women often fancy themselves in love even when they are not. The occupation of an intrigue, the emotion of mind which gallantry produces, the natural leaning to the pleasure of being loved, add the pain of refusing, persuade them that they feel the passion of love, when, in reality, they feel nothing but coquetry.

When we dilate upon the affection of our friends, it is often less from gratitude than from a desire to convey an opinion of our own merit.

The approbation bestowed on those who are entering the world often arises from a secret envy of those already established in it.

Pride, which inspires us with so much envy, serves also to moderate it.

Some disguised falsehoods represent the truth so well, that it would be bad judgment not to be deceived by them.

There is sometimes as much ability in knowing how to profit by good advice as in arriving at a correct opinion ourselves.

Some bad people would be less dangerous if they had not some goodness.

Beautiful Allegory.

The following beautiful allegory is translated from the German:

Sophronius, a wise teacher, would not suffer even his grown-up sons and daughters to associate with those whose conduct was not pure and upright.

"Dear father," said the gentle Eulalia to him, one day, when he forbade her, in company with her brother, to visit the gentle Lucinda, "dear father, you must think us very childish, if you imagine that we should be exposed to danger by it."

The father took in silence a dead coal from the hearth and reached it to his daughter. "It will not burn you, my child, take it."

Eulalia did so, and behold her beautiful white hand was soiled and blackened, and as it chanced, her white dress also.

"We cannot be too careful in handling coals," said Eulalia, in vexation.

"Yes, truly," said her father, "you see my child, that coals, even if they do not burn, blacken; so it is with the company of the vicious."

An exchange says it is stated that by the use of the new envelopes, it is lawful to send letters enclosed in them by private hands.

Call for a State Temperance Convention.

A State Temperance Convention will be held at Madison, Jefferson county, Indiana, beginning on the 28th of September next, and continuing as long as it may determine.

JOHN A. MCCLUNG,
WM. WILSON,
JOHN C. STEELE,
JOHN O'KANE,
WILLIAM HANNAMAN,
CHARLES WOODWARD,
J. W. GORDON,
} State Central Committee.

CONSTITUTION AND BY-LAWS,

WE are still prepared to print Constitution and By-Laws, where the alterations are few from the copy recommended by the Grand Division, at the following rates:

100 copies, (or less)	$5 00
200 "	8 00
300 "	10 00

We will pay the postage on all ordered from us.

☞ All orders accompanied by the cash, will be promptly attended to.

Address, JOHN H. OHR,
Indianapolis, Indiana.

CHARTERS.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR A DIVISION S. OF T.

(Date.)

The undersigned inhabitants of ——, believing the Order of the Sons of Temperance to be well calculated to extend the blessings of total abstinence, and promote the general welfare of mankind, respectfully petition the Grand Division of the —— of ——, to grant them a Charter to open a new Division, to be called the —— Division, No. —, Sons of Temperance, of the —— of ——, to be located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves, individually and collectively, to be governed by the rules and usages of said Grand Division, and also, by those of the National Division.

Enclosed is the Charter Fee, $5 00. Books, $2 00.

This must be signed by at least eight persons of good character and standing in community, and sent to C. WOODWARD, G. S., Indianapolis, Ind., free of postage.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR A TEMPLE.

(Date.)

The undersigned, believing the Temple of Honor to be well calculated to cement more firmly our fraternal relations, and add to the general prosperity of the cause of Temperance, respectfully petition the Grand Temple of the —— of ——, to grant them a Charter to open a new Temple, to be called the —— Temple of Honor, No. —, of the —— of ——, to be located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves individually and collectively, to be governed by the rules and usages of the Grand Temple, and also by those of the Order at large.

Enclosed is the Charter Fee, $20 00.

To be directed to the G. W. R., free of postage.

This must be signed by at least twenty persons of good standing, and if not known to the G. W. T. or G. W. R., must send satisfactory references.

J. H. OHR, G. W. R.

Indianapolis, Ind.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR CADETS OF TEMPERANCE.

The undersigned, boys of ——, believing the Order of Cadets of Temperance to be well calculated to extend the blessings of total abstinence, and promote the general welfare of mankind, respectfully petition the Grand Section of the State of Indiana, to grant them a charter to open a new Section, to be called the —— Section, No. ——, Cadets of Temperance, of the State of Indiana, to be located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves, individually and collectively to be governed by the rules and usages of said Grand Section, and also those of the acting Head of the Order.

Enclosed is the fee for Charter, R. B.'s and officers' cards, $5 00.

It must also be stated whether the applicants are members of the Order or not; if they are, of what Section. The application to be directed to the Grand Secretary, free of postage.

It must also be certified by a W. P. or P. W. P, that the W. Patron elect is a Son of Temperance in good standing.

Address (post paid) HENRY OHR, G. S., C. o T., Indianapolis, Indiana.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR DAUGHTERS OF TEMPERANCE.

(Date.)

The undersigned, inhabitants of ——, believing the Order of the Daughters of Temperance to be well calculated to extend the blessings of Total Abstinence, and promote the general welfare of mankind, respectfully petition the Grand Union to grant them a charter to open a new Union to be called the —— Union, No. —, D. of T., of the State of Indiana, located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves, individually and collectively, to be governed by the rules and usages of said Grand Union.

Enclosed is the Charter Fee, $5 00.

The above must be signed by at least eleven females, of proper age and good standing in community.

Address (post paid,) Mrs. ELIZA RICHMOND, G. S. S., Indianapolis, Indiana.

New Watch and Jewelry Store.

No 1, Bates House, Washington Street,

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

WE have now open the largest and best assortment of fine Watches and rich Jewelry ever offered in this city, to which we invite the examination of the public.

Our stock is all new—selected with great care, and comprises Watches, Diamond Work, Chains, Pins, Rings, Pencils, Lockets, of all kinds; Silver Ware, Clocks, Perfumery, Brushes, Soaps, Plated Ware, Castors, Fruit Baskets, &c., which we will sell for CASH at New York prices. Mr. E. W. NEFF, of this city, has taken charge of the Watch repairing department, and will spare no pains to give satisfaction to our customers.

july 6-tf E J. BALDWIN & CO.

D. CRAIGHEAD. R. BROWNING.

CRAIGHEAD & BROWNING,

Dealers in all kinds of

Drugs, Medicines, Surgical Instruments, Paints, Oils, Chemicals, Varnishes, Dye Stuffs, Glassware Window Glass, Brushes, Cosmetics, Spices, Cigars, Tobacco, Perfumery, &c.,

WASHINGTON STREET,

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

ALL are respectfully invited to call and examine our stock and prices, as we feel confident we can render satisfaction both as to prices and quality of articles. Great care is taken in the selection of articles, in reference to their purity, as we endeavor at all times to keep such articles as are strictly pure and genuine. Every article will be waranted as represented. Orders from Physicians and others promptly attended to. Particular attention given to filling Prescriptions and compounding Medicines, which, in all cases, shall receive the personal attention of one of the firm. june 30

HANNAMAN & DUZAN,

DEALERS IN

DRUGS AND MEDICINES,

Surgical Instruments, Paints, Oils, Varnishes, Dye Woods, Medical and Window Glass, Brushes, Perfumery, Soaps, &c.

Washington, 3 doors west of Pennsylvania St.,

june 30 1y INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

W. W. ROBERTS,

Druggist and Apothecary.

Wholesale and Retail Dealer in

DRUGS, MEDICINES, PAINTS, OILS, AND DYE STUFFS, BRUSHES, FANCY GOODS, AMERICAN AND FRENCH WINDOW GLASS, &c.

WASHINGTON ST., INDIANAPOLIS.

Physicians, Country Merchants, and the people generally, are invited to examine his stock, which will be sold at the lowest cash price.

☞ QUALITY WARRANTED TO SUIT. ☜

june 22 4m

COMMERCIAL COLLEGE,

(Late Commercial Institute,)

Of Indianapolis,

Established March 31, 1851.

INCORPORATED, 1853.

W. McK. SCOTT, A. M., Founder and President.

JAMES C. HAYDEN, (Late Professor in Bacon's Mercantile College, Cincinnati,)

PROF. OF BOOK-KEEPING AND PENMANSHIP.

THE Session will commence at College Hall as follows:

1st Session on the first Monday of September.
2d Session on the 1st Monday of November.
3d Session on the 1st Monday of January.
4th Session on the 1st Monday of March.
5th Session on the 1st Monday of May.

Having secured, permanently, the services of the distinguished Professor above named, and leased for a term of years the commodious and beautiful Hall formerly known as CONCERT HALL, but now named COLLEGE HALL, which is to be fitted up in a style of great elegance, taste, and convenience, the President would say, that this College now offers advantages superior to all others, for imparting a sound, thorough, and accomplished business education

COURSE OF STUDIES.

The Course of Studies, as enlarged, will be as follows, viz:

1. Book-Keeping, by Single and Double Entry, in all its various branches, and its application to all kinds of business.
2. The Laws, Customs, and Usages of Trade and Commerce.
3. Mercantile Arithmetic, upon the short and easy system of cancelation, (taught in no other College.)
4. Commercial Law, in a series of Lectures, thorough and systematic.
5. Business Penmanship.
6. Commercial Correspondence.
7. Lectures upon Banking, Political Economy, and other subjects valusble to the business man.

EXPENSES.

Cards of Admission, invariably in advance, or secured, $25; Diplomas $3; Stationery $5; Boarding $2 50 per week; incidentals, at option of student, $15. Making entire expenses about $75.

On application, a Catalogue will be furnished, giving full particulars.

All letters will receive prompt attention on being directed, post-paid, to

june 8 W. McK. SCOTT, President.

"God never made his works for man to mend." DR. FRANKLIN.

KIER'S ROCK OIL.

A NEW AND MOST IMPORTANT REMEDY FOR DISEASE.

DISCOVERED IN 1849.

IS drawn from a deep well near Pittsburgh—has been used with remarkable success in Ohio and Pennsylvania, and more Eastern States—and is now working its way West. An opportunity is now offered to the Afflicted for testing it. Where known and tried, it at once makes firm friends, and cures which are eloquent in its praise. Certificates of its power to heal are at hand—but we know well, reader, that such evidence, to have weight with you, now-a-days, must be in your own neighborhood.—You have only to try the Oil to be satisfied—it will SPEAK FOR ITSELF.

We have no war with the legion of Nostrums and Specifics of the day—we know but little about them—some say they are good for nothing. However that may be, the

Petroleum

will not be suppressed and kept back by reason of the above nostrums—duty and inclination both forbid it.

Those who are afflicted, are respectfully invited to get a Circular and look over the Directions for

Ague, Rheumatism, Piles, Diarrhœa, Flux, Tooth Ache, Burns, Worms, Scrofula, Coughs, Bronchitis, Croup, Old Sores, Cholera Morbus, Contractions of the Limbs and Joints, Sore Eyes, Blindness, Costiveness, Dyspepsia, and other Diseases.

By that time you may say, "it cures too much." But recollect it is not a HUMAN INVENTION, but compounded by Nature's master hand—and Nature does not do her work by halves.

The Oil is used both internally and externally.

As AGUE, SORE EYES, PILES, RHEUMATISM, and SCROFULA are so common in many parts of the West, we are constrained to say, that while this Oil will cure and relieve other diseases, it has been and is constantly used with most complete success in these cases.

☞ Price 50 cents per Bottle (half pint.)

Beware of all Rock Oil preparations, as some persons are offering a spurious article. Look for S. M. KIER'S name written on the label of the bottle.

For sale by the Druggists throughout Indiana, and by TOMLINSON BROTHERS, J P. POPE & Co., S. ROSENGARTEN, WM. TILLEY, and at wholesale by W. W. ROBERTS, Indianapolis, Indiana.

R. M. LYON, Fort Wayne,

may25 10w Proprietor in the Western States.

SOMETHING NEW.

LATHROP & STEVENS, Wholesale and Retail Dealers in BOOTS AND SHOES, at the West room in the Bates House, Washington Street, Indianapolis.

We are now opening a new and splendid stock of Boots and Shoes of every variety and style, which we are receiving direct from the manufacturers.—We design to keep constantly on hand a good assortment of the best quality of goods manufactured, which we can warrant to give satisfaction to all who may give them a trial. We will sell by the case, dozen, or single pair, at low prices for cash.—Our stock consists in part of Gents' fine Cloth, silk warp, glove kid, buck, patent calf, and enameled Gaiters and Ties of every variety and style; Ladies' fine silk warp Gaiters, Buskins, Ties, Slippers and Boots; Misses' ditto; Men's calf, goat, kip, and thick Boots and Brogans; Boys' and Youths' ditto; assorted Ladies, kid, goat and calf Boots and Buskins; Misses' ditto. Also every variety of Children's Shoes. Come and see for yourselves.

LATHROP & STEVENS,

may 25 4w Indianapolis, Indiana.

TEMPERANCE INN,

Bloomington, Indiana.

J. & S. M. ORCHARD, PROPRIETORS.

TRAVELLERS will find it to their advantage to call and try the accommodation of the TEMPERANCE INN. Stage office for all the different routes, in connection with this House. may25 6m ¶

THE LATEST WONDER of the 19th CENTURY.

DR. G. W. BENNETT'S

Celebrated Eye-Balm.

A SPECIFIC FOR CHRONIC, SORE, INFLAMED, AND WEAK EYES.

Prepared only by Dr. George W. Bennett, and for sale by Merchants and Druggists generally.

THIS Balm is an excellent and certain cure for sore and inflamed Eyes, in all cases of Psoroic, Scrofulous, and Purulent Opthalmia, and what is commonly termed wild hairs in the eye-lids. It is a specific in Infantile, Purulent, and Scrofulous Inflamed, and Sore Eyes, and all in the various diseases of the Eyes, that prevail among the human family, in every climate. It will be found a sovereign remedy if properly applied.

W. W. ROBERTS, Indianapolis, Ind. General Agent for State of Indiana, to whom all orders must be addressed.

Price---Twenty-five Cents.

I warrant the above Balm to cure if the directions are strictly observed, or return the money.

june 22 4m G. W. BENNETT.

REAL ESTATE AND GENERAL AGENCY OFFICE,

INDIANAPOLIS, INDIANA.

UNDER THE CONTROL OF W. M'K. SCOTT, Attorney & Counsellor at Law, and Notary Public.

The attention of the Agency will be devoted,

First—To the collection of debts and the payment of Taxes for non-residents in any county in the State. Also, the redemption of Lands sold for Taxes, sale, purchase or lease of Lands, purchase of adverse claims, examination and perfection of Title, &c., &c.

Second—To the prosecution of claims against the General Government, procuring Land Warrants, Patent Rights, and Pensions under the various Pension Laws, &c.

Third—All other Miscellaneous agencies as may be intrusted to the care of this office.

Fourth—The taking of Depositions and Attestation of all instruments requiring a seal

In all cases requiring an outlay of money for the benefit of individuals, the requisite funds must be transmitted in advance.

Prompt attention to all letters on business that are pre-paid. Address W. M'K. SCOTT,

Real Estate and General Agent,

jan 5-1y Indianapolis, Ind.

ADAMS & CO'S EXPRESS.

WE are now running a daily line East and West, accompanied by special messengers, and with the speed of the mails, running our own cars with the passenger trains.

Packages will be received at the cars up to the time of starting, and at our office until 1 o'clock each day.

We are prepared to transport packages, bank notes and specie, to and from any of the eastern cities, also, Louisville, Frankfort, and Lexington, Ky., St. Louis, Mo., or any points on the Ohio and Mississippi rivers; and to and from Terre Haute, and all intermediate points, and to forward freight from Terre Haute up and down the Wabash.

In addition to these, we have the most complete arrangements for transporting packages to and from California and Europe.

Exchange on England, Ireland, and Scotland, for sale, payable at any bank in the kingdom.

Foreign passage tickets; by Grinnell, Minturn & Co.'s line to Liverpool and London, constantly on hand, and for sale at the lowest rates.

Notes, drafts, and bills collected in any of the Eastern or Western cities.

Orders for goods to be returned by Express, sent free. Our rates of charges have been greatly reduced, and the public will find this a safe and expeditious method of transportation.

Indianapolis, June 30, 1852. ADAMS & CO.

Office in Indianapolis in Journal Building, west side Pennsylvania Street.

Office open during business hours.

june30 1y C. WOODWARD, Agent.

The Cheapest Illustrated Paper for the Young.

PRICE ONLY TEN CENTS A YEAR, or nearly three papers for one cent, where 100 copies are taken.

Twenty-six numbers a year, and each number illustrated with from three to seven engravings.

The Youth's Penny Gazette,

A strictly Religious and Moral Paper, is published by the AMERICAN SUNDAY SCHOOL UNION and is designed to furnish the Children and Youth of the United States with reading matter, in a popular form, for the improvement of Mind and Heart.

It is published (not monthly, nor weekly, but) every other week, or twenty-six numbers in a year. It is religious but unsectarian, and the matter is carefully prepared with a view to the habits, character and prospects of American Youth

TERMS OF THE PENNY GAZETTE.

$10 a year, in advance, for 100 copies, to one address. $5 a year, in advance, for 40 copies, to one address. $3 a year, in advance, for 20 copies, to one address. Single subscriptions, 25 cents per year.

TERMS BY MAIL, POSTAGE PAID.

☞ When the postage is paid at the place of mailing, the terms are very low. For $15 remitted, we will send 100 copies of the paper for one year, to one address—we paying postage. For $7 remitted, we will send 40 copies of the paper to one address, for one year—we paying postage. For $3 50 remitted, we will send 20 copies of the paper for one year, to one address—we paying postage. Less than 20 cannot be sent at this cheap rate.

Subscriptions received at the Society's House, No. 146 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.

Feb 16 3w G. S. SCOFIELD, Agent.

TO BUILDERS.

North Western Christian University.

THE Building Committee of the Board of Directors of the North-Western Christiana University, propose contracting for the west wing of the University Building, to be put up on the University grounds in the vicinity of Indianapolis.

Sealed Proposals in detail, with prices affixed for doing the work necessary to the completion of the said Wing, will be received until the 19th day of July next, and may be handed to the undersigned, or to J. T. Cox. Secretary of the Company, at the Book Store of Cox & Mathes, in Indianapolis.

The materials and work to be according to the plan, drawings and specifications prepared by Wm. Tinsley, Architect, which may be seen and examined at his room, on the east side of Pennsylvania street, three doors north of the north-east Diagonal, in Indianapolis. The specifications have been materially changed and modified, so as to reduce the cost of the building.

Proposals for the whole combined, would be preferred; but will be received for the different parts and portions thereof separotely. The whole to be completed and fit for use by the first day of September, 1854.

Payments will be made as the work progresses, at such short periods as may suit the covenience of the Contractors. Bond and security will be required for the performance of the work.

In behalf of the Building Committee:

OVID BUTLER,

President of the Board of Directors.

June 10, 1853. june 22 3w

LITTLE, DRUM & ANDERSONS

WHOLESALE DEALERS IN

STAPLE AND FANCY DRY GOODS, BOOTS, SHOES, HATS, CAPS, STATIONERY, NOTIONS, TRIMMINGS, GROCERIES, HARDWARE, QUEENSWARE, AND GLASSWARE,

North side of Washington Street,

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

WE are receiving Country Produce of all descriptions, and paying the highest market price. Dealers visiting Indianapolis are respectfully invited to call and examine our stock and prices, both for Produce and Merchandise generally. june30 tf

JAMES HALL,

MERCHANT TAILOR,

No. 2. Temperance, Hall, Indianapolis,

Manufactu'ng & Clothing Emporium,

Wholesale and Retail Dealer in Ready Made Clothing, Cloths, Cassimers, Vestings, Trimmings, Trunks, Sachels, Canes, Umbrellas, Hats, Caps, a every description of Gentlemen's Furnishing.

Also:

General Agency for the sale of GRAND AND SUBORDINATE REGALIA, EMBLEMS, COSTUMES, &c., FOR THE ORDERS OF MASONS, ODD FELLOWS, TEMPLE OF HONOR, SON, DAUGHTERS, AND CADETS OF TEMPERANCE. oct27 1y

The American Life and Health Insurance Company.

Office—No. 7, South Third St., Philadelphia.

Officers.

LEONARD JEWELL, President.
JAMES PEACOCK, Treasurer,
JOHN C. SIMS, Sec'y and Actuary.
THOS. S. SMITH, Solicitor

JOHN F. BIRD, FRED. A. FICKARDT, } Medical Examiners.

CHARLES WOODWARD, Indianapolis, Ind., General Agent for the State of Indiana.

THIS Company issues policies at Total Abstinence Rates, Joint stock Rates, and at Mutual Rates, which for $1000 on the life of a person 30 years of age, are as follows:

Age.	Total Abstinence.	Joint Stock.	Mutual.
30	$15.40	$19.60	$23.60

A further table of Rates will be furnished at the Office.

The condition in Total Abstinence rates (believed to be the lowest in the Union,) is entire forfeiture upon the departure of the Insured from Total Abstinence in its strictest sense.

Policies at Joint Stock and Mutual rates, contain no condition except as usual in Life Insurance.

HEALTH INSURANCE DEPARTMENT.

All Moneys received from the Insured, for Annual Premiums, after deducting expenses, will be divided among the Sick

The Public have for some time been familiar with the subject of Life and Health Insurance, but it is obvious that too little thoughts has been given to the latter. LIFE Insurance benefits our successors, while HEALTH Insurance directly benefits ourselves. It makes provision for a time of sickness, when the products of a man's industry are cut off, and want unites with Disease to aggravate his distress. It is at this gloomy period, when he is prostrated and helpless, and when despondency would otherwise overwhelm him, that the holder of a Health Insurance Policy will realize its benefits.

RATES, under 50 years of age,

$2,00	per year,	for	$2,00	per week.
3,00	"	"	3,00	"
4,00	"	"	4,00	"
5,00	"	"	5,00	"
6,00	"	"	6,00	"

Over fifty and under sixty.

$2,50	per year,	for	$2,50	per week.
3,75	"	"	3,00	"
5,00	"	"	4,00	"
6,25	"	"	5,00	"
7,50	"	"	6,00	"

When the Fund shall amount to Three Dollars and upwards for every person insured and sufficient to warrant an additional distribution, the weekly allowances will be increased in accordance with the Rules of the Policy.

All the members of a Temple or Division insured at greatly reduced rates.

Applications for Agencies in any of the cities or towns in the State, should be made to the undersigned, post paid, or in person.

As Agent for the above Company, I am prepared to receive applications for Policies at any of the above rates.

CHARLES WOODWARD, Agent,

At ADAMS & CO.'S Express Office.

J. L. MOTHERSHEAD, Medical Examiner.

june 30 '52-1y

Ohio Life Insurance Company,

Capital $100,000.

JOINT STOCK AND MUTUAL,

CINCINNATI.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS.

Wm. Burnet, Jno. N. Ridgway, Chas. Goodman,
S. Robert, E. S. Haines, Jno. M. Blair,
J. W. Donohue, Eden B. Reeder, Wm. Person.

WM. BURNET, President.

S. W. REEDER, Sec'y J. W. DONOHUE, Vice Pres't.

Office in Reeder's Building, Third street, between Almy's and City Bank.

This Company insures Lives at the lowest rates consistent with safety, either upon the Joint Stock or Mutual plan.

In the Joint Stock Department, premium payable quarterly, semi-annually or annually. On the Mutual plan, one-half the premium paid in Cash, the balance by a note bearing six per cent. interest—the interest only payable annually. Persons insuring on the mutual plan, participate in the profits of the Company in that department.

The undersigned having been appointed agent for the above Company, is prepared to fill applications for Life Insurance, on favorable terms.

Any information on the subject and pamphlets explaining the nature and utility of Life Insurance, furnished without charge, at the office of the Agent.

C. WOODWARD, Agent.

Office at Adam's & Co.'s Express Office, Journal Building, Pennsylvania street, Indianapolis, Ind.

june 30, '52-1y.

Railroad City Book Store.

COX & MATHES,

South side of Washington, between Illinois and Meridian streets,

INDIANAPOLIS, INDIANA.

AT wholesale and retail, Standard and Miscellaneous Works, Law, and Medical Books, School Books, Plain and Fancy Stationery, Blank Books, Wall Papers, &c., &c. mar 2

CHEAP WATCHES & JEWELRY.

Good Gold Watches at $24!

WE are now in our new Room No. 1, Palmer House, with a lot of beautiful Watches and Jewelry which we are selling lower than ever heretofore sold in Indianapolis, for instance we sell

Good 18 K Case Gold Lepines at $24.
" 18 K " " Levers at $28.
" Silver Anchor Levers $12 to $18.
" " Cylenders, $9 to $12.
" " Quarter's $6 to $10.

In addition to the above we have a fine assortment of other description of Watches all of which we will sell lower than any other firm dare sell in the place. I have in my employ a very superior Watch Repairer who will always be on on hand to do watch repairing of every description. Mr. Michot has worked in Geneva, Paris, New York and other large cities and has had great experience in his Branch of the business. All Watches warranted for one year, and the money in all cases refunded, provided they do not give entire satisfaction.

feb9 tf E. W. NEFF.

SMALL CHANGE.

THE undersigned is prepared to furnish Merchants and others with three cent pieces from the United States Mint at Philadelphia, free of transportation, in sums of 30, 60, and 90 dollars, upon deposit of Gold or Eastern Exchange. Also cents and half cents, upon payment of frieght on gold to Philadelphia, or on Eastern Exchange free of freight.

C. WOODWARD, Agent,

june 30 Adams & Co.'s Express.

A CHANCE TO MAKE MONEY.

Profitable and honorable Employment!

THE Subscriber is desirous of having an agent in each county and town of the Union. A capital of from $5 to $10 only will be required, and anything like an efficient, energetic man can make from three to five dollars per day; indeed some of the Agents now employed are realizing twice that sum. Every information will be given by addressing, (postage paid) WM. A. KINSLER,

june 15 3w ¶ Box 601, Philadelphia P. O.

THE ILLUSTRATED MAGAZINE OF ART.

THE five numbers of this Magazine which are published, place it at the head of publications of this kind No expense will be spared to make it in every respect worthy of the name, the "Illustrated Magazine of Art. The Engavings which are preparing for the future numbers are in the hands of first-class American and European Artists.

A Series of most interesting Tales will appear in it. "The School of Life," written and Illustrated by ANNA MARY, daughter of William and Mary Howitt, will shortly appear; also, "The Dead Bridal," an historical romance, illustrative of the most interesting period in the history of the Venetian Republic, by JONATHAN FREKE SLINGSBY, of the Dublin University Magazine; contributions, too, from WILLIAM and MARY HOWITT, PERCY B. ST. JOHN, and other writers of distinction in America and Europe.

The following is a brief outline of the plan of the Magazine:

I. The Historical Department will abound with picturesque representations of the most remarkable events which have occurred in this and other countries; accompanied with interesting anecdotes and details from the pen of the most eminent writers of the day. This department will contain several splendid engravings, designed by the first artists of the world, and engraved in the highest style of modern art.

II. The Men and Women of the Age. This department will consist of beautifully executed portraits of the leading characters of the age, especially of those who figure on the stage of humanity as the world's benefactors. Each portrait will be accompanied by an interesting biographical sketch.

III. The Wonders of Natural History, Botany, and other sciences, will be developed in choice Engravings of Beasts, Birds, Fishes, Insects, Forest Trees, Flowers, Geological and Fossil Specimens, &c., with accompanying descriptions.

IV. The Triumphs of Architectural Art will be displayed in exquisitely finished representations of Cathedrals, Churches, Palaces, and other models of ancient and modern Architectural Art.

V. The Works of the Great Masters, selected from the principal Galleries of Art in the World. In general, the portrait of the Master will be given, accompanied with a highly finished engraved copy of his chef d'œuvre.

VI. The Scientific Portions will be rendered highly interesting by the familiar explanations, and the numerous diagrams which will accompany each subject.

VII. Manufactures. The principal manufacturing processes in use will be fully explained by minute details, and an abundance of beautiful engravings.

VIII. Machinery and Inventions will have due attention paid to them, and be described by numerous appropriate engravings.

IX. The Literary Department, independently of the various articles accompanying the illustrations, will comprise original and interesting narratives, contributed by the most popular writers of the day, with numerous illustrations.

In every respect, the "Illustrated Magazine of Art," will be decidedly

SUPERIOR TO ANY MAGAZINE OF THE DAY.

Each Monthly part will contain at least Thirty superb Engravings, four of which will be printed separately, on supefine Plate Paper.

The greatest care will be manifested in every department of production. The Paper will be of the first manufacture, and the Ink supplied from the celebrated Printing Ink Establishment of Messrs. Lawson & Co., of Paris Six of the monthly portions, when completed, will form a volume which, for interest, originality, value and beauty, will defy competition. It will not only be an interesting family book, but a rich ornament for the drawing-room table, and a pleasant companion in the study.

The parts will appear on the First of every Month at Twenty-five Cents each.

ALEXANDER MONTGOMERY,

may 25 17 Spruce Street, New-York.

SPLENDIDLY ILLUSTRATED WORKS.

THE ALPS, SWITZERLAND, SAVOY AND LOMBARDY.

With the Magazine for June will be ready, Part I., price Twenty-five Cents, of a Magnificent Work to be completed in Twelve Monthly Parts, entitled

THE ALPS, SWITZERLAND, SAVOY AND LOMBARDY, with an account of the most recent Ascents to Mont Blanc, &c. By the Rev. Charles Williams. This work, when completed, will form a large thick Volume, in Imperial Octavo, containing upwards of Three Hundred beautiful Engravings, descriptive of the peculiar Scenery of those most interesting portions of Europe, with the Occupations of the Inhabitants, &c., &c.

Cassell's Natural History.

On the First of July will commence

CASSELL'S NATURAL HISTORY, which for variety, beauty and completeness, will claim to be considered as a first-class work, upon this most interesting subject. The First volume will be devoted to the Feathered Tribe of the Creation and will contain upwards of Three Hundred Engravings, in the first style of Art. The volume will be completed in Twelve Monthly Parts, Imperial Octavo. Price 25 cents each.

History of England.

On the First of July will appear Part I., price 25 cts. of THE ILLUSTRATED HISTORY OF ENGLAND, from the earliest period on record to the present time. Edited by ROBERT FERGUSON, LL. D.

This History, which is intended to form a great National Work, will extend to Four Volumes, Imperial Octavo; each Volume to be completed in Twelve Monthly Parts, price 25 cents each. The Work will comprehend the Political, Civil, and Domestic History of the Nation, and its Progress in Civilization, Literature, Art, &c. It will be profusely Illustrated with Engravings from Designs by GILBERT, PHILLIPPOTEAUX, WILLIAMS, and others. Representations of the most remarkable Events will be worked separately upon Plate Paper. The Portraits will form a complete Gallery, not only of the Monarchs, but of those individuals whose names are prominent in England's History. Also, Antiquities, including Autographs, Buildings, Costume, Furniture, Arms, Coins, Monuments, Manufactures &c., of each Epoch.

History of Hungary.

July First will be published, in one Handsome Volume, Imperial Octavo, price, One Dollar and Twenty-five Cents, in Cloth Boards,

THE ILLUSTRATED HISTORY OF HUNGARY, AND THE MAGYARS, from the Earliest Period to the clos of the late War. By EDWARD LAWRENCE GODKIN. The Volume will be Illustrated with One Hundred highly finished Engravings, including representations of the principal Battles; Portraits of the early Kings, and of the Statesmen and Generals who figured in the War of Independence; Costumes of the Peasantry, &c.; Views of the chief Towns and Fortresses, &c.; with an accurate Description of the Manners and Customs of the People, their Literature, Commerce, Arts, &c.

ALEXANDER MONTGOMERY,

may25 Publisher, 17 Spruce Street, New-York.

MANSION HOUSE,

Cambridge City, Indiana.

J. CUNNINGHAM, Proprietor.

TRAVELLERS

Will find it to their advantage to call and try the accommodation of the MANSION HOUSE.

STAGE OFFICE also in connection with this House.

may 4 6m

INDIANA STATE LIBRARY

TEMPERANCE CHART.

A Weekly Journal:---Devoted to Temperance, Morality, Education, Literature, Useful Arts, Science, General Intelligence, &c.

J. W. GORDON, M. D., EDITOR.] ORGAN OF THE GRAND DIVISION OF INDIANA. [JOHN H. OHR, PRINTER.

VOL. III. INDIANAPOLIS, IND., WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 10, 1853. NO. 7.

THE TEMPERANCE CHART,
IS PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY, BY THE GRAND DIVISION, S. of T. OF INDIANA.

Edited by J. W. Gordon, M. D.
To whom all Communications and Subscriptions must be addressed, post-paid.
OFFICE—in second story of Temperance Hall Building, Washington St., Indianapolis.

TERMS:
Single copy, one year, ... 75 cts.
☞ In advance in all cases.

TERMS OF ADVERTISING.—Circulation 4000 copies.

One Squre, (12 lines,) for one week,	$0 50
" " for each subsequent insertion,	25
" " for 3 months,	3 00
" " for 6 months,	5 00
" " for 1 year without alteration,	8 00
" " for 1 year, with changes,	12 00

A reduction made on larger advertisements.
Cuts double the above rates.
Advertisements must be handed in by Saturday, of each week, to insure insertion.
Applications for advertising, or for any kind of Printing for the Order, must be made to
J. H. OHR, Indianapolis.

MISCELLANEOUS.

From the Tecumseh Herald.

Female Influence, or THE ELOQUENCE OF A TEAR.

A TEMPERANCE TALE, BY A LADY.

[CONTINUED.]

Henry Mansfield had been absent several months, before George Headly completed his studies, and returned to his friends; he had strictly adhered to his resolution to amend his course, had carefully avoided evil company and its vices during his absence, and the fond parents now considered their trials and anxieties at an end—they rejoiced over him as one completely reclaimed, and thought it advisable to desist for the present, from urging a pledge for the permanency of this reformation. The anxious mother had anticipated the time when she could see him united to some suitable companion, who would prove a talisman to warn him of danger, and lure him on in the path of rectitude, and now she hoped this desire might be realized. She had one in view, whom she sought to unite to her family, by effecting a union with her son. A few months previous to the return of George, a gentleman of worth and distinction had taken up his residence in their town, and Mrs. Headly had much friendly intercourse with his family; he had but one child, a lovely, accomplished daughter. Ellen Seymour was the idol of her parents, and an object of interest wherever she was known. It was but a short time after George became acquainted with this young lady, before he found his own feelings partook of the universal sensation, and it was not long before he flattered himself that his visits were regarded with more than ordinary interest by his new acquaintance. And how could Ellen Seymour be otherwise than interested in George Headly? Possessing a noble, generous disposition and captivating address, he won his way to favor wherever he went. Ellen, by her manner, encouraged his visits, but he thought he could perceive a reserve on the part of the parents, and even Ellen manifested something of the same in their presence, but he could not indulge the thought that his visits were not acceptable to all parties. At length this probationary trial must be brought to a close. As he had decided upon his future location, and the time allowed for his visit had nearly expired, he was desirous to ascertain his future prospects. The announcement was made, and Ellen listened with an interest that betrayed that his regard was reciprocated; she was silent for a moment, and then observed, "Mr. Headly, you must have ascertained before this time, the entire confidence I repose in my parents, and have anticipated that an affair of so much importance would be referred to their decision; but do not be surprised if I add, that I fear they may not regard this offer as favorably as I could desire. Should this be the case, my wishes must yield to theirs." George had feared some obstacle of this kind, and endeavoring to appear perfectly self-possessed, replied with a smile, "Well, Miss Ellen, I do not yet feel disposed to withdraw this suit, not that I wish you to act contrary to the wishes of your parents, but please inform me how I can secure their favor—do tell me what is exceptionable in my character, or what could be added to make it more attractive?"

"My parents have seen nothing to censure," replied Ellen, and with regard to any extra appendage, they would require nothing but the badge of the Sons of Temperance."

Nothing could exceed the surprise and vexation of George Headly at this announcement. He had labored for some three years to retrieve the errors of his college life, and now it was counted as nothing, unless he would consent to sign the hated pledge. As soon as he could recover from his embarrassment, he inquired, "What have your parents observed in my course that they should thus indirectly reflect upon my character?"

"I have made no inquiries," replied Ellen calmly, "but I know my father has my best interests at heart, and if he insists on this stipulation, I submit to his decision, let the sacrifice be ever so great on my part."

George said no more on the subject of union; both were disconcerted, and after a few ineffectual attempts to entertain each other, he took leave. Ellen watched him until his form receded from her view, and had a strange presentiment that this was his last visit. She could not restrain her feelings, but gave vent to a flood of tears. She loved her parents, but sometimes wished they had been less stringent. Again she would inquire, "can he love me if he declines this trifling sacrifice? Anon hope would light up her countenance, "perhaps upon reflection, he will retract; we may yet be happy in each other."

But what were the feelings of George Headly after his abrupt departure—he had not the consciousness he had done right, but excused himself by bitter complaints of the arbitrary exactions of others, On his way home, he took a letter from the office—ill-fated letter, that it should arrive at this important crisis—it contained a request that he would repair at once to the place where he designed to locate, as a college class-mate, in passing, had been advised of his intention, and was awaiting his arrival. A few hours before, George Headly would have considered the danger of encountering this companion, but now he was reckless of consequences. He artfully concealed from his parents his design in leaving so hastily—gave his mother the impression his suit had been declined, and took the first conveyance to remove to his place of destination. It needed but a little reflection to occasion sincere regret on his part, that he had separated from Ellen without another interview, and resolved to write at once upon his arrival, apologize for his abrupt departure, and if possible, reinstate himself in her favor; but alas, before he could make any concessions, he had been sought out by his friend. They had the first meeting over the sparkling champagne, and the resolutions of years were scattered like leaves before the wind. Unhappy man, when he thought he had reached the desired haven, that one unpropitious wave should toss his wrecked bark again upon the boisterous ocean. His introduction into society was unfortunate; the suspicious morals of his companion tended to implicate his own; unfavorable reports were circulated that were greatly to his disadvantage, and prevented a cordial, friendly reception. When this evil was removed, and he found leisure for reflection, he at once made an effort to regain his own self-esteem, and the confidence of others; and he did not labor in vain, for his professional ability, gentlemanly and winning address, served to undermine prejudice, and bring him into public favor. His recent relapse made him unhappy—his pride had been deeply wounded—he had strenuously denied the necessity of a pledge, but he now saw clearly, that it might have prevented the error. He thought of Ellen, and resolved to break through every barrier, to secure her gentle guardianship; but while he lingered, the grand tempter sought to make sure his prey; he brought forth his net, but placed it in fair hands, to spread for his feet. The anniversary had arrived, on which he seems to rely upon the agency of woman to execute his cruel designs. The unpropitious New Year's morn dawned brightly upon our young friend, but ere its close, a dark cloud had gathered over his head. Ah, thoughtless young maiden, could the long train of ills that lurk within that poisonous cup, be spread before thee, thou wouldst turn pale at the sight. Beware, lest retributive justice pour its curse upon thy head,

George Headly could not withstand the repeated temptations of that eventful day—he indulged sparingly at first, but as appetite increased, restraints were withdrawn, and he repaired from the society of ladies to seek unrestrained indulgence. And now, he awakes from his revelry to realize his true situation. Friends, who a few hours before, sought his society, stand aloof; if he attempts to mingle with others, he soon discovers that even those who presented the fatal beverage, were taught to shun his presence. His proud spirit could ill-brook this refined cruelty; he turned away with disgust from the gay world, became gloomy and misanthropic in his feelings, and sought enjoyment alone in the wine cup. Thus, month after month passed away, and he only sought to conceal from his parents his degradation and misery; every attempt at reformation is succeeded by a deeper relapse, and a stronger conviction of the fearful inveteracy of his habits.

But George Headly is now aroused from his lethargy—"a change came o'er the spirit of his dream"—the intelligence was communicated that his cousin Henry was spending a few weeks with his parents, and there were indications that he was making a very favorable impression upon the family of Judge Seymour. The probable result could be anticipated, and he was chagrined at the idea that Henry should become his rival in the affections of Ellen. He did not take long to deliberate, but the same recklessness that hurried his departure, now impelled him homeward, but we would inform our readers that it was not from any particular desire to meet his cousin, but to keep an eye upon his movements. On his journey homeward, a paper chanced to fall in his way, and as he took it up, the first sentence that met his eye, was a notice that Henry Mansfield, Esq., would address the Sons of Temperance, at their next meeting. He threw it aside, and muttered within himself, "Well, good old father Seymour, you have found a genuine hydropathic suitor for your daughter at last," and making his way to the bar, he called for an extra potion to quiet his nerves. When he reached his home, he quailed before the searching gaze of his parents, as he well knew his countenance betrayed his recent dissipation. With what mortification and deep regret he witnessed the agitation depicted in his father's countenance, and the big tear that escaped his mother's eye; they sat for a while in gloomy silence, but it was interrupted by a servant, bearing a note from Ellen Seymour; she had heard of his arrival, and requested he should meet a company of his young companions at her house, that evening. The sight of the well known hand writing, and the kind reception it conveyed, induced him to accept the invitation.

It was with some little perturbation of mind that George Headly once more directed his course towards the residence of Ellen. On his way, two females issued from a house and walked immediately before him. "Now Debby," said one, "don't you think it is a wedding up there this evening?"

"No, no," replied the other, "not tonight, but I reckon they will have one after a little."

"Then you think the old man will give consent."

"Oh yes, he likes him mightily, he thinks he is so steady. But I can tell you one thing, if George Headly had stayed here, neither Henry Mansfield nor any other person could have got Ellen's consent. I know a thing or two about that matter, and there is something mighty strange about it. The last time he was there, he went away earlier than usual, and the next day I heard he was off. I know Ellen felt badly; she looked very serious, and I once found her crying, with a book in her hand that he gave her."

"But didn't he write," inquired the other.

"No, I reckon not, but I think Ellen thought he would, for she kept asking me to go to the office for her a good while after he left. Yes, Ellen liked him, but I don't think the old folks were exactly suited; I reckon they thought he would take to drink after a while."

George now quickened his pace. He had heard enough to learn the true state of affairs. He had no one to censure but himself. He had sealed his own fate, and he was almost maddened, at the reflection; but he was determined to press on and see Ellen once more. As he stood before the house, and heard the merry voices within, he thought, "Who can sympathize with my present feelings." He entered and received a cordial reception from the father. "Ah, yes," thought he, "I am welcome now when you think my daughter is beyond my reach." When he approached Ellen, the color forsook her cheek, and in an instant it was tinged with crimson, as if the thought of his neglect had caused an immediate reaction; but presently she was calm and self-possessed, and no one could discover that she had ether loved or grieved. Henry Mansfield stood at her side, and he soon discovered he was not the quiet, reserved student he left at College, but a dignified, polished gentleman. And if he nad once envied his 'cousin's literary honors,' what were his feelings at his prospects of success in the present affair? He thought, as his eye rested upon Ellen, that she never seemed so lovely before. 'And why may she not be mine?' thought he; 'simply because I would give her no security that I would not hereafter make her wretched by my vices.' Ah, 'how blessings brighten as they take their flight."

(CONCLUSION NEXT WEEK.)

An Exquisite Story.

In the tribe of Neggdeh, there was a horse, whose fame was spread far and near, and a Bedouin of another tribe, by name Daher, desired extremely to possess it. Having offered in vain for it his camels and his whole wealth, he hit at length upon the following device, by which he hoped to gain the object of his desire. He resolved to stain his face with the juice of an herb, to clothe himself in rags, to tie his legs and neck together, so as to appear like a lame begger. Thus equipped, he went to wait for Naber, the owner of the horse, who he knew was to pass that way. When he saw Naber approaching on his beautiful steed, he cried out in a weak voice, "I am a poor stranger; for three days I have been unable to move from this spot to seek for food. I am dying, help me, and heaven will reward you." The Bedouin kindly offered to take him up on his horse and carry him home; but the rogue replied, "I cannot rise; I have no strength left." Naber, touched with pity, dismounted, led his horse to the spot, and with great difficulty, set the seeming beggar on its back. But no sooner did Daher feel himself in the saddle, than he set spurs to the horse, and galloped off, calling out as he did so, "It is I, Daher. I have got the horse, and am off with it. Naber called after him to stop and listen. Certain of not being pursued, he turned and halted at a short distance from Naber, who was armed with a spear. "You have taken my horse," said the latter. "Since Heaven has willed it, I wish you joy of it, but I do conjure you never to tell any one how you obtained it." "And why not?" said Daher. "Because," said the noble Arab, "another man might be really ill, and men would fear to help him. You would be the cause of many refusing to perform an act of charity, for fear of being duped as I have been." Struck with shame at these words, Daher was silent for a moment, then springing from the horse, returned it to its owner, embracing him. Naber made him accompany him to his tent, where they spent a few days together, and became fast friends for life.—Lamartine.

A SCHOOL INCIDENT.—In the early years, I attended the public school in Roxbury, Mass. Dr. Nathaniel Prentice was our respected teacher; but his patience, at times, would get nearly exhausted by the infractions of the school rules by the scholars. On one occasion, in rather a wrathy way, he threatened to punish with six blows of a heavy ferrule, the first boy detected in whispering, and appointed some as detectors. Shortly after, one of these detectors shouted. "Master, John Zeigler is whispering." John was called up, and asked if it was a fact—(John, by the way, was a favorite, both of the teacher and his school-mates). "Yes," answered John, "I was not aware what I was about. I was intent on working out a sum, and requested the one who sat next to reach me the Arithmetic that contained the rule, which I wished to see." The Doctor regretted his hasty threat but told John he could not suffer him to escape the punishment, and continued: "I wish I could avoid it, but I cannot, without a forfeiture of my word, and the consequent loss of my authority. I will," continued he, "leave it to any three scholars you may choose, to say whether or not I omit the punishment." John said he was agreed to that, and immediately called out G. S, T. D., and D. P. D. The Dr. told them to return a verdict, which they soon did, (after consultation) as follows: "The master's word must be kept inviolate—John must receive the threatened punishment, of six blows of the ferrule; but it must be inflicted on volunteer proxies; and we, the arbitrators, will share the punishment by receiving two blows each." John, who had listened to the verdict, stepped up to the Doctor, and with outstretched hand, exclaimed: "Master, here is my hand, they shan't be struck a blow; I will receive the punishment." The Doctor, under pretence of wiping his face, shielded his eyes, and telling the boys to go to their seats, said he would think of it. I believe he did think of it to his dying day, but the punishment was never inflicted.—Cin. Times.

Moral Beauty.

But a higher and holier world than the world of ideas, or the world of beauty, lies around us; and we find ourselves endued with susceptibilities which affiliate us to all its purity and its perfectness. The laws of nature are sublime, but there is a moral sublimity before which the highest intelligences must kneel and adore. The laws by which the winds blow, and the tides of the ocean, like a vast clepsydra, measures, with inimitable exactness, the hours of ever-flowing time, the laws by which the planets roll, and the sun vivifies and paints; the laws which preside over the subtle combinations of chemistry, and the amazing velocities of electricity; the laws of germination and production in the vegetable and animal worlds; all these, radiant with eternal beauty, as they are, and exalted above all objects of sense, still wane and pale before the moral glories that apparel the universe in their celestial light. The heart can put on charms which no beauty of known things, nor imagination of unknown, can aspire to emulate. Virtue shines in native colors, purer and brighter than pearl, or diamond, or prism, can reflect. Arabian gardens in their bloom can exhale no such sweetness as charity diffuses. Beneficence is God-like, and he who does most good to his fellow-man is the master of masters, and has learned the art of arts.

Enrich and embellish the universe as you will, it is only a fit temple for the heart that loves truth with a supreme love. Inanimate vastness excites wonder; knowledge kindles admiration, but love enraptures the soul. Scientific truth is marvelous, but moral truth is divine, and whoever breathes its air, and walks by its light has found the lost paradise. For him a new heaven and a new earth have always been created. His home is the sanctuary of God, the holy of holies. And now, into this universe, so redundant in treasures for the body, in grandeur for the mind, and in happiness for the heart, man is born. He awakens into life, like Adam in the garden of Eden, and finds himself surrounded by a higher paradise than bloom and fruitage, than streams and bowering shades can create. He finds the earth a vast and perfect apparatus of means adapted and designed to minister to his enjoyment and to aggrandize his power. The globe, with all its dynamical energies, its mineral treasures, its vegetative powers, its fecundities of life, is only a grand and divinely wrought machine put into his hands.

DON'T STAND ON THE TRACK.—"The train," says a Railroad Gazette, may steal suddenly upon you, and then a little trepidation, a slight misstep, a slip of the foot, and we shudder to think of your crushed and bleeding body." So it is in the journey of life; perils are around you on every hand. But don't stand in their path and disregard them. Perhaps you now and then take a little intoxicating drink. My friend, if so, "you are standing on the track," while the cars of retribution come thundering on—moving in right line—approaching with steady and rapid wheels. Will it not bear down and crush you? Perhaps you spend an occasional evening with a party of friends, amusing yourself with cards or dice, staking small sums to make the game interesting. My friend, "you are standing on the track." Thousands have stood there and perished. Don't wait to hear the rattling of the rushing wheels, but fly from the track. At a safe distance stand and see the wreck which the ponderous train will spread before you. Look well to the ground on which you plant your feet, and forget not for these many days our parting words, "Don't stand on the track."

INDIANA STATE LIBRARY INDIANAPOLIS

TEMPERANCE CHART.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.
WM. HANNAMAN, C. E. BABB,
JAMES HALL, R. T. BROWN,
JOHN B. ABBETT.

WEDNESDAY, AUG. 10, 1853.

Notice.

The Eighth Annual Session of the Grand Division of the Sons of Temperance of the State of Indiana, will commence in Temperance Hall in the City of Indianapolis, on Tuesday, October 25, 1853, at 6 o'clock P. M. P. S. SAGE, G. W. P.

C. WOODWARD, G. S.

August 1, 1953.

Dillsboro--Compliments.

We have received a letter of thanks from this place, for our notices of the well doing of the brethren there. The brother who wrote the letter will pardon us for not publishing it; for although it is well written, it is altogether too complimentary to ourselves. It has been a principle with us, to be entirely selfish with such compliments as our friends from time to time have sent us, for our manner of conducting the Chart. We dislike exceedingly to share such savory morsels with the public, preferring much to feed our vanity with them in the closet.

Any communication from the brother on the state of the Order in his county, equally well written, and not spiced with his well-intended, but—we are sorry to feel—ill-deserved compliments, will be published with pleasure.

WHISKY MURDER.—Our officers it seems saw proper, on the evening of the 3d inst., to select from the numerous victims of our whisky smugglers and pirates, George Lingenfelter, as a proper subject for imprisonment. He was accordingly arrested and hurried off to jail. There he was left in the upper story, the trap-door conducting to the lower one being left open. This door, we are informed, weighs two hundred pounds. Well, just as might have been expected, the drunken man in his restlessness and the darkness of the room, fell through the trap; and in falling caught the door, drawing it to in time to catch his head just above the ears, and crush it to fragments killing him instantly. He hung thus by the head until the door was opened and then fell dead upon the floor below.

This case might afford a theme for many valuable reflections, but we have not the heart to make them. The death of the victim, the agony of his family, who are of the first respectability, are a sufficient justification for our drawing the mantle of silence over a scene that makes the heart of sensibility shudder and bleed at the bare thought.

It is but proper, however, that it should be known, that shortly before his arrest, the deceased was seen, in a state of partial intoxication, enter the SALOON OF A. W. FORD, UNDER THE "WRIGHT HOUSE," and when he came out, was observed to be still more deeply drunk. Thus the prime agent in this death—this murderous taking-off of a fellow-man—was the little man that grows fat in that miserable den. Let this record, then, remain against him—this blood fleck his skirts and conscience.

God of our fathers! is thy justice asleep? Why, then, do these miscreants continue to mar thy image, pollute thy sanctuary, destroy thy children, and stain with murder "most foul and unnatural" this beautiful green earth?

PUTNAM'S MONTHLY.—This Magazine for August has been laid upon our table Messrs. Cox & Mathes of the "Railroad City Bookstore," as usual brings us many good things. It is preferable in many respects to Harpers'; and especially on account of having no "Bleak House" wherein to cool its readers.

Be True.

No man can doubt that one of the worst evils that infest our country is the fear that prevents us from being outwardly what we are inwardly. But for this, the evils so prevalent in every nook and corner of the land, to remove which the good and true are laboring, would not remain an hour. Men seem to forget that it is just as easy to control the hearts and actions of others by doing and saying right things as wrong things. Nay, it is much easier; for the inclination of our nature is to the right, rather than to the wrong; to the true rather than the false; to the honorable than to the dishonorable. The unquestioning faith of childhood proves this truth. It is not till the lesson of deceit and falsehood is taught and learned, that the young mind acknowledges its influence, and reduces it to practice. How much better it remained forever untaught!

In respect to no one subject has fear done more to retard the wheels of progress, than in relation to Temperance.—The power of habit over the people; the power of prejudice—bantling of selfishness and ignorance—the power of the purse wielded by the whisky maker and vendor are known. These all act as a unit, and their power is felt by those upon whom they are brought to bear. This often makes Mammon more potent than the Lord, in controling men. It sits up in every man's own heart a shrine of idolatry before which his selfishness bows without feeling degraded, for it feeds that sentiment with its essential food. On the other hand, the true worship demands that selfishness be crucified and its altar destroyed; and upon their views sets up the altar of universal benevolence, demanding that all render it their homage. It is from this difference between the true and the false—the selfish and the benevolent, that, while those who love and follow after the latter are usually divided in their efforts and consequently weak, those who worship Mammon, knit together by the bonds of a common service, unitedly and powerfully strive for the attainments of its common rewards.

Now, there is no occasion for all this, if men were sufficiently enlightened to see that "self-love and social still are all the same." The end sought in both cases is happiness, but misguided selfishness seeks it, without consulting the happiness of others, while the benevolent attain by granting to others what themselves require from others. The laws of the individual and social codes are in perfect harmony; and he who seeks to conform to the one without respect to the other will forever fall short of both.

Among us as a people, however, the difficulty in attaining the true end, arises from the fact that we assume a part not properly ours; because we deem the character assumed will win us favor in the eyes of those whom we wish to please; because we look to them for what should properly be sought in ourselves. Americans all look for office, and seek to obtain it by conforming to the opinions of the masses; each unit of which is for himself, and for the same reason, acting out the same policy. Of course both the pattern and the imitator are much in the same condition. Neither presents the character proper to it. The people act an assumed part, and for the same reason that the units composing it do the same. Thus, the man who by conforming seeks to please is the eternal dupe of a deception, growing out an aggregate of just such characters as his own.

It is high time that the people should come to an understanding with its components. The mask that has been thrown over the face of both must be removed.—The individuality of each man must be held sacred; and then the natural and overpowering sentiment of the just, the true, the right, dwelling in the hearts of all true men, will bring all true men together for the suppression of the unjust, the false, the wrong. Then will the spirit of our institutions be felt as a living and mighty power for the accomplishment of good and the demolition of evil. Then will our country's government be known as the uplifter of the down-trodden and oppressed; and not as the pampering-mother of those who best succeed in metamorphosing their proper, true, and natural character into something repugnant to every just sentiment. Then will all the curses of selfishness, the cruelty of oppression, the murders and sorrows of dram-selling and dram-making be consigned to the tomb forever. Then will our county "Arise and shine, her light being come, and the glory of the Lord arisen upon her."

☞ The monster, Mewhinney, who killed his father in a drunken row near Terre Haute on the fourth of July, has been admitted to bail in the sum of seven hundred dollars. His portion of his father's estate will probably discharge the recognizance. It was Judge Kinney, whig, and not Governor Wright, who did this. Will the Temperance Chart notice this?—State Sentinel.

Aye, neighbor Brown, we will notice it. We have no disposition to pass over any thing of the sort, where we are satisfied our officers have violated the confidence reposed in them. If you will only give us any evidence showing, or tending to show, that Judge Kinney transcended the bounds of his authority or duty, even in the slightest degree, we are ready to give him a castigation, as severe as he deserves, and you may be judge yourself. But monster as Mewhinney unquestionably is, we know too much of the law, not to be aware that there may have been circumstances of palliation in his case that made it the duty of Judge Kinney to make the order complained of by the Sentinel. Untll we know something of these, we presume—and it is a presumption the law raises in behalf of the meanest criminal—one we would extend to the Sentinel Editor himself—that the Judge is innocent.

The case was different with Governor Wright. We showed that he violated the Constitution, a law of his own devising, and the rights of community by remitting large fines to different criminals; and thereby promised future indulgence to them and other violators of law, besides robbing the school fund of more than three thousand dollars. In one instance no less than one thousand dollars was thus lost to the little girls and boys of Indiana. Truly it comes with a bad grace from the Sentinel, to speak in favor of His Excellency as the friend of free schools. We respectfully ask Mr. Brown how it came to pass that the Governor overlooked the Constitution, law, and the rights of the people of Morgan county, so much as to remit that forfeiture of one thousand dollars? Was it because he had pledged himself to do so before the election, in order to secure the support of the culprit? Eh?

Truly, even a Catiline may control the State.

RUDOLPH HASS, M. D., LATE LECTURER ON EPIDEMICS IN THE UNIVERSITY OF VIENNA.—We have made the acquaintance of this gentleman, and are pleased with his manners and varied learning. His acquaintance with the liberal arts and sciences proves him a man of finely cultivated intellect; and his conversation, a man of natural good sense. He is an enthusiastic cultivator of physiology, and its relations to pathology. On this branch of his professional studies he has written his views, and published them in the "London Journal of Medicine," and from a careful perusal of his article on that subject, we are satisfied of his profound and thorough acquaintance with this fundamental branch of his profession.

A stranger among us—an exile from the land of his birth—driven hither because he loved his country and hated oppression, we hope he will meet a generous reception at the hands of his brethren of the profession, and the public at large.

RUSH MEDICAL COLLEGE, CHICAGO, ILLINOIS.—We have received the Annual Announcement of this School, which shows its condition to be healthy and prosperous. It has an able faculty and a goodly number of students. The generous kindness extended to us when one of its humblest scholars will not be forgotten; nor will we cease to wish it a long and prosperous career.

It is now firmly established, and will doubtless receive a liberal patronage from Western students.

Magnanimity is well enough defined by its name; nevertheless, we may say that it is the good sense of pride, and the most noble way of earning praise.

Temperance Mass Meeting in Jeffersonville.

A a large and enthusiastic meeting of the friends of Temperance, law, and order, convened pursuant to public notice, at the Preshyterian Church in the city of Jeffersonville, on Friday evening, July 29, the Rev. Mr. Chapman was called to the chair, and Dr. Talbot appointed secretary.

After prayer by the Rev. Mr. Bird, the chairman briefly stated the object of the meeting to be the consideration of the crisis that had now arrived, in relation to the execution of the new Temperance law in this city. It was remarked, that in nearly every county in the State where the vote of "no license" had been carried, those engaged in the liquor traffic had voluntarily abandoned the business, except in the city of Jeffersonville, where two or three American citizens, and a few foreigners, still continued the retail of ardent spirits, in open violation of the law, and in opposition to the expressed will of a large majority of the citizens. And, although the friends of law and order had furnished the proper authorities with evidence of the open and repeated violation of the said law, sufficient to have crushed at once and for ever these "sinks of iniquity," still they had been by some time-serving policy, permitted to escape almost entirely the penalties imposed by law upon its violation. This mass-meeting was therefore called to consider the emergency of the case, and adopt such measures as shall effectually close the traffic in our midst, and cause the laws to be enforced and respected.

Mr. McCalley, in behalf of the committee of twenty-five (especially charged with the execution of the law), presented the following preamble and resolutions, which being read seriatim, were discussed and adopted by acclamation:

WHEREAS the Indiana State Legislature of 1853, passed a law prohibiting the retailing of spirituous liquors in the townships where there should be a majority of the votes against license; And whereas, the citizens of Jeffersonville township, after having publicly and freely discussed the subject of Temperance, did, by a large majority, vote down license; And whereas, both in violation of the law, and in disregard of the known wishes of the citizens, certain persons are still continuing the business of retailing spirituous liquors, therefore

Resolved, That we regard the vote of the last April election as a sufficient index of the will and wish of a majority of the citizens, on the subject of retailing spirituous liquors.

Resolved, That while we regard the Temperance Law passed by our last Legislature as weak and powerless, so far as it respects a large portion of the evils of intemperance, yet we consider the provision of that law for the suppression of retailing spirituous liquors as amply restrictive, if public sentiment will sustain the officers in a rigid enforcement of its penalties; provided, also, that our judicial and ministerial officers faithfully and unflinchingly perform their duties.

Rssolved, That we will fairly test the power of the Temperance Law; and if found unconstitutional, or otherwise inefficient, we will ask for its repeal, and for the passage of another more effective.

Resolved, That we once more respectfully and earnestly request those now engaged in the liquor traffic in our midst, to cease retailing spirituous liquors among us; and we affectionately warn all such, that if this our appeal be longer disregarded, we are determined that the law shall be obeyed.

Resolved, That we regard our judicial officers as our agents, created by us, and clothed with powers to protect and elevate the morals of society; and that we intend to avail ourselves of all the provisions of the law to secure these desirable ends.

Resolved, That hereafter we intend to regard any officer who may be found compromising, in any way, the due execution of the Temperance laws, as totally unworthy of public trust.

Resolved, That it is the duty of every good citizen to promptly make known to the proper authorities every violation of the Temperance law that comes to his knowledge.

Resolved, That we regard the buying and selling of intoxicating liquors as inconsistent with the spirit of Christianity, placing in jeopardy the eternal as well as temporal interests of man; and that the traffic should therefore be promptly discountenanced by the Christian Church.

Resolved, That we regard the interests of Temperance and morality of infinitely more importance than the interest of any political party, or the elevation to power of any set of men; and henceforth we will not sacrifice on the altar of party politics, our social, moral, or religious obligations.

Resolved, That the influence of females is not only appropriate but indispensable to the ultimate triumph of the Temperance cause; and this meeting hereby affectionately request and solicit their co-operation.

On motion of the Rev. Dr. Field, the following resolutions, after a protracted discussion, were passed with great unanimity, viz.

Resolved, That we highly commend the efforts of the Temperance Committees—recommend them so to increase their exertions as to secure a rigid execution of our Temperance law; and we unanimously pledge ourselves to sustain them in the further discharge of the duties committed to them by the friends of Temperance.

Resolved, Further, that it is the opinion of this meeting, that the principal obstacle to the execution of the law against the retail of ardent spirits in this county, is the inefficiency of the Judge and Prosecuting Attorney of the Court of Common Pleas; and we have reason to suspect that this inefficiency is attributable to a disposition to favor the traffic. This meeting, therefore, would respectfully and earnestly request the officers aforesaid, that if they will not hereafter execute the law faithfully and fully, to resign and give the people an opportunity to place in office men who have both the nerve and the inclination to enforce the law.

Resolved, That there is a manifest want of integrity and moral principle in many of our civil officers, who serve their country more for the "loaves and fishes" than for the promotion of the welfare of the people. As the stream cannot rise higher than the fountain, neither can justice be dispensed and righteousness promoted, by men who are in heart and practice immoral and corrupt.

Resolved, That it is the duty of the honest and virtuous portions of the people to sacrifice their partialities and party predilections, for the sake of the great principle, "that righteousness exalteth a nation," and so unite on all questions involving the morality and the peace of community; and thereby make common cause against the hypocritical and licentious demagogues, who seek to obtain office on the score of mere party names and worthless political hobbies.

Resolved, That the people have the same right to make laws for the suppression of dram-shops that they have to suppress gambling and other kindred vices; and we hereby pledge ourselves, solemnly and resolutely, to maintain our opposition to one and all of these abominable and disgraceful practices, until victory shall crown our exertions, and virtue forever triumph over vice.

Resolved, That when this meeting adjourn, it will meet in two weeks at the Baptist Church, and semi-monthly thereafter, until our efforts are crowned with victory, and that all friends of law and order are earnestly invited to be present and participate in future meetings.

Resolved, That the Secretary of this meeting furnish a copy of these proceedings for publication in the "Jeffersonville Times," "Temperance Chart," Indianapolis, and all Louisville papers.

Adjourned.

R. M. CHAPMAN, Chairman.
D. L. TALBOT, Secretary.

MAN AND WOMAN.—Between male and female there is difference of kind only, not degree. Man is strong, woman is beautiful; man is daring and confident, woman is diffident and unassuming; man is great in action, woman in suffering; man shines abroad, woman at home; man talks to convince, woman to persuade; man has a rugged heart, woman a soft and tender one; man prevents misery, woman relieves it; man has science, woman taste; man has judgment, woman sensibility; man is a being of justice, woman an angel of mercy. These comparative characteristics represent man as the head, woman as the heart; or, man the intellect, woman the affection. And in so doing, we submit that no position derogatory to woman is involved therein. We are, as a simple fact, more influenced by our hearts than our heads—by our love than our conviction. While physical and mental endowments make a forcible appeal to the senses, yet it is susceptible of experimental proof that moral power really controls and decides the fate of the world; and as it is in this latter particular that woman pre-eminently shines, we should contend, so far from her being man's inferior, that she is, at present at least, his decided superior. With this view of their relative position before us, we shall be the better able to definitely calculate the value of the sexes to each other.

WOULDN'T TRY TO HINDER PROVIDENCE.—A blacksmith in Erie county was requested by a wealthy distiller, to put up a lightning rod on his distillery. The honest son of Vulcan instantly refused, remarking to the whisky maker, "If it is the Lord's will to send a streak of lightning through your distillery, I will not do any thing to avert it." The blacksmith is a member of the Ohio Legislature.

Items of News.

FOREIGN.—Mobs are frequent in New Granada, and are due to an ill feeling on the part of the mobocrats against the more intelligent citizens of that Republic. A serious one occurred on the 8th ult. Assassinations are connived at by the General Government; and all things are in rather an unquiet condition.

The latest accounts from Australia bring little or no news from the mines. The rulers are devising methods to prevent squatters from working the mines. The lands are to be taken from such by the verdict of a jury, much as lands are condemned for rail-road purposes with us; and no land to be sold until carefully surveyed and found not to contain gold, when it may be sold in lots for farms. Should gold then be found upon it, the owner is to be allowed to work his mines on paying for a license.

The "Aspinwall Courier" is the name of a new paper, published at Aspinwall on the Isthmus. It has this appropriate motto:—

"Lo! on a narrow neck of land,
Between two unbounded seas I stand."

The news from Chili indicates that that country is increasing in prosperity. The President strongly recommends educational measures to Congress in his Message to that body, which opened its session on the 1st of June.

Bolivia is in a very unsettled state at present. The post-office is no longer a safe medium for the conveyance of letters, as the officials are in the habit of breaking them open and reading them.

The dispute between Peru and Bolivia remains unsettled. Peru has taken the town of Cobija.

DOMESTIC.—The mail steamer Georgia, on Friday, July 29th, arrived at New York from California, bringing the mails, and $1,600,000 in gold.

The people of New Mexico protest against the intention of the United States Government to locate the Indians of California within the Territory of New Mexico. They are right.

Crops are reported good in Texas.

Governor Letcher has been beaten in the Lexington District, Kentucky, by Breckenridge. So the young succeed their seniors in the confidence of the people.

Intolerance.

With all the freedom we enjoy, there still exists no small portion of intolerance, even in our own country. Time is indeed evidently wearing it away. Men and women are no longer scourged and tortured for opinion's sake. Men now-a-days, in most countries, are not imprisoned or banished, or executed, for moderately expressing their opinions of governments. But all these are rather improvements in the degrees of punishment inflicted for freedom of opinion. The penalties for opinions not corresponding to those of our neighbors or countrymen, in general, are contempt, social interdiction and loss of patronage and every chance of promotion, and a certainty of failure in any attempt to instruct mankind and establish truths. Even in our own country every man must think or pretend to think with one or the other of the political factions which exist. He must see, or feign to see, no imperfections in his own party, and no correct views in the opposite faction. If of one religious sect, he must become blind to its short-comings, as well as to all merit in others, or he is shunned as a heretic and treated with less tolerance than even an infidel. He may honestly avow his belief in the main doctrine of the sect to which he is attached—but the least deviation from the most minute dogma will render him not only suspected but not unfrequently an object of absolute abhorrence. A very little sober reflection will convince any one of the truth of these remarks, without illustration. It may not, however, be improper to refer to what is called the orthodox churches, and some of the extreme deviations from their fundamental doctrines. For example, those who believe in the Trinity and others in the Unity, those who have no doubts of the perpetuity of punishment, and others who think retribution belongs to this life exclusively. Now these extreme sects are comparatively few in number. They, therefore, are without the safeguards of others. They are set down intolerantly, as unworthy of association or confidence. They are subjected in fact to a species of persecution often not less intolerable to be borne than stripes and thumb-screws.

As candidates for offices their chance of success is diminished, not in proportion to their deficiency of moral character, but of received orthodoxy. They are assailed by the tongue of slander, without the safeguard of public opinion in their favor. They are often denied ordinary social privileges, and their misfortunes, instead of awaking sympathy and charity, are attributed to Divine vengeance on account of their wicked opinions. What a strange deviation all this, from the mild precepts of the Gospel—how inconsistent with that charity which so well becomes true Christians. In this, as in many other things, there appears to be in mankind an innate principle of tyranny. Our indignation is aroused at once if any one questions our right to the enjoyment of our religious opinions—but we reluctantly suffer others to enjoy theirs. In this respect we forget the golden rule. It is our right as well as our duty to endeavor, in the spirit of kindness to convince others of error, especially in this all-important matter of religion—but it is radically wrong to condemn any one for their opinions honestly entertained. People are seldom convinced of error by an arrogant assumption of superiority, or by those easily excited to passion.—Merchant's Ledger.

Persecution is always wrong, and any ill will or prejudice toward others on account of a difference of opinion is also wrong. A man has no right to set himself up as a judge over his brother and condemn him even for a character different from his own, nor to indulge in bitterness towards others under any circumstances. But it is right for us, on all proper occasions, to declare that which we believe to be truth and condemn what we believe to be error; and wherein we regard others as wrong, to the injury of their own interests or those of society, we should discountenance their errors, and endeavor, in a spirit of meekness, to reform them. And especially is this true in matters of religion. It is our business to try to advance the cause of truth, for the sake of Him who gave it, for its own sake, and for that of society. Let error be met in a proper spirit, and the war should never cease. Destroy it, but avoid, if possible, injuring them who are under its influence. In a word, possess and exhibit the spirit of Christ—who though the personification of meekness and gentleness, was zealous for the truth—and carry out all the principles and precepts of Christianity, and all will be well.

From Lloyd's London Weekly Newspaper.

The Gin Glass versus the Crystal Palace.

An instructive debate took place on Wednesday, in the matter of the Public-houses (Scotland) Bill. Mr. Hume, in his old sagacious fashion, condemned all peddling legislation as a means of enforced sobriety on the people of Scotland, or of any other nation soever. Educate the people, said he, and the people will renounce the abomination of drunkenness; and the fiend was fast triumphing throughout the length and breadth of Scotland. Mr. John M'Gregor testified to the truth of the deplorable domination of the schorching, maddening, demon, whiskey. Indeed, Glasgow, to be typically represented, might send to Parliament a whiskey cask. "Sunday," said the hon. member, "instead of being a day of sobriety in Scotland, was a day of drunkenness." And wherefore, we ask? Because in Scotland is preached a grim, cold, uncharitable observance of the Sabbath. Sackcloth and ashes is your only wear, cry the ascetics of Scotland; and the people in solitude and darkness revenge themselves of their own hypocrisy by getting drunk—filthily drunk. "In Glasgow alone," said Mr. Drummond, "30,000 persons every Saturday night steeped themselves in whiskey and opium, and lay in a perfect state of insensibility until Monday morning."—Thus, their best observance of the Sabbath is beastly oblivion of the Sabbath.

A few days ago it was shown in the Scotsman, Edinburgh paper,—shown from statistics, that Edinburgh and Glasgow are five times more drunken than London. In Edinburgh, each year, one inhabitant in eighteen, and in London only one in one hundred and six, is taken up for drunkenness; and the greater share of this drunkenness in Edinburgh is due to Sunday. And with this damning fact staring in the unabashed face of the Lord Provost, he has the wisdom and decency, and the peculiar sanctimoniousness, to head an agitation against the opening of the Crystal Palace in London on Sundays. He, good man, has such a tenderness towards the well-doing of our immortal souls, has such an interest in the pious observance of our cockney Sabbaths, that he, a citizen of the city where one in eighteen is a convicted drunkard, would elect himself a master of the melancholy revels for Londoners, who, every hundred and six, are disgraced by only one tippler. If it were a question to give to the Crystal Palace a monopoly of the sale of Sabbath gin and whiskey, then might the Lord Provost of Edinburgh be a useful authority, a guide and friend; indeed, one compartment of the Crystal tippling-house might, for a sign complimentary to his wisdom, bear the Lord Provost's Head. He may be an unquestionable authority on Scotch Sabbath drunkenness, but what knows he of English Sabbath temperance? A Highlander may be a capital judge of the relative strength of whiskey, but where did get a critical opinion of knee-buckles?

The excelling power of drunkenness of the Scoteh, especially on Sundays, is the natural result of the excelling power of cant in that Sabbath-darkened land: we say Sabbath-darkened: for, as the most innocent, the most healthful recreations on the Sunday are preached and doomed as so many deadly sins; as even a Sunday walk is counted as so many steps toward perdition,—so do the people sot on the seventh day in secresy and solitude. The Scotch Church says to the people, "You shall eat your Sabbath bread sprinkled thick with ashes." "Very well," answer the people; "at least, then, we will wash our mouths clean of the abomination with Sabbath whiskey." Sabbath railway trains may not run on Scotch lines. No matter; whole rivers of soul-and-body blasting whiskey shall run in Scottish bowels.

Very comforting must it be to the anxious, the enlightened opponents of the Sabbath Crystal Palace, to contemplate the results of Scotch Sabbath holiness.—Come forth, Archdeacon Haile—advance, Doctor Croly! You, Doctor Croly, with the far-seeing imagination of the poet, can penetrate the darkness of Glasgow abodes, and at once behold the thirty thousand brutified drunkards. It is a sweet sight, is it not? There they are, in worse than bestial darkness. Now, how dreadful would it be to be truly pious, how solely trying to the pluralist Haile, to behold these thirty thousand senseless wretches—many of them snoring their Sabbath praise—all wide awake and out amidst the abominations of the Crystal Palace; beholding in the bloom of palace rose-gardens only the faintest reflex of the everlasting fire, and contemplating in many sparkling fountains the burning waters of the damned. No; at least the thirty thousand—with but few shameless exceptions—have the piety to get drunk in secresy—and hiding, as closely as they may, their beastliness, show in their hypocrisy, their reverence of the Church, and their respect for true religion.

The opening of the Crystal Palace on the Sunday will, in due time, be discussed in Parliament. Let pious senators think of the thirty thousand Glasgow drunkards; of the miserable crowd that, banned of innocent Sabbath recreation, betake themselves to Sabbath debauch. We, too, in London, have our Sunday haunts for mere drink. We have our tea gardens and our Copenhagen fields. "So let them be," say licensing magistrates, some of them moreover reverend authorities, "so let them be. Let the mechanic steep his morals in gin-and-water, and, puffing his tobacco, let him in tobacco clouds contemplate the vanity and brevity of human life. This, if not so good as it might be for his soul and body, is any way good for the publican. Now the path of the Sunday Crystal Palace is the way to perdition; and we therefore entreat Parliament in its wisdom to keep a lion—yea, a roaring statute—in the way." Why not? the Red Lion—nay, the White Lion—is open, hospital. What need of the Sabbath Crystal Palace, when without stint you can have the Sabbath glass of gin—the glass that, like Banquo's "shows you many more?"

PUBLIC DINNERS.—Public dinners are public nuisances—flagrantly so. They are a relic of outgrown barbarism which esteems eating and drinking the chief ends of life. It is every way unworthy of our age to honor, reward, or show admiration for a public benefactor by feasting him, even when (as at Boston) intoxicating liquors are excluded. But an ordinary public dinner, "with a stick in it," is essentially a beastial performance. Two or three hundred people are assembled to eat an inordinate meal, at an unusual and unseasonable hour, paying for it a sum that many of them cannot really afford, and washing it down with incessant libations of villainously drugged cider and cockroach Madeira, which gets steadily worse as the company get more and more enthusiastically and obliviously drunk—then the speeches, beginning with the prosy and foggy, and ending somewhere in the infancy of the small hours, with the tipsy and the nasty—then the leathery cloud of cigar smoke which for the last hour or two, is battened down upon the whole concern, afflicting, torturing, demoralizing all well-bred, cleanly, uncorrupted senses—and ah! the sick head aches, the days of misery, and often the fatal illnesses that follow, as Death on the Pale Horse was followed—on the whole, we consider the public dinner the absurdest, stupidest bore of the nineteenth century.—H. Greeley.

We always love those who admire us, and we do not always love those whom we admire.

"Let me die quietly."

"Be still—make no noise—let me die quietly."—Vice President King.

"Be still!" The hour of the soul's departure is at hand; Earth is fading from its vision; Time is gliding from its vision; Time is gliding from its presence! Hopes that cluster around young life, that swell in the heart of manhood, have fallen from around it, like the forest leaves, when the frosts of autumn have chilled them unto death. Ambition, with its hollow promises, and pride, with its lofty look, have vanished away. The world, with its deceitfulness, pleasure, with its gilded temptations, are gone, and alone, in utter destitution of all that time promised, it must start on its solitary journey across the valley of the shadow of death!

"Make no noise!" Let the tumult of life cease. Let no sound break the soul's communion with itself ere it starts on its returnless flight. Trouble it not with the accents of sorrow. Let the tear stand still on the cheek of affliction, and let not the wailing of grief break the solemn silence of the death scene. Let it gather the accents that come from within the dark shadows of eternity, saying to it, come home. The whispering of angels are in its ear; obstruct not their silvery voices by grosser sounds. A far-off music comes floating to it by the air. 'Tis the sound of the heavenly harps touched by the viewless fingers—mar not the harmony by the discords of earth.

"Let me die quietly!" The commotions of life, the struggles of ambition, the strife and warring with human destiny, are over. Wealth accumulated must be scattered; honors won must be resigned, and all the triumphs that come within the range of human achievement be thrown away. The past, with its trials, its transgressions, its accumulating responsibilities, its clinging memories, its vanished hopes, its rendering up to the future its long account; disturb not the quiet of that awful reckoning. Speak not of fading memories, or affections whose objects perish in their loveliness, like the flowers of spring, or wither in slow decay. Talk not of an earthly home where loved ones linger, where a seat will soon be vacant, a cherished voice hushed forever, or of the desolation that will seat itself by the hearthstone. The soul is at peace with God, let it pass calmly away. Heaven is opening upon its vision. The bright turrets, the tall spires, the lofty domes of the Eternal City, are emerging from the spectral darkness, and the glory of the Most High is dawning around them. The White Throne is glistening in the distance, and the white-robed angels are beckoning the weary spirit to its everlasting home. What is life that it should be clung to longer? What the joys of the world, that they should be regretted? What has earth to place before the spirit of a man, to tempt its stay, or turn it from its eternal rest.—Albany Register.

LOAFERS.—We ransack our vocabulary in vain to find words to express our abhorrence of a "loafer." Amid the stirring, active scenes of this laboring world, they still loaf about with nothing to do. Ah, no! they do something. They hang about fashionable saloons, seeking for prey. The moment the young mechanic has left the shop, where he has done honor to himself and friends, he is seized by the button-hole by these lurking wolves, and enticed to spend a pleasant hour in some fashionable game, and it may be that at the very moment when the evening prayer of a fond mother is ascending to Heaven for the protection of her son, these destroyers of fond hopes are chuckling over their new victims. O ye pests of society, how can ye escape the damnation of hell!

☞ The "State of Matrimony" has at last been bounded and described by some out West Student, who says:

It is one of the United States. It is bounded by hugging and kissing on one side, and cradles and babies on the other. Its chief productions are population, broomsticks, and staying out late o' nights. It was discovered by Adam and Eve, while trying to find a northwest passage out of Paradise. The climate is sultry till you pass the tropics of house-keeping, when squally weather sets in with such power as to keep all hands as cool as cucumbers. For the principal roads leading to this interesting State consult the first pair of blue eyes you run against.

Lines by an Old Fogy.

I'm thankful that the sun and moon
Are both hung up so high,
That no presumptuous hand can stretch
And pull them from the sky.
If they were not, I have no doubt
But some reforming ass
Would recommend to take them down,
And light the world with gas!

It is not so much fertility of invention which presents us with several expedients for attaining the same object, as it is want of intelligence which causes us to hesitate at every thing which presents itself to the imagination, and prevents our discerning at a glance which is the best.

Moral Reflections, Sentences, and Maxims.

It is impossible to love a second time what we have once really ceased to love.

There are certain affairs and diseases, the remedies of which only aggravate them at particular times; and great ability consists in knowing when it is dangerous to apply these remedies.

Affected simplicity is a refined imposture.

There are more faults in the humor than in the mind.

The merit of men has its season, as fruits have.

It may be said of men's humors as of many buildings, that they have divers aspects—some agreeable, others disagreeable.

Moderation cannot have the credit of combating and subduing ambition—they are never found together. Moderation is the languor and indolence of the soul, as ambition is its activity and ardor.

It is difficult to love those whom we do not esteem; but it is not less so to love those whom we esteem more than ourselves.

The humors of the body have a stated and regular course, which impels and imperceptibly guides our will. They cooperate with each other, and exercise successively a secret empire within us: so that they have a considerable part in all our actions, without our being able to know it.

Gratitude in the generality of men is only a strong and secret desire of receiving greater favors.

$25 Premium.

The undersigned Committee on the state of the Order of the Grand Section of Cadets of Temperance of Indiana, offer the above premium for the most acceptable Initiatory ceremony for Cadets of Temperance. Competitors for the same to be members of some Temperance organization.

All manuscripts to be forwarded to Henry Ohr, G. S., on or before the 20th day of October next.

THEOPHILUS ROBINSON,
H. C. NEWCOMB,
HENRY OHR, } Com.

Indianapolis, Aug. 6th, 1853.

Torchlight and Indiana Cadet please copy.

Acknowledgments.

J. Peterman, Versailles, 1.00, T. W. Reece, Windsor, 1.00; Isaac Underwood, Pennville, 8.00; O. B. Boone, Montpelier, 2.00; Mr. Dinnilt, West Point, 4.00; J. M. Coyner, Waveland, 8.25; Jno. Thompson, Washington, 3.00; E. M. Cook, Richmond, 4.00; D. M. Scott, Alexandria, 5.00; P. S. Sage, Allensville, 1.00; J. Deinint, Dayton, 4.00; A. Robertson, Newbury, 1.50; N. Teal, Ligonier, 3.00; A. W. Bullock, Vernon, 3.00; Jno. May, Winchester, 5.00; T. Riddle, Gnilford, 1.50; George McCulloch, Jacksonville, 16.00; B. F. Duncan, Greenfield, 3.00; W. W. Taylor, Raysville, 6.00; C. Tuttle, Attica, 1.00; Z. Loyd, 1.00; D. C. Palmer, Frankfort, 1.00; J. T. Bullock, Shelbyville, 3.00; Jno. Jacobs, Columbus, 75: A. S. Layton, Moscow, 5.00; W. Berbage, Milan, 13.00; W. P. Clarke, Dnblin, 3.00; S. Solman, Lafayette, 2.25; R. Sischo, Waveland, 1.00 A. Bond. Macksville, 1.00; Geo. Lowe, Eagle Village, 1.00; M. James, Carthage, 1.00; J. Gerver, Springfield Mills, 5.00; P. W. McFatridge, Hannegan, 6.00.

Call for a State Temperance Convention.

A State Temperance Convention will be held at Madison, Jefferson county, Indiana, beginning on the 28th of September next, and continuing as long as it may determine.

JOHN A. MCCLUNG,
WM. WILSON,
JOHN C. STEELE,
JOHN O'KANE,
WILLIAM HANNAMAN,
CHARLES WOODWARD,
J. W. GORDON, } State Central Committee.

CONSTITUTION AND BY-LAWS,

WE are still prepared to print Constitution and By-Laws, where the alterations are few from the copy recommended by the Grand Division, at the following rates:

100 copies, (or less)	....	$5 00
200 "	.....	8 00
300 "	.....	10 00

We will pay the postage on all ordered from us.

☞ All orders accompanied by the cash, will be promptly attended to.

Address, JOHN H. OHR,
Indianapolis, Indiana.

CHARTERS.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR A DIVISION S. OF T.

(Date.)

The undersigned inhabitants of ——, believing the Order of the Sons of Temperance to be well calculated to extend the blessings of total abstinence, and promote the general welfare of mankind, respectfully petition the Grand Division of the —— of ——, to grant them a Charter to open a new Division, to be called the —— Division, No. —, Sons of Temperance, of the —— of ——, to be located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves, individually and collectively, to be governed by the rules and usages of said Grand Division, and also, by those of the National Division.

Enclosed is the Charter Fee, $5 00. Books, $2 00.

This must be signed by at least eight persons of good character and standing in community, and sent to C. WOODWARD, G. S., Indianapolis, Ind., free of postage.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR A TEMPLE.

(Date.)

The undersigned, believing the Temple of Honor to be well calculated to cement more firmly our fraternal relations, and add to the general prosperity of the cause of Temperance, respectfully petition the Grand Temple of the —— of ——, to grant them a Charter to open a new Temple, to be called the —— Temple of Honor, No. —, of the —— of ——, to be located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves individually and collectively, to be governed by the rules and usages of the Grand Temple, and also by those of the Order at large.

Enclosed is the Charter Fee, $20 00.

To be directed to the G. W. R., free of postage.

This must be signed by at least twenty persons of good standing, and if not known to the G. W. T. or G. W. R., must send satisfactory references.

J. H. OHR, G. W. R.

Indianapolis, Ind.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR CADETS OF TEMPERANCE.

The undersigned, boys of ——, believing the Order of Cadets of Temperance to be well calculated to extend the blessings of total abstinence, and promote the general welfare of mankind, respectfully petition the Grand Section of the State of Indiana, to grant them a charter to open a new Section, to be called the —— Section, No. ——, Cadets of Temperance, of the State of Indiana, to be located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves, individually and collectively, to be governed by the rules and usages of said Grand Section, and also those of the acting Head of the Order.

Enclosed is the fee for Charter, R. B.'s and officers' cards, $5 00.

It must also be stated whether the applicants are members of the Order or not; if they are, of what Section. The application to be directed to the Grand Secretary, free of postage.

It must also be certified by a W. P. or P. W. P, that the W. Patron elect is a Son of Temperance in good standing.

Address (post paid) HENRY OHR, G. S., C. o T., Indianapolis, Indiana.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR DAUGHTERS OF TEMPERANCE.

(Date.)

The undersigned, inhabitants of ——, believing the Order of the Daughters of Temperance to be well calculated to extend the blessings of Total Abstinence, and promote the general welfare of mankind, respectfully petition the Grand Union to grant them a charter to open a new Union to be called the —— Union, No. —, D. of T., of the State of Indiana, located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves, individually and collectively, to be governed by the rules and usages of said Grand Union.

Enclosed is the Charter Fee, $5 00.

The above must be signed by at least eleven females, of proper age and good standing in community.

Address (post paid,) Mrs. ELIZA RICHMOND, G. S. S., Indianapolis, Indiana.

New Watch and Jewelry Store.

No 1, Bates House, Washington Street,

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

WE have now open the largest and best assortment of fine Watches and rich Jewelry ever offered in this city, to which we invite the examination of the public.

Our stock is all new—selected with great care, and comprises Watches, Diamond Work, Chains, Pins, Rings, Pencils, Lockets, of all kinds; Silver Ware, Clocks, Perfumery, Brushes, Soaps, Plated Ware, Castors, Fruit Baskets, &c., which we will sell for CASH at New York prices. Mr. E. W. NEFF, of this city, has taken charge of the Watch repairing department, and will spare no pains to give satisfaction to our customers.

july 6-tf E J. BALDWIN & CO.

D. CRAIGHEAD. R. BROWNING.

CRAIGHEAD & BROWNING,

Dealers in all kinds of

Drugs, Medicines, Surgical Instruments, Paints, Oils, Chemicals, Varnishes, Dye Stuffs, Glassware Window Glass, Brushes, Cosmetics, Spices, Cigars, Tobacco, Perfumery, &c.,

WASHINGTON STREET,

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

ALL are respectfully invited to call and examine our stock and prices, as we feel confident we can render satisfaction both as to prices and quality of articles. Great care is taken in the selection of articles, in reference to their purity, as we endeavor at all times to keep such articles as are strictly pure and genuine. Every article will be waranted as represented. Orders from Physicians and others promptly attended to. Particular attention given to filling Prescriptions and compounding Medicines, which, in all cases, shall receive the personal attention of one of the firm. june 30

HANNAMAN & DUZAN,

DEALERS IN

DRUGS AND MEDICINES,

Surgical Instruments, Paints, Oils, Varnishes, Dye Woods, Medical and Window Glass, Brushes, Perfumery, Soaps, &c.

Washington, 3 doors west of Pennsylvania St.,

june 30 1y INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

W. W. ROBERTS,

Druggist and Apothecary.

Wholesale and Retail Dealer in

DRUGS, MEDICINES, PAINTS, OILS, AND DYE STUFFS, BRUSHES, FANCY GOODS, AMERICAN AND FRENCH WINDOW GLASS, &c.

WASHINGTON ST., INDIANAPOLIS.

Physicians, Country Merchants, and the people generally, are invited to examine his stock, which will be sold at the lowest cash price.

☞ QUALITY WARRANTED TO SUIT. ☜

june 22 4m

COMMERCIAL COLLEGE,

(Late Commercial Institute,)

Of Indianapolis,

Established March 31, 1851.

INCORPORATED, 1853.

W. McK. SCOTT, A. M., Founder and President.

JAMES C. HAYDEN, (Late Professor in Bacon's Mercantile College, Cincinnati,)

PROF. OF BOOK-KEEPING AND PENMANSHIP.

THE Session will commence at College Hall as follows:

1st Session on the first Monday of September.
2d Session on the 1st Monday of November.
3d Session on the 1st Monday of January.
4th Session on the 1st Monday of March.
5th Session on the 1st Monday of May.

Having secured, permanently, the services of the distinguished Professor above named, and leased for a term of years the commodious and beautiful Hall formerly known as CONCERT HALL, but now named COLLEGE HALL, which is to be fitted up in a style of great elegance, taste, and convenience, the President would say, that this College now offers advantages superior to all others, for imparting a sound, thorough, and accomplished business education

COURSE OF STUDIES.

The Course of Studies, as enlarged, will be as follows, viz:

1 Book-Keeping, by Single and Double Entry, in all its various branches, and its application to all kinds of business.
2. The Laws, Customs, and Usages of Trade and Commerce.
3. Mercantile Arithmetic, upon the short and easy system of cancelation, (taught in no other College.)
4. Commercial Law, in a series of Lectures, thorough and systematic.
5. Business Penmanship.
6. Commercial Correspondence.
7. Lectures upon Banking, Political Economy, and other subjects valuble to the business man.

EXPENSES.

Cards of Admission, invariably in advance, or secured, $25; Diplomas $3; Stationery $5; Boarding $2 50 per week; incidentals, at option of student, $15. Making entire expenses about $75.

On application, a Catalogue will be furnished, giving full particulars.

All letters will receive prompt attention on being directed, post-paid, to

june 8 W. McK. SCOTT, President.

"God never made his works for man to mend." DR. FRANKLIN.

KIER'S ROCK OIL.

A NEW AND MOST IMPORTANT REMEDY FOR DISEASE.

DISCOVERED IN 1849.

IS drawn from a deep well near Pittsburgh—has been used with remarkable success in Ohio and Pennsylvania, and more Eastern States—and is now working its way West. An opportunity is now offered to the Afflicted for testing it. Where known and tried, it at once makes firm friends, and cures which are eloquent in its praise. Certificates of its power to heal are at hand—but we know well, reader, that such evidence, to have weight with you, now-a-days, must be in your own neighborhood.—You have only to try the Oil to be satisfied—it will SPEAK FOR ITSELF.

We have no war with the legion of Nostrums and Specifics of the day—we know but little about them—some say they are good for nothing. However that may be, the

Petroleum

will not be suppressed and kept back by reason of the above nostrums—duty and inclination both forbid it.

Those who are afflicted, are respectfully invited to get a Circular and look over the Directions for

Ague, Rheumatism, Piles, Diarrhœa, Flux, Tooth Ache, Burns, Worms, Scrofula, Coughs, Bronchitis, Croup, Old Sores, Cholera Morbus, Contractions of the Limbs and Joints, Sore Eyes, Blindness, Costiveness, Dyspepsia, and other Diseases.

By that time you may say, "it cures too much." But recollect it is not a HUMAN INVENTION, but compounded by Nature's master hand—and Nature does not do her work by halves.

The Oil is used both internally and externally.

As AGUE, SORE EYES, PILES, RHEUMATISM, and SCROFULA are so common in many parts of the West, we are constrained to say, that while this Oil will cure and relieve other diseases, it has been and is constantly used with most complete success in these cases.

☞ Price 50 cents per Bottle (half pint.)

Beware of all Rock Oil preparations, as some persons are offering a spurious article. Look for S. M. KIER'S name written on the label of the bottle.

For sale by the Druggists throughout Indiana, and by TOMLINSON BROTHERS, J P. POPE & Co., S. ROSENGARTEN, WM. TILLEY, and at wholesale by W. W. ROBERTS, Indianapolis, Indiana.

R. M. LYON, Fort Wayne,

may25 10w Proprietor in the Western States.

SOMETHING NEW.

LATHROP & STEVENS, Wholesale and Retail Dealers in BOOTS AND SHOES, at the West room in the Bates House, Washington Street, Indianapolis.

We are now opening a new and splendid stock of Boots and Shoes of every variety and style, which we are receiving direct from the manufacturers.—We design to keep constantly on hand a good assortment of the best quality of goods manufactured, which we can warrant to give satisfaction to all who may give them a trial. We will sell by the case, dozen, or single pair, at low prices for cash.—Our stock consists in part of Gents' fine Cloth, silk warp, glove kid, buck, patent calf, and enameled Gaiters and Ties of every variety and style; Ladies' fine silk warp Gaiters, Buskins, Ties, Slippers and Boots; Misses' ditto; Men's calf, goat, kip, and thick Boots and Brogans; Boys' and Youths' ditto; assorted Ladies, kid, goat and calf Boots and Buskins; Misses' ditto. Also every variety of Children's Shoes. Come and see for yourselves.

LATHROP & STEVENS,

may 25 4w Indianapolis, Indiana.

TEMPERANCE INN,

Bloomington, Indiana.

J. & S. M. ORCHARD, PROPRIETORS.

TRAVELLERS will find it to their advantage to call and try the accommodation of the TEMPERANCE INN. Stage office for all the different routes, in connection with this House. may25 6m ¶

THE LATEST WONDER of the 19th CENTURY.

DR. G. W. BENNETT'S

Celebrated Eye-Balm.

A SPECIFIC FOR CHRONIC, SORE, INFLAMED, AND WEAK EYES.

Prepared only by Dr. George W. Bennett, and for sale by Merchants and Druggists generally.

THIS Balm is an excellent and certain cure for sore and inflamed Eyes, in all cases of Psoroic, Scrofulous, and Purulent Opthalmia, and what is commonly termed wild hairs in the eye-lids. It is a specific in Infantile. Purulent, and Scrofulous Inflamed, and Sore Eyes, and all in the various diseases of the Eyes, that prevail among the human family, in every climate. It will be found a sovereign remedy if properly applied.

W. W. ROBERTS, Indianapolis, Ind. General Agent for State of Indiana, to whom all orders must be addressed

Price---Twenty-five Cents.

I warrant the above Balm to cure if the directions are strictly observed, or return the money.

june 22 4m G. W. BENNETT.

REAL ESTATE AND GENERAL AGENCY OFFICE,

INDIANAPOLIS, INDIANA.

UNDER THE CONTROL OF W. M'K. SCOTT, Attorney & Counsellor at Law, and Notary Public.

The attention of the Agency will be devoted,

First—To the collection of debts and the payment of Taxes for non-residents in any county in the State. Also, the redemption of Lands sold for Taxes, sale, purchase or lease of Lands, purchase of adverse claims, examination and perfection of Title, &c., &c.

Second—To the prosecution of claims against the General Government, procuring Land Warrants, Patent Rights, and Pensions under the various Pension Laws, &c.

Third—All other Miscellaneous agencies as may be intrusted to the care of this office.

Fourth—The taking of Depositions and Attestation of all instruments requiring a seal

In all cases requiring an outlay of money for the benefit of individuals, the requisite funds must be transmitted in advance.

Prompt attention to all letters on business that are pre-paid. Address W. M'K. SCOTT,

Real Estate and General Agent,

jan 5-1y Indianapolis, Ind.

ADAMS & CO'S EXPRESS.

WE are now running a daily line East and West, accompanied by special messengers, and with the speed of the mails, running our own cars with the passenger trains.

Packages will be received at the cars up to the time of starting, and at our office until 1 o'clock each day.

We are prepared to transport packages, bank notes and specie, to and from any of the eastern cities, also, Louisville, Frankfort, and Lexington, Ky., St. Louis, Mo., or any points on the Ohio and Mississippi rivers; and to and from Terre Haute, and all intermediate points, and to forward freight from Terre Haute up and down the Wabash.

In addition to these, we have the most complete arrangements for transporting packages to and from California and Europe.

Exchange on England, Ireland, and Scotland, for sale, payable at any bank in the kingdom.

Foreign passage tickets; by Grinnell, Minturn & Co.'s line to Liverpool and London, constantly on hand, and for sale at the lowest rates.

Notes, drafts, and bills collected in any of the Eastern or Western cities.

Orders for goods to be returned by Express, sent free. Our rates of charges have been greatly reduced, and the public will find this a safe and expeditious method of transportation.

Indianapolis, June 30, 1852. ADAMS & CO.

Office in Indianapolis in Journal Building, west side Pennsylvania Street.

Office open during business hours.

june30 1y C. WOODWARD, Agent.

The Cheapest Illustrated Paper for the Young.

PRICE ONLY TEN CENTS A YEAR, or nearly three papers for one cent, where 100 copies are taken.

Twenty-six numbers a year. and each number illustrated with from three to seven engravings.

The Youth's Penny Gazette,

A strictly Religious and Moral Paper, is published by the AMERICAN SUNDAY SCHOOL UNION and is designed to furnish the Children and Youth of the United States with reading matter, in a popular form, for the improvement of Mind and Heart.

It is published (not monthly, nor weekly, but) every other week, or twenty-six numbers in a year. It is religious but unsectarian, and the matter is carefully prepared with a view to the habits, character and prospects of American Youth

TERMS OF THE PENNY GAZETTE.

$10 a year, in advance, for 100 copies, to one address. $5 a year, in advance, for 40 copies, to one address. $3 a year, in advance, for 20 copies, to one address. Single subscriptions, 25 cents per year.

TERMS BY MAIL, POSTAGE PAID.

☞ When the postage is paid at the place of mailing, the terms are very low. For $15 remitted, we will send 100 copies of the paper for one year, to one address—we paying postage. For $7 remitted, we will send 40 copies of the paper to one address, for one year—we paying postage. For $3 50 remitted, we will send 20 copies of the paper for one year, to one address—we paying postage. Less than 20 cannot be sent at this cheap rate.

Subscriptions received at the Society's House, No. 146 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.

Feb 16 3w G. S. SCOFIELD, Agent.

TO BUILDERS.

North Western Christian University.

THE Building Committee of the Board of Directors of the North-Western Christiana University, propose contracting for the west wing of the University Building, to be put up on the University grounds in the vicinity of Indianapolis.

Sealed Proposals in detail, with prices affixed for doing the work necessary to the completion of the said Wing, will be received until the 19th day of July next, and may be handed to the undersigned, or to J. T. Cox. Secretary of the Company, at the Book Store of Cox & Mathes, in Indianapolis.

The materials and work to be according to the plan, drawings and specifications prepared by Wm. Tinsley, Architect, which may be seen and examined at his room, on the east side of Pennsylvania street, three doors north of the north-east Diagonal, in Indianapolis. The specifications have been materially changed and modified, so as to reduce the cost of the building.

Proposals for the whole combined, would be preferred; but will be received for the different parts and portions thereof separotely. The whole to be completed and fit for use by the first day of September, 1854.

Payments will be made as the work progresses, at such short periods as may suit the covenience of the Contractors. Bond and security will be required for the performance of the work.

In behalf of the Building Committee:

OVID BUTLER,

President of the Board of Directors.

June 10, 1853. june 22 3w

LITTLE. DRUM & ANDERSONS

WHOLESALE DEALERS IN

STAPLE AND FANCY DRY GOODS, BOOTS, SHOES, HATS, CAPS, STATIONERY, NOTIONS, TRIMMINGS, GROCERIES, HARDWARE, QUEENSWARE, AND GLASSWARE,

North side of Washington Street,

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

WE are receiving Country Produce of all descriptions, and paying the highest market price. Dealers visiting Indianapolis are respectfully invited to call and examine our stock and prices, both for Produce and Merchandise generally. june30 tf

JAMES HALL,

MERCHANT TAILOR,

No. 2. Temperance, Hall, Indianapolis,

Manufactu'ng & Clothing Emporium,

Wholesale and Retail Dealer in Ready Made Clothing, Cloths, Cassimers, Vestings, Trimmings, Trunks, Sachels, Canes, Umbrellas, Hats, Caps, a every description of Gentlemen's Furnishing.

Also:

General Agency for the sale of GRAND AND SUBORDINATE REGALIA, EMBLEMS, COSTUMES, &c., FOR THE ORDERS OF MASONS, ODD FELLOWS, TEMPLE OF HONOR, SON, DAUGHTERS, AND CADETS OF TEMPERANCE. oct27 1y

The American Life and Health Insurance Company.

Office—No. 7, South Third St., Philadelphia.

Officers.

LEONARD JEWELL, President.
JAMES PEACOCK, Treasurer.
JOHN C. SIMS, Sec'y and Actuary.
THOS. S. SMITH, Solicitor

JOHN F. BIRD, FRED. A. FICKARDT, } Medical Examiners.

CHARLES WOODWARD, Indianapolis, Ind., General Agent for the State of Indiana.

THIS Company issues policies at Total Abstinence Rates, Joint stock Rates, and at Mutual Rates, which for $1000 on the life of a person 30 years of age, are as follows:

Age.	Total Abstinence.	Joint Stock.	Mutual.
30	$15.40	$19.60	$23.60

A further table of Rates will be furnished at the Office.

The condition in Total Abstinence rates (believed to be the lowest in the Union,) is entire forfeiture upon the departure of the Insured from Total Abstinence in its strictest sense.

Policies at Joint Stock and Mutual rates, contain no condition except as usual in Life Insurance.

HEALTH INSURANCE DEPARTMENT.

All Moneys received from the Insured, for Annual Premiums, after deducting expenses, will be divided among the Sick

The Public have for some time been familiar with the subject of Life and Health Insurance, but it is obvious that too little thoughts has been given to the latter. LIFE Insurance benefits our successors, while HEALTH Insurance directly benefits ourselves. It makes provision for a time of sickness, when the products of a man's industry are cut off, and want unites with Disease to aggravate his distress. It is at this gloomy period, when he is prostrated and helpless, and when despondency would otherwise overwhelm him, that the holder of a Health Insurance Policy will realize its benefits.

RATES, under 50 years of age,

$2,00	per year,	for	$2,00	per week.
3,00	"	"	3,00	"
4,00	"	"	4,00	"
5,00	"	"	5,00	"
6,00	"	"	6,00	"

Over fifty and under sixty.

$2,50	per year,	for	$2,50	per week.
3,75	"	"	3,00	"
5,00	"	"	4,00	"
6,25	"	"	5,00	"
7,50	"	"	6,00	"

When the Fund shall amount to Three Dollars and upwards for every person insured and sufficient to warrant an additional distribution, the weekly allowances will be increased in accordance with the Rules of the Policy.

All the members of a Temple or Division insured at greatly reduced rates.

Applications for Agencies in any of the cities or towns in the State, should be made to the undersigned, post paid, or in person.

As Agent for the above Company, I am prepared to receive applications for Policies at any of the above rates.

CHARLES WOODWARD, Agent,

At ADAMS & CO.'S Express Office.

J. L. MOTHERSHEAD, Medical Examiner.

june 30 '52-1y

Ohio Life Insurance Company,

Capital $100,000.

JOINT STOCK AND MUTUAL,

CINCINNATI.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS.

Wm. Burnet, Jno. N. Ridgway, Chas. Goodman, S. Robert, E. S. Haines, Jno. M. Blair, J. W. Donohue, Eden B. Reeder, Wm. Person.

WM. BURNET, President.

S. W. REEDER, Sec'y J. W. DONOHUE, Vice Pres't

Office in Reeder's Building, Third street, between Almy's and City Bank.

This Company insures Lives at the lowest rates consistent with safety, either upon the Joint Stock or Mutual plan.

In the Joint Stock Department, premium payable quarterly, semi-annually or annually. On the Mutual plan, one-half the premium paid in Cash, the balance by a note bearing six per cent. interest—the interest only payable annually. Persons insuring on the mutual plan, participate in the profits of the Company in that department.

The undersigned having been appointed agent for the above Company, is prepared to fill applications for Life Insurance, on favorable terms.

Any information on the subject and pamphlets explaining the nature and utility of Life Insurance, furnished without charge, at the office of the Agent.

C. WOODWARD, Agent.

Office at Adam's & Co 's Express Office, Journal Building, Pennsylvania street, Indianapolis, Ind.

june 30, '52-1y.

Railroad City Book Store.

COX & MATHES,

South side of Washington. between Illinois and Meridian streets,

INDIANAPOLIS, INDIANA.

AT wholesale and retail, Standard and Miscellaneous Works, Law, and Medical Books, School Books, Plain and Fancy Stationery, Blank Books, Wall Papers, &c., &c. mar 2

CHEAP WATCHES & JEWELRY.

Good Gold Watches at $24!

WE are now in our new Room No. 1, Palmer House, with a lot of beautiful Watches and Jewelry which we are selling lower than ever heretofore sold in Indianapolis, for instance we sell

Good 18 K Case Gold Lepines at $24.
" 18 K " " Levers at $28.
" Silver Anchor Levers $12 to $18.
" " Cylenders, $9 to $12.
" " Quarter's $6 to $10.

In addition to the above we have a fine assortment of other description of Watches all of which we will sell lower than any other firm dare sell in the place. I have in my employ a very superior Watch Repairer who will always be on on hand to do watch repairing of every description. Mr. Michot has worked in Geneva, Paris, New York and other large cities and has had great experience in his Branch of the business. All Watches warranted for one year, and the money in all cases refunded, provided they do not give entire satisfaction.

feb9 tf E. W. NEFF.

SMALL CHANGE.

THE undersigned is prepared to furnish Merchants and others with three cent pieces from the United States Mint at Philadelphia, free of transportation, in sums of 30, 60, and 90 dollars, upon deposit of Gold or Eastern Exchange. Also cents and half cents, upon payment of frieght on gold to Philadelphia, or on Eastern Exchange free of freight.

C. WOODWARD, Agent,

june 30 Adams & Co.'s Express.

A CHANCE TO MAKE MONEY.

Profitable and honorable Employment!

THE Subscriber is desirous of having an agent in each county and town of the Union. A capital of from $5 to $10 only will be required, and anything like an efficient, energetic man can make from three to five dollars per day; indeed some of the Agents now employed are realizing twice that sum. Every information will be given by addressing, (postage paid) WM. A. KINSLER,

june 15 3w ¶ Box 601, Philadelphia P. O.

THE ILLUSTRATED MAGAZINE OF ART.

THE five numbers of this Magazine which are published, place it at the head of publications of this kind No expense will be spared to make it in every respect worthy of the name, the "Illustrated Magazine of Art. The Engavings which are preparing for the future numbers are in the hands of first-class American and European Artists.

A Series of most interesting Tales will appear in it. "The School of Life," written and Illustrated by ANNA MARY, daughter of William and Mary Howitt, will shortly appear; also, "The Dead Bridal," an historical romance, illustrative of the most interesting period in the history of the Venetian Republic, by JONATHAN FREKE SLINGSBY, of the Dublin University Magazine; contributions, too, from WILLIAM and MARY HOWITT, PERCY B. ST. JOHN, and other writers of distinction in America and Europe.

The following is a brief outline of the plan of the Magazine:

I. The Historical Department will abound with picturesque representations of the most remarkable events which have occurred in this and other countries; accompanied with interesting anecdotes and details from the pen of the most eminent writers of the day. This department will contain several splendid engravings, designed by the first artists of the world, and engraved in the highest style of modern art.

II. The Men and Women of the Age. This department will consist of beautifully executed portraits of the leading characters of the age, especially of those who figure on the stage of humanity as the world's benefactors. Each portrait will be accompanied by an interesting biographical sketch.

III. The Wonders of Natural History, Botany, and other sciences, will be developed in choice Engravings of Beasts, Birds, Fishes, Insects, Forest Trees, Flowers, Geological and Fossil Specimens, &c., with accompanying descriptions.

IV. The Triumphs of Architectural Art will be displayed in exquisitely finished representations of Cathedrals, Churches, Palaces, and other models of ancient and modern Architectural Art.

V. The Works of the Great Masters, selected from the principal Galleries of Art in the World. In general, the portrait of the Master will be given, accompanied with a highly finished engraved copy of his chef d'œuvre.

VI. The Scientific Portions will be rendered highly interesting by the familiar explanations, and the numerous diagrams which will accompany each subject.

VII. Manufactures. The principal manufacturing processes in use will be fully explained by minute details, and an abundance of beautiful engravings.

VIII. Machinery and Inventions will have due attention paid to them, and be described by numerous appropriate engravings.

IX. The Literary Department, independently of the various articles accompanying the illustrations, will comprise original and interesting narratives, contributed by the most popular writers of the day, with numerous illustrations.

In every respect, the "Illustrated Magazine of Art," will be decidedly

SUPERIOR TO ANY MAGAZINE OF THE DAY.

Each Monthly part will contain at least Thirty superb Engravings, four of which will be printed separately, on supefine Plate Paper.

The greatest care will be manifested in every department of production. The Paper will be of the first manufacture, and the Ink supplied from the celebrated Printing Ink Establishment of Messrs. Lawson & Co., of Paris. Six of the monthly portions, when completed, will form a volume which, for interest, originality, value and beauty, will defy competition. It will not only be an interesting family book, but a rich ornament for the drawing-room table, and a pleasant companion in the study.

The parts will appear on the First of every Month at Twenty-five Cents each.

ALEXANDER MONTGOMERY,

may 25 17 Spruce Street, New-York.

SPLENDIDLY ILLUSTRATED WORKS.

THE ALPS, SWITZERLAND, SAVOY AND LOMBARDY.

With the Magazine for June will be ready, Part I., price Twenty-five Cents, of a Magnificent Work to be completed in Twelve Monthly Parts, entitled

THE ALPS, SWITZERLAND, SAVOY AND LOMBARDY, with an account of the most recent Ascents to Mont Blanc, &c. By the Rev. Charles Williams. This work, when completed, will form a large thick Volume, in Imperial Octavo, containing upwards of Three Hundred beautiful Engravings, descriptive of the peculiar Scenery of those most interesting portions of Europe, with the Occupations of the Inhabitants, &c., &c.

Cassell's Natural History.

On the First of July will commence

CASSELL'S NATURAL HISTORY, which for variety, beauty and completeness, will claim to be considered as a first-class work, upon this most interesting subject. The First volume will be devoted to the Feathered Tribe of the Creation and will contain upwards of Three Hundred Engravings, in the first style of Art. The volume will be completed in Twelve Monthly Parts, Imperial Octavo. Price 25 cents each.

History of England.

On the First of July will appear Part I., price 25 cts. of THE ILLUSTRATED HISTORY OF ENGLAND, from the earliest period on record to the present time. Edited by ROBERT FERGUSON, LL. D.

This History, which is intended to form a great National Work, will extend to Four Volumes, Imperial Octavo; each Volume to be completed in Twelve Monthly Parts, price 25 cents each. The Work will comprehend the Political, Civil, and Domestic History of the Nation, and its Progress in Civilization, Literature, Art, &c. It will be profusely Illustrated with Engravings from Designs by GILBERT, PHILLIPPOTEAUX, WILLIAMS, and others. Representations of the most remarkable Events will be worked separately upon Plate Paper. The Portraits will form a complete Gallery, not only of the Monarchs, but of those individuals whose names are prominent in England's History. Also, Antiquities, including Autographs, Buildings, Costume, Furniture, Arms, Coins, Monuments, Manufactures &c., of each Epoch.

History of Hungary.

July First will be published, in one Handsome Volume, Imperial Octavo, price, One Dollar and Twenty-five Cents, in Cloth Boards,

THE ILLUSTRATED HISTORY OF HUNGARY, AND THE MAGYARS, from the Earliest Period to the clos of the late War. By EDWARD LAWRENCE GODKIN. The Volume will be Illustrated with One Hundred highly finished Engravings, including representations of the principal Battles; Portraits of the early Kings, and of the Statesmen and Generals who figured in the War of Independence; Costumes of the Peasantry, &c.; Views of the chief Towns and Fortresses, &c.; with an accurate Description of the Manners and Customs of the People, their Literature, Commerce, Arts, &c.

ALEXANDER MONTGOMERY,

may25 Publisher, 17 Spruce Street, New-York.

MANSION HOUSE,

Cambridge City, Indiana.

J. CUNNINGHAM, Proprietor.

TRAVELLERS

Will find it to their advantage to call and try the accommodation of the MANSION HOUSE.

STAGE OFFICE also in connection with this House.

may 1 6m

INDIANA STATE LIBRARY

TEMPERANCE CHART.

A Weekly Journal:---Devoted to Temperance, Morality, Education, Literature, Useful Arts, Science, General Intelligence, &c.

J. W. GORDON, M. D., EDITOR.] ORGAN OF THE GRAND DIVISION OF INDIANA. [JOHN H. OHR, PRINTER.

VOL. III. INDIANAPOLIS, IND., WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 17, 1853. NO. 8.

THE TEMPERANCE CHART,

IS PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY, BY THE GRAND DIVISION, S. of T. OF INDIANA.

Edited by J. W. Gordon, M. D.

To whom all Communications and Subscriptions must be addressed, post-paid.

OFFICE—in second story of Temperance Hall Building, Washington St., Indianapolis.

TERMS:

Single copy, one year, ... 75 cts.

☞ In advance in all cases,

TERMS OF ADVERTISING.—Circulation 4000 copies.

One Squre, (12 lines,) for one week,	$0 50
" " for each subsequent insertion,	25
" " for 3 months,	3 00
" " for 6 months,	5 00
" " for 1 year without alteration,	8 00
" " for 1 year, with changes,	12 00

A reduction made on larger advertisements.
Cuts double the above rates.
Advertisements must be handed in by Saturday, of each week, to insure insertion.
Applications for advertising, or for any kind of Printing for the Order, must be made to

J. H. OHR, Indianapolis.

POETRY.

Never give up.

BY M. F. TUPPER.

Never give up! it is wiser and better,
Always to hope than once to despair;
Fling off the load of Doubt's cankering fetter,
And break the dark spell of tyrannical care:
Never give give up! or the burden may sink you,
Providence kindly has mingled the cup,
And in all trials or troubles bethink you,
The watchword of life must be, never give up!

Never give up! there are chances and changes!
Helping the hopeful a hundred to one,
And thro' the chaos, high Wisdom arranges
Ever success—if you'll only hope on;
Never give up! for the wisest is boldest,
Knowing that Providence mingles the cup,
And of all maxims the best as the oldest,
Is the the true watchword of never give up!

Never give up! tho' the grape shot may rattle,
Or the full thunder-cloud over you burst,
Stand like a rock, and the storm or the battle
Little shall harm you, tho' doing their worst;
Never give up! if adversity presses
Providence wisely has mingled the cup,
And the best counsel in all your distresses
Is the stout watchword of never give up!

MISCELLANEOUS.

From the Tecumseh Herald.

Female Influence, or THE ELOQUENCE OF A TEAR.

A TEMPERANCE TALE, BY A LADY.

(CONCLUSION.)

He spent an hour in assumed gayety, and then withdrew unobserved. His feelings, as he sallied forth, can be more easily imagined than described. He did not wish to return to his parents, but wandered forth, not caring whither he went. At length he stopped at a small inn in the suburbs of the town, hoping to regain his composure before he returned to his home. But the moment he glanced at the liquid poison arranged on the shelf, he thought, 'I have bartered everything for the gratification of appetite; now let me partake till I am satisfied.' He called for one glass after another until he was delirious with intoxication. In the mean time the room became thronged with a certain class who were accustomed to meet at this place for their revels. George had sufficient consciousness and self-respect to know that he was losing caste by remaining in such company, and resolved to sustain order while he honored them with his presence. A quarrel commenced between some two or three individuals, and after sundry admonitions, our hero undertook to dismiss the belligerent parties. A scuffle ensued, and resulted in his being rather hastily ejected himself, and with such force that he was completely stunned by the fall.—At this crisis some gentlemen were passing. on their return from an excursion in the country, where they had just organized a new Division of the Sons of Temperance. They halted on perceiving the commotion, and what was their grief and astonishment to find George Headly prostrate on the ground, and apparently lifeless. On inquiring the cause of the disaster:—

'Och,' replied one of the sous of Erin, 'here is the son of one of your gintlemen, who has been afther teaching us manners; but, by St. Patrick, he has made his obasance so low that I believe in my soul, he will never rear his head again.'

One of the number was instantly dispatched to confer with Henry Mansfield, while the others remained to minister to his necessities. Henry had not retired, but was sitting alone with his mother, disclosing his apprehensions respecting his cousin, when the conversation was interrupted by a gentle rap at the door. Henry stepped forward to ascertain the cause of the unusual visit, when his mother heard him exclaim:

'Oh, do not take him to his parents; bring him to us—to my own room."

'Oh, it is our poor dear George,' exclaimed Mrs. Mansfield: 'bring him here without delay.'

In a few moments the unconscious, wretched inebriate was silently conveyed to the room of his cousin. The extent of the injury could not at once be ascertained, and after these kind offices had been performed, this little fraternal band withdrew, and left Henry to become his solitary watcher. Ah, what feelings of anguish rent the bosom of Henry Mansfield as he sat by his lonely bedside, and silently gazed upon his fallen friend. Yes, he wept when he realized that one so noble, so gifted, as George Headly, should have sunk so low as to become the foot-ball of a drunken rabble. The memories of the past came up before him in quick succession. He thought upon their early life, of the many hours they had sported together when the world was bright and joyous before them. Then what caused them to differ? Why was his cousin so wretched and degraded, while he was comparatively happy? He traced out the cause: he distinctly remembered the difference of opinion between the parents of each, with regard to the use of stimulants, and while he deplored the unhappy effect in the case of his cousin, his heart overflowed with gratitude that such results had been averted with regard to himself. While thus musing, his mother entered the room.—On seeing her he could not restrain his feelings, but tenderly embracing her, he exclaimed:

'My dear mother, had it not been for your prudent, guardian care, I might at this moment be as wretched as our dear George.'

'My son,' replied the mother, 'thank God who has caused you to differ; and remember, that the same Power who preserved you from evil, may be exerted to restore your dear cousin to innocence and happiness. But go, my son, and rest, while I take your place at his side.'

Henry retired, and while these changes were taking place, George awoke, and consciousness being restored, ascertained his location and attendants. He now appeared to slumber, but was alive to all that passed around him. He heard the heavy sigh of his aunt as she took her seat by his side. He heard her stifled sobs as she prostrated herself in prayer; he listened to her fervent importunity that he might no longer vainly rely upon himself, but henceforth seek Divine assistance to enable him to reform his course, and subdue his sinful habits. George listened with deep emotion, which he could scarcely restrain; and was now prepared silently to respond to this prayer. She arose, and as she leaned over him to bathe his parched lips and burning brow, a tear chanced to fall on his forehead. Ah! what sensations that tear praduced.—Memory, with lightning speed, united it with the tear that had fallen upon his innocent childood, and it formed a stream that gushed from his eyes. His bosom heaved with deep emotion, and he could conceal his feelings no longer. Opening his eyes as he grasped the hand of his aunt, he said, in faltering accents:

'My dear aunt, you seem to have confidence that the wretched wanderer may be reclaimed?'

'I know there is hope, my dear George, I know you can be restored.'

Again he closed his eyes, and his lips moved in fervent prayer; then grasping her hand more closely, he added:

'My dear aunt, I now feel thus myself; your prayers, your tears have saved me; but let me remain with you till my tottering steps can be guided aright.'

Morning now dawned, and the first bright beam of the glorious sun seemed to send a ray of hope to the unhappy youth, and he greeted it as the harbinger of a brighter day. When he had taken nourishment, he was considerably revived, and it was soon evident that he had not sustained any serious injury in the affray of the preceding night. His subdued and gentle manner, and his penitence for his past errors, called forth tears of joy from this affectionate household. He inquired with tender solicitude whether his parents had been apprized of the recent unhappy occurrence, and expressed a wish to see his mother. When Henry waited on the parents to make known his wishes, he found them overwhelmed with grief and anxiety. A report of the disaster had just reached them, but they could not learn who had befriended him, nor where he had been conveyed. The mother was giving vent to her anguish in sighs and tears, while the father stood with hat in hand, as if petrified at the sad intelligence.

'What tidings do you bear, Henry,' said Mr. Headly, with a trembling voice. 'Have you heard any thing from our poor, wretched boy?'

'Your son is safe under our roof,' said Henry, 'and we wish to retain him with us a few days; and God grant when he returns to you, may you rejoice over him as one restored to virtue and happiness.'

When Henry made known the request of George to his aunt, Mrs. Headly endeavored to compose her feelings for the interview. With a trembling step she accompanied Henry, and when she stood by the side of her son, he seized her hand and pressed it within his own; he fixed his eyes intently upon her for a moment, and then said:

'Mother, behold your son, prostrate and disgraced by intemperance. Why is it, my dear mother, that my fair fame is thus blighted, while my cousin's has never been sullied by any vice. Do not weep thus, mother, I would not grieve you, nor attempt to excuse my own folly; but do you not remember that decanter of wine you kept in some dark recess of your sideboard? Ah! my dear mother, that cursed bottle has brought me to this.—Let me entreat you not to grieve, for there is hope for your son; but bear with me, if I inquire if you do not remember that prophetic tear that I warned you had been shed over me? Ah, dearest mother, that tear was unheeded, but, thank God, another has fallen, and may it prove a like fountain to wash away my stains. Now dry your tears, for I have learned to weep for myself. I am now ready for the temperance badge, and if it cannot hide my past errors, may it serve as a bright bow of promise for the future.'

The preliminary steps were now taken to introduce George Headly into the ranks of that sacred fraternity, which would not only encourage his efforts to reform, but sound the alarm when tempted to stray.

George and Henry now became more attached than ever. The affection that had been smothered for years, now burned with a pure and steady flame. But there was one subject that caused Henry some disquiet, and he knew not how to introduce it to his friend. The question would often recur, 'How will George now stand affected towards Ellen Seymour?' His own hand had been proffered and accepted; but he now feared that the knowledge of this fact might affect George, and retard his reformation. George discovered his embarrassment and sought to relieve it. Accosting him in a pleasant manner, he said:

'Well, Henry, I suppose by this time you are well acquainted with the inimitable Miss Seymour?'

'Oh yes,' said Henry, 'I have met with her frequently.'

'Is she not a lovely girl, and just such a one as you would choose for a wife?'

'From my acquaintance with her, I must admit that she is,' replied Henry.

'And she is just the person I desire you to obtain,' said George; 'for you are worthy of such a companion.'

'Thank you for your good wishes, cousin George,' said Henry, as his countenance brightened. 'But let me inquire, as you had a prior acquaintance, why did you not secure her for yourself?'

'Because I was a madman,' said George, with some excitement, 'and ought to pay the penalty. But, friend Henry,' he added with a smile, 'don't think you have monopolized all that is fair and lovely in this wide world: there is some fond heart still in reserve for me; but I assure you I shall not seek to win its love until I can secure its confidence.'

The time at length arrived when George Headly was to be numbered with the Sons of Temperanee.

A large audience convened, and Henry Mansfield, according to appointment, delivered an address. As he closed, he asked permission to introduce another speaker on the occasion, one he thought would interest the assembly, even without much previous preparation. It had not been made public that George Headly had consented to a pledge of total abstinence, and when he presented himself with his new regalia, the effect was thrilling.—Mnrmurs of applause and joy burst forth from every quarter, and it was some moments before he was allowed to commence. His address was short, but it was delivered with that deep feeling, that impassioned eloquence, that breaks up the very fountains of the heart, and sends them in gushing torrents to the eyes. All hung upon his lips in breathless silence. But there were some of this audience more deeply interested than others. The father of our new Orator, listened to the voice of his son with more sincere pleasure than if sounded within the halls of Congress:—yes, and his mother had learned that peculiar circumstances could add some new interest to a temperance meeting.

From this time George Headly spared no pains to assure his friends of his resolute determination to abstain entirely from his former course. But this did not satisfy him. As he now became fully aware of the evils of intemperance, with a heart glowing with gratitude for his own rescue, he resolved to devote his own energies and influence to advance the interests of the glorious Temperance Reformation, by becoming a champion in the cause.

The parents no longer fear that he will bring their gray hairs with sorrow to the grave, but now look upon him as a solace of their declining years.

George Headly was forcibly reminded of his former errors when called to officiate as groomsman at the marriage of his cousin with Ellen Seymour; but he witnessed the nuptials with true Spartan fortitude, and congratulated the young married friends on their happy union.

George is still unmarried, but we have no apprehensions with regard to his matrimonial prospects, for he excites the ladies to such a laudable interest in the temperance cause wherever he goes, that he appears to be in a fair way to win the necessary love and confidence.

He seldom refers to his own private history in his appeals in behalf of Temperance; but when he discovers any want of watchfulness on the part of parents, especially of the mother, he fearlessly exposes that first bottle of wine hidden in the corner of the sideboard, with the long train of ensuing evils. But he never fails to add, 'Remember ladies, if the mischief is accomplished, if habits of intemperance are formed, when every argument and effort have failed to reform, do not forget there is still Eloquence in a Tear.

OUR ANTIPODES.—It is observed in Mr. Lancelott's book upon Australia just out, that almost everything in nature is, in Australia, the reverse of what it is here. When we have winter, they have summer; when we have day, they have night; we have our feet pressing nearly opposite to their feet; there, too, the compass points to the South; the sun travels along the northern heavens; the plumage of the birds is beautiful, their notes are harsh and strange; the swans are black; the eagles are white; the males lay eggs; the owls screech and hoot only in the daytime; the cuckoo's song is heard only in the night: the valleys are cool, the mountain-tops are warm; the North winds are hot, the South winds are cold, the East winds are healthy; the bees are without sting; the cherries grow with the stone outside; one of the birds has a broom in its mouth instead of a tongue; another creature (the duck-billed platypus) unites with the body, fur, and habits of a mole, the webbed foot and bill of a duck. Many of the beautiful flowers are without smell; and even the geological formation of the country, as far as ascertained, is most singular.

Men have made a virtue of moderation to limit the ambition of the great, and to console people of mediocrity for their want of fortune and of merit.

Moral Reflections, Sentences, and Maxims.

Almost every one takes a pleasure in requiting trifling obligations; many people are grateful for moderate ones; but there is scarcely any one who does not show ingratitude for great ones.

There are follies as catching as contagious disorders.

There are people enough who despise wealth, but few who know how to bestow it.

It is generally only in petty interests that we run the hazard of not trusting to appearances.

In whatever respect people may praise us, they never teach us any thing new.

We often pardon those who weary us, but we can not pardon those whom we weary.

Interest, which is accused of all our crimes, often deserves to be praised for our good actions.

We seldom find people ungrateful as long as we are in a condition to render them services.

It is as honorable to be boastful to ourselves as it is ridiculous to be so to others.

There are some people fated to be fools, who not only commit follies from choice, but are compelled to commit them by fortune.

There happen sometimes accidents in life from which it requires a degree of madness to extricate ourselves well.

If there are men whose weak point has never appeared, it is because it has never been properly sought for.

The reason why lovers and their mistresses are never weary of being together is, that they always talk of themselves.

Why must we have memory enough to retain even the minutest details of what has happened to us, and not enough to remember how many times we have told them to the same person?

The extreme pleasure we take in talking of ourselves should make us fear that we give very little to those who listen to us.

What commonly prevents us from exhibiting the bottom of our hearts to our friends is not so much any distrust we have of them as the distrust we have of ourselves.

It is not a great misfortune to oblige ungrateful people, but it is an unsupportable one to be under an obligation to a vulgar man.

We find means to cure folly, but none to reclaim a distorted mind.

We cannot long preserve the sentiments we should have for our friends and benefactors if we often allow ourselves the liberty of speaking of their faults.

There is but a breath of air, and a beat of the heart, betwixt this world and the next. And in the brief interval of painful and awful suspense, while we feel that death is present with us, that we are powerless and he all powerful, and the last faint pulsation here is but the prelude of endless life hereafter; we feel, in the midst of the stunning calamity about to befall us, that earth has no compensating good to mitigate the severity of our loss. But there is no great grief without some beneficent provision to soften its intenseness. When the good and the lovely die, the memory of their good deeds, like the moonbeams on the stormy sea, light up our darkened hearts, and lends to the surrounding gloom a beauty so sad, so sweet, that we would not, if we could, dispel the darkness that environs it.—George D. Prentice.

LIFE IS WORTH LIVING.—Margaret Fuller Osseoli says, "Life is richly worth living, with its continual revelations of mighty woes yet infinite hope, and I take it to my breast. Amid these scenes of beauty, all that is little, foreign, unworthy, vanishes like a dream. So shall it be some time amid the Everlasting Beauty, when true joy shall begin and never cease."

"Strive, strive my soul, to be innocent; yes, beneficent. Does any man wound thee, not only forgive, but work into thy thought, intelligence of the kind of pain, that thou mayest never inflict it on another spirit. Then its work is done; it will never search thy whole nature again. Oh, love much, and be forgiven!

LIBRARY INDIANAPOLIS

TEMPERANCE CHART.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.
WM. HANNAMAN, C. E. BABB,
JAMES HALL, R. T. BROWN,
JOHN B. ABBETT.

WEDNESDAY, AUG. 17, 1853.

☞ We have two Certificates of Scholarships in the "Commercial College of Indianapolis," which we will dispose of—any one wishing to attend this institution will do well to give us a call at the Chart office.

☞ There is to be a Temperance Camp-meeting held at Covington, in this State, commencing September 9th. Temperance speakers, and all friends of the cause, are earnestly requested to attend. They expect to make the strongholds of the enemy in their county, tremble to their foundation. Let us go up to their help against the mighty.

THE CRYSTAL FOUNT, Tuscaloosa, Alabama, comes to us this week much enlarged and beautified. We regard it as one of our most energetic and efficient co-laborers in the good cause. It speaks well for the Temperance men of Alabama. Success to it and the cause in which it labors.

Fires.

Two fires occurred here on Wednesday night, doing considerable damage. The first occurred between eight and nine o'clock in the evening, and consumed the livery stables of Delzell, Browning & Landis; also the stables of Dr. Mothershead and J. Fitler; it also burned the wood-house and ice-house pertaining to the Wright House. The Wright House, the bell foundery, and several other buildings were on fire at different times, but were saved by the energetic efforts of the firemen and citizens. A horse, a carriage, a buggy, and two sets of harness were consumed.

The second fire occurred about eleven o'clock the same evening, in the stable belonging to the Pennsylvania House, kept by Mr. Newcomer. This was entirely burned, but the adjoining buildings were with great difficulty saved. Both these fires were undoubtedly the work of incendiaries, but for what purpose it was done is not known.

We have just received the Western Gem an Musician, published at Mount Healthy, near Cincinnati, Ohio, and edited by Howard Durham and A. D. Fillmore. This is a beautiful and chaste little sheet, and is truly a "Gem." It numbers among its contributors some of our best writers, among them is our friend Miss Chitwood. All who wish a periodical of genuine literary merit, uncontaminated by impurity or immorality, will find such a one in the "Gem." Its editorials and selections speak well for the heads and hearts of its editors. The terms are fifty cents per annum for single copies; Clubs of five are supplied for $2.00: clubs of ten for $3.00.

A Mirror.

With all our boasted magnanimity and our self-commending assertion, that ours is "the land of the free and the home of the brave," we see circumstances transpiring daily in the private walks of life, that prove conclusively that it is much less difficult to theorize than to prove by experiment, much easier to preach principles than to practice them. Ours, we exclaim with pride is the land where the down-trodden and oppressed of every land may find a home, and sympathetic hearts to feel for his calamities. But is this verified in practice? We opine not always. Our people are selfish—their household gods are self and Mammon—and whatever conflicts with the interests of these is repulsive, and is avoided. The poor and ignorant of groaning Europe land upon our shores, often destitute and helpless, but, as a general thing, they are left to procure the means of sustenance and comfort for themselves, or starve. Some of them set their feet upon our shores, independent, with ample means to procure homes, but owing to the black-hearted villainy of some of our "wolves in sheep's clothing," they are defrauded out of every penny bafore they reach the West, where they could have rendered themselves comfortable.

The intelligent foreigner, when, in defence of his home, kindred, and freedom, he has lost his home, his property, and has even his life sought after—often flies to our country as an asylum from calamity and trouble. But does he always find it such? No: unless he be a governor, or general, or have some other high sounding title, so that by aiding him we can gratify our pride—he is left to help himself. And how acutely painful it must be to the refined and educated, who have lived and moved in the highest circles at home, to find so cold-hearted a reception; to be obliged to associate and mingle with those lower classes, with whom, from their nature and education, there can be no affinity. Often does the professional man honor our shores with his ample acquirements; but instead of finding brotherly sympathy and aid, the cold shoulder is turned to him, and he is obliged to seek other employment than the practice of that profession, which he, perhaps, has spent the best part of his life in acquiring, and which he is often so amply qualified to engage in.

Novels.

In this day of book reading and book writing, too much can scarcely be said upon the proper choice of books, and upon the effect which a proper or an improper choice will have upon the mind of the reader.

The wise man must certainly have been endowed with the prophetic spirit, and have cast his eye down the vista of years to the present time, when he uttered the truth, "of making many books there is no end."

The class of books of which I intend to speak most particularly at present is that which comes under the appropriate cognomen of "Light Literature;" this literary fungus so peculiarly profuse in our day. It issues from the press in swarms, and spreads over the land, like the locusts over Egypt, feeding upon the morals and intellect of our people, and blighting those fair flowers which it should be the object of all literature to cultivate and develop.

The causes of the exuberant production of this class of books are numerous. We will only mention those we deem most prolific.

1st. The great demand for books which renders it often to the successful author a source of rapid pecuniary emolument.

2nd. A vitiated public taste, arising from deficient moral and intellectual education, and creating a demand especially for this class of books—this vitiated taste being maintained and fostered by this same species of literature.

3d. The excessive and abnormal desire to become authors which prevails throughout the civilized world; and owing to a faulty moral and mental education, or to a want of talent, they can not or will not write any thing but trashy tales, novels, and romances. Now we presume we will not be disagreed with in our first two propositions, nor in our third unless we are misunderstood. We mean it as a general rule, that highly educated and talented men rarely devote themselves to fictitious narrative, not that no fictitious writer of the present day is talented, for such would be a false conclusion; for some of the brightest stars that have shone in our intellectual firmament have been authors of novels at some time or other. But we do maintain that even in the truly intellectual who entirely devote themselves to this kind of writing, there is either an original or an acquired want of equilibrium between the passions and emotions and the reasoning powers; or, in other words, an excessive development of what Schiller terms the "Esthetical faculties."

The effect produced by too great a production of such writings upon the author's mind is the same, precisely. as that produced upon the mind of one devoted to their reading.

Its effect upon the reader is what we chiefly design to notice.

It is upon the young that these are most baneful. They are injurious, first, because they produce a waste of time, and that too at the period of life when it is, if possible, more precious than at any other, and when its proper or improper employment will tell most upon the future usefulness of the individual. What benefit can we expect to derive from such writings? How will they strengthen or develop our minds when it requires no effort to read them, and this for the simple reason that no true intellectual power was employed in their production. We ask again, how will they prepare the young lady or gentleman for future usefulness, for those high aims which every human being should have, the benefit of humanity and the glory of the Creator?

Not only is it a wicked misemployment of the time and talents mercifully bestowed upon us by the Giver of every good, by which we are to prepare for a life of glorious and eternal virtue and intellectuality hereafter, not only does it prevent the development of those nobler faculties of our nature, but it weakens and diminishes their power, while it exalts the passions and emotions, and thus renders us less able to control tham. But the imagination is one of the finest and most sensitive chords that vibrate in our mental organization, and that we should permit every half-educated, immoral, or demented novel-writer to sweep with rude and untaught hands these strings is a sacrilege of the highest degree.

We do not pretend that there should be no exercise of the imagination, for we believe that every faculty that God has bestowed upon us is useful and should be cultivated; it is a wrong education, or an excessive development to the neglect of other faculties that we deprecate.

Fiction, we would say, would be among our most useful varieties of literature, if properly written. If only the well-educated, if only the well-balanced intellectual organizations, if only those who were highly alive to the sublime principles of morality and virtue, if only these should write, then would our fictitious literature be valuable, and serve to ennoble man here and to prepare him for a glotious and immortal state of existence beyond "this vale of tears." Much more might be said upon this important topic, but we desist.

Truth vs. Error.

In the struggles of Truth with Error, ever since that fatal hour when man's disobedience "brought death into the world, and all our woe," we have beheld, that although Might has often prevailed over Right, and Error over Truth, yet their triumphs have generally been of short duration; never lasting and complete; for however complete a victory the forces of Error have apparently gained, they have not held the ascendancy long or peacefully. The eternal thunderings of Truth against the battlements of Error have kept the advocates of wrong in constant commotion and alarm. On the other hand, when Truth has gained a victory, it has been permanent and lasting; the conquered ground has rarely been retaken by the enemy. This fact the poet saw and beautifully expressed:

> "Truth crush'd to earth will rise again,
> The eternal years of God are hers;
> But Error, wounded, writhes in pain,
> And dies among her worshippers!"

And thus will it ever be, in the progress of humanity from the depths and darkness of error and superstition, up to that marvellous light with which Truth shall one day illumine earth's benighted millions.

There is yet in the breast of man a still, small voice that whispers to him of the "exceeding sinfulness of sin," and of the "beauty of holiness;" and this is it which influences him, when he has caught a glimpse of the truth, gleaming "like a gem of purest ray serene," through the dark mists of error, to love her, to seek after her, to strive to approximate nearer unto that "heavenly vision," which has once greeted his sight, and which he knows, if obtained, will make him "free indeed."

Any great advancement of the cause of Truth and Right has always been characterized by much commotion and change in the community where it has occurred. This seems to have arisen from the fact that the friends of Truth have always had arrayed against them a great part, and often the majority, of their fellow-creatures; hence, we have had two parties, strongly opposed to each other, and each tenacious of their own opinions, and before either would yield to the other, or admit any principle advocated by it, much change and disturbance must occur.—Have we any evidence among us of any great progress of the cause of Truth?—Let us look around us and see.

We have great commotion and change in community, which is one characteristic of progress; but as all motion and change are not progress, we must examine the characteristic features of this movement, to ascertain whether it really be progress or not.

We have, as it were, an earthquake tremor of society, caused by the evolution of a mighty principle of Truth from beneath the ponderous rocks of Error, where it has lain buried for ages, "with all creation groaning and travailing in paiu until now."

We have the throne of a mighty principle of evil, which has reigned over society for ages, crumbling and tottering.—What would these signs seem to indicate? Surely nothing less than that Truth and Right are in the ascendant, and that the movement is one of true progress.

What is the cause of this great social movement? What is this principle of Truth which is struggling to be free? It is Temperance.

Look again at the magnitude of these movements. Behold the men of the highest moral and intellectual attainments declaiming against the mighty evil of Intemperance; the wise and good are assenting to their doctrines, and uniting under their banner; the ignorant, vicious, and depraved are dissenting, and unitedly opposing. Behold again, in our many legislatures, this subject attracting universal attention and discussion; and see going up to these representatives of the people, the signatures of hundreds of thousands of their constituents, petitioning for relief and protection.

The leader of our enemies is Intemperance; their king is Alcohol. He still sits upon his throne a surly despot—long hath he ruled the nations with a rod of iron; but he sitteth not as he sat of yore—"his countenance is changed; his knees smite one against another; his scepter is departing from him." All these are omens for good; ours is the side of Truth and Right, and we are opposing Error and Wrong. Then let us battle bravely. Let us first dethrone the tyrant, Alcohol, and his slaves will and must bow in submission.—Let us demolish his throne that he may no more be reinstated. Maine has given it a terrible blow, other States have followed with such rapid succession and effoct, that it already totters. Cannot Indiana do something? Can she not summon moral courage enough to do what so many of her sister States have done? I hear thousands answer, "Yes, and we will!" Although we failed once in procuring legal protection, we will "try again."

Surely with so many propitious omens, the friends of Temperance and Truth have no cause for despair. Victory is ours—already she hovers over our standard!—We are enlisted in the cause of Truth, and behold, as our banner floats aloft, inscribed upon it in characters of living light the cheering assurance, "Veritas magna est, et prevalebit." The day of triumph will come, and that soon; the bloody banner of our enemy, already drooping, shall trail in the dust. Then shall go up throughout our happy land the shout "we are free!" in such loud and long acclamations, as shall cause the "dominations, princedoms, and powers" of evils, that yet remain, to quake with fear. Other nations shall soon catch and join in the joyful sound, until the shouts of victory encircle the earth. Then shall the day of Temperance Millennium have risen upon the earth in all its noonday splendor.—Soon then shall the Sun of Righteousness arise in all his glorious brightness, and usher in that day, of which the Temperance Millennium is but the prototype, the Millennium of Righteousness. "Then shall the wilderness and the solitary place be glad, and the desert shall blossom as the rose."

The Mean Temperature of each day for the week ending Saturday, August 13th:

Sunday,	78½°
Monday,	76°
Tuesday,	77°
Wednesday,	77½°
Thursday,	83°
Triday,	83½°
Saturday,	77°
Mean temperature of the week,	78¼°

On Thursday the mercury rose the highest, being at 97° in the shade. Some say it rose to 98°, but we think the instrument was in an unfavorable situation and received reflected heat.

Items of News.

☞ Dr. Joseph Leidy succeeds the late Dr. Horner in the Professorship of Anatomy in the Pennsylvania University.

☞ Drunken men, or men under the influence of liquor, are not allowed to travel in the cars on the New York city railroads.

☞ A genius in Iowa has invented an engine that he supposes will supersede steam. The motive power is a gallon of fever and ague boiled down to a pint.

☞ The election in Wisconsin, to determine the sentiment of the people relative to the liquor traffic, will take place on November 8th prox.

☞ In the New York Assembly, on a motion for the third reading of the Maine Liquor Law, the bill was rejected by a vote of fifty-two to forty-six.

☞ Seven Californians arrived in this city yesterday, via New York, with seventy-five thousand dollars in their possession, all accumulated by three months' labor in the diggings.—Cin. Nonpareil.

☞ The Maine Law is said to work well in Burlington, Vt. A man, who lately gave liquor to a woman, making her tipsy, had to pay one hundred and ten dollars to settle it.

☞ A contemporary states that the different petitions presented to the Provincial Legislature for the enactment of a prohibitory liquor law, similar to the Maine Law, have in all been signed by 70,000 persons.—Montreal Sun.

☞ The Illinois Central Railroad Company refuse to transport liquors on their road. Several attempts have been made to impose upon the officers by means of false labels and novel means of conveyance, but they have generally been detected.

☞ The village of Marlboro, Maryland, was visited, on the 7th ultimo, with the curious phenomenon of a shower of oat straw. It was visible at a great distance above the earth before it descended. It is presumed that the straw was taken up in a whirlwind during some of the late heavy storms.

☞ The Rochester American says, that an examination of the sun, by Professor Dewey, of the University, through his reflecting telescope, disclosed a large number of spots upon its surface. An archipelago of spots was discovered, which, if united, would cover an area of 40,000 miles long.

SETTLEMENT OF A DIFFICULTY.—We see from some of our exchanges, that there was lately a duel between two men in California, and that after taking three shots each with rifles, at each other, or in some other direction, some of their friends interfered to stop the shooting. We suppose the reason for stopping the sport was, that it was considered dangerous to the spectators.

CANADA.—The friends of temperance in this province, we are glad to learn, are not idle, but are pushing forward with wonderful success their system of agitation. We expect to see the Maine Law in full force there very soon. The people are not only ready for it, but have made up their minds that they will have it. On Saturday last, they had a Grand Temperance Pic-Nic opposite Niagara. No more appropriate place for a Temperance Demonstration could be selected than by the side of this cold-water fountain.—Michigan Temp. Adv.

THE MAINE LAW IN MARYLAND.—The friends of the Maine Law, in Caroline county, Maryland, held a convention at Denton last week, and resolved to make every effort to send to the next Legislature men who will vote for a law to take the sense of the people upon the propriety of refusing licenses for the sale of spirituous liquors. They also resolved to nominate a ticket of their own, in case the two political parties nominated men opposed to the measure.

Correspondence.

For the Temperance Chari.

Temperance.

Temperance is a guardian angel of republics. The opposition to the Temperance Cause takes its stand from the view that such laws are contradictory to man's freedom, and that not even in Europe, where human liberty is trodden under the feet of tyrants, is man yet reduced to such narrow limits, that the gratification of his palate is prohibited him; but there he can eat and drink whatever, and as much as, he likes, and no policeman can interfere with that high privilege.

But those who not only consider the surface of things, but also penetrate to the bottom, will see such objections vanish like the shades of night before the rays of the morning sun.

In our republican government all citizens have an equal right. The opinion of one has as much weight as the opinion of another, in all public affairs. We select one man to execute, for a short time, our common will, the Constitution; but we watch all his doings with an attentive eye, and at the first step in which he passes the barriers of the Constitution, we summon him to judgment. Each citizen, therefore, is a pillar for sustaining the republican edifice, and is a guardian of its stability. At the time he takes the oath of a citizen, he takes upon his shoulders the burden of aiding in the support of that republic, and guarding her from danger. Herein consists the difference between the subjects of Europe and the citizens of America.—There, his obligation is nothing but to follow blindly the commands of his sovereign; but here his solemn obligation is to ponder upon and weigh well every thing that is done by those to whom the reins of government are entrusted, and see if they maintain the principles of the Constitution, and are faithful to those of their countrymen who placed them in the situations they hold.

From these differences in obligation results the difference in qualities between the citizen of America and the subject of Europe, whose mind is never consulted in the arrangement of public affairs, whose judgment is considered of no value, as the tyrant alone has the right to think, while the subjects' duty is to act accordingly, he being but a mere machine in the hand of the despot. His most unpardonable crime is thinking, and weighing the acts of his master, who pretends to be placed by God at the head of men. But what is the citizen's greatest crime there, is here his greatest duty, and the citizen who follows the mandates of his government here, without reflecting whether they are constitutional or not, is committing high treason towards the republic.

It follows, then, that the first duty of a republican citizen is to keep himself sober, and in a condition to be able to think and to judge. But by indulging in the use of liquors, his intellectual faculties are impaired, not only while in a state of intoxication, but after the immediate effects of the stimuli have subsided, still his senses remain benumbed, and his mind in a state of imbecility; the nerves, those telegraphs of the human will, lose their activity and become torpid; the perceptive powers are feeble and false, and the judgment incorrect; and as the poet says, "when he is best, he is a little worse than man; when he is worst, a little better than a beast."

When a citizen gets drunk he violates his oath to the republic, his oath to be its guardian and protector; for when the guardian is drunk the thieves have an easy prey.

As an individual has in the present to prepare for the future, so has society to establish such rules as will secure its future prosperity and happiness. As the guarantee for the safety of a republic lies solely in the sound judgment of its citizens, it is the duty of every repuhlic to educate her citizens, so that they may ever be in that condition to maintain her republican institutions. For this purpose we establish schools, which are moral and intellectual gardens in which the seeds are evolved, that are by nature planted in the mind and heart of the young citizen, and grow up into trees of life for the republic. At the same time we have to remove all the noxious ingredients from our republican atmosphere that might enervate the moral forces, or weaken the judgment of our citizens, and thus endanger the stability of our beloved republic. Our republican population is small, comparatively, to that of our enemies in Europe. While we have but twenty-five millions, they have two hundred millions; but by our moral force we can overcome their physical force; but our moral forces must continue to be sound and invulnerable. What the opposers of the Temperance Law bring forth as an objection to that law is, when rightly viewed, a proof in favor of that law. They say that in Europe, where the greatest tyranny prevails in other respects, there is no law against the drinking of liquors. This is positive proof that where the people govern, and necessarily must think, a liquor law is necessary. In Europe, for the preservation of tyranny, it is most necessary that the subjects should not think, should have no mind; but as God gave them one, their governments try to render it innoxious by facilitating and promoting the growth of institutions which debase and kill God's noblest gift to man, the mind. Hence their unlimited permission of the use of alcoholic drinks. The contrary course must be pursued in our country. For preserving our freedom, we must give up the freedom of intoxication. Upon the same principle, a man sits down to a table and observes some delectable dishes, but which are injurious to his health, and consequently restrains his appetite, and touches them not. Is he a good citizen, then, who loves to enjoy republican privileges and yet objects to every restraint put upon his appetite or passions?

VERITAS.

Foreign Items.

The Turkish difficulty is considered as settled, although the Czar's acceptance of the proposal has not been announced. His formal acceptance was daily expected.

The vanguard of the Russian forces entered Bucharest, the capital of Wallachia, on the 15th July.

It was rumored at Constantinople, that the United States were negotiating for the purchase of the port of Marmorizza.

The Russian force continued quiescent in the Danubian principalities.

It is reported that England is negotiating with Denmark, to obtain the command of an entrance into the Baltic, in case a war arises with Russia.

The Vienna correspondent of the London Times says: The misunderstanding between the Austrian Government and that of the United States is likely to be a serious one. On the 4th, the Italian and Hungarian refugees in Constantinople gave Mr. March a serenade, and the American diplomatist came out on his balcony, and gave a cheer for the freedom of the United States, Italy, and Hungary. On the 13th, as soon as the two Austrian frigates, Bellona and Novarra, sailed into Smyrna harbor, the United States sloop weighed anchor and left. This circumstance is related by the Austrian paper with an appearance of satisfiaction; but in my opinion this Government will at no distant period have cause to rue the day on which it gave America an opportunity of picking a quarrel. The Austrian press asserts that the assassin of the young cadet—a certain Bassitz, a Hungarian—was in the service of Mr. Lewis, the English clergyman, and it is hinted that the reverend gentleman connived at the murderer's escape. It is necessary to say that any charge against a man with a drop of Anglo-Saxon blood in his veins readily obtains belief!

A conspiracy has just been discovered, and forty-seven persons, some of them students, have been arrested.

The empire of China has been completely divided, the insurgents at Nankin having declared themselves independent of the Tartar dynasty.

Great anxiety was felt at Canton from the fears of a rising there also.

CHANGES AMONG THE JEWS.—A remarkable change is said to be in progress among the Jews. Rabbinism is rapidly losing its influence over them, and multitudes are throwing aside the Mishna and the Talmud, and turning to the study of Moses and the Prophets. There is a great demand for copies of the Old Testament among the Jews in London. Their attention is also extensively turned to the subject of their restoration to Palestine.

HOW TO LIVE.—

We live in deeds, not years; in thoughts, not breaths;
In feeling, not in figures on a dial.
We should count time by heart-throbs.—He most lives
Who thinks most; feels the noblest; acts the best.—Bailey.

Genius and Poverty.

If there be aught of sublimity in the moral or in the mental world, the sight of the young man, struggling against adverse circumstances, and in the face of the world's cold sympathy, to develope the powers of his being, is a sublime one;—more especially if he be homeless and pennyless, aye, and friendless too, except that he have the friendship of his conscience and his God. There is a philosophy, false in its conception and ruinous in its results, which says, that poverty is favorable to the development of mind. Such a philosophy is akin to that which plans battles for others to fight; or to that other, which, seated at home in its well-padded chair beside a blazing fire, to its own infinite satisfaction proves to be practicable the hitherto unaccomplished North-West Passage. War, and ocean storms, and gnawing, withering poverty, are realities which cannot be held in abeyance by beautiful theories!

The Hindoo mythology represents the goddess Durga as feasting upon the bodies of human victims, and decorating her person with a necklace of skulls. Such a monster is Poverty. She is a tyrant, who has erected her palace from the bones of her subjects, and cemented the fabric with their quivering flesh! Genius and Poverty may exist together, and Genius may rise and overcome Poverty, but while they are together, Poverty is the sovereign, and most despotically does she sway her scepter. She is a hideous hag, who, with her long, skinny fingers, strives to throttle Genius in his cradle, and if thwarted here, pursues him all his life with a hatred untiring, and a malignity unquenched!

The men who imagine the influences of Poverty upon the growth of mind to be so benign, so genial in their nature, talk of the glorious results of physical labor, just as if these results would not be tenfold more glorious, if the crushing influence of Poverty were removed. The results of physical labor are indeed glorious! The growing vineyards, the furrowed fields, the waving grain, the well-trained hedge, and the serpentine enclosure of rough rails, the log cabin in the woods, and the rising spire in the city, the farm house of the sturdy yeoman, and the marble mansion of the millionare, the laden ship, clasped in the broad arms of the sea, and rocked in the pulses of its beating heart, and the keel boat, careering on the rapids of the Upper Mississippi, like an Indian hunter on a prairie steed, the champing of the steam horse, and the husky breathing of the huge leviathans of the Cunard line, hamlet and village and metropolis, the clicking type, and the echoing hammer, and the glowing forge, the sweat-grimed brow and the sturdy arm, all exhibit the glorious results of physical labor, but they show equally well the glorious achievements of Genius untrammeled by Poverty! If the inventors of many of the grandest improvements in art have struggled for a precarious subsistence, the more shame to the society that permitted it! * * * *

The influence of poverty in retarding the growth of mind, explains the otherwise anomalous fact, that for so long a time it was held as almost self-evident that a great man could not, by any possibility, arise from among the common people—that with the nobility and clergy alone had nature deposited the germs of intellect. "If you would keep men in servitude, they must not be permitted to think, and that they may not think, you must keep from them the key to the sources of thought—you must keep money from their hands." Thus reasons Despotism, and most rightly does she reason. Poverty ever crushes Genius—ever prevents its development!

There is a foul thing, half beast and half bird, called the vampyre, which comes in secretly, at night, to the beds of the sleeping, and sucks the crimson current from their veins to glut its own insatiate maw! It leaves no mark of violence—it does its work stealthily and silently! The sleeper feels no pain, but passes unconsciously from the realm of sleep to the realm of death! Poverty is the vampyre of Genius!

When Genius is thus deprived of its life blood, when the last struggle is over, when the death-damp lies upon the brow of intellectual greatness blighted in its blooming, then may you see the monster, standing on tiptoe, with outstretched wings, gloating over the bloodless body of its murdered victim! List to its hideous chuckle of exultation as it flaps its dusky pinions in fiendish triumph over the corpse of the fallen!—Western Lit. Mag.

A RUMSELLER CAUGHT.—A temperanee lecturer, at a meetfng in Jersey city, came down with a heavy hand on the rumseller, when a man rose and said: "I am one of the trustees of this church, and you call me a murderer. You can't have this church to lecture in any more. I appeal to those around me to say if I am a murderer." A woman instantly arose and cried out: "Yes, you are a murderer—you murdered my husband bg giving him rum!" Another woman exclaimed: "Yes, and you murdered mine! His feelings could not have been of the most pleasant kind.

Rum accounts for it.

RECOVERY OF THE BODY OF THE MAN LOST AT THE FALLS.—The body of Andrew Hermann, whose sad fate at the Falls excited so much attention, has been recovered. It was found near the landing of the "Maid of the Mist," below the Suspension Bridge. The head and body were much mangled—a sharp stone, or other object having pierced the body, either in its fearful descent, or afterwards.

The facts of the case, as elicited from the evidence of Mr. Brown, a resident at Niagara Falls, are, that three Germans, in his employ, were engaged in boating sand to French's Landing, which was used in building at the Falls. On Monday evening they went to the Falls, and there got somewhat intoxicated, although they usually sustained the reputation of being sober and industrious laborers. Returning from the Falls to their boat, they put out into the river about nine o'clock in the evening, for their own amusement. Concluding they had not sufficient canvas, they returned to shore, and one of the three started for the Falls to obtain more, the other two again putting out into the river. On the return of the third, the boat was nowhere to be seen, and its fate was not known until the next morning.—Exchange paper.

We expected it was so. This terrible event should tingle in the ears of the world. A voice from Niagara, louder and stronger than her cataract, should arise, "Down with the grog-shops!" It should pass over the States and awaken a league, to sweep these holes of death and devils from the entire Union. Keep your eye on the elections and the Maine Law.

Carson League.

PARTIES AT THE COURT OF RUSSIA.—The London correspondent of the New York Commercial Advertiser, in his letter of the 1st inst., referring to the Russian and Turkish dispute, says:

The Court of Russia is said to be divided into two parties on the matter. One of them is represented by the veteran negotiator, Count Nesselrode, and is entirely in favor of moderation; while the other finds an instrument, if not a leader, in Prince Menschikoff, whose reckless readiness for war is alleged to be unquestionable. It is the old contest between the fanatics and the rationalists, and no positive opinion seems to be formed as to which is the side that will obtain the Emperor's ultimate adherence. All the intellect of the country, it may be presumed, is with Nesselrode, but in nations far more civilized than Russia, to say that a statesman has intellect in his favor, and antiquated prejudice agrinst him, is to announce that he is in a heavy minority. A circumstance that adds to the force of the old and aggressive party at the present moment consists in the fact, that Prince Menschikoff, unlike the usual run of public men in Russia, is looked upon with great reliance by his party, as possessing a high character, superficial sincerity and incorruptibility—which, being united with considerable physical vigor, and uncontroled by caution and logical acumen, give a dangerous influence in crises where every thing depends on self-control and judgment.

IMPORTANT TEMPERANCE MOVEMENT.—The Independent Order of Odd Fellows in Pennsylvania, a body numbering forty-four thousand members, have passed the following resolution in their Grand Lodge, with only eight dissenting votes:

Resolved, That any member of a subordinate Lodge, under the jurisdiction of the Grand Lodge of the I. O. of O. F. of the State of Pennsylvania, who shall keep a tippling shop, or in other words, an unlicensed house for the sale of intoxicating liquors, in violation of the laws of the State, shall be formally proceeded against, and if found guilty shall be expelled.

A LOCOMOTIVE WITHOUT RAILS.—We abridge the following from the Courier des Etats Unis:

A Paris journal gives an account of the invention of a locomotive destined to run on ordinary roads, by M. Alexander Levoi. Yesterday we saw this locomotive, attached to a couple of cars, rolling up the streets, turning the most abrupt corners, and advancing and retiring with the greatest ease. The locomotive has a ten-horse power, and is mounted on four wheels with broad felloes. The inventor seems confident of success.

ISLE ROYALE.—The distance around Lake Superior is 1,076 miles, it being the largest fresh water lake in the world. Isle Royale is forty-five miles from Copper Harbor, and sixteen from the Canadian coast. It is fifty miles long and from three to eight miles wide, and is the largest fresh water island in the world. The Indians call the island, Minoonk, the Grand Place, and considering its singular geological features, beautiful and capacious harbors, and elevated lakes, it is certainly the most imposing as well as the most attractive island in the world.

MORE TESTIMONY FROM VERMONT.—The Vermont Chronicle uses the following language:

When the law was first published, not a few very worthy citizens had doubts about it. In many cases these doubts so far prevailed as to prevent their voting in its favor. But it has now had a brief trial among us. So far as the questions raised respecting it have come before the courts, it has been sustained as a constitutional law—such as it lies within the just discretion of the Legislature. It has emptied at least three of our county jails. The testimony from every part of the State is, that it operates favorably—that the well-being of the community is promoted by it.

For a young woman in any situation of life to be ignorant of the various business that belongs to good housekeeping, is as great a deficiency as merchants not to understand accounts, or the masters of vessels not to be acquainted with navigation. If a woman does not know how the various work of a household should be done, she might as well know nothing, for that is her express vocation; and it matters not how much learning, or how many accomplishments she may have, if she is wanting in that which is to fit her for her peculiar calling.

Temperance Lectures.

Judge Parsley will deliver Temperance Lectures at the following places, commencing at 4 o'clock each day:

St. Louis, Thursday, 18th.
Sidney, Friday, 19th.
M. E. Chapel in Hawpatch, Saturday, 20th.
Columbus, Sunday 21st.
Taylorsville, Monday, 22nd.
Lawton's School-house, Tuesday, 23rd.
Walesborough, Wednesday, 24th.
Jonesville, Thursday, 25th.
Waymansville, Friday, 26th.

By order of the Temperance Board of Jonesville Division.

August 9, 1853.

Notice.

The Eighth Annual Session of the Grand Division of the Sons of Temperance of the State of Indiana, will commence in Temperance Hall in the City of Indianapolis, on Tuesday, October 25, 1853, at 6 o'clock P. M.

P. S. SAGE, G. W. P.
C. WOODWARD, G. S.

August 1, 1853.

$25 Premium.

The undersigned Committee on the state of the Order of the Grand Section of Cadets of Temperance of Indiana, offer the above premium for the most acceptable Initiatory ceremony for Cadets of Temperance. Competitors for the same to be members of some Temperance organization.

All manuscripts to be forwarded to Henry Ohr, G. S., on or before the 20th day of October next.

THEOPHILUS ROBINSON,
H. C. NEWCOMB,
HENRY OHR, } Com.

Indianapolis, Aug. 6th, 1853.

Torchlight and Indiana Cadet please copy.

Call for a State Temperance Convention.

A State Temperance Convention will be held at Madison, Jefferson county, Indiana, beginning on the 28th of September next, and continuing as long as it may determine.

JOHN A. MCCLUNG,
WM. WILSON,
JOHN C. STEELE,
JOHN O'KANE,
WILLIAM HANNAMAN,
CHARLES WOODWARD,
J. W. GORDON, } State Central Committee.

Acknowledgments.

F. M. Bacon, Mexico, 75c.; E. Payne, Alto, Ind., $1.00; of P. M. at Knightstown, $4.50; A. W. Gilmore, Lanesville, $2.00; O. B. Boon, Montpelier, $2.00; Monrovia, Ind., $15.00; J. T. Walker, Evansville, $3.25; W. M. Stretch, Battleground, $3.00; T. R. Brown, Lafayette, $1.50; P. T. Vestal, Bedford, $8.25; J. H. Thompson, Bono, $3.00; J. S. Miller, Logansport, $5.25; Dr. A. Carly, New Salem, $2.00; W. Withers, Bryantsville, $1.00.

CONSTITUTION AND BY-LAWS,

WE are still prepared to print Constitution and By-Laws, where the alterations are few from the copy recommended by the Grand Division, at the following rates:

100 copies, (or less)	$5 00
200 "	8 00
300 "	10 00

We will pay the postage on all ordered from us.

☞ All orders accompanied by the cash, will be promptly attended to.

Address, JOHN H. OHR,
Indianapolis, Indiana.

CHARTERS.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR A DIVISION S. OF T.

(Date.)

The undersigned inhabitants of ——, believing the Order of the Sons of Temperance to be well calculated to extend the blessings of total abstinence, and promote the general welfare of mankind, respectfully petition the Grand Division of the —— of ——, to grant them a Charter to open a new Division, to be called the —— Division, No. —, Sons of Temperance, of the —— of ——, to be located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves, individually and collectively, to be governed by the rules and usages of said Grand Division, and also, by those of the National Division.

Enclosed is the Charter Fee, $5 00. Books, $2 00.

This must be signed by at least eight persons of good character and standing in community, and sent to C. WOODWARD, G. S., Indianapolis, Ind., free of postage.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR A TEMPLE.

(Date.)

The undersigned, believing the Temple of Honor to be well calculated to cement more firmly our fraternal relations, and add to the general prosperity of the cause of Temperance, respectfully petition the Grand Temple of the —— of ——, to grant them a Charter to open a new Temple, to be called the —— Temple of Honor, No. —, of the —— of ——, to be located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves individually and collectively, to be governed by the rules and usages of the Grand Temple, and also by those of the Order at large.

Enclosed is the Charter Fee, $20 00.

To be directed to the G. W. R., free of postage.

This must be signed by at least twenty persons of good standing, and if not known to the G. W. T. or G. W. R., must send satisfactory references.

J. H. OHR, G. W. R.

Indianapolis, Ind.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR CADETS OF TEMPERANCE.

The undersigned, boys of ——, believing the Order of Cadets of Temperance to be well calculated to extend the blessings of total abstinence, and promote the general welfare of mankind, respectfully petition the Grand Section of the State of Indiana, to grant them a charter to open a new Section, to be called the —— Section, No. ——, Cadets of Temperance, of the State of Indiana, to be located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves, individually and collectively to be governed by the rules and usages of said Grand Section, and also those of the acting Head of the Order.

Enclosed is the fee for Charter, R. B.'s and officers' cards, $5 00.

It must also be stated whether the applicants are members of the Order or not; if they are, of what Section. The application to be directed to the Grand Secretary, free of postage.

It must also be certified by a W. P. or P. W. P, that the W. Patron elect is a Son of Temperance in good standing.

Address (post paid) HENRY OHR, G. S., C. o T., Indianapolis, Indiana.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR DAUGHTERS OF TEMPERANCE.

(Date.)

The undersigned, inhabitants of ——, believing the Order of the Daughters of Temperance to be well calculated to extend the blessings of Total Abstinence, and promote the general welfare of mankind, respectfully petition the Grand Union to grant them a charter to open a new Union to be called the —— Union, No. —, D. of T., of the State of Indiana, located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves, individually and collectively, to be governed by the rules and usages of said Grand Union.

Enclosed is the Charter Fee, $5 00.

The above must be signed by at least eleven females, of proper age and good standing in community.

Address (post paid,) Mrs. ELIZA RICHMOND, G. S. S., Indianapolis, Indiana.

New Watch and Jewelry Store.

No 1, Bates House, Washington Street,

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

WE have now open the largest and best assortment of fine Watches and rich Jewelry ever offered in this city, to which we invite the examination of the public.

Our stock is all new—selected with great care, and comprises Watches, Diamond Work, Chains, Pins, Rings, Pencils, Lockets, of all kinds; Silver Ware, Clocks, Perfumery, Brushes, Soaps, Plated Ware, Castors, Fruit Baskets, &c., which we will sell for CASH at New York prices. Mr. E. W. NEFF, of this city, has taken charge of the Watch repairing department, and will spare no pains to give satisfaction to our customers.

july 6-tf E J. BALDWIN & CO.

D. CRAIGHEAD. R. BROWNING.

CRAIGHEAD & BROWNING,

Dealers in all kinds of

Drugs, Medicines, Surgical Instruments, Paints, Oils, Chemicals, Varnishes, Dye Stuffs, Glassware Window Glass. Brushes, Cosmetics, Spices, Cigars, Tobacco, Perfumery, &c.,

WASHINGTON STREET,

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

ALL are respectfully invited to call and examine our stock and prices, as we feel confident we can render satisfaction both as to prices and quality of articles. Great care is taken in the selection of articles, in reference to their purity, as we endeavor at all times to keep such articles as are strictly pure and genuine. Every article will be waranted as represented. Orders from Physicians and others promptly attended to. Particular attention given to filling Prescriptions and compounding Medicines, which, in all cases, shall receive the personal attention of one of the firm. june 30

HANNAMAN & DUZAN,

DEALERS IN

DRUGS AND MEDICINES,

Surgical Instruments, Paints, Oils, Varnishes, Dye Woods, Medical and Window Glass, Brushes, Perfumery, Soaps, &c.

Washington, 3 doors west of Pennsylvania St.,

june 30 1y INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

W. W. ROBERTS,

Druggist and Apothecary.

Wholesale and Retail Dealer in

DRUGS, MEDICINES, PAINTS, OILS, AND DYE STUFFS, BRUSHES, FANCY GOODS, AMERICAN AND FRENCH WINDOW GLASS, &c.

WASHINGTON ST., INDIANAPOLIS.

Physicians, Country Merchants, and the people generally, are invited to examine his stock, which will be sold at the lowest cash price.

☞ QUALITY WARRANTED TO SUIT. ☜

june 22 4m

COMMERCIAL COLLEGE,

(Late Commercial Institute,)

Of Indianapolis,

Established March 31, 1851.

INCORPORATED, 1853.

W. McK. SCOTT, A. M., Founder and President.

JAMES C. HAYDEN, (Late Professor in Bacon's Mercantile College, Cincinnati,)

PROF. OF BOOK-KEEPING AND PENMANSHIP.

THE Session will commence at College Hall as follows:

1st Session on the first Monday of September.
2d Session on the 1st Monday of November.
3d Session on the 1st Monday of January.
4th Session on the 1st Monday of March.
5th Session on the 1st Monday of May.

Having secured, permanently, the services of the distinguished Professor above named, and leased for a term of years the commodious and beautiful Hall formerly known as CONCERT HALL, but now named COLLEGE HALL, which is to be fitted up in a style of great elegance, taste, and convenience, the President would say, that this College now offers advantages superior to all others, for imparting a sound, thorough, and accomplished business education

COURSE OF STUDIES.

The Course of Studies, as enlarged, will be as follows, viz:

1. Book-Keeping, by Single and Double Entry, in all its various branches, and its application to all kinds of business.
2. The Laws, Customs, and Usages of Trade and Commerce.
3. Mercantile Arithmetic, upon the short and easy system of cancelation, (taught in no other College.)
4. Commercial Law, in a series of Lectures, thorough and systematic.
5. Business Penmanship.
6. Commercial Correspondence.
7. Lectures upon Banking, Political Economy, and other subjects valusble to the business man.

EXPENSES.

Cards of Admission, invariably in advance, or secured, $25; Diplomas $3; Stationery $5; Boarding $2 50 per week; incidentals, at option of student, $15. Making entire expenses about $75.

On application, a Catalogue will be furnished, giving full particulars.

All letters will receive prompt attention on being directed, post-paid, to

june 8 W. McK. SCOTT, President.

"God never made his works for man to mend." DR. FRANKLIN.

KIER'S ROCK OIL.

A NEW AND MOST IMPORTANT REMEDY FOR DISEASE.

DISCOVERED IN 1849.

IS drawn from a deep well near Pittsburgh—has been used with remarkable success in Ohio and Pennsylvania, and more Eastern States—and is now working its way West. An opportunity is now offered to the Afflicted for testing it. Where known and tried, it at once makes firm friends, and cures which are eloquent in its praise. Certificates of its power to heal are at hand—but we know well, reader, that such evidence, to have weight with you, now-a-days, must be in your own neighborhood.—You have only to try the Oil to be satisfied—it will SPEAK FOR ITSELF.

We have no war with the legion of Nostrums and Specifics of the day—we know but little about them—some say they are good for nothing. However that may be, the

Petroleum

will not be suppressed and kept back by reason of the above nostrums—duty and inclination both forbid it.

Those who are afflicted, are respectfully invited to get a Circular and look over the Directions for

Ague, Rheumatism, Piles, Diarrhœa, Flux, Tooth Ache, Burns, Worms, Scrofula, Coughs, Bronchitis, Croup, Old Sores, Cholera Morbus, Contractions of the Limbs and Joints, Sore Eyes, Blindness, Costiveness, Dyspepsia, and other Diseases.

By that time you may say, "it cures too much." But recollect it is not a HUMAN INVENTION, but compounded by Nature's master hand—and Nature does not do her work by halves.

The Oil is used both internally and externally.

As AGUE, SORE EYES, PILES, RHEUMATISM, and SCROFULA are so common in many parts of the West, we are constrained to say, that while this Oil will cure and relieve other diseases, it has been and is constantly used with most complete success in these cases.

☞ Price 50 cents per Bottle (half pint)

Beware of all Rock Oil preparations, as some persons are offering a spurious article. Look for S. M. KIER'S name written on the label of the bottle.

For sale by the Druggists throughout Indiana, and by TOMLINSON BROTHERS, J. P. POPE & Co., S. ROSENGARTEN, WM. TILLEY, and at wholesale by W. W. ROBERTS, Indianapolis, Indiana.

R. M. LYON, Fort Wayne,

may25 10w Proprietor in the Western States.

SOMETHING NEW.

LATHROP & STEVENS, Wholesale and Retail Dealers in BOOTS AND SHOES, at the West room in the Bates House, Washington Street, Indianapolis.

We are now opening a new and splendid stock of Boots and Shoes of every variety and style, which we are receiving direct from the manufacturers.—We design to keep constantly on hand a good assortment of the best quality of goods manufactured, which we can warrant to give satisfaction to all who may give them a trial. We will sell by the case, dozen, or single pair, at low prices for cash.—Our stock consists in part of Gents' fine Cloth, silk warp, glove kid, buck, patent calf, and enameled Gaiters and Ties of every variety and style; Ladies' fine silk warp Gaiters, Buskins, Ties, Slippers and Boots; Misses' ditto; Men's calf, goat, kip, and thick Boots and Brogans; Boys' and Youths' ditto; assorted Ladies, kid, goat and calf Boots and Buskins; Misses' ditto. Also every variety of Children's Shoes. Come and see for yourselves.

LATHROP & STEVENS,

may 25 4w Indianapolis, Indiana.

TEMPERANCE INN,

Bloomington, Indiana.

J. & S. M. ORCHARD, PROPRIETORS.

TRAVELLERS will find it to their advantage to call and try the accommodation of the TEMPERANCE INN. Stage office for all the different routes, in connection with this House. may25 6m ¶

THE LATEST WONDER of the 19th CENTURY.

DR. G. W. BENNETT'S

Celebrated Eye-Balm.

A SPECIFIC FOR CHRONIC, SORE, INFLAMED, AND WEAK EYES.

Prepared only by Dr. George W. Bennett, and for sale by Merchants and Druggists generally.

THIS Balm is an excellent and certain cure for sore and inflamed Eyes, in all cases of Psoroic, Scrofulous, and Purulent Opthalmia, and what is commonly termed wild hairs in the eye-lids. It is a specific in Infantile, Purulent, and Scrofulous Inflamed, and Sore Eyes, and all in the various diseases of the Eyes, that prevail among the human family, in every climate. It will be found a sovereign remedy if properly applied.

W. W. ROBERTS, Indianapolis, Ind. General Agent for State of Indiana, to whom all orders must be addressed.

Price---Twenty-five Cents.

I warrant the above Balm to cure if the directions are strictly observed, or return the money.

june 22 4m G. W. BENNETT.

REAL ESTATE AND GENERAL AGENCY OFFICE,

INDIANAPOLIS, INDIANA.

UNDER THE CONTROL OF W. M'K. SCOTT, Attorney & Counsellor at Law, and Notary Public.

The attention of the Agency will be devoted,

First—To the collection of debts and the payment of Taxes for non-residents in any county in the State. Also, the redemption of Lands sold for Taxes, sale, purchase or lease of Lands, purchase of adverse claims, examination and perfection of Title, &c., &c.

Second—To the prosecution of claims against the General Government, procuring Land Warrants, Patent Rights, and Pensions under the various Pension Laws, &c.

Third—All other Miscellaneous agencies as may be intrusted to the care of this office.

Fourth—The taking of Depositions and Attestation of all instruments requiring a seal

In all cases requiring an outlay of money for the benefit of individuals, the requisite funds must be transmitted in advance.

Prompt attention to all letters on business that are pre-paid. Address W. M'K. SCOTT,

Real Estate and General Agent,

jan 5-1y Indianapolis, Ind.

ADAMS & CO'S EXPRESS.

WE are now running a daily line East and West, accompanied by special messengers, and with the speed of the mails, running our own cars with the passenger trains.

Packages will be received at the cars up to the time of starting, and at our office until 1 o'clock each day.

We are prepared to transport packages, bank notes and specie, to and from any of the eastern cities, also, Louisville, Frankfort, and Lexington, Ky., St. Louis, Mo., or any points on the Ohio and Mississippi rivers; and to and from Terre Haute, and all intermediate points, and to forward freight from Terre Haute up and down the Wabash.

In addition to these, we have the most complete arrangements for transporting packages to and from California and Europe.

Exchange on England, Ireland, and Scotland, for sale, payable at any bank in the kingdom.

Foreign passage tickets; by Grinnell, Minturn & Co.'s line to Liverpool and London, constantly on hand, and for sale at the lowest rates.

Notes, drafts, and bills collected in any of the Eastern or Western cities.

Orders for goods to be returned by Express, sent free. Our rates of charges have been greatly reduced, and the public will find this a safe and expeditious method of transportation.

Indianapolis, June 30, 1852. ADAMS & CO.

Office in Indianapolis in Journal Building, west side Pennsylvania Street.

Office open during business hours.

june30 1y C. WOODWARD, Agent.

The Cheapest Illustrated Paper for the Young.

PRICE ONLY TEN CENTS A YEAR, or nearly three papers for one cent, where 100 copies are taken.

Twenty-six numbers a year, and each number illustrated with from three to seven engravings.

The Youth's Penny Gazette,

A strictly Religious and Moral Paper, is published by the AMERICAN SUNDAY SCHOOL UNION and is designed to furnish the Children and Youth of the United States with reading matter, in a popular form, for the improvement of Mind and Heart.

It is published (not monthly, nor weekly, but) every other week, or twenty-six numbers in a year. It is religious but unsectarian, and the matter is carefully prepared with a view to the habits, character and prospects of American Youth

TERMS OF THE PENNY GAZETTE.

$10 a year, in advance, for 100 copies, to one address. $5 a year, in advance, for 40 copies, to one address. $3 a year, in advance, for 20 copies, to one address. Single subscriptions, 25 cents per year.

TERMS BY MAIL, POSTAGE PAID.

☞ When the postage is paid at the place of mailing, the terms are very low. For $15 remitted, we will send 100 copies of the paper for one year, to one address—we paying postage. For $7 remitted, we will send 40 copies of the paper to one address, for one year—we paying postage. For $3 50 remitted, we will send 20 copies of the paper for one year, to one address—we paying postage. Less than 20 cannot be sent at this cheap rate.

Subscriptions received at the Society's House, No. 146 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.

Feb 16 3w G. S. SCOFIELD, Agent.

TO BUILDERS.

North Western Christian University.

THE Building Committee of the Board of Directors of the North-Western Christiana University, propose contracting for the west wing of the University Building, to be put up on the University grounds in the vicinity of Indianapolis.

Sealed Proposals in detail, with prices affixed for doing the work necessary to the completion of the said Wing, will be received until the 19th day of July next, and may be handed to the undersigned, or to J. T. Cox. Secretary of the Company, at the Book Store of Cox & Mathes, in Indianapolis

The materials and work to be according to the plan, drawings and specifications prepared by Wm. Tinsley, Architect, which may be seen and examined at his room, on the east side of Pennsylvania street, three doors north of the north-east Diagonal, in Indianapolis. The specifications have been materially changed and modified, so as to reduce the cost of the building.

Proposals for the whole combined, would be preferred; but will be received for the different parts and portions thereof separotely. The whole to be completed and fit for use by the first day of September, 1854.

Payments will be made as the work progresses, at such short periods as may suit the covenience of the Contractors. Bond and security will be required for the performance of the work.

In behalf of the Building Committee:

OVID BUTLER,

President of the Board of Directors.

June 10, 1853. june 22 3w

LITTLE. DRUM & ANDERSONS

WHOLESALE DEALERS IN

STAPLE AND FANCY DRY GOODS, BOOTS, SHOES, HATS, CAPS, STATIONERY, NOTIONS, TRIMMINGS, GROCERIES, HARDWARE, QUEENSWARE, AND GLASSWARE,

North side of Washington Street,

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

WE are receiving Country Produce of all descriptions, and paying the highest market price. Dealers visiting Indianapolis are respectfully invited to call and examine our stock and prices, both for Produce and Merchandise generally. june30 tf

JAMES HALL,

MERCHANT TAILOR,

No. 2. Temperance, Hall, Indianapolis,

Manufactu'ng & Clothing Emporium,

Wholesale and Retail Dealer in Ready Made Clothing, Cloths, Cassimers, Vestings, Trimmings, Trunks, Sachels, Canes, Umbrellas, Hats, Caps, a every description of Gentlemen's Furnishing.

Also:

General Agency for the sale of GRAND AND SUBORDINATE REGALIA, EMBLEMS, COSTUMES, &C., FOR THE ORDERS OF MASONS, ODD FELLOWS, TEMPLE OF HONOR, SON, DAUGHTERS, AND CADETS OF TEMPERANCE. oct27 1y

The American Life and Health Insurance Company.

Office—No. 7, South Third St., Philadelphia.

Officers.

LEONARD JEWELL, President.
JAMES PEACOCK, Treasurer,
JOHN C. SIMS, Sec'y and Actuary.
THOS. S. SMITH, Solicitor

JOHN F. BIRD, FRED. A. FICKARDT, } Medical Examiners.

CHARLES WOODWARD, Indianapolis, Ind., General Agent for the State of Indiana.

THIS Company issues policies at Total Abstinence Rates, Joint stock Rates, and at Mutual Rates, which for $1000 on the life of a person 30 years of age, are as follows:

Age.	Total Abstinence.	Joint Stock.	Mutual
30	$15.40	$19.60	$23.60

A further table of Rates will be furnished at the Office.

The condition in Total Abstinence rates (believed to be the lowest in the Union,) is entire forfeiture upon the departure of the Insured from Total Abstinence in its strictest sense.

Policies at Joint Stock and Mutual rates, contain no condition except as usual in Life Insurance.

HEALTH INSURANCE DEPARTMENT.

All Moneys received from the Insured, for Annual Premiums, after deducting expenses, will be divided among the Sick

The Public have for some time been familiar with the subject of Life and Health Insurance, but it is obvious that too little thoughts has been given to the latter. LIFE Insurance benefits our successors, while HEALTH Insurance directly benefits ourselves. It makes provision for a time of sickness, when the products of a man's industry are cut off, and want unites with Disease to aggravate his distress. It is at this gloomy period, when he is prostrated and helpless, and when despondency would otherwise overwhelm him, that the holder of a Health Insurance Policy will realize its benefits.

RATES, under 50 years of age,

$2,00	per year,	for	$2,00	per week,
3,00	"	"	3,00	"
4,00	"	"	4,00	"
5,00	"	"	5,00	"
6,00	"	"	6,00	"

Over fifty and under sixty.

$2,50	per year,	for	$2,50	per week.
3,75	"	"	3,00	"
5,00	"	"	4,00	"
6,25	"	"	5,00	"
7,50	"	"	6,00	"

When the Fund shall amount to Three Dollars and upwards for every person insured and sufficient to warrant an additional distribution, the weekly allowances will be increased in accordance with the Rules of the Policy.

All the members of a Temple or Division insured at greatly reduced rates.

Applications for Agencies in any of the cities or towns in the State, should be made to the undersigned, post paid, or in person.

As Agent for the above Company, I am prepared to receive applications for Policies at any of the above rates.

CHARLES WOODWARD, Agent,

At ADAMS & CO.'S Express Office.

J. L. MOTHERSHEAD, Medical Examiner.

june 30 '52-1y

Ohio Life Insurance Company,

Capital $100,000.

JOINT STOCK AND MUTUAL,

CINCINNATI.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS.

Wm. Burnet, Jno. N. Ridgway, Chas. Goodman,
S. Robert, E. S. Haines, Jno. M. Blair,
J. W. Donohue, Eden B. Reeder, Wm. Person.

WM. BURNET, President.

S. W. REEDER, Sec'y J. W. DONOHUE, Vice Pres't

Office in Reeder's Building, Third street, between Almy's and City Bank.

This Company insures Lives at the lowest rates consistent with safety, either upon the Joint Stock or Mutual plan.

In the Joint Stock Department, premium payable quarterly, semi-annually or annually. On the Mutual plan, one-half the premium paid in Cash, the balance by a note bearing six per cent. interest—the interest only payable annually. Persons insuring on the mutual plan, participate in the profits of the Company in that department.

The undersigned having been appointed agent for the above Company, is prepared to fill applications for Life Insurance, on favorable terms.

Any information on the subject and pamphlets explaining the nature and utility of Life Insurance, furnished without charge, at the office of the Agent.

C. WOODWARD, Agent.

Office at Adam's & Co's Express Office, Journal Building, Pennsylvania street, Indianapolis, Ind.

june 30, '52-1y.

Railroad City Book Store.

COX & MATHEs,

South side of Washington. between Illinois and Meridian streets,

INDIANAPOLIS, INDIANA.

AT wholesale and retail, Standard and Miscellaneous Works, Law, and Medical Books, School Books, Plain and Fancy Stalionery, Blank Books, Wall Papers, &c., &c. mar 2

CHEAP WATCHES & JEWELRY.

Good Gold Watches at $24!

WE are now in our new Room No. 1, Palmer House, with a lot of beautiful Watches and Jewelry which we are selling lower than ever heretofore sold in Indianapolis, for instance we sell

Good 18 K Case Gold Lepines at $24.
" 18/K " " Levers at $28.
" Silver Anchor Levers $12 to $18.
" " Cylenders, $9 to $12.
" " Quarter's $6 to $10.

In addition to the above we have a fine assortment of other description of Watches all of which we will sell lower than any other firm dare sell in the place. I have in my employ a very superior Watch Repairer who will always be on on hand to do watch repairing of every description. Mr. Michot has worked in Geneva, Paris, New York and other large cities and has had great experience in his Branch of the business. All Watches warranted for one year, and the money in all cases refunded, provided they do not give entire satisfaction.

feb9 tf E. W. NEFF.

SMALL CHANGE.

THE undersigned is prepared to furnish Merchants and others with three cent pieces from the United States Mint at Philadelphia, free of transportation, in sums of 30, 60, and 90 dollars, upon deposit of Gold or Eastern Exchange. Also cents and half cents, upon payment of frieght on gold to Philadelphia, or on Eastern Exchange free of freight.

C. WOODWARD, Agent,

june 30 Adams & Co.'s Express.

A CHANCE TO MAKE MONEY.

Profitable and honorable Employment!

THE Subscriber is desirous of having an agent in each county and town of the Union. A capital of from $5 to $10 only will be required, and anything like an efficient, energetic man can make from three to five dollars per day; indeed some of the Agents now employed are realizing twice that sum. Every information will be given by addressing,

(postage paid) WM. A. KINSLER,

june 15 3w ¶ Box 601, Philadelphia P. O.

THE ILLUSTRATED MAGAZINE OF ART.

THE five numbers of this Magazine which are published, place it at the head of publications of this kind No expense will be spared to make it in every respect worthy of the name, the "Illustrated Magazine of Art. The Engavings which are preparing for the future numbers are in the hands of first-class American and European Artists.

A Series of most interesting Tales will appear in it. "The School of Life," written and Illustrated by ANNA MARY, daughter of William and Mary Howitt, will shortly appear; also, "The Dead Bridal," an historical romance, illustrative of the most interesting period in the history of the Venetian Republic, by JONATHAN FREKE SLINGSBY, of the Dublin University Magazine; contributions, too, from WILLIAM and MARY HOWITT, PERCY B. ST. JOHN, and other writers of distinction in America and Europe.

The following is a brief outline of the plan of the Magazine:

I. The Historical Department will abound with picturesque representations of the most remarkable events which have occurred in this and other countries; accompanied with interesting anecdotes and details from the pen of the most eminent writers of the day. This department will contain several splendid engravings, designed by the first artists of the world, and engraved in the highest style of modern art.

II. The Men and Women of the Age. This department will consist of beautifully executed portraits of the leading characters of the age, especially of those who figure on the stage of humanity as the world's benefactors. Each portrait will be accompanied by an interesting biographical sketch.

III. The Wonders of Natural History, Botany, and other sciences, will be developed in choice Engravings of Beasts, Birds, Fishes, Insects, Forest Trees, Flowers, Geological and Fossil Specimens, &c., with accompanying descriptions.

IV. The Triumphs of Architectural Art will be displayed in exquisitely finished representations of Cathedrals, Churches, Palaces, and other models of ancient and modern Architectural Art.

V. The Works of the Great Masters, selected from the principal Galleries of Art in the World. In general, the portrait of the Master will be given, accompanied with a highly finished engraved copy of his chef d'œuvre.

VI. The Scientific Portions will be rendered highly interesting by the familiar explanations, and the numerous diagrams which will accompany each subject.

VII. Manufactures. The principal manufaciuring processes in use will be fully explained by minute details, and an abundance of beautiful engravings.

VIII. Machinery and Inventions will have due attention paid to them, and be described by numerous appropriate engravings.

IX. The Literary Department, independently of the various articles accompanying the illustrations, will comprise original and interesting narratives, contributed by the most popular writers of the day, with numerous illustrations.

In every respect, the "Illustrated Magazine of Art," will be decidedly

SUPERIOR TO ANY MAGAZINE OF THE DAY.

Each Monthly part will contain at least Thirty superb Engravings, four of which will be printed separately, on supefine Plate Paper.

The greatest care will be manifested in every department of production. The Paper will be of the first manufacture, and the Ink supplied from the celebrated Printing Ink Establishment of Messrs. Lawson & Co., of Paris. Six of the monthly portions, when completed, will form a volume which, for interest, originality, value and beauty, will defy competition. It will not only be an interesting family book, but a rich ornament for the drawing-room table, and a pleasant companion in the study.

The parts will appear on the First of every Month at Twenty-five Cents each.

ALEXANDER MONTGOMERY,

may 25 17 Spruce Street, New-York.

SPLENDIDLY ILLUSTRATED WORKS.

THE ALPS, SWITZERLAND, SAVOY AND LOMBARDY.

With the Magazine for June will be ready, Part I., price Twenty-five Cents, of a Magnificent Work to be completed in Twelve Monthly Parts, entitled

THE ALPS, SWITZERLAND, SAVOY AND LOMBARDY, with an account of the most recent Ascents to Mont Blanc, &c. By the Rev. Charles Williams. This work, when completed, will form a large thick Volume, in Imperial Octavo, containing upwards of Three Hundred beautiful Engravings, descriptive of the peculiar Scenery of those most interesting portions of Europe, with the Occupations of the Inhabitants, &c., &c.

Cassell's Natural History.

On the First of July will commence

CASSELL'S NATURAL HISTORY, which for variety, beauty and completeness, will claim to be considered as a first-class work, upon this most interesting subject. The First volume will be devoted to the Feathered Tribe of the Creation and will contain upwards of Three Hundred Engravings, in the first style of Art. The volume will be completed in Twelve Monthly Parts, Imperial Octavo. Price 25 cents each.

History of England.

On the First of July will appear Part I., price 25 cts. of THE ILLUSTRATED HISTORY OF ENGLAND, from the earliest period on record to the present time. Edited by ROBERT FERGUSON, LL. D.

This History, which is intended to form a great National Work, will extend to Four Volumes, Imperial Octavo; each Volume to be completed in Twelve Monthly Parts, price 25 cents each. The Work will comprehend the Political, Civil, and Domestic History of the Nation, and its Progress in Civilization, Literature, Art, &c. It will be profusely Illustrated with Engravings from Designs by GILBERT, PHILLIPPOTEAUX, WILLIAMS, and others. Representations of the most remarkable Events will be worked separately upon Plate Paper. The Portraits will form a complete Gallery, not only of the Monarchs, but of those individuals whose names are prominent in England's History. Also, Antiquities, including Autographs. Buildings, Costume, Furniture, Arms, Coins, Monuments, Manufactures &c., of each Epoch.

History of Hungary.

July First will be published, in one Handsome Volume, Imperial Octavo, price, One Dollar and Twenty-five Cents, in Cloth Boards,

THE ILLUSTRATED HISTORY OF HUNGARY, AND THE MAGYARS, from the Earliest Period to the clos of the late War. By EDWARD LAWRENCE GODKIN. The Volume will be Illustrated with One Hundred highly finished Engravings, including representations of the principal Battles; Portraits of the early Kings, and of the Statesmen and Generals who figured in the War of Independence; Costumes of the Peasantry, &c.; Views of the chief Towns and Fortresses, &c.; with an accurate Description of the Manners and Customs of the People, their Literature, Commerce, Arts, &c.

ALEXANDER MONTGOMERY,

may25 Publisher, 17 Spruce Street, New-York.

MANSION HOUSE,

Cambridge City, Indiana.

J. CUNNINGHAM, Proprietor.

TRAVELLERS

Will find it to their advantage to call and try the accommodation of the MANSION HOUSE.

STAGE OFFICE also in connection with this House.

may 4 6m

INDIANA STATE LIBRARY

TEMPERANCE CHART.

A Weekly Journal:---Devoted to Temperance, Morality, Education, Literature, Useful Arts, Science, General Intelligence, &c.

J. W. GORDON, M. D., EDITOR.] ORGAN OF THE GRAND DIVISION OF INDIANA. [JOHN H. OHR, PRINTER.

VOL. III. INDIANAPOLIS, IND., WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 24, 1853. NO. 9.

THE TEMPERANCE CHART,

IS PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY, BY THE GRAND DIVISION, S. of T. OF INDIANA.

Edited by J. W. Gordon, M. D.

To whom all Communications and Subscriptions must be addressed, post-paid.

OFFICE—in second story of Temperance Hall Building, Washington St., Indianapolis.

TERMS:

Single copy, one year,..... 75 cts.

☞ In advance in all cases,

TERMS OF ADVERTISING.—Circulation 4000 copies.

One Squre, (12 lines,) for one week,	$0 50
" " for each subsequent insertion,	25
" " for 3 months,	3 00
" " for 6 months,	5 00
" " for 1 year without alteration,	8 00
" " for 1 year, with changes,	12 00

A reduction made on larger advertisements.
Cuts double the above rates.
Advertisements must be handed in by Saturday, of each week, to insure insertion.
Applications for advertising, or for any kind of Printing for the Order, must be made to
J. H. OHR, Indianapolis.

POETRY.

The Life Gauge.

They err who measure life by years,
With false or thoughtless tongues,
Some hearts grow old before their time;
Others are always young!

'Tis not the number of the lines
Of life's fast filling page;
'Tis not the pulses' added throbs
Which constitutes their age.

Some souls are serfs among the free,
While others nobly thrive;
They stand just where their fathers stood;
Dead even while they live!

Others, all spirit, heart and sense;
Their's the mysterious power
To live, in thrills of joy or woe,
A twelvemonth in an hour!

Seize, then, the minutes as they pass,
The woof of life is THOUGHT!
Warm up thy colors, let them glow,
By fire or fancy fraught.

Live to some purpose—make thy life
A gift of use to to thee!
A joy, a good, a golden hope,
A heavenly harmony!

MISCELLANEOUS.

The Mysterious Travelers.

TRANSLATED FROM THE FRENCH.

In ancient times, there once lived, at Manheim, a young man called Otto, who was brave and intelligent, but incapable of bridling his desires. When he wished for anything, he spared no effort to obtain it; and his passions were like storm-winds, which crossed valleys, rivers, and mountains, crushing everything in their passage. Tired of the quiet life he had led at Manheim, he one day formed a plan to set out on a long journey, at the end of which he hoped to find fortune and happiness.—Consequently he put his best clothes in a bundle, placed in his girdle all the money he possessed, and started, without knowing whither he was going. After walking several days, he found himself at the entrance of a large forest, which extended as far as the eye could reach. Three travelers had stopped here, and seemed like himself, to be preparing to cross it. One was a tall, haughty woman, with a threatening mien, holding in her hand a javelin; the second, a young girl half asleep, reclining in a costly chariot drawn by four oxen; and the third, an old woman in rags with a haggard air. Otto saluted them, inquiring whether they were acquainted with the forest, and on their replying in the affirmative, asked permission to accompany them, that he might not lose his way. All three consented, and they set out. The young man soon perceived that his companions possessed some supernatural powers; but he was not afraid, and continued his walk, conversing with the three strangers.

They had already pursued for several hours the path marked out among the trees, when the sound of a horse's footstep was heard right behind them. Otto turned and recognized a citizen of Manheim, who had always been his greatest enemy, and whom he had hated for many years. The citizen overtook the foot-passengers, and smiled insolently, and went on. Otto became very angry. "I would give all I possoss, and almost all I ever expect to possess, to revenge myself on the pride and haughtiness of that man."

"I can satisfy thee," said the tall lady with the javelin. "Shall I make of him a blind and lame beggar? You have only to pay the price of this transformation."

"And what is the price?" asked Otto eagerly.

"Thy right eye."

"I would willingly give it to be revenged."

The young man above mentioned had scarcely finished speaking, when the transformation promised by his companion took place, and he found himself blind of an eye. He was at first a little surprised, but consoled himself with the thought that the other was left, and that he could still see the misery of his enemy. Meanwhile they continued to march several hours without reaching the end of the forest, the road constantly becoming steeper and more difficult. Otto, who began to be fatigued, and looked with envy on the chariot in which the young girl was half reclining. It was so skillfully constructed that the deepest ruts scarcely jolted it.

"All roads must seem very smooth and short in this chariot," said he approaching, "and I should like such a one myself."

"Is that all?" replied the seoond traveler; "I can this instant procure for you what you desire."

She struck with her foot the chariot in which she rode; it seemed to become double, and Otto perceived a second equipage, drawn by two black oxen. Recovered from his astonishment, he thanked the young girl, and was about to enter, when she stopped him by a gesture.

"I have fulfilled your desire," said she, "but I cannot make a worse bargain than my sister has made. You have given her one of your eyes, you must give me one of your arms."

Otto was at first a little disconcerted, but he was very tired, the chariot was before him, and, as I have already said, he he had never known how to conquer his desires; so, after a short hesitation, he accepted the proposal, and found himself seated in his new carriage deprived of his right arm. The journey continued thus some time. Meanwhile Otto began to suffer from hunger and thirst. The old woman, who was walking by his side, seemed to perceive it.

"You are sad, my boy," said she; "when one is hungry, one is easily discouraged; but I possess a certain remedy against faintness."

"What is it?" asked the young man.

"You see this flask which I have in my hand, and often carry to my lips," replied the traveler; "it contains joy, forgetfulness of trouble, and all the hopes of earth. Whoever drinks of it finds himself happy; and I will not sell it to you more dearly than my sisters; for I ask, in exchange, only half of your brain."

The young man this time refused. He began to be frightened at these successive bargains. But the old woman made him taste of the liquor in the flask, which appeared so delicious, that, after having resisted some time, he again consented.

The promised effect soon took place; he had scarcely drank, when he felt his strength revive. His heart became joyous and confident, and, after having sung all the songs he knew, he fell fast asleep in his chariot, without caring what became of him. When he awoke, the three travelers had disappeared, and he was alone, at the entrance of a village. He tried to rise, but one side of his body was immovable; he tried to look, but the only eye he had was dim; he attempted to speak, but his tongue stammered, and he could collect only half his ideas. At last he comprehended the greatness of the sacrifices he had lightly made; the three traveling companions, whom fate had sent him, had left him no resources but to beg his bread until he died.

Would you know the names of these companions? The woman with the javelin was Hatred; the youg girl reclining in the chariot, Indolence; and the woman with the flask, Intemperance.

ALAS POOR YORICK!—The rummies of Detroit made a threat, that if the sale of liquors was prohibited in that city, they would establish a depot across the water, on the Canadian side, and draw the business of the city away, by establishing a cheap ferry, &c. Directly after this astounding (?) announcement, came the intelligence that the Canadian authorities had decreed that no spirituous liquors should be sold within eight miles of any public works, which utterly cuts off the happy project of the poor defeated whisky dealers. What now?

Strange News from China.

The news from China is of an astonishing character. It is not remarkable for any unexpected success of the rebels, or any recovery of their lost fortune by the imperialists. The insurgents now hold Nankin, which is reported to be in a state of ruin, Chin-kiang, and Yangchow, and the possessions between these cities, all which are put into a complete state of defence. The imperial party, however, are not by any means despairing. They gird themselves with great energy to prosecute the war, and have already purchased a number of foreign vessels, which had been sent up the river to them before the middle of May.

The current rumor of the massacre of a large number of Europeans is treated as a pure fabrication.

The British ship Hermes had returned from a voyage of discovery into the interior, and Sir George Bonham had brought back from his eventful trip the most astounding intelligence respecting the character of the insurgents. He describes them as Christians of the Protestant order, acknowledging but one God, in three persons—the Father, Jesus Christ the Saviour, and the Holy Spirit. Their Chief forbids the application to himself of the terms "Supreme," "Holy," &c., on the ground that they belong to God alone.—Their moral code is the Ten Commandments. The Bible, translated into their tongue, is in common use. Their leaders are not only professors of religion, but give evidence of the possession of vital piety. Their notions of the moral government of the universe accord precisely with the doctrines of evangelical Christians in Europe and America. They not only profess but seem to believe that Deity is ever present with them. In their reverses, He tries their faith. When they succeed, it is all of His grace. Their enemies charge them with the employment of magic.—They reply that their only magic is prayer. They say that their prince will be the sovereign of China, if it is God's will; if it is not, there they will die. They show much ignorance of foreign nations, though their religious belief no one can doubt is the result of the instructions of the Protestant Missionaries. All accounts agree that the highest style of morality is required in their camp. Profanity, obscenity and immorality of all sorts among them was extremely rare. Indeed, their requirements in these respects are so strict, that for this reason many who would otherwise join their standard stand aloof. They are disposed to regard all foreigners with friendliness, in consistence with the teaching of their religion.

This is very strange indeed. That among the queued Celestials a new race of Puritans should spring up, to war upon the ancient dynasty, basing their conduct upon questions of "right and wrong," invoking the God of Christians when they go out to battle, loathing idol-worship, insisting upon a high standard of morality in rebel camp and court—this is among the greatest marvels of a marvel-abounding age. Every new item will be awaited with interest. Our curiosity is thoroughly aroused. Our sympathies are excited.—We strain our eyes toward the extreme East with intense eagerness, to see more of the wonderful events that are there transpiring.—N. Y. Times.

EDUCATION.—Every boy should have his head, his heart, and his hand educated. Let this truth never be forgotten. By the proper education of the head, he will be taught what is good and what is evil, what is right and what is wrong.—By the proper education of the heart, he will be taught to love what is good, wise, and right, and to hate what is evil, foolish, and wrong. And by proper education of the hands, he will be enabled to supply his wants, to add to his comforts, and to assist those around him. The highest objects of a good education are, to reverence and obey God, and to love and serve mankind. Every thing that helps us in attaining these objects is of great value, and every thing that hinders us is comparatively worthless. When wisdom reigns in the head and love in the heart, the man is ever ready to do good; order and peace reign around, and sin and sorrow are almost unknown.

It is good for the inner man to be born in winter. The cradle of adversity is often the first step up to the palace of prosperity.

Dying Words of Noted Persons.

"A death-bed's a detector of the heart,
Here tried dissimulation drops her mask,
Through life's grimace that mistress of the scene;'
Here real and apparent are the same."

"Head of the army."—NAPOLEON.

"I must sleep now."—BYRON.

"It matters little how the head lieth."—SIR WALTER RALEIGH.

"Kiss me, Hardy."—LORD NELSON.

"Don't give up the ship."—LAWRENCE.

"I'm shot if I don't believe I'm dying."—CHANCELLOR THURLOW.

"Is this your fidelity?"—NERO.

"Clasp my hand, dear friend, I die."—ALFIERI.

"Give Dayroles a chair."—LORD CHESTERFIELD.

"God preserve the Emperor."—HAYDEN.

"The artery ceases to beat."—HALLER.

"Let the light enter."—GOETHE.

"All my possessions for a moment of time."—QUEEN ELIZABETH.

"What! is there no bribing death?"—CARDINAL BEAUFORT.

"I have loved God, my father, and liberty."—MAD. DE STAEL.

"Be serious."—GROTIUS.

"Into thy hands, O Lord."—TASSO.

"It is small, very small indeed,"—(clasping her neck.)—ANNE BOLEYN.

"I pray you, see me safe up, and as for my coming down let me shift for myself,"—(ascending the scaffold.)—SIR T. MORE.

"Don't let that awkward squad fire over my grave."—BURNS.

"I feel as if I were to be myself again."—SIR W. SCOTT.

"I resign my soul to God, and my daughter to my country."—JEFFERSON.

"It is well."—WASHINGTON.

"It is the last of earth."—JOHN Q. ADAMS.

"I wish you to understand the true principles of the Government. I wish them carried out. I ask no more."—HARRISON.

"I have endeavored to do my duty."—TAYLOR.

"There is not a drop of blood on my hands."—FRED. V. OF DENMARK.

"You spoke of the refreshment, my Emilie; take my last notes, sit down to my piano here, sing them with the hymn of your sainted mother; let me hear once more those notes which have so long been my solacement and delight."—MOZART.

"A dying man can do nothing easy."—

"Let not poor Nelly starve."—CHARLES II.

"Refresh me with a great thought."—HERDER.

"I feel the daisies growing over me."—KEATS.

"Let me die to the sounds of delicious music."—MIRABEAU.—American Union.

The Wise Choice of a Wife.

He that findeth a true wife, findeth a treasure whose beauty and lustre not even the shadow of death can dim. It has often seemed strange to me that men are so blind in their choice of companions. In this they sometimes seem to be the weaker sex, for they yield to deliberately planned schemes, and in the face of an unhappy lot, take painted dolls or artful women to share the "better or worse."

And yet, after all, as the responsibility rests more on him, it may be a harder thing than we are aware of, to find one whose price is above rubies. There exists such an artificial state of society!—Beauty is ranked so high, and the graces are so indispensable, that homely, in-door life loses its chiefest charm, and woman becomes a creature of waywardness and prettiness, that must be dressed up and petted, in order to keep her in smiles and decent humor. Most young men think of "an establishment," and somebody must preside over it, of whom they may be proud. They love to hear their friends say, "Well, L—— has a fine wife—a woman worth having: she plays and sings, she talks agreeably, and, altogether makes a sensation."

But when trouble comes, where is the strong helper—the courageous spirit?—Those modest home-bodies, who seem so timid and backward—who oversee the humble household, and ask no praise but that of the husband's heart—who shine but little at parties, but who are the stars of home—those are the wives for the trials of earnest life. Their love is the rock never shaken by the tempest.—New York Oegan.

To wish is foolish: either wait or do.

Literary Crumbs.

BY ASON O'FAUST.

A young woman is never so eloquent as when she is silent.

When Indolence is governor, all acts of Heroism are vetoed.

"This is the age of progress" is equivalent only to "Time yet is." Progress will never cease till Time is no more.

Anarchy is to Liberty what Lust is to Love.

"No man was ever great by imitation" of man; nor without imitation of God.

"Every day is a little lifetime."—Bishop Hall.

Every lifetime is a day of eternity.

To discover his Maker's will and to do it is a man's mission. To discover her spouse's will and to do it is a woman's omission!

In a woman an ounce of heart is worth a pound of brains.

Dollar-hunters seldom marry women—they marry purses with women attached to them.

Two men seldom speak—the sage and the dunce.

Bashful Men.

We never yet saw a genuinely bashful man, who was not the soul of honor.—Though such may blush, and stammer, and shrug their shoulders awkwardly, unable to throw forth with ease the thoughts that they would express, yet commend them to us for friends.

There are fine touches in their characters which time will mellow and bring out; perceptions as delicate as the faintest tint is to the unfolding rose, and their thoughts are none the less refined and beautiful, that they do not flow with the impetuosity of the streamlet.

We are astonished that such are not appreciated; that ladies with really good hearts and cultivated intellects, will reward the gallant Mustacio Brainless with smiles and attentions, because he can fold a shawl so gracefully, and bandy compliments with Parisian elegance, while they will not condescend to look upon the worthiest man, who feels for them a reverence so great that every mute glance is worth more than a thousand empty flatteries.

The man who is bashful in the presence of ladies, is their defender when the loose tongue of the slanderer would defame them; it is not he who boasts of conquest, or dares to talk glibly of failings that exist in imagination alone; his cheek will flush with anger to hear the name of a woman coupled with a coarse oath; and yet he, who would die to defend them, is least honored by the majority of the sex.—Mrs. Dennison.

Strange Infatuation.

Some ten years ago there resided in this State a gentlemen, his wife and two interesting daughters, who were as much respected as any family in it. Blessed with with a competency of earthly goods, and surrounded by hosts of friends, their happiness seemed as near perfect as human beings could expect to enjoy. Six years since, this family left here for the South, where the husband and father took to drink, and in two years after became a bankrupt and a sot. Next, the wife and mother became a drunkard, and now, we understand, the two girls are inmates of a low brothel on the Mississippi river.—What a commentary on the free use of ardent spirits. In six years, a whole family reduced from affluence to the deepest depths of degradation. And yet how many cases of a similar nature are to be met with every day.—Richmond Mail.

NEW JERSEY LIQUOR LAW.—The first case which has occurred in the State; under the law relative to habitual drunkards, passed at the last session of the Legislature, took place at Princeton, on the 22d ult., and is mentioned in the Whig. The Chancellor issued a commission to three gentlemen, who proceeded to try before a jury, an inquisition into the habitual drunkenness of Charles Skillman, and his incapacity to take care of his property. The jury gave a verdict that such was the case, and according to law, the Orphan's Court, on application, must appoint a guardian over him. He is divested of all control of his property, which will be restored on his reformation. All liquor-sellers, under a penalty, are forbidden to sell to him, and, legally, he is to be treated as a lunatic.

LIBRARY INDIANAPOLIS

TEMPERANCE CHART.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.
WM. HANNAMAN, C. E. BABB,
JAMES HALL, R. T. BROWN,
JOHN B. ABBETT.

WEDNESDAY, AUG. 24, 1853.

☞ We have reeeived the first number of "The Independent," published by T. S. Seybold & Co., at La Salle, Illinois. It is a large paper and presents a fine appearance. It is the intention of the editors to conduct it in a manner irrespectlve of party, sect, or clique; and from the tone of the editorial in the present number, we think they will carry out their design.

We understand that Mr. Charles Garner has now quitted the liquor business. We are rejoiced to hear this. We passed along by his doors the other day, and were surprised to see them thrown open; we could not then divine the cause, but we thought at the time that it was merely an assumed boldness put on for the time to attract attention; but we now are glad to find that it was because he had gone into a business of which he was not afraid and ashamed. His room is now used for an office for the "Omnibus Line" of this city, of which he is one of the owners.—We can now wish him success in his business with a good heart.

Dr. Soule, a son of Bishop Soule, was found in the yard of Mr. Coburn, on last Wednesday morning, nearly dead from an attack of delirium tremens; he died before he could be taken home. We understand that his family are in Ohio at present. He has long been of intemperate habits. He came to this city about eighteen years ago, and, we believe, engaged for a while in the practice of his profession, which was dentistry; but his intemperate habits soon strengthened upon him, until he could do nothing at it. He has been for a long time doing nothing for himself or anybody else—a useless memmember of society, being a great part of the time under the influence of alcohol.

On the evening of the 13th, a man was found in the Governor's Circle suffering under a fit of delirium tremens. Dr. Dorsey was sent for, who came and administered such remedies to him as in a little time gave him relief. He informed the Doctor that he had procured his liquor of Charley Garner; whereupon the Doctor went to Garner, and told him that he was responsible for the maintenance of the man while he was in his present condition. Garner then took him, and kept him until he was well, then paid the doctor's bill, and the man left for home. We understand his name was George Bowers, and that he resided in Anderson.

Drunkenness and deaths from the use use of liquor have been alarmingly frequent during the past week, and call loudly for the more energetic labors of the friends of Temperance. It appears as if the Temperance men of the county have been in a lethargy for some time past, and the enemy has gained upon us; and it is only by a series of horrible deaths, such as we have of late recorded, that they could be aroused. But we hope that there is an awakening now in our ranks, a girding on of the armor that has lain idle, and a girdling up of the loins for battle. If there is any efficiency in our present law, now is the time to test it—let us carry it out to the very letter—let us enforce it whenever possible, and if it be not what we require, let us have something better. Let us do all we can with our present law, and at the same time look forward, and labor for a better one.

The Fugitive-slave Case.

The counsel for Freeman have now procured additional testimony that Ellington's claim upon Freeman is false, whatever testimony he may bring to prove it. Freeman's counsel have been to Canada, and there succeeded in finding and identifying, beyond doubt, the slave that Ellington has lost. They took with them two men from Kentucky, who formerly knew both Ellington and his slave, and they are willing to testify that the negro they found in Canada is Ellington's slave, and that Freeman is not. The trial is appointed for the 29th of this month. It is altogether uncertain yet whether it will end in Freeman's discharge, or he will be taken to Kentucky. we are inclined, however, to believe the former; we are certain, if the evidence for Freeman is admitted, and it is so clear and self-convicting in its character, that a refusal to admit it is very improbable.

A man by the name of Stopford came to this city a few days ago, from Lafayette. Soon after his arrival here, he got into a drunken frolic at the Wright House. He was arrested and taken before the Mayor and fined, but being unable to pay his fine, was taken to jail. The next day he was attacked with delirium tremens. Dr. Dorsey was sent for, who came and administered to him, and in a few days he was relieved so as to walk about. His time at the jail has expired, and he is now an object of pity; being utterly destitute of a place to lodge, or of means to procure one, and is still much debilitated from his debauch and disease.

The keeper of the vile den under the Wright House, upon being requested to take charge of him, as the law requires, while in so helpless and destitute a condition, refused to do so, and, we are informed, requested them to go to his friend, the devil, for a lodging for him; but not being acquainted with his friend, and supposing him to be of the "same stripe" with himself, they did not go.

The subject of the mania-a-potu is really to be pitied, while those who were the authors of his misery, deserve detestation and punishment. He says he has, through the means of strong drink, lost a large quantity of money, in this place and Lafayette, in a short time. He is an intelligent man, and has been a teacher of penmanship—he writes a beautiful hand.

The committee appointed at the Temperance Meeting on last Thursday to visit the liquor-sellers, and request them to close their shops, have already visited upwards of twenty. They found the places where it is sold very numerous. Upon the subject of ceasing to sell, some seem disposed to quit, others wish to consider the matter a while, and others again refuse. The Committee have not reported yet in full, and will not until Thursday week.

☞ A horrible murder occurred in Vernon, a few days ago. Frederick Alms, an honest and industrious German, was murdered by four drunken Irishmen. It appears that he owed one of them some money, about which they had had some dispute. Upon going to his residence, about two miles from town, he came across these same Irishmen, who immediately fell upon him, and while some held him down, the rest beat him to death with a board.

A public discussion on the Maine law question was held yesterday, the 23d inst., at Columbus, Ohio. The question discussed was as follows:

Is the so-called Maine law consistent with the natural and constitutional rights of the citizen: and would its enactment, in substance, as the law of Ohio, tend to promote morality and religion, and the prosperity and happiness sf the people?

☞ A man named Matthias Miller was found dead in Six-mile creek, Jennings county, on the 12th inst. He was an habitual drunkard, and had suffered from a severe attack of delirium tremens the day before, and from which he had not fully recovered, thus rendering him unable to extricate himself, although the water was very shallow.

In love we often doubt what we most believe.

Steps to Ruin.

We cannot but tremble when we see such a sad deficiency as prevails in the moral training of children. We see boys around us that appear to be almost inevitably tending to ruin. They have taken the first steps, they are still progressing, and their progress is more rapid the farther they go. They have learned to disobey their parents, and this is generally the first step in the road to crime. They turn a deaf ear to their advice, admonitions, and commands; they have gained that (as they think) proud condition in which they can do as they please. Family government is, of all domestic duties, least understood; it has been and is yet a thing not much thought of; it is not half as important as money making in the eyes of the majority of people; the immortal souls of their childreu are not the recipients of one half the care and attention that is bestowed upon the glorious object of money making. As a consequence of this sad defect in the training of the young, we see scores of boys early learning to disobey their parents, and starting down the broad highway. The next step they will take is associating with bad company; when he has been permitted to do this once, he will do it again, for to the impulsive and impressible dispositions of the young, there is something attractive in the wicked freedom and wild recklessness of such company; and although their coarse language and fearful oaths may at first fall upon the ear with an unpleasant sound, yet he soon becomes familiar, not only with their sound, but with their use. The next step is Sabbath breaking; this follows as a consequence of mixing with bad company, for to them a proper observance of the Sabbath is oppressive and hateful.

The next step is being on the streets after night, and loafing about filthy groceries. Here they learn those habits that tell soonest upon their physical, mental, and moral powers. Here they learn the wicked and baneful habit of smoking; this awakens the nervous system; they soon learn to chew the disgusting weed; the unhealthy stimulation of the nerves is thus increased—they are thirsty; and while lounging around these filthy places at night, they begin to quench their unnatural thirst with vile, dirty beer, which they think very innocent. But this will not satisfy them long; the oil cannot be added to the flame without increasing it, and the next step is something a little stronger, in the shape of whisky or brandy; then they become frequenters of grog-shops; from this every body can tell their course. These are some of the prominent steps in the highway of vice, and he who has taken one of them is in danger, great danger, of premature death, the State's prison, the gallows, or of that most horrible of all these terminations, and which has been the unhappy lot of so many of late in our city—the drunkard's grave.—Parents beware—children beware—this road is smooth and gradual, and almost covered with flowers at first, so that it may be entered and traveled for some distance almost without being aware of it, and it may lull and charm you by the fatal and false words of "no danger;" but there is danger—ruin, and destruction are before you, and through the horrible vestibule of a drunkard's grave, the yawning doors of eternal death are open to receive you—"turn from your evil ways."

Of all the strongholds which His Highness the Prince of Darkness possesses in this city, in the shape of grog-shops, the one on Illinois street, immediately North of Washington street, is one of the most infamous, and is certainly one of the most profitable houses which His Majesty has in this city; and we have no doubt, but what, after the long and hard day's work of his faithful servant, the liquor vendor, is over, and his brain, tasked by his hellish work, and narcotized by alcoholic fumes, sinks into forgetfulness, his Satanic Majesty and imps hold many a diabolic revel in that dim den, which so nearly approaches in character their own dominions. And we would be surprised if the keeper of this hole should not each morning miss some of his fiery fluids, were it not that the vessels are all resupplied ere the coming of morn with the genuine double-rectified stuff, fresh from the distilleries of that tropical climate.

But to change the subject from what is probably true, to what is really true, we would say that this is one of the worst of our doggeries, because kept in an out-of-the-way place, and can be approached by numerous alleys, and any one who chooses may see passing up and down these alleys, numbers of our citizens, and some, too, whom you would not have before suspected. And each day tipplers come in from the country, and hitch their horses in the alley, passing immediately by the groggery, and make that a place of rendezvous, especially on Saturday; then we may see some half dozen horses there all day long; and we have seen the poor horses stand for nearly a whole day in the hot sun, and towards night the rider with a brick in his hat, come staggering out and start for home. No longer than last evening we saw a thing that looked slightly like a man come out, appearing as if he had a quart or so ahead, and go to mount his horse; but fearing that he had not steam enough ahead, he pulled out of his pocket a pint bottle filled with the stuff, and took another swig before he made the attempt.

This is obedience to our laws with a vengeance. Surely we are a law-obeying and law-enforcing people.

This very doggery of which we speak is one of the co-murderers of poor Lingenfelter. A short time before his horrible death, we saw him stagger down the alley and enter that despicable place.—How should they feel over this, if they had a conscience; but they have none, therefore they are unconcerned in the midst of the carnage and sorrow which their vile course produces.

Temperance Meeting.

A large and respectable assemblage of our citizens met on Thursday evening the 18th inst., at 5 P. M., to discuss the subject of Temperance; and, in view of the flagrant violations of our present Temperance Law which daily occur, and of the numerous outrages that have been perpetrated in this community of late, by persons actuated thereto, by the influence of spirituous liquors; and of the murders that have been committed of late in this city, and suffered to go unpunished, because the weapon employed was alcohol, to adopt measures whereby our present Temperance law might be fully executed, and the liquor traffic in this city abolished if possible.

The audience was favored with interesting and spirited addresses by Rev. Mr. Stevenson, Calvin Fletcher, Esq., Rev. Mr. Lynch, Dr. Beeks, and Rev. Mr. Crary, by the last of whom the following Preamble and Resolutione were offered and read:

WHEREAS, Certain men are continually violating the law prohibiting th retailing of spirituous liquors; AND WHEREAS, The majority of the voters of this township expressed their will in opposition to the liquor traffic; AND WHEREAS, Said men have pursued their illegal business, promoting intemperance and crime, murdering our citizens, breaking up a nums ber of families, endangering our property and increasing our taxes; therefore,

Resolved, That, exercising due forbearance, we respectfully but earnestly request those engaged in the liquor traffic to desist at once from retailing spirituous liquors, and we most earnestly warn them, that if this our appeal be disregarded, we are fully determined that the law shall be obeyed.

Resolved, That the executive and judicial officers ought to see that the laws are faithfully executed, and unless they do so, they shall be held responsible by an injured and outraged people; that if they will not execute the law faithfully and fully, we hereby request them to resign, and give the people an opportunity to elect other men.

Resolved, That it is the duty of every good citizen to assist the officers in executing the laws, and protecting society from the ravages of intemperance.

Resolved, That it is the duty of every honest man to sacrifice party ties on a question so vitally connected with the peace and happiness of the country as is the great Temperance question, and to vote only for those men who will pledge themselves to oppose and prohibit the liquor traffic.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be furnished to every liquor-seller in the city, and to all our officers; and that a committee of five be appointed to attend to this duty and report to a citizens' meeting, two weeks from this day, the number and instances of those who still sell contrary to law.

Resolved, That the Secretary of this meeting furnish a copy of these resolutions to each of the city papers for publication.

These Resolutions were unanimously adopted, and Robert A. Taylor, Andrew Brouse, Dr. G. C. Beeks, James Blake, and Daniel Yandes were appointed a committee to carry out the design represented in the fifth Resolution.

The meeting then adjourned to meet on that day two weeks at the same hour and place.

The Tippling-House Question.

The Board of Common Council having under consideration an act to prevent tippling houses in the city of Washington, the corporation attorney, J. M. Carlisle, Esq., has be consulted as to the legality of the measure, who writes a lengthy opinion on the subject, of which the following is a condensation:

1st. That the corporation has the power absolutely to prohibit "tippling houses" within its corporate limits, under whatsoever name, or with whatsoever incidents they may be exhibited.

2d. That it has the power, and it is its duty, to make such prohibition plain and intelligible, and that this may be done by a declaratory section or clause; but that such a declaratory section or clause cannot enlarge the meaning of the word "tippling-house," as used in the charter, and that the authoritative interpretation of that meaning belongs to the judiciary.

3d. That the definition in the second section is defective in some minor particulars, but mainly in its not expressly excepting the sale and dispensation of liquors, &c., by innkeepers and keepers of ordinaries, in the lawful and bona fide exercise of their respective callings and business.

4th. That the third section requires to be modified so as to conform to the first and second sections.

And 5th. That the Corporation has not the right of compulsory visitation and inspection contemplated by the fourth section.

By the above opinion it appears that the Corporation has power to prohibit "tippling houses," but not "inns," "ordinaries," and such larger places of accommodation. The Board postponed the further discussion of the subject until Monday evening.

The Mean Temperature of each day for the week ending Saturday, August 20th:

Sunday,	81¼°
Monday,	79¾°
Tuesday,	76¾°
Wednesday,	78¾°
Thursday,	77°
Friday,	68°
Saturday,	66°

Mean temperature of the week, 75 3-7°

The lowest temperature of the week was before sunrise on Saturday morning, when mercury stood at 51°. The highest temperature was at 2 P. M., Sunday the 14th, when it reached 91½°.

At the United States Hotel, last Friday, was stopping a colored boy, named William Marcy, whose extraordinary mathematical powers have greatly astonished all who have witnessed his demonstrations. He would add up columns of figures of any length, divide any given sum, multiply millions by thousands within five minutes from the time the figures are given him, and with such exactness as to render it truly wonderful. In presence of a party of gentlemen, he added a column of figures, eight in a line, and one hundred and eighty lines, making the sum total of several millions, in about six minutes. The feat was so astounding and apparently incredible, that several of the party took off their coats, and dividing the sum went to work, and in two hours after they commenced produced identically the same answer. The boy is not quite seventeen years of age; he can neither read nor write; and in every other branch of an English education is entirely deficient.—His parents reside in Kentucky, near Louisville. He left in company with his father for the World's Fair, New York, on Saturday morning.—West. Chr. Adv.

THE WAGES OF SIN.—The Cincinnati Times has become the organ of the doggeries and rum-blossom and blackleg gentry of that city. It hopes to reap a reward for its labors in behalf of sin, shame, and crime. Avoid it as you would a pestilence. To what vile uses the great lever of republicanism is sometimes degraded.—Cleveland Forest City.

☞ There is an editor in North Carolina with seven bullets in his body—received in duels and street encounters.

Items of News.

CALIFORNIA.—The summer fires have done much damage in mountain and valley. Large quantities of grain have been destroyed in various parts of the State.

The wheat crops in most of the agricultural districts are suffering from rust.

On the 2d inst., Lola Montez and P. P. Hull, Esq., late of the San Francisco Whig, were married at the Mission Dolores.

An immense business in the way of mining is doing at White Rock, four miles from Placerville. Rich diggings have also been discovered in the hills at the head of Rich Gulch. One of the parties sunk a shaft some 30 feet, and took out ten ounces of gold from eighty buckets of dirt.

The beautiful village of French Corral was almost annihilated by fire on the 8th inst. Loss estimated at $50,000.

The town of Ophir was reduced to ashes on the 12th inst. Loss $80,000.

A correspondent of the Shasta Courier, writing from Pittsburgh, a mining town in the northern part of the State, says:

Quite an excitement was produced here a short time since by the discovery of rich diggings in the hill this side of Rich Gulch, just where the trail enters the Gulch. As high as $6 was taken out in one bucketfull of dirt. The depth to the rock is about three feet. People "run all night" to secure claims, and a friend who was on the ground early on the following morning, informs us that he saw some ten or a dozen notices within a few rods of each other, having been posted in the dark.

About a week since a company of four Englishmen took out two pounds of gold near the mouth of Rich Gulch.

A packing road is about to be opened from Pittsburgh, across the Trinity Mountains, to Scott's Valley.

TRIUMPH OF THE MAINE LAW!—JAIL TO LET!—The Burlington Free Press, of May 30th, give the following;

Our jail is to rent. Its lock-ups are deserted. Its customers have left it, and its cells may be thrown wide open, for there are none to escape. Sheriff Bowan informs us that when he took charge of the institution, the 1st of December last, there were seven inmates. Since then some thirty odd have been accommodated with free lodgings. But since the first week in March, they have been dropping off, till at this present writing not an occupant is left. Can anybody tell us when this happened before?

The face of nature is the footprint of God.

Frank Weibel, the keeper of the Revere House, one of the most costly and genteel of the Cincinnati coffee-house saloons, on Broadway, was seen exposing himself in a most ridiculous manner, before a number of gentlemen and ladies, on Fifth-street, on Friday week. He was arrested soon afterward by an officer, and had his trial on Thursday morning last, before Judge Spooner, who sentenced him to pay a fine of $100 and costs, and to stand committed till it is paid. This predicament Weibel would never have got into but for the influence of liquor. Another argument for a temperance law.—West. Chr. Adv.

In the Indian settlement North Carolina, there is a community of 710 Cherokees, who own 17,000 acres of land. This does not embrace half of their land, the other portion being left out by reason of the deeds not being recorded. They have 1,440 acres improved, which, at the State price, is worth $8,640. They own 83 horses, 105 milch cows, 45 working oxen, 135 other cattle, 416 sheep, and 516 swine. Their farming utensils are valued at $573. They produce annually 15,366 bushels of corn, 349 bushels of Irish potatoes, and 1000 bushels of sweet potatoes. This settlement of Indians also has $27860 of money at interest.

THE OVERFLOW OF THE TREASURY.—There is now a surplus of within a fraction of $22,000,000 in the Treasury, notwithstanding the Secretary is redeeming United States stocks, and otherwise paying the public debt as fast as the law to that end will allow him. Thus it appears that the Government's revenues are increasing so rapidly as that the public debt is being fast extinguished without materially decreasing the amount of cash on hand. What will Congress do with this surplus? Will it not be a very bane to the real interests of the States? The fear is that it will be regarded merely as so much plunder, to be squabbled for by a horde of sharp men, each of whom will keep a free doggery here next winter to aid their operations on the members.—Washington Eve. Star.

Mr. Abram Christman, an old and much respected citizen of Harrodsburgh, Ky., says the Ploughboy, who has been engaged in the grocery business for many years past, and connected with the liquor traffic, rolled out of his store several barrels of whisky and wine, a few days since and in the presence of a large number of spectators, emptied their contents upon the ground.—Georgetown Herald.

Foreign Items.

The Eastern difficulty is within a few days of being settled, either for peace or war. The public generally look on the state of affairs as less satisfactory.

The present position of the question stands thus: Until the 10th or 12th of August, the Czar's final answer to the ultimatum of the four powers, (Austria, France, England, and Prussia,) cannot be known. If he accepts the ultimatum, his troops must be immediately withdrawn from the Principalities, and the Conference at Viena pursuing its arrangements, will conclude a Treaty to protect Turkey in all time coming. If the Czar refuses the ultimatum of the four powers, or evades a reply, (which will be considered equivalent to refusing it,) the Allied fleets will be ordered to the Bosphorus, if not further, and active measures will be taken by France and England to maintain the integrity of their ally.

The question, therefore, is on the point of solution for peace or war. The choice rests solely and wholly in the personal will of the Emperor Nicholas. Until the 10th or 12th of August, therefore, we must totally disregard all rumors either favorable or unfavorable. No one but Nicholas himself can know what his intentions are, and the multitude of statements telegraphed from Vienna, Paris, and elsewhere, are for the mere purpose of influencing the markets.

At the same time, it is right to state that the conduct of the Russian Generals in the Principalities, would indicate an intention to maintain permanent possession, and nothing has transpired elsewhere to show that Russia intends to retract.

The journals of Frankfort of the 30th, say that Austria intends not only to demand reparation from the United States, for the Smyrna affair, but insists that the Porte shall immediately procure the extradition of Kosta.

St. Petersburg letters say that when the Czar heard of the Koszta affair, he advised Austria to settle it as easily as possible, and do anything rather than give the United States a pretense for interfering in the affairs of Europe.

The state of affairs at Constantinople and in the Principalities remains unchanged. Only 6,000 Russians will remain in Moldavia, the bulk of the army being advanced into Wallachia.

From Denmark we learn that political affairs are passing through a crisis—the Ministers cannot carry on the Government with the present Representatives. Cholera was raging fearfully at Copenhagen. Over 300 new cases are reported daily. Up to July 21, 21,246 had occurred, of which 1,243 had terminated fatally.

Italy is reported to be on the eve of a revolution. The Pope's health is precarious.

A young boy tippler at the threshold, and an old sot at the grave. The saloon and the scaffold—the bright hopes of young manhood, and the gnawings of remorse; the bright laughter of the young revelers, and the maniac's wail among the lost; the luring promise of fame, and the lowest crater of infamy; the innocence of childhood, and the wickedness of the damned. Stand, sir, upon the threshold of the drunkery, and the whole panorama of intemperance lies before you. There is the first step and the last. There is the man behind the bar with the toddy stick, and the man behind the church in Potter's Field with his spade. The pathway is broad and deeply beaten, for throngs of eager pilgrims are struggling to the land of gibbet, dungeon, and grave. Do you go in? Think of home, kindred, childhood and heaven, and turn away! That is a fearful road to travel.—Chief.

MARRIAGE.—Nature and Nature's God smile propitiously upon the union that is sweetened by love and sanctified by the law. The place of our affections is enlarged, and our pleasures take wider range. We become more important and respected among men, and existence itself is doubly enjoyed with our softer self.—Misfortune loses half its anguish beneath the influence of her smiles, and triumph is more triumphant when shared with her. Without her, what would be man? A roving, restless being, driven at pleasure by romantic speculation, and cheated into misery by futile hopes, a mad victim of untamed passion, and the disappointed pursuer of fruitless joys. But with her he awakens to a new life, He follows a path wider and nobler than the narrow road to self-aggrandizement—that is scattered with more fragrant flowers and illuminated with a clearer light.

☞ An illustrated paper returns thanks to the different railway companies, saying in its greatest candor, "We really don't know what we should do for illustrations, if it wasn't for railway accidents."

Dr. Jewett, the famous Massachusetts orator, was advertized to be in Cincinnati on or about the 20th inst., to give the citizens his views on the Maine law.

Temperance.

The Cincinnati Daily Enquirer, the organ of the Democratic party, is openly opposed to the Maine law. The Gazette, Whig, speaks somewhat favorably of the law; but does not endorse it. The Daily Times—independent in its politics—concludes a leading editorial of last Thursday evening in these words:

Every man whose head is cool. who has read, reflected, and observed, knows that this law is an unmitigated humbug, and nothing else.

All these papers acknowledge and bewail the manifold evils and miseries caused by intemperance; but what plan they propose for removing those evils and miseries we know not. Occasionally the remark is dropped, that if all the people would drink freely of pure wine and beer, as they do in France and Germany, then the evils of intemperance would cease. Further than this, our knowledge is darkness respecting the best sort of liquor law which the Anti-Maine law folks propose. By the way, we ought to state that, not an hour since, we were reading a correspondence in an eastern journal, from a gentleman in France, "where pure wine is drank, and nothing else." A company of eight persons were riding in a coach, after nightfall. About ten o'clock, the driver—who was alone, and too drunk to hold the reins—fell off his box, and, in three minutes thereafter, the horses passing through a deep mudhole, capsized the vehicle, and left the passengers to creep out the best way they could.—Western Chr. Advocate.

Indiana Asbury University.

The Asbury Notes of July 28, says—

"The annual commencement and meeting of the Board of Trustees, this year, have been very important to the Institution. We speak but the sentiment unanimously expressed by those from a distance, as far as we could learn, when we say that Commencement week of '53 was well sustained throughout; that its influence, with reference to the credit and progress of the University, was decided and very favorable.

The Board of Trustees decided to erect an additional College building of about the capacity of the present building. This will be done as soon as funds for that purpose can be secured. Rev. Joseph Tarkington was appointed to procure funds for that purpose.

The Faculty consists of:—Lucien W. Berry, D. D., President and Professor of Mental and Moral Science, and Biblical Literature; William C. Larrabee, LL. D., Professor Emeritus of Oriental Languages; John Wheeler, A. M., Professor of the Latin language and Literature; Joseph Tingley, A. M., Professor of Natural Science; Charles C. Downey, A. M., Professor of Mathematics; Samuel A. Lattimore, A. M., Professor of the Greek Language and Literature; Miles J. Fletcher, A. B., Professor of the English Language, and Literature, and Normal Instruction; Luis Gundert, Teacher of Modern Languages; Albion Fellows, Tutor; Stephen N. Fellows, Tutor.

The Collegiate year begins on the third Monday of September, and ends on the third Wednesday of July. It is divided into three terms of fourteen weeks each, with a vacation of one week at the close of the first and of the second term.

The course of study is nearly the same as is pursued in the oldest and best colleges in the United States. It is the course which has proved, from experience, best adapted to the purposes of liberal education; the making of sound, practical, and accomplished scholars. To complete this course requires four years.

Fast Men.

The victims die early. They fall like shadows, or tumble like wrecks and ruins into the grave—often while quite young, almost always before forty. The wicked "liveth not half his days." The world at once ratifies the truth and assigns the reason by describing the dissolute as "fast men;" that is they live fast; they spend their twelve hours in six, getting through the whole before the meridian, and dropping out of sight and into darkness while others are in the glow and glory of life.—"Their sun goes down while it is yet day." And they might have helped it. Many a one dies long before he need. Your men of genius, to whom, when dissipated and profligate, thirty-seven is so fatal; and your obscure and nameless "wandering stars." who waste their youth in libertine indulgence—they cannot live long. They must die early. They put on the steam till they blow up the boiler. They run at such a rate that the fire goes out for want of fuel. The machinery is destroyed by reckless speed and rapid wear. Nothing can save them. Their physical system cannot stand the strain they put to it; while the state of their minds is often such, that the soul would eat the substance of the most robust body, and make for itself a way of escape from the incessant hell of its own thoughts.—T. Binney.

The greatest miracle of love is the cure of coquetry.

Moral Reflections, Sentences, and Maxims.

Weak persons cannot be sincere.

To praise princes for virtues they do not possess is to speak evil of them with impunity.

We are nearer loving those who hate us than those who love us more than we like.

It is only those who are despicable who fear being despised.

Our wisdom is not less at the merey of fortune than our property.

In jealousy there is more self-love than love.

We often console ourselves through weakness for evils in which reason is powerless to console us.

Ridicule dishonors more than dishonor.

We confess our little faults only to persuade others that we have no great ones.

Envy is more irreconcilable than hatred.

We sometimes fancy that we hate flattery, but in reality we only hate the manner of flattery.

We forgive so long as we love.

It is more difficult for a man to be faithful to his mistress when he is favored than when he is ill treated by her.

Women know not the whole of their coquetry.

Women never have a complete severity of demeanor except towards those whom they dislike.

Women can less easily surmount their coquetry than their passions.

In love deceit almost always goes further than mistrust.

There is a certain kind of love the excess of which prevents jealousy.

It is with certain good qualities as with the senses; those who are entirely deprived of them can neither appreciate nor comprehend them.

When our hatred is too keen, it places us beneath those we hate.

We feel our good and our bad fortune solely in proportion to our self-love.

The intellect of the generality of women serves more to fortify their folly than their reason.

The passions of youth are scarcely more opposed to safety than the lukewarmness of age.

The accent of a man's native country dwells in his mind and in his heart as well as in his speech.

To be a great man one must know how to profit by the whole of one's fortune.

The generality of men have, like plants, latent properties, which chance brings to light.

Opportunities make us known to others, and still more to ourselves.

There can be no regulation in the minds nor in the hearts of women, unless their temperament is in unison with it.

What makes us so sore against those who practise artifices upon us is, that they fancy themselves cleverer than us.

☞ We love the sledge-hammer ring of facts. Here is one:

The amount of money expended by the Portland people for rum, annually, before the Maine Law, in three hundred grog shops, was $328,500! That was the rum tax of that city. At the same time, the school-tax is only $20,000; the tax for streets and sidewalks, $20,000; and the whole tax for all corporate expenses, only about $100,000—but the rum tax was $328,500!

And now in all Maine, there is not one solitary grog-shop! Surely the good time is coming "right along." Who does not think God for what he sees in this day? Our reform moves to its triumph. The prayers of the good in the world are bear-it on.—Cayuga Chief.

We witnessed a very affecting sight yesterday. A girl was about crossing Merwin-street bridge with a little wagon containing what a casual observer would have supposed to be a child—a neat little handkerchief folded delicately down from the "neck" of the innocent, and its face concealed by a blue vail. It was a theme that might have called forth a most eloquent outburst from the warm heart of "Fanny Fern." Presently, however, in ascending the bridge, the vehicle unfortunately upset, and out rolled the precious contents, in the shape of—not a "baby," gentle reader, but a well-filled whisky-jug! which was dashed to pieces against a stone. The grief of the "old folks at home," for the loss of the "dear craythur," whose "spirit" thus unceremoniously took its flight, was no doubt inconsolable.—Cleveland True Democrat.

☞ The total majority for the Maine Law, in Michigan, is computed at 19,030. Every county but one gave a majority for the law.

Testimonial to Temperance.

Professor Silliman recently resigned his post in Yale College, after fifty-three years' labor as professor in this ancient university, besides having edited sixty-three volumes of the Journal of Science, and traveled extensively in all the countries in Europe. In announcing his retirement, he said that he "had just laid down his commission as a teacher in the college, after the labor of fifty-three years. He thought it was time to do it. Not that he was conscious of decrepitude either in body or mind—for here I stand, erect and strong, in perfect health, with my eye undimmed, and my natural force unabated," (and his whole life justified the remark); "but there is a proper time for ceasing my connection with this beloved institution, and that time I think has come. Gentlemen, if I owe my vigor of body and mind to any one cause under Providence, it is to cald water, inside and out, to total abstinence from alcohol and tobacco." He took occasion to exhort his hearers to a like abstinence from these destructive stimulants, if they wished to enjoy a green old age."

To Printers.

The Committee of Publication for the "Temperance Chart," will receive sealed proposals, until October 25, 1853, for the printing of said paper, including the paper and the delivery of the sheets folded, to the Editor, at his office in Indianapolis. The proposals to state the price of paper, and rate of composition and press work, with a sample of the quality of the paper to be used.

WM. HANNAMAN.
JAMES HALL.
C. E. BABB.
R. T. BROWN.
August, 1853. J. B. ABBETT.

Notice.

The Grand Section of C. of T., of Indiana, will hold its Sixth Annual Session, in Temperance Hall, Indianapolis, commencing on Monday, October 24th, at 1½ o'clock, P. M. As there is much business of importance to transact, representatives will please be punctual in attending.

Sections will please forward their quarterly returns to the G. S. before the 20th of October, or they may loose their charters. HENRY OHR, G. S. of C. of T.

Indianapolis, August 17th, 1853.

Notice.

The Eighth Annual Session of the Grand Division of the Sons of Temperance of the State of Indiana, will commence in Temperance Hall in the City of Indianapolis, on Tuesday, October 25, 1853, at 6 o'clock P. M. P. S. SAGE, G. W. P.

C. WOODWARD, G. S.

August 1, 1853.

$25 Premium.

The undersigned Committee on the state of the Order of the Grand Section of Cadets of Temperance of Indiana, offer the above premium for the most acceptable Initiatory ceremony for Cadets of Temperance. Competitors for the same to be members of some Temperance organization.

All manuscripts to be forwarded to Henry Ohr, G. S., on or before the 20th day of October next.

THEOPHILUS ROBINSON,
H. C. NEWCOMB, } Com.
HENRY OHR,

Indianapolis, Aug. 6th, 1853.

Torchlight and Indiana Cadet please copy.

Call for a State Temperance Convention.

A State Temperance Convention will be held at Madison, Jefferson county, Indiana, beginning on the 28th of September next, and continuing as long as it may determine.

JOHN A. MCCLUNG,
WM. WILSON,
JOHN C. STEELE,
JOHN O'KANE,
WILLIAM HANNAMAN,
CHARLES WOODWARD,
J. W. GORDON, } State Central Committee.

☞ We have two Certificates of Scholarships in the "Commercial College of Indianapolis," which we will dispose of—any one wishing to attend this institution will do well to give us a call at the Chart office.

CONSTITUTION AND BY-LAWS,

WE are still prepared to print Constitution and By-Laws, where the alterations are few from the copy recommended by the Grand Division, at the following rates:

100 copies, (or less)	$5 00
200 "	8 00
300 "	10 00

We will pay the postage on all ordered from us.

☞ All orders accompanied by the cash, will be promptly attended to.

Address, JOHN H. OHR,
Indianapolis, Indiana.

CHARTERS.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR A DIVISION S. OF T.

(Date.)

The undersigned inhabitants of ——, believing the Order of the Sons of Temperance to be well calculated to extend the blessings of total abstinence, and promote the general welfare of mankind, respectfully petition the Grand Division of the —— of ——, to grant them a Charter to open a new Division, to be called the —— Division, No. —, Sons of Temperance, of the —— of ——, to be located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves, individually and collectively, to be governed by the rules and usages of said Grand Division, and also, by those of the National Division.

Enclosed is the Charter Fee, $5 00. Books, $2 00.

This must be signed by at least eight persons of good character and standing in community, and sent to C. WOODWARD, G. S., Indianapolis, Ind., free of postage.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR A TEMPLE.

(Date.)

The undersigned, believing the Temple of Honor to be well calculated to cement more firmly our fraternal relations, and add to the general prosperity of the cause of Temperance, respectfully petition the Grand Temple of the —— of ——, to grant them a Charter to open a new Temple, to be called the —— Temple of Honor, No. —, of the —— of ——, to be located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves individually and collectively, to be governed by the rules and usages of the Grand Temple, and also by those of the Order at large.

Enclosed is the Charter Fee, $20 00.

To be directed to the G. W. R., free of postage.

This must be signed by at least twenty persons of good standing, and if not known to the G. W. T. or G. W. R., must send satisfactory references.

J. H. OHR, G. W. R.

Indianapolis, Ind.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR CADETS OF TEMPERANCE.

The undersigned, boys of ——, believing the Order of Cadets of Temperance to be well calculated to extend the blessings of total abstinence, and promote the general welfare of mankind, respectfully petition the Grand Section of the State of Indiana, to grant them a charter to open a new Section, to be called the —— Section, No. ——, Cadets of Temperance, of the State of Indiana, to be located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves, individually and collectively to be governed by the rules and usages of said Grand Section, and also those of the acting Head of the Order.

Enclosed is the fee for Charter, R. B.'s and officers' cards, $5 00.

It must also be stated whether the applicants are members of the Order or not; if they are, of what Section. The application to be directed to the Grand Secretary, free of postage.

It must also be certified by a W. P. or P. W. P, that the W. Patron elect is a Son of Temperance in good standing.

Address (post paid) HENRY OHR, G. S., C. o T., Indianapolis, Indiana.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR DAUGHTERS OF TEMPERANCE.

(Date.)

The undersigned, inhabitants of ——, believing the Order of the Daughters of Temperance to be well calculated to extend the blessings of Total Abstinence, and promote the general welfare of mankind, respectfully petition the Grand Union to grant them a charter to open a new Union to be called the —— Union, No. —, D. of T., of the State of Indiana, located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves, individually and collectively, to be governed by the rules and usages of said Grand Union.

Enclosed is the Charter Fee, $5 00.

The above must be signed by at least eleven females, of proper age and good standing in community.

Address (post paid,) Mrs. ELIZA RICHMOND, G. S. S., Indianapolis, Indiana.

New Watch and Jewelry Store.

No 1, Bates House, Washington Street,

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

WE have now open the largest and best assortment of fine Watches and rich Jewelry ever offered in this city, to which we invite the examination of the public.

Our stock is all new—selected with great care, and comprises Watches, Diamond Work, Chains, Pins, Rings, Pencils, Lockets, of all kinds; Silver Ware, Clocks, Perfumery, Brushes, Soaps, Plated Ware, Castors, Fruit Baskets, &c., which we will sell for CASH at New York prices. Mr. E. W. NEFF, of this city, has taken charge of the Watch repairing department, and will spare no pains to give satisfaction to our customers.

july 6-tf E. J. BALDWIN & CO.

D. CRAIGHEAD. R. BROWNING.

CRAIGHEAD & BROWNING,

Dealers in all kinds of

Drugs, Medicines, Surgical Instruments, Paints, Oils, Chemicals, Varnishes, Dye Stuffs, Glassware Window Glass, Brushes, Cosmetics, Spices, Cigars, Tobacco, Perfumery, &c.,

WASHINGTON STREET,

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

ALL are respectfully invited to call and examine our stock and prices, as we feel confident we can render satisfaction both as to prices and quality of articles. Great care is taken in the selection of articles, in reference to their purity, as we endeavor at all times to keep such articles as are strictly pure and genuine. Every article will be waranted as represented. Orders from Physicians and others promptly attended to. Particular attention given to filling Prescriptions and compounding Medicines, which, in all cases, shall receive the personal attention of one of the firm. june 30

HANNAMAN & DUZAN,

DEALERS IN

DRUGS AND MEDICINES,

Surgical Instruments, Paints, Oils, Varnishes, Dye Woods, Medical and Window Glass, Brushes, Perfumery, Soaps, &c.

Washington, 3 doors west of Pennsylvania St.,

june 30 1y INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

W. W. ROBERTS,

Druggist and Apothecary.

Wholesale and Retail Dealer in

DRUGS, MEDICINES, PAINTS, OILS, AND DYE STUFFS, BRUSHES, FANCY GOODS, AMERICAN AND FRENCH WINDOW GLASS, &c.

WASHINGTON ST., INDIANAPOLIS.

Physicians, Country Merchants, and the people generally, are invited to examine his stock, which will be sold at the lowest cash price.

☞ QUALITY WARRANTED TO SUIT. ☜

june 22 4m

COMMERCIAL COLLEGE,

(Late Commercial Institute,)

Of Indianapolis,

Established March 31, 1851.

INCORPORATED, 1853.

W. McK. SCOTT, A. M., Founder and President.

JAMES C. HAYDEN, (Late Professor in Bacon's Mercantile College, Cincinnati,)

PROF. OF BOOK-KEEPING AND PENMANSHIP.

THE Session will commence at College Hall as follows:

1st Session on the first Monday of September.
2d Session on the 1st Monday of November.
3d Session on the 1st Monday of January.
4th Session on the 1st Monday of March.
5th Session on the 1st Monday of May.

Having secured, permanently, the services of the distinguished Professor above named, and leased for a term of yeurs the commodious and beautiful Hall formerly known as CONCERT HALL, but now named COLLEGE HALL, which is to be fitted up in a style of great elegance, taste, and convenience, the President would say, that this College now offers advantages superior to all others, for imparting a sound, thorough, and accomplished business education

COURSE OF STUDIES.

The Course of Studies, as enlarged, will be as follows, viz:

1. Book-Keeping, by Single and Double Entry, in all its various branches, and its application to all kinds of business.
2. The Laws, Customs, and Usages of Trade and Commerce.
3. Mercantile Arithmetic, upon the short and easy system of cancelation, (taught in no other College.)
4. Commercial Law, in a series of Lectures, thorough and systematic.
5. Business Penmanship.
6. Commercial Correspondence.
7. Lectures upon Banking, Political Economy, and other subjects valusble to the business man.

EXPENSES.

Cards of Admission, invariably in advance, or secured, $25; Diplomas $3; Stationery $5; Boarding $2 50 per week; incidentals, at option of student, $15. Making entire expenses about $75.

On application, a Catalogne wilt be furnished, giving full particulars.

All letters will receive prompt attention on being directed, post-paid, to

june 8 W. McK. SCOTT, President.

"God never made his works for man to mend." DR. FRANKLIN.

KIER'S ROCK OIL.

A NEW AND MOST IMPORTANT REMEDY FOR DISEASE.

DISCOVERED IN 1849.

IS drawn from a deep well near Pittsburgh—has been used with remarkable success in Ohio and Pennsylvania, and more Eastern States—and is now working its way West. An opportunity is now offered to the Afflicted for testing it. Where known and tried, it at once makes firm friends, and cures which are eloquent in its praise. Certificates of its power to heal are at hand—but we know well, reader, that such evidence, to have weight with you, now-a-days, must be in your own neighborhood.—You have only to try the Oil to be satisfied—it will SPEAK FOR ITSELF.

We have no war with the legion of Nostrums and Specifics of the day—we know but little about them—some say they are good for nothing. However that may be, the

Petroleum

will not be suppressed and kept back by reason of the above nostrums—duty and inclination both forbid it.

Those who are afflicted, are respectfully invited to get a Circular and look over the Directions for

Ague, Rheumatism, Piles, Diarrhœa, Flux, Tooth Ache, Burns, Worms, Scrofula, Coughs, Bronchitis, Croup, Old Sores, Cholera Morbus, Contractions of the Limbs and Joints, Sore Eyes, Blindness, Costiveness, Dyspepsia, and other Diseases.

By that time you may say, "it cures too much." But recollect it is not a HUMAN INVENTION, but compounded by Nature's master hand—and Nature does not do her work by halves.

The Oil is used both internally and externally.

As AGUE, SORE EYES, PILES, RHEUMATISM, and SCROFULA are so common in many parts of the West, we are constrained to say, that while this Oil will cure and relieve other diseases, it has been and is constantly used with most complete success in these cases.

☞ Price 50 cents per Bottle (half pint.)

Beware of all Rock Oil preparations, as some persons are offering a spurious article. Look for S. M. KIER'S name written on the label of the bottle.

For sale by the Druggists throughout Indiana, and by TOMLINSON BROTHERS, J. P. POPE & Co., S. ROSENGARTEN, WM. TILLEY, and at wholesale by W. W. ROBERTS, Indianapolis, Indiana.

R. M. LYON, Fort Wayne,

may25 10w Proprietor in the Western States.

SOMETHING NEW.

LATHROP & STEVENS, Wholesale and Retail Dealers in BOOTS AND SHOES, at the West room in the Bates House, Washington Street, Indianapolis.

We are now opening a new and splendid stock of Boots and Shoes of every variety and style, which we are receiving direct from the manufacturers.—We design to keep constantly on hand a good assortment of the best quality of goods manufactured, which we can warrant to give satisfaction to all who may give them a trial. We will sell by the case, dozen, or single pair, at low prices for cash.—Our stock consists in part of Gents' fine Cloth, silk warp, glove kid, buck, patent calf, and enameled Gaiters and Ties of every variety and style; Ladies' fine silk warp Gaiters, Buskins, Ties, Slippers and Boots; Misses' ditto; Men's calf, goat, kip, and thick Boots and Brogans; Boys' and Youths' ditto; assorted Ladies, kid, goat and calf Boots and Buskins; Misses' ditto. Also every variety of Children's Shoes. Come and see for yourselves.

LATHROP & STEVENS,

may 25 4w Indianapolis, Indiana.

TEMPERANCE INN,

Bloomington, Indiana.

J. & S. M. ORCHARD, PROPRIETORS.

TRAVELLERS will find it to their advantage to call and try the accommodation of the TEMPERANCE INN. Stage office for all the different routes, in connection with this House. may25 6m ¶

THE LATEST WONDER of the 19th CENTURY.

DR. G. W. BENNETT'S

Celebrated Eye-Balm.

A SPECIFIC FOR CHRONIC, SORE, INFLAMED, AND WEAK EYES.

Prepared only by Dr. George W. Bennett, and for sale by Merchants and Druggists generally.

THIS Balm is an excellent and certain cure for sore and inflamed Eyes, in all cases of Psoroic, Scrofulous, and Purulent Opthalmia, and what is commonly termed wild hairs in the eye-lids. It is a specific in Infantile, Purulent, and Scrofulous Inflamed, and Sore Eyes, and all in the various diseases of the Eyes, that prevail among the human family, in every climate. It will be found a sovereign remedy if properly applied.

W. W. ROBERTS, Indianapolis, Ind. General Agent for State of Indiana, to whom all orders must be addressed.

Price---Twenty-five Cents.

I warrant the above Balm to cure if the directions are strictly observed, or return the money.

june 22 4m G. W. BENNETT.

REAL ESTATE AND GENERAL AGENCY OFFICE,

INDIANAPOLIS, INDIANA.

UNDER THE CONTROL OF W. M'K. SCOTT, Attorney & Counsellor at Law, and Notary Public.

The attention of the Agency will be devoted,

First—To the collection of debts and the payment of Taxes for non-residents in any county in the State. Also, the redemption of Lands sold for Taxes, sale, purchase or lease of Lands, purchase of adverse claims, examination and perfection of Title, &c., &c.

Second—To the prosecution of claims against the General Government, procuring Land Warrants, Patent Rights, and Pensions under the various Pension Laws, &c.

Third—All other Miscellaneous agencies as may be intrusted to the care of this office.

Fourth—The taking of Depositions and Attestation of all instruments requiring a seal

In all cases requiring an outlay of money for the benefit of individuals, the requisite funds must be transmitted in advance.

Prompt attention to all letters on business that are pre-paid. Address W. M'K. SCOTT,

Real Estate and General Agent,

jan 5-1y Indianapolis, Ind.

ADAMS & CO'S EXPRESS.

WE are now running a daily line East and West, accompanied by special messengers, and with the speed of the mails, running our own cars with the passenger trains.

Packages will be received at the cars up to the time of starting, and at our office until 1 o'clock each day.

We are prepared to transport packages, bank notes and specie, to and from any of the eastern cities, also, Louisville, Frankfort, and Lexington, Ky., St. Louis, Mo., or any points on the Ohio and Mississippi rivers; and to and from Terre Haute, and all intermediate points, and to forward freight from Terre Haute up and down the Wabash.

In addition to these, we have the most complete arrangements for transporting packages to and from California and Europe.

Exchange on England, Ireland, and Scotland, for sale, payable at any bank in the kingdom.

Foreign passage tickets; by Grinnell, Minturn & Co.'s line to Liverpool and London, constantly on hand, and for sale at the lowest rates.

Notes, drafts, and bills collected in any of the Eastern or Western cities.

Orders for goods to be returned by Express, sent free. Our rates of charges have been greatly reduced, and the public will find this a safe and expeditious method of transportation.

Indianapolis, June 30, 1852. ADAMS & CO.

Office in Indianapolis in Journal Building, west side Pennsylvania Street.

Office open during business hours.

june30 1y C. WOODWARD, Agent.

The Cheapest Illustrated Paper for the Young.

PRICE ONLY TEN CENTS A YEAR, or nearly three papers for one cent, where 100 copies are taken.

Twenty-six numbers a year, and each number illustrated with from three to seven engravings.

The Youth's Penny Gazette,

A strictly Religious and Moral Paper, is published by the AMERICAN SUNDAY SCHOOL UNION and is designed to furnish the Children and Youth of the United States with reading matter, in a popular form, for the improvement of Mind and Heart.

It is published (not monthly, nor weekly, but) every other week, or twenty-six numbers in a year. It is religious but unsectarian, and the matter is carefully prepared with a view to the habits, character and prospects of American Youth

TERMS OF THE PENNY GAZETTE.

$10 a year, in advance, for 100 copies, to one address. $5 a year, in advance, for 40 copies, to one address. $3 a year, in advance, for 20 copies, to one address. Single subscriptions, 25 cents per year.

TERMS BY MAIL, POSTAGE PAID.

☞ When the postage is paid at the place of mailing, the terms are very low. For $15 remitted, we will send 100 copies of the paper for one year, to one address—we paying postage. For $7 remitted, we will send 40 copies of the paper to one address, for one year—we paying postage. For $3 50 remitted, we will send 20 copies of the paper for one year, to one address—we paying postage. Less than 20 cannot be sent at this cheap rate.

Subscriptions received at the Society's House, No. 146 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.

Feb 16 3w G. S. SCOFIELD, Agent.

TO BUILDERS.

North Western Christian University.

THE Building Committee of the Board of Directors of the North-Western Christiana University, propose contracting for the west wing of the University Building, to be put up on the University grounds in the vicinity of Indianapolis.

Sealed Proposals in detail, with prices affixed for doing the work necessary to the completion of the said Wing, will be received until the 19th day of July next, and may be handed to the undersigned. or to J. T. Cox. Secretary of the Company, at the Book Store of Cox & Mathes, in Indianapolis.

The materials and work to be according to the plan, drawings and specifications prepared by Wm. Tinsley, Architect, which may be seen and examined at his room, on the east side of Pennsylvania street, three doors north of the north-east Diagonal, in Indianapolis. The specifications have been materially changed and modified, so as to reduce the cost of the building.

Proposals for the whole combined, would be preferred; but will be received for the different parts and portions thereof separotely. The whole to be completed and fit for use by the first day of September, 1854.

Payments will be made as the work progresses, at such short periods as may suit the covenience of the Contractors. Bond and security will be required for the performance of the work.

In behalf of the Building Committee:

OVID BUTLER,

President of the Board of Directors.

June 10, 1853. june 22 3w

LITTLE. DRUM & ANDERSONS

WHOLESALE DEALERS IN

STAPLE AND FANCY DRY GOODS, BOOTS, SHOES, HATS, CAPS, STATIONERY, NOTIONS, TRIMMINGS, GROCERIES, HARDWARE, QUEENSWARE, AND GLASSWARE,

North side of Washington Street,

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

WE are receiving Country Produce of all descriptions, and paying the highest market price. Dealers visiting Indianapolis are respectfully invited to call and examine our stock and prices, both for Produce and Merchandise generally june30 tf

JAMES HALL,

MERCHANT TAILOR,

No. 2. Temperance, Hall, Indianapolis,

Manufactu'ng & Clothing Emporium,

Wholesale and Retail Dealer in Ready Made Clothing, Cloths, Cassimers, Vestings, Trimmings, Trunks, Sachels, Canes, Umbrellas, Hats, Caps, a every description of Gentlemen's Furnishing.

Also:

General Agency for the sale of GRAND AND SUBORDINATE REGALIA, EMBLEMS, COSTUMES, &C., FOR THE ORDERS OF MASONS, ODD FELLOWS, TEMPLE OF HONOR, SON, DAUGHTERS, AND CADETS OF TEMPERANCE. oct27 1y

The American Life and Health Insurance Company.

Office—No. 7, South Third St., Philadelphia.

Officers.

LEONARD JEWELL, President.
JAMES PEACOCK, Treasurer.
JOHN C. SIMS, Sec'y and Actuary.
THOS. S. SMITH, Solicitor

JOHN F. BIRD, FRED. A. FICKARDT, } Medical Examiners.

CHARLES WOODWARD, Indianapolis, Ind., General Agent for the State of Indiana.

THIS Company issues policies at Total Abstinence Rates, Joint stock Rates, and at Mutual Rates, which for $1000 on the life of a person 30 years of age, are as follows:

Age.	Total Abstinence.	Joint Stock.	Mutual.
30	$15.40	$19.60	$23.60

A further table of Rates will be furnished at the Office.

The condition in Total Abstinence rates (believed to be the lowest in the Union,) is entire forfeiture upon the departure of the Insured from Total Abstinence in its strictest sense.

Policies at Joint Stock and Mutual rates, contain no condition except as usual in Life Insurance.

HEALTH INSURANCE DEPARTMENT.

All Moneys received from the Insured, for Annual Premiums, after deducting expenses, will be divided among the Sick

The Public have for some time been familiar with the subject of Life and Health Insurance, but it is obvious that too little thoughts has been given to the latter. LIFE Insurance benefits our successors, while HEALTH Insurance directly benefits ourselves. It makes provision for a time of sickness, when the products of a man's industry are cut off, and want unites with Disease to aggravate his distress. It is at this gloomy period, when he is prostrated and helpless, and when despondency would otherwise overwhelm him, that the holder of a Health Insurance Policy will realize its benefits.

RATES, under 50 years of age,

$2,00	per year,	for	$2,00	per week.
3,00	"	"	3,00	"
4,00	"	"	4,00	"
5,00	"	"	5,00	"
6,00	"	"	6,00	"

Over fifty and under sixty.

$2,50	per year,	for	$2,50	per week.
3,75	"	"	3,00	"
5,00	"	"	4,00	"
6,25	"	"	5,00	"
7,50	"	"	6,00	"

When the Fund shall amount to Three Dollars and upwards for every person insured and sufficient to warrant an additional distribution, the weekly allowances will be increased in accordance with the Rules of the Policy.

All the members of a Temple or Division insured at greatly reduced rates.

Applications for Agencies in any of the cities or towns in the State, should be made to the undersigned, post paid, or in person.

As Agent for the above Company, I am prepared to receive applications for Policies at any of the above rates.

CHARLES WOODWARD, Agent,

At ADAMS & CO.'S Express Office.

J. L. MOTHERSHEAD, Medical Examiner.

june 30 '52-1y

Ohio Life Insurance Company,

Capital $100,000.

JOINT STOCK AND MUTUAL,

CINCINNATI.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS.

Wm. Burnet, Jno. N. Ridgway, Chas. Goodman, S. Robert, E. S. Haines, Jno. M. Blair, J. W. Donohue, Edan B. Reeder, Wm. Person.

WM. BURNET, President.

S. W. REEDER, Sec'y J. W. DONOHUE, Vice Pres't

Office in Reeder's Building, Third street, between Almy's and City Bank.

This Company insures Lives at the lowest rates consistent with safety, either upon the Joint Stock or Mutual plan.

In the Joint Stock Department, premium payable quarterly, semi-annually or annually. On the Mutual plan, one-half the premium paid in Cash, the balance by a note bearing six per cent. interest—the interest only payable annually. Persons insuring on the mutual plan, participate in the profits of the Company in that department.

The undersigned having been appointed agent for the above Company, is prepared to fill applications for Life Insurance, on favorable terms.

Any information on the subject and pamphlets explaining the nature and utility of Life Insurance, furnished without charge, at the office of the Agent.

C. WOODWARD, Agent.

Office at Adam's & Co's Express Office, Journal Building, Pennsylvania street, Indianapolis, Ind.

june 30, '52-1y.

Railroad City Book Store.

COX & MATHES,

South side of Washington, between Illinois and Meridian streets,

INDIANAPOLIS, INDIANA.

AT wholesale and retail, Standard and Miscellaneous Works, Law, and Medical Books, School Books, Plain and Fancy Stalionery, Blank Books, Wall Papers, &c., &c. mar 2

CHEAP WATCHES & JEWELRY.

Good Gold Watches at $24!

WE are now in our new Room No. 1, Palmer House, with a lot of beautiful Watches and Jewelry which we are selling lower than ever heretofore sold in Indianapolis, for instance we sell

Good 18 K Case Gold Lepines at $24.
" 18 K " " Levers at $28.
" Silver Anchor Levers $12 to $18.
" " Cylenders, $9 to $12.
" " Quarter's $6 to $10.

In addition to the above we have a fine assortment of other description of Watches all of which we will sell lower than any other firm dare sell in the place. I have in my employ a very superior Watch Repairer who will always be on on hand to do watch repairing of every description. Mr. Michot has worked in Geneva, Paris, New York and other large cities and has had great experience in his Branch of the business. All Watches warranted for one year, and the money in all cases refunded, provided they do not give entire satisfaction.

feb9 tf E. W. NEFF.

SMALL CHANGE.

THE undersigned is prepared to furnish Merchants and others with three cent pieces from the United States Mint at Philadelphia, free of transportation, in sums of 30, 60, and 90 dollars, upon deposit of Gold or Eastern Exchange. Also cents and half cents, upon payment of frieght on gold to Philadelphia, or on Eastern Exchange free of freight.

C. WOODWARD, Agent,

june 30 Adams & Co.'s Express.

A CHANCE TO MAKE MONEY.

Profitable and honorable Employment!

THE Subscriber is desirous of having an agent in each county and town of the Union. A capital of from $5 to $10 only will be required, and anything like an efficient, energetic man can make from three to five dollars per day; indeed some of the Agents now employed are realizing twice that sum. Every information will be given by addressing, (postage paid) WM. A. KINSLER,

june 15 3w ¶ Box 601, Philadelphia P. O.

THE ILLUSTRATED MAGAZINE OF ART.

THE five numbers of this Magazine which are published, place it at the head of publications of this kind No expense will be spared to make it in every respect worthy of the name, the "Illustrated Magazine of Art. The Engavings which are preparing for the future numbers are in the hands of first-class American and European Artists.

A Series of most interesting Tales will appear in it. "The School of Life," written and Illustrated by ANNA MARY, daughter of William and Mary Howitt, will shortly appear; also, "The Dead Bridal," an historical romance, illustrative of the most interesting period in the history of the Venetian Republic, by JONATHAN FREKE SLINGSBY, of the Dublin University Magazine; contributions, too, from WILLIAM and MARY HOWITT, PERCY B. ST. JOHN, and other writers of distinction in America and Europe.

The following is a brief outline of the plan of the Magazine:

I. The Historical Department will abound with picturesque representations of the most remarkable events which have occurred in this and other countries; accompanied with interesting anecdotes and details from the pen of the most eminent writers of the day. This department will contain several splendid engravings, designed by the first artists of the world, and engraved in the highest style of modern art.

II. The Men and Women of the Age. This department will consist of beautifully executed portraits of the leading characters of the age, especially of those who figure on the stage of humanity as the world's benefactors. Each portrait will be accompanied by an interesting biographical sketch.

III. The Wonders of Natural History, Botany, and other sciences, will be developed in choice Engravings of Beasts, Birds, Fishes, Insects, Forest Trees, Flowers, Geological and Fossil Specimens, &c., with accompanying descriptions.

IV. The Triumphs of Architectural Art will be displayed in exquisitely finished representations of Cathedrals, Churches, Palaces, and other models of ancient and modern Architectural Art.

V. The Works of the Great Masters, selected from the principal Galleries of Art in the World. In general, the portrait of the Master will be given, accompanied with a highly finished engraved copy of his chef d'œuvre.

VI. The Scientific Portions will be rendered highly interesting by the familiar explanations, and the numerous diagrams which will accompany each subject.

VII. Manufactures. The principal manufacturing processes in use will be fully explained by minute details, and an abundance of beautiful engravings.

VIII. Machinery and Inventions will have due attention paid to them, and be described by numerous appropriate engravings.

IX. The Literary Department, independently of the various articles accompanying the illustrations, will comprise original and interesting narratives, contributed by the most popular writers of the day, with numerous illustrations.

In every respect, the "Illustrated Magazine of Art," will be decidedly

SUPERIOR TO ANY MAGAZINE OF THE DAY.

Each Monthly part will contain at least Thirty superb Engravings, four of which will be printed separately, on supefine Plate Paper.

The greatest care will be manifested in every department of production. The Paper will be of the first manufacture, and the Ink supplied from the celebrated Printing Ink Establishment of Messrs. Lawson & Co., of Paris. Six of the monthly portions, when completed, will form a volume which, for interest, originality, value and beauty, will defy competition. It will not only be an interesting family book, but a rich ornament for the drawing-room table, and a pleasant companion in the study.

The parts will appear on the First of every Month at Twenty-five Cents each.

ALEXANDER MONTGOMERY,

may 25 17 Spruce Street, New-York.

SPLENDIDLY ILLUSTRATED WORKS.

THE ALPS, SWITZERLAND, SAVOY AND LOMBARDY.

With the Magazine for June will be ready, Part I., price Twenty-five Cents, of a Magnificent Work to be completed in Twelve Monthly Parts, entitled

THE ALPS, SWITZERLAND, SAVOY AND LOMBARDY, with an account of the most recent Ascents to Mont Blanc, &c. By the Rev. Charles Williams. This work, when completed, will form a large thick Volume, in Imperial Octavo, containing upwards of Three Hundred beautiful Engravings, descriptive of the peculiar Scenery of those most interesting portions of Europe, with the Occupations of the Inhabitants, &c., &c.

Cassell's Natural History.

On the First of July will commence

CASSELL'S NATURAL HISTORY, which for variety, beauty and completeness, will claim to be considered as a first-class work, upon this most interesting subject. The First volume will be devoted to the Feathered Tribe of the Creation and will contain upwards of Three Hundred Engravings, in the first style of Art. The volume will be completed in Twelve Monthly Parts, Imperial Octavo. Price 25 cents each.

History of England.

On the First of July will appear Part I., price 25 cts. of THE ILLUSTRATED HISTORY OF ENGLAND, from the earliest period on record to the present time. Edited by ROBERT FERGUSON, LL. D.

This History, which is intended to form a great National Work, will extend to Four Volumes, Imperial Octavo; each Volume to be completed in Twelve Monthly Parts, price 25 cents each. The Work will comprehend the Political, Civil, and Domestic History of the Nation, and its Progress in Civilization, Literature, Art, &c. It will be profusely Illustrated with Engravings from Designs by GILBERT, PHILLIPPOTEAUX, WILLIAMS, and others. Representations of the most remarkable Events will be worked separately upon Plate Paper. The Portraits will form a complete Gallery, not only of the Monarchs, but of those individuals whose names are prominent in England's History. Also, Antiquities, including Autographs, Buildings, Costume, Furniture, Arms, Coins, Monuments, Manufactures &c., of each Epoch.

History of Hungary.

July First will be published, in one Handsome Volume, Imperial Octavo, price, One Dollar and Twenty-five Cents, in Cloth Boards,

THE ILLUSTRATED HISTORY OF HUNGARY, AND THE MAGYARS, from the Earliest Period to the clos of the late War. By EDWARD LAWRENCE GODKIN. The Volume will be Illustrated with One Hundred highly finished Engravings, including representations of the principal Battles; Portraits of the early Kings, and of the Statesmen and Generals who figured in the War of Independence; Costumes of the Peasantry, &c.; Views of the chief Towns and Fortresses, &c.; with an accurate Description of the Manners and Customs of the People, their Literature, Commerce, Arts, &c.

ALEXANDER MONTGOMERY,

may25 Publisher, 17 Spruce Street, New-York.

MANSION HOUSE,

Cambridge City, Indiana.

J. CUNNINGHAM, Proprietor.

TRAVELLERS

Will find it to their advantage to call and try the accommodation of the MANSION HOUSE.

STAGE OFFICE also in connection with this House.

may 4 6m

INDIANA STATE LIBRARY

TEMPERANCE CHART.

A Weekly Journal:---Devoted to Temperance, Morality, Education, Literature, Useful Arts, Science, General Intelligenc, &c.

J. W. GORDON, M. D., EDITOR.] ORGAN OF THE GRAND DIVISION OF INDIANA. [JOHN H. OHR, PRINTER.

VOL. III. INDIANAPOLIS, IND., WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 31, 1853. NO. 10.

THE TEMPERANCE CHART,

IS PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY, BY THE GRAND DIVISION, S. of T. OF INDIANA.

Edited by J. W. Gordon, M. D.

To whom all Communications and Subscriptions must be addressed, post-paid.

OFFICE—in second story of Temperance Hall Building, Washington St., Indianapolis.

TERMS:

Single copy, one year,..... 75 cts.

☞ In advance in all cases,

TERMS OF ADVERTISING.—Circulation 4000 copies.

One Squre, (12 lines,) for one week,	$0 50
" " for each subsequent insertion,	25
" " for 3 months,	3 00
" " for 6 months,	5 00
" " for 1 year without alteration,	8 00
" " for 1 year, with changes,	12 00

A reduction made on larger advertisements.

Cuts double the above rates.

Advertisements must be handed in by Saturday, of each week, to insure insertion.

Applications for advertising, or for any kind of Printing for the Order, must be made to

J. H. OHR, Indianapolis.

POETRY.

Life's Harvest.

BY WILLIAM EDWARD KNOWLES.

Ho! reaper of Life's Harvest,
  Why stand with rusted blade,
Until the night draws round thee,
  And day begins to fade?
Why stand ye idle, waiting
  For reapers more to come?
The golden morn is passing,
  Why sit ye idle, dumb?
Thrust in your sharpen'd sickle,
  And gather in the grain;
The night is fast approaching,
  And soon will come again.

Thy Master calls for reapers,
  And shall he call in vain?
Shall sheaves lie there ungathered,
  And waste upon the plain?
Come down from hill and mountain,
  In morning's ruddy glow,
Nor wait until the dial
  Points to the noon below,
And come with strong sinew,
  Nor faint in heat or cold;
And pause not till the evening
  Draws round its wealth of gold.

And mount the crumbling watchtowers,
  And herald on the truth;
Preach out the golden precepts,
  To wild and wayward youth,
Mount up the heights of wisdom,
  And crush each error low;
Keep back no words of knowledge
  That human hearts should know.
Be faithful to thy mission,
  In the service of thy Lord;
And then a golden chaplet
  Shall be thy just reward.

MISCELLANEOUS.

The Harp--A Contribution to Spiritual Lore.

Translated for the "Literary World," from the German of Theodore Korner.

The Secretary lived with his young wife in the as yet untroubled bliss of the honeymoon. No worldly motives, no passing passion had united them. No! Ardent and long-tried love had been the seal of their union. Very early in life had they learned to know each other; but the delay attending Sellner's appointment to his secretaryship, compelled him ever to postpone the attainment of his wishes. Finally, he received his patent, and the Sunday following he led his true maiden, as his wife, into the new abode. After the long, constrained days of congratulation and family festivals were over, they could at length enjoy the pleasant evenings, disturbed by no third person, in trustful solitude. Plans for future life, Sellner's flute, and Josephine's harp, filled out the hours, which glided by only too rapidly for the lovers, and the deep harmony of their tones was to them a friendly foretoken of future days.

One evening, when they had delighted each other for a long time with their music, Josephine began to complain of a headache. That morning she had concealed an attack from her anxious husband, and a fever, at first insignificant, was increased by the inspiration and the over exertion of the senses, so much the more, that she from youth upwards, had suffered from weak nerves. She concealed it no longer from her husb and, and Sellner anxiously sent for a physician. He, however, treated the matter as a trifle, and promised a complete recovery for the morrow. But after a restless night, during which she raved incessantly, the doctor found the poor Josephine in a condition which had all the appearance of a dangerous, nervous fever. He applied all remedies, but Josephine's illness grew daily worse. Sellner was beside himself. On the ninth day, Josephine felt that the weak fabric of her nerves could not long endure this illness; the doctor had already foretold this to Sellner. She felt that her last hour had already come, and with calm resignation awaited her fate.

"Dear Edward," said she to her husband, while she pressed him for the last time to her bosom, "with deep sorrow do I take leave of this beautiful earth, where I have found thee, and deepest bliss in thy heart; but though I can no longer be happy in thine arms, yet shall Josephine's love hover around thee, like a faithful genius, until we meet above!"

When she had said this, she sank back, and softly slumbered her life away. It was about nine o'clock in the evening.—What Sellner suffered was inexpressible; he fought long with life; grief had shattered his health; and when, at length, after weeks of illness, he rose from his bed, the strength of youth was no longer in his limbs; he sank into a moody kind of stupor, and wasted away visibly. Deep despondency stepped into the place of despair, and a silent sorrow hallowed all remembrances of the loved one. He had left Josephine's chamber in the same condition as before her death. Upon the sewing table yet lay her work, and the harp stood, still and untouched in the corner. Every evening, Sellner made a pilgrimage to this sanctuary of his love, took his flute thither with him, leaned, as in times of his happiness upon the window, and breathed forth in mournful tones, his longing after the loved shadow. Once thus he stood, lost in his thoughts, in Josephine's chamber. The air of a clear, moonlight night was wafted in to him from the open window, and, from the neighboring castle tower, the watchman called the ninth hour, then, on a sudden, the harp resounded in harmony with his tones, as though touched by a light spirit breath. Strangely surprised, he ceased playing upon his flute, and with it died away also the sound of the harp. Now, trembling violently, he began Josephine's favorite song, and ever louder and mightier sounded the strings to his melodies, and in deepest harmony the tones intermingled. Then, in an anguish of joy, he sank upon the floor, and opened wide his arms, to embrace the loved shadow, and suddenly felt himself breathed upon, as by the warm air of spring, and a pale shimmering light flitted towards and past him. Glowing with the inspiration of love, he exclaimed:

"I know thee, beloved shade of my glorified Josephine! Thou didst promise to hover around me with thy love; thou hast kept thy word; I feel thy breath; thy kiss upon my lips; I feel myself embraced by thy glorified spirit."

In deepest bliss, he seized his flute anew, and the harp sounded again, but ever softer, and its whispering died out in lengthened strains. Sellner's whole vital strength was deeply agitated by the spirit-greeting of this evening; restless he flung himself upon his couch, and in all his heated dreams, the whispering of the heart summoned him.

Late, and wearied by the visions of the night, he awoke, feeling his whole being seized by some strange power, and a voice was living within him, which was to him a token of speedy dissolution, and significant of the victory of the soul over the body. With ceaseless longing, he awaited the evening, and hastened to spend it in Josephine's chamber. He had already succeeded in lulling himself with his flute, into a dreamy quiet, when one o'clock struck, and hardly had the last stroke of the bell ceased vibrating upon the ear, when the harp began gently to sound, until it finally trembled into full accord.—When his flute became silent, the spirit-tones died away; the pale shimmering light flitted, this time also, past him, he could utter naught but the words: "Josephine, take me to thy true bosom." Once more the harp took leave with gently-dying tones, until its whisperings were lost in the lengthened, tremulous strains. Exhausted in a still greater degree by the events of this evening than before, Sellner tottered back to his room. His faithful servant was shocked at the appearanee of his master, and hastened, in spite of orders to the contrary, for the physician, who was besides, an old friend of Sellner's. The doctor found him under a most violent attack of fever, with the same symptoms, as in the case of Josephine, but much more dangerous. The fever increased threateningly, throughout the night, whilst he incessantly raved of Josephine and the harp. In the morning, he became calmer, for the struggle was over, and he felt his approaching dissolution as even more evident, although the physician affected not to perceive anything of the kind. The sick man disclosed to his friend what had taken place, and no expostulations of the cool, sensible man could withdraw him from his opinion. As evening drew nigh, he became more languid, and finally begged, with trembling voice, to be carried into Josephine's chamber. With unceasing cheerfulness he looked around, greeted each beautiful reminiscence with silent tears, and spoke calmly, but firmly convinced, of nine o'clock as the hour of his death. The decisive moment drew nigh; he caused all to leave the room after bidding them a last farewell, except the physician, who wished to remain throughout. When nine o'clock resounded solemnly, from the castle-tower, then Sellner's face grew bright, a deep emotion glowed once more upon his pale face.—"Josephine!" called he, as though inspired by the Deity, "Josephine! greet me once more as I take my leave of life, that I may know thee near, and conquer death with thy love!" Then sounded wondrously the strings of the harp, in loud, glorious strains. as though songs of victory, and around the dying man flitted a shimmering light. "I come! I come!" he exclaimed, sank back, and struggled with life. Ever softer and softer, sounded the tones of the harp; then Sellner's last remains of vital strength made one mighty effort, and when it was over with him, the harp-strings sprung asunder, as though dashed by a spirit-hand. The physician's knees smote him; he closed the eyes of the now glorified one, who in spite of the struggle, lay as in a gentle slumber, and, in deep emotion, left the house. For years he could not tear the recollection of that hour from his heart, and preserved the deepest silence as to the last moments of his friend, until finally, in a moment of free intercourse with friends, he imparted the events of that evening, and showed the harp which he had kept as a bequest of the deceased.

From the Republican.

Heart-Pictures.

BY M. LOUISA CHITWOOD.

Let me look upon them long and earnestly. The first is a fair young face, sunny curls, dove-like eyes, a delicate form, and a too loving heart. I say too loving: in this world we find much of heart-coldness, of pride and self-conceit, and little, too little soul-sympathy. But there are some hearts replete with a love that "lasteth through all things, hopeth o'er all things, and overcometh all things." Her heart was fashioned thus. Alas! it is still now. She became at last the wife of a drunkard. Oh, would that I could throw the whole strength of my heart in those words! There are many all over this wide world, who were once young and beautiful as she, living lives whose heart-beats are counted out in throes of agony. For them the day has no sunshine and the night no stars. For them flowers are perfumeless, and bird-music discord. For them love lies fearfully and forever burning in their hearts, through layers of cruelty and scorn and injustice. For them that great life-blessing is a curse. And such a life as this she lived whose youth was spent amid flowers, whose young hopes were gilded with sunshine. Let me look upon him, her earthly idol. Fallen, degraded and cruel as he was, her heart was too loving, and she clung to him unwearied to the last. Mighty genius flashes from his dark eyes—words of musical sweetness fall from his lips.—Noble, manly, generous, he was the recipient of earthly adulation. His way seemed joyous, but there was a serpent coiling round his life-roses—the crimson on his cheek was the ring of destruction. He was only the moderate drinker. He only drank wine at the gorgeous saloon; he only tasted the most choice brandy at the sumptuous bar. No danger of him. Ah, gentle maiden, better wrap the white folds of the winding sheet around you, and lay your head beneath the clods of the valley, than stand by his side at the holy altar. Better tear the first love-tendrils that are beginning to wind around your heart, away in their young claspings, though for awhile they bleed, than cultivate them to crush that heart as the ivy is said sometimes to crush the life from the tree. Turn, gentle one, from the moderate drinker, though his purse be heavy with gold, and his lips flavored with honeyed vows and promises. Can you bear weary days of neglect, and long nights of uncared-for vigils? Can you bear to hear the lips that now utter love, mutter curses? Can you bear the blow from the strong arms that now protect you? Can you bear to plod on through life, toiling for nothing that will give you joy, hoping for nothing that you see not destroyed, striving for nothing but the reformation of the erring, asking nothing but kind, loving words from his lips that are mute now, except uttering cruelty, until at last you see him die the death of the drunkard, unmourned except by your wrung heart. Maiden, fair and loving, beware the moderate drinker, and you, young man, with hope and youth and fame before you, beware how you nourish a serpent that will sting you to the grave. Think deeply before you place a plant in your heart more deadly than the Upas. Rest not night nor day while the ban is on you of a moderate drinker, until you can fold your arms and say, no drop of the poison moistens my lips.

"Srive on and battle for the right,
You'll gain in strength at last,"

Washington's Wealth.

The following extract is taken from an old book published by Russell & West, of Boston, in the year 1800, entitled "Washington's Political Legacies," and dedicated by the editors to Mrs. Martha Washington:

"General Washington was at one time, probably, one of the greatest landholders in the United States. His annual receipts from his estates amounted in 1796, to four thousand pounds sterling. His property at the same period was estimated to be worth one hundred and sixty thousand pounds sterling, which is a very large sum in federal money, and was considered a very good fortune in that early day in this country for any one man to possess. His estate at Mount Vernon alone was computed, in 1787, to consist of nine thousand acres of land, of which enough was in cultivation to produce, in a single year, ten thousand bushels of corn and seven thousand bushels of wheat. In a succeeding year he raised two hundred lambs, sowed twenty-seven bushels of flaxseed, and planted seven hundred bushels of potatoes. He desisted, it was said, from planting tobacco, which was then extensively raised in Virginia, for the purpose of setting an example, by employing his extensive means in the introduction and fostering of such articles of domestic use and necessity as would ultimately tend to the best advantages of his country. His domestics, at the same time, were industriously employed in manufacturing woolen cloth and linen in sufficient quantities to clothe his numerous household, which numbered nearly one thousand persons."

☞ For several evenings past, the downward Albany Express train, on the Haerlem railroad, has encountered obstructions laid across the track at or near Searsdale station, twenty miles from New York. The obstructions consisted of several planks, evidently laid on for the fiendish purpose of throwing the train off the track when going at lightning speed.—Fortunately the cow-catcher of the passing locomotive pushed off the obstructions without accident. On Wednesday evening last, the company placed watchmen in the bushes along the road near the scene of the previous outrages, for the purpose of detecting the author. In this they were entirely successful. Sometime before the downward express train was due—9¾ P. M.—a fiend in human form emerged from the woods, and having rolled down a large sleeper upon the track, commenced to fasten it firmly in its place, by means of stakes, evidently determined that this time there should be no escape. But the watchmen sprang upon him and caught him in the act. He was immediately conducted to the county jail at White Plains, where he awaits his trial. When interrogated, he refuses to make any reply whatever.—His name is yet unknown.—Journal of Commerce.

It is more often from pride than from want of intelligence that people oppose with so much obstinacy the most received opinions. They find the best places taken in the good party, and do not like to put up with inferior ones.

Moral Reflections, Sentences, and Maxims.

It is very troublesome to come to a rupture when we no longer love.

We are almost always wearied in the company of persons with whom we are not permitted to be weary.

A man of sense may love like a madman, but never like a fool.

There are certain faults which, when turned to good account, gain more reputation than virtue itself.

There are some persons whom, when we lose, we regret more than we mourn: and others whom we mourn and scarcely regret.

In general we only praise heartily those who admire us.

Little minds are too much hurt by little things. Great minds perceive them all, and are not touched by them.

Humility is the true proof of Christian virtues; without it we retain all our faults, and they are only hidden by pride, which conceals them from others, and often from ourselves.

Justice is in general only a lively apprehension of being deprived of what belongs to us; hence arise our great consideration and respect for all the interests of our neighbor, and our scrupulous care to avoid doing him an injury. This fear retains men within the limits of those advantages which birth or fortune has given them; and, without it, they would be making continual inroads upon others.

Justice in moderate judges is only love of their elevation.

The most subtle folly is produced by the most subtle wisdom.

Moderation in good fortune is commonly nothing but dread of the shame which attends excessive elevation, or fear of losing what we possess.

Moderation is like temperance;—we should wish to eat more, but are afraid of injuring our health.

Every one blames in his neighbor what the world blames in himself.

It is a kind of happiness to know to what extent we may be unhappy.

Fortunate people never correct themselves. They always fancy they are in the right as long as fortune supports their ill conduct.

The charm of novelty is in love what the bloom is on fruits; it gives a lustre which is easily effaced, and which never returns.

The generality of young people fancy that they are natural, when they are only ill-bred and coarse.

Minds of moderate calibre ordinarily condemn every thing which is beyond their range.

THE WOLF HUNT.—I once read about a wolf hunt. For a long time the wolf had depredated upon the community. Folds had been entered and sheep destroyed.—He had been often hunted, but never caught. The work of ruin went on. One wintry day, two brothers, while traveling homeward, crossed the track of the wolf. "Here I will camp," said one of the brothers. "You go back and bring food, and we will never leave the track until we destroy the wolf." The brothers did so, and together they pursued the wolf until darkness set in, and then camped on the track! As the daylight appeared, they again pursued their way, always camping on the track where night overtook them. Thus early and late they pursued, and on the fourth day, overtook and destroyed him. So we did in Maine. Year after year we toiled, always camping on the track. At last we triumphed, and our State is rid of the great evil of intemperance.—Hon. Neal Dow.

THE CHILD'S HEART.—A child's heart responds to the tones of its mother's voice like a harp to the wind, and its only hope for peace and courage is in hearing nothing but peace and gentleness from her, and experiencing nothing but unremitting love, whatever may be its troubles elsewhere. Supposing this to be all right, the mother will feel herself from the first, the depositary of its confidence—a confidence as sacred as any other, though tacit, and about matters which may appear to all but itself and her infinitely small.

TEMPERANCE CHART.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.
WM. HANNAMAN, C. E. BABB,
JAMES HALL, R. T. BROWN,
JOHN B. ABBETT.

WEDNESDAY, AUG. 31, 1853.

To Correspondents.—Several communications have been received, which, owing to circumstances, are necessarily laid over for the present. They will be attended to as soon as convenient. The editor being temporarily absent from home, replies to letters of a more private nature must be deferred till his return.

Our correspondent at West Lebanon is informed that the new Ritual is expected to be out soon, and in the hands of the Grand Scribe here for distribution.

Street Meeting To-morrow.

We trust our friends will not forget the meeting to-morrow. It will be held in the street, opposite the Post Office, as before. We hope this movement will go forward, gathering strength and life, until the last liquor-selling establishment, whether wholesale or retail—whether for the sale of common articles in that line, or for those which have nicer names, within the limits of our fair city, shall be forced to discontinue the business. The work has begun right, we think, and if so, contrary to the old and very false adage, it will end right.

At a meeting held at Roberts' Chapel, since the street meeting, noticed last week, some resolutions (which we give below) were passed, showing a confident spirit, and speaking as if the Temperance men thought they were the strong party here. Will not all good citizens help, so far as it can be done, to put a stop to this miserable business? Shall we not get rid entirely of the accursed traffic that is ruining, for time and eternity, our young men, and fast preparing for a drunkard's grave and a drunkard's hell those who are older? Has not the vile business long enough been doing its work of destruction, blighting the fairest hopes of fond parents, and blasting forever the brightest prospects of man amongst us? Will not past victims suffice, and can not those who yet have strength left, have the charm removed that they may escape for their lives?—Will not recent examples in our midst of the conclusion of the work of destruction upon what was once a manly and noble character, and the yet living examples of those upon whom this dreadful business is doing the same work, have the effect to bring the moral portion of our citizens to think and to act on this subject? Is there any man in this community, with all the facts which exist here, before his eyes, who is not engaged in the business in some way or other, is there such a one so base or sunk so low, or so blind to the consequence as not to desire that this evil may be removed, and the cup of temptation be taken from the hands of those who are about to drain it to their utter destruction? There is a moral power in this community which may do much, let it be brought out and exerted.

The following are the resolutions:

Resolved, That a committee of five citizens be appointed to wait on the City Council at their first meeting, and request the passage of an ordinance declaring all places in the city, where persons known to be in the habit of using intoxicating drinks resort, public nusances, and to be abated, and provide what shall be deemed evidence in such cases, to authorize the prosecution, and also provide for the arrest of all persons keeping such drinking establishments, as vagrants.

Resolved, That the commitee of five appointed at the recent street meeting with the President and Secretary thereof, be requested to appear before the Mayor and present the names of certain individuals who have, since said meeting, been seen going into, and drinking at grogshops, and that they request the Attorney for the city and county to attend and prosecute the violators of the law, prohibiting the sale of intoxicating liquors, in all such cases that the healthful provisions of the law may be enforced in their true spirit.

Mass Meeting at Aurora.

I will be seen by the following notice, that a great Mass Meeting is appointed to be held at Aurora, on the 15th and 16th of September. Let the work go on.

"A Grand Temperance Mass Meeting will be held at Aurora, on the 15th and 16th days of September, 1853. The "Sons," "Daughters," "Temple of Honor," "Cadets," "Washingtonians," "Social Order," and everybody else, throughout the country, friendly and unfriendly to the Cause of Temperance are invited to attend."

It is further stated that a number of distinguished speakers from various parts of the country are invited to be present, among others, General Carey, of Ohio.

We have also received the following communication from the same quarter:

Aurora, Aug. 19, 1853.

Dr. Gordon:—Sir:—The friends of Temperance in this county have resolved to do as well as say, and their labor is not in vain. It is interesting and gratifying to hear of the numbers of our farmers who have hitherto furnished grain for our still-houses, expressing their determination to do so no more; and the coopers are refusing to contract for whisky barrels. The work goes on bravely. A healthful influence is spreading all ouer the country. Here, at head quarters. the rummies think we are in earnest. We have speaking on the streets once a week in the evening, and many who would never go to a house to hear a temperance lecture, are, by this means, addressed on this subject, and a fine impression is made. Beside our own speakers, we have been favored with most able and effective speeches from Rev. Mr. Vancleve, of Ohio, D. O. Daily, A. M., of Decatur, and Rev. Mr. Barnett, of Madison; and we intend to agitate—agitate, although it annoys the liquor men—it is death on their trade. We look for a great time at the Grand Rally here on the 15th and 16th of September prox. This beautiful city, so long cursed with the whisky traffic, is about to be redeemed. One distillery has been closed, and we hope to see the other wind up soon, and its enterprising proprietors engaged in a more honorable business.

We had a very impressive temperance lecture at a Methodist Camp Menting that closed this week, which lecture consisted in the very good order observed throughout the meeting, in the enforcement of our excellent camp-meeting law—we kept liquor at a respectful distance, and therefore we had a quiet, peaceable time.

How much better off our country would be if we had something like the Maine Law! But we will have it.

Yours, &c., Jno. W. Sullivan.

Harris' Panorama of Intemperance.

This beautiful painting, that the young artist has been engaged at for the last year in Indianapolis, is now completed, and will be placed on exhibition at the Masonic Hall, so soon as the proper arrangements can be made.

The painting covers over ten thousand feet of canvas, and will be one of the most beautiful panoramas ever exhibited in this country. It comprises over a thousand human figures as large as life, and is a beautiful and true representation of the varied scenes of intemperance and crime. The beholder can not fail to be impressed with the force of the characters presented. As a painting it has but few equals, and carries with it a moral that can not fail to be productive of good.

The friends of temperance will be highly gratified with this painting, as it must prove a powerful auxiliary to the Temperance Cause.

We speak for it, as a work of art, an abundant success, and a hearty support from every friend of Temperance. Go and see it; take your wives, your daughters, and your sons—everybody should see it. *

☞ Horace Hays, whilst intoxicated, was drowned at a ferry, on White river, near Bloomfield, in this State, a few days ago.

Yellow Fever in New Orleans.

Accounts still continue to reach us of the ravages of this disease in that city, with reports of greatly increased mortality. At last accounts upwards of three hundred deaths had occurred in one day, and the horrors of the scenes presented, as detailed in letters from persons there to friends in other parts of the country, have perhaps never been exceeded, if equaled, by any visitation of pestilence in any form in this cuontry. As is always the case, when an epidemic prevails in a large city, the distress of extreme poverty is added, in many instances making the situation of the sufferers indescribably dreadful. Letters to business men up the river, direct them to send down no more boats for the present, and business is entirely suspended. Indeed hope seems to have almost fled from the wretched city, and the awful scourge has settled down upon it in all its terrible power. The Delta says, the ball-room, the theater, &c., are deserted, and seem sacrilegious now. We should think so.

A society called the "Howard Association" has been organized there for the purpose of taking care of the sick, providing for the destitute, &c. Collections in aid of this object have been made, and money forwarded by the principal cities in the Union, and many other places. It is to be hoped our citizens will avail themselves of the privilege of ministering to the wants of the wretched sufferers. Money can be forwarded to the Howard Association, New Orleans, and we have no doubt that relief will be needed for many weeks yet, as the disease usually prevails there, when it breaks out, till near the first of November.

State Convention at Madison.

We give below the list of delegates from this city to the Convention at Madison. The character of this delegation is all that could be desired, and if other parts of the State should respond as satisfactorily to the call, the various representations will be composed of men who will leave an influence behind them in our good sister city, which will not quickly pass away, and the Convention will "do the State some service." Will not our friends throughout the different counties stir themselves up, and send up sufficient delegations?

At a meeting of the friends of Temperance of this city, held Tnesday evening 23d inst., the following persons were appointed delegates to the State Temperance Convention, to be held at Madison, Sept. 28th, 1853:

Calvin Fletcher, W. C. Thompson, H. C. Newcomb, James Blake, J. W. Gordon, C. Woodward, James Hall, John Kerns, J. C. Steel, B. F. Crary, G. M. Boyd, Wm. Wilson, J. A. McClung, E. R. Guiney, H. L. Servis, Peter Winchell, Thomas Gott, J. H. Ohr, T. G. Alford, J. Wilkens, I. N. Phipps, G. C. Beeks, R. A. Taylor, D. Yandes, A. Brouse, T. H. Lynch, J. A. Wright, Wm. Hannaman, J. S. Sweetser, B. S. Goode, J. M. Ray, J. W. Lynch, Jas. H. McNeely, J. L. Ketchem, C. Scudder, Rev. Mr. Maxwell, Rev. Mr. Stevenson, J. R. Osgood, S. M. Seibert, D. B. Culley, J. Sulgrove, Henry Ohr, E. Kitchen, J. H. Woodburn, E. Whiten, S. T. Gillet, S. Dyer, L. H. Jameson, W. H. Goode, James T. Brown, J. C. Bennett, A. M. Hunt, F. Mansur, R. Duncan, C. Purcell, Will Ray, and D. Sloan.

The Cause in the South-west.

The following, from an article in the Southern Organ, published in New Orleans, shows that temperance men in Louisiana are awake to their duty. The battle seems to have fairly begun in that part of the country, where liquor has perhaps done as much mischief as in any portion of the Union. The Temperance Reform has a wide field before it in the South-west. Judging from the spirit with which it is commenced, as manifested in the extract, the final result can hardly be doubtful.

"The Temperance movement in this State has aroused men of all classes.—Friends of reform, in the broadest sense of the term, are determined, enthusiastic, and united: the liquor dealers have organized for a fierce opposition to the destruction of their death-dealing potations; and the timid, the popularity hunters, and those guided by expediency instead of principle, hesitatingly approve, but doubt the propriety of the Temperance platform.

"This is just what was expected. The patriot, the moral reformer, feels strong when he has adopted a course of action based upen principles of eternal truth. He sees, through the gloom of the conflict upon which he has entered, the brightness of the full day of victory. And what reform has ever been suggested, from the time the Ephesians mobbed the Apostle Paul to the present day, that did not arouse fierce opposition?"

The Majesty of the Movement.

The people of this generation have seen no moral movement comparable in the grandeur and majesty of its progress to the Temperance Reform. Beginning in weakness, it has risen from a little cloud, no bigger than a man's hand, till it expands from ocean to ocean, and sheds its mercy-drops on whole nations. At first, the attempt to arrest the inundation seemed like an effort to stay the rising tide of the Atlantic, and roll back its floods with a broom. Year succeeding year of toil and anxious counsels among the friends of humanity, and sometimes when they sat down to review the labors of the past, it seemed as though the evil they combated grew rather than declined, and where they had cut off a single head of the Hydra, a hundred instantly sprung from the wound. The patrons of the still and the grog-shop laughed at the laborers in the temperance field, and prophesied that all their efforts would come to naught, and in their hours of despondency many of the most earnest of the temperance army were almost forced to admit that they had undertaken an impracticable enterprise.

Many a time has the stalwart arm and the generous heart of the temperance soldier been almost paralyzed, in view of the darkened aspects of the field, and has been tempted to ask of what utility is all this expenditure of time and labor and means, since after all is said and given and done, the fire-flood is ever spreading, deepening and plunging with a more desolating and terrific fierceness and power. We know it, that strong men have wept over the apparent hopelessness of the conflict, and noble women, speechless with agony, heart-sick with hope deferred, have wrung their hands and moaned over their worse than orphaned babes and their blasted homes.

But the efforts in this cause of God and man were never in vain—shadows flitted across the field at times, but the sun of a serene and benignant Omnipotence was still shining behind the clouds, and causing every prayer, every effort, every mite of influence contributed to the cause, to work together to the generation of a public sentiment, a national conviction in favor of the extirpation of the liquor curse, which nothing can withstand.—There breathes this day no mightier sentiment in the American bosom than that which dooms the traffic in strong drink.—Turn which way we will, we meet it, we feel it. East and West, North and South, a still small voice, like the mysterious, awful whisperings of angels, oppresses the very atmosphere, and the upholders of the traffick feel amid their ribald revelry as Belshazzar did, when he saw the writing on the wall, that the day of doom has come, and that the accursed fiend, whose meat and drink have been the tears and groans of orphans and widows, is expelled henceforth and forever by the majesty of a people's prohibition.

The above eloquent extract, from an article in the New York Organ, presents a just view of the progress of the Temperance sentiment, and the present real condition of the Temperance Cause. We present it, not only for the strength it will impart to the hearts of our friends, but in order that each one engaged in the work in this State may derive benefit from its statements in preparing him for his duty. It is well for us often to look about us and see how far we have advanced, and to know what the promise is for the future; and in view of the present, we say, let every man engaged in the work in Indiana labor on full of hope. The mists are gradually clearing away, and a brighter and more beautiful horizon is being revealed. Real progress is making from day to day, and soon, we have scarcely the shadow of a doubt, Indiana will stand beside those of her sister States which have closed, and we trust barred, the floodgates of this desolating evil. Amid the hindering causes there are elements at work which are steadily, though silently, moulding public opinion, and preparing it continually for further conflict. Light is penetrating the public mind, farther and farther, and among plain and honest minds, who but recently had scarcely thought upon the subject, the Cause is daily adding to its list of friends those whose love for it will not suddenly go out, and whose support at the proper time will be more available than is now any mere noisy declamation.

We ask our friends to examine their ground, take their position, and go forward—steadily though it may be slowly. "Encamp on the track of the enemy." Let those who are strong and can stand upright, encourage the weak and support the falling; and if any have dropped out of the ranks, call to them to take their place, and if they cannot be prevailed upon to do so, close up and march on.—Every foot of ground passed over adds to our strength and numbers, and there is encouragement in the fact, that the time for decisive action is fast approaching.

Accidents on Railroads.

Railroad disasters are becoming fearfully common throughout the country, and the loss of life consequent upon them is absolutely terrible. They occur so often that a weekly newspaper could scarcely publish the details. At the present rate of increase of loss of life on railroads, the record will soon present a picture as dark as that of the destruction by steamboats did formerly.

Is there no remedy for this reckless disregard of human life in the United States? The truth is, that speed is getting to be the leading idea of the age, and in the rush toward perfection in that direction, nothing is accounted of only so far as it contributes to the desired result. It would seem that soon, as in time of war, they will consider a loss of life a kind of matter of course.

Remembering that it is well for every one to mind his own business, we would, notwithstanding, with all due deference, suggest to railroad directors, the necessity of seeing all their rules most rigidly enforced, and that proper care be taken to have those rules minute and extensive enough to regulate the business of their roads so that matters may go forward more smoothly.

We should hope that as the business of railroading became older, their arrangements would be better perfected, and the risk be lessened, were not that hope destroyed by the state of facts, as on Eastern and older roads it is much worse than here. It seems that the increase of business is greater than the increase of skill in managing their operations, and with the greater chance of making money, their obligations to their patrons are more faintly realized. Competition and rivalry, too, are probably producing their effects, as we see advertisements of "Lightning Express," &c., to attract attention to some particular route. We hope that soon this universal desire for mere speed will become softened down in the public mind, so that railroad advertisements must include a notice that safety, comfort, &c., will also be an object.

Since the above was partly written, we notice the following:

Security against Railroad Accidents.—The New York Mirror, in view of the frequency of railroad accidents, recommends that the Legislature of every State grant no further railroad charters without providing that each and every road shall be built with a double track, the rails and construction of which to be subjected to a through inspection by a competent commission, and its engines, car wheels, &c., put to a rigid test—as rigid as Government ordnance is subjected to before use—before a road can go into operation. It should be further provided that all rail tracks should be securely fenced in, to prevent animals from encroaching thereon.

Foreign Intelligence.—We are not able, under this head, to furnish much news this week, so our usual summary is dispensed with. The probability of a general war in Europe seems to be increasing, rather than diminishing, as was supposed at our last issue. Louis Napoleon, it is said, is determined to insist upon the immediate withdrawal of the Russian troops from the principalities, and the final result of the present maneuvering is very uncertain.

Relief for New Orleans.—The united contributions, as reported, of the cities of New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Boston, Washington, Mobile, Charleston. and Savannah, for the relief of the destitute sick at New Orleans amount to $60,000. Of this one half was contributed in New York.

Still Another Maine Law State!—The Legislature of Wisconsin has passed the Maine Law, by a strong majority.—Maine, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Vermont, Michigan, Wisconsin, and the Province of New Brunswick—quite a respectable array that, for two years' work. It will be larger before the end of 1853.

Items of News.

MASSACHUSETTS.—The Boston Life Boat has accounts of numerous seizures and destruction of liquor, in different sections of that State, A strong appeal, in favor of the enforcement of the law, has been addressed to the authorities of Boston, by Dr. Lyman Beecher and other eminent citizens.

THE FIRST OF AUGUST.—The anniversary of West India Emancipation seems to have been very generally celebrated by the colored people of the free States. Our exchanges teem with accounts of the gatherings.

The war with Mexico is estimated to have cost the United States the nice sum of two hundred and thirteen millions of dollars! War is a costly amusement, and does not often pay.

The oldest pledge of temperance is found in the Bible, Jeremiah, chap. xxxv., and the words were spoken by the Rechabites, "We will drink no wine; we, nor our wives, nor our sons, forever."

The whole steam marine of the United States amounts to 1390 vessels, with a tonnage of 417,226; manned by 29,317 men; and carrying, besides freight, about 400,000 passengers every year.

A TRUTH MATED.—"If you had avoided rum," said a wealthy though not intelligent grocer to his intemperate neighbor, "your early habits of industry and intellectual abilities would now have permitted you to ride in a carriage."

"And if you had never sold rum for me to buy," replied the bacchanal, "you would have been my driver."

What an exquisitely delicate precept is that of the Hindoo law, which says,—"Strike not, even with a blossom, a wife, though she be guilty of a hundred faults."

TEMPERANCE ABROAD.—"The Scottish League," for promoting Temperance, has 3,490 members—an increase of 430 during the year; its income hass been the past year £1,899 sterling; it has issued from its office, during the same period, 6,011,500 pages of Temperance matter, and given 1,100 lectures.

The future destiny of the child is always the work of the mother.—Bonaparte.

LADIES AND JEWELRY.—We overheard the following fragment of conversation, the other day, on board the Alida: "I met Lord Ellesmere and his party at Niagara, the other day. I knew the ladies were persons of distinction the moment I saw them, because they wore no jewelry, or any other ornament whatever.—Home Journal.

☞ Three hundred and forty-two licenses to retail liquor have been granted in the Eighteenth Ward, New York, in which the Crystal Palace is located.

☞ The Maine Law question has been actually introduced in the British House of Commons. A bill for the "Regulation of public houses and spirit shops in Scotland" has been presented. Mr. L. Heyworth expressed the hope that the House of Commons would "legislate in the spirit of Maine law legislation." Other members were in favor of entire prohibition.—The ball is rolling on!

☞ The Liquor law in Vermont has emptied three jails already. It has been sustained in that State by the Courts as a constitutional law, and has rapidly grown in favor, even among its most determined enemies.

DON'T GIVE IT UP YET.—The Rev. Mr. Hanson, who wrote the various articles to prove Eleazer Williams to be the Dauphin of France, is engaged in writing a book in support of his assumption.

☞ The London Times says: "In fifty years, Ireland will be Protestant to a man. Both the Roman Catholics of Ireland and the race identified with that faith are all leaving Ireland. Ere long there will be none left. At the present rate of emigration, which cannot be less than 200,000, chiefly Roman Catholics, in a year, our children will see the time when the Celts will be as obsolete in Ireland as the Phenicians in Cornwall.

EVASION OF LAW.—Edward Klein, proprietor of the "Kossuth Garden," on the corner of Ninth and Fourteenth streets, was before the police court yesterday morning, on a charge of selling liquor on the Sabbath, contrary to ordinance, and entered a plea of not guilty. Several witnesses testified that they stopped at the garden in question on Sunday last, and called for something to drink. They were informed by Mr. Klein, that he did not sell liquor on the Sabbath, but that if they would buy a cracker, he would "treat." The jury, after a patient investigation, retired, and returned with a verdict of guilty. The Court fined the defendant $10 and costs, and remarked, in passing sentence, that every evasion of the law was equivalent to a violation, and that every one who would openly violate the law commanded respect in comparison to one who would evade it.—Cincinnati Com.

Speaking Out.

The Cincinnati Atlas, a paper devoted to general matters, has the following remarks in relation to a prohibitory law, and the effect of milder measures in removing the evils of intemperance. We publish them to show what is thought and felt by sensible men, who occupy a stand-point wholly removed from those influences which are supposed to bear upon the editors of professed temperance papers. The Atlas certainly uses as strong language in favor of legal force to put down the traffick in ardent spirits, as can be found in any temperance paper in the country.—And can any man deny the truth of its declarations?

"Object as we may to theoretical defects in the law, there stand out in all their horrible atrocity, murder, assassination, robbery, breaches of trust, domestic abuse, poverty, wretchedness, and crime of every sort, as the daily effect of the sale of ardent spirits, and every humane and every patriotic man is compelled to decide either to defend or oppose the only law which, as yet, has proved itself competent to destroy these monstrous evils. We are no bigot to the Maine Law. Show us a better way, and one that has any chance to succeed, and we will give it our hearty support. But in some way the traffick is doomed to be put down. The humanity of the State stands pledged for its suppression. The movement is no mere temperance one. Men of all ways of thinking upon that subject will unite in a solemn determination that they and their children shall not be met by temptation at every corner and every turn, that they will not suffer the further wreck of the best hopes of parents and friends, that no more colossal fortunes shall be built up on the premature graves of the young and the promising, and that the common mother of every crime which ruins individuals, and burdens down the State, shall be banished from society. We regret the position the "Times" appears to have taken—we regret that it has no better remedy for the confessed evils of the trade than the moral suasion, whose absolute failure is borne witness to by hundreds upon hundreds of grog-shops in our midst, and we still hope that it may yet be found an earnest advocate of the only treatment which possesses the power effectually to cure the evil."

ELOQUENT DESCRIPTION.—The following extract from an address of Meagher, recently delivered in New York, is truly eloquent in its description of the present state of Europe. How impossible, remarks a contemporary, for a soul not stirred or even tried in fire, to conceive and utter such things as these:

Austria—the whole German family—tongue-tied; the Rhine stagnant in her bed: Poland, still the Niobe of nations, and her estate and children cut up and parcelled out among the robbers: Hungary, with the knife at her proud and beautiful neck: Italy, locked within her sculptured sepulcher, and a profane soldiery keeping watch upon it: France, grimacing in a masquerade, the glare of which blinds men to crimes of which it is the senseless and the reckless carnival: Ireland, her people decaying and disappearing faster than the ruins, even, which a ruthless civilization has yet left standing on the soil: where—where can the eye that scans the history of this day turn with joy—without grief, without vengeance, without despair—unless it be to this great Commonwealth, the power, the progress, the immensity of which, are mapped out in those mighty waters of the West, from which I came but yesterday.

A WONDERFUL LOCK.—The Scientific Mechanic has the following notice of a wonderful lock:

The most perfectly secure and efficient, unpickable, unbreakable, and unburstible lock ever introduced, has recently been invented and perfected by Mr. S. L. Chase, of Lockport, New York. It is susceptible of 743,000,000,000,000 changes of adjustment, has no accessible aperture into which gunpowder can be introduced, and could not be unpicked or unlocked in seven years, even by the manufacturer thereof, with the key in his possession, unless he had locked it himself; and as to thieves, the more they would examine and investigate this lock, by indents, impressions, or otherwise, the more they wouldn't know how to open it.

MAINE LAW IN MARYLAND.—The friends of prohibition in Caroline county, held a convention at Denton, last week, and resolved to make every effort to send to the next Legislature men who will vote for a law to take the sense of the people upon the propriety of refusing licenses for the sale of spirituous liquors. They also resolved to nominate a ticket of their own, in case the two political parties nominated men opposed to the measure. The cause is progressing.

More Testimony.

HOW THE VERMONT LAW WORKS.—H. E. Smith, Esq, communicates to the Life Boat, the following important ietter from Mr. Underwood, the State's Attorney for Chittenden county. In his communication Mr. Smith says:

"On a recent tour through Vermont, I made frequent and careful inquiries touching the operation of the law, and without an exception, received unhesitating and unequivocal responses in its favor.

"On the Fourth, I attended a celebration in a village among the mountains, where thousands were gathered together from adjacent towns, besides a large number of former residents of the town, assembled in "reunion," not a drunken person was seen, nor, as I could learn, a drop of intoxicating liquor exposed for sale.—The Maine Law is not only a fixed but a glorious fact in the Green Mountain State."

BURLINGTON, Vt., July, 1853.

H. E. SMITH, ESQ.—DEAR SIR:—In answer to your inquiries in regard to the operation of our law in relation to the traffic in intoxicating liquor, commonly called the "Maine Law," I have only time to say, that, so far as I have seen and known its operation, it has put an end to drunkenness and crime almost entirely. Within this town, from Dec. 1st, 1832, until March 8th, 1853, complaints were made to me, almost daily, for breaches of the peace, and, on investigation, I was satisfied that nine-tenths of the crime committed during that time, were caused by intemperance. Since the 8th of March, two complaints only have been made for such offences, and one only was caused by drunkenness. I consider the improvement the fruit of the "Maine Law," and tho 22d section in particular.

The law is more popular now than when first enacted. I am truly yours,

LEVI UNDERWOOD.

The 22d section referred to by the District Attorney is the one under which the drunkard is compelled to testify who sold the liquor which made him drunk. If he refuses, he is punished for his intemperance until he gets sober enough to tell a straight story.

☞ Mr. Honan, of the London Times, deceased, uttered the following in the fullness of his heart:

I know of no state of slavery on earth like that attendant upon newspaper life, whether it be as directors or subordinates. Your task is never ended, your responsibility never secured, the last days' work is forgotten at the close of the day on which it appears. and the dragon of to-morrow waits, open-mouthed, to devour your thoughts, and snap up one morsel more of your vexed existence. Be as successful as it is in the nature of things to be—be indifferent to praise, and lion-hearted against blame—still will the human frame wear out before its time, and your body, if not your mind, exhibit symptoms of dry rot.

The Good work going on.

The leaven of public opinion is doing its work in the suppression of the doggeries. Their keepers can not stand against the tempest of public opinion. It is overpowering them.

We have it from good authority that no intoxicating liquor can now be bought, wholesale or retail, in West Indianapolis or "Stringtown." This is a great triumph of morality when it is known that part of the city has been notorious for the magnitude of the evils of intemperance.

Mr. Dill, who has been a partner in the liquor shop on Illinois street, half a square north of Washington, has sold out his interest to Davis, the other partner. We are informed that he told a gentleman that he felt like a new man in less than an hour after selling out. Messrs. Dill and Garner have done well in quitting the dirty business, and will never regret it. We wish them success in any reputable occupation, and all our best citizens will bid them God speed.

The "dead fall" under the Palmer House was closed last Thursday, in consequence of a charge pending before the Mayor against its proprietor. It is the best thing he could do to keep it closed.

It is the opinion of those who are acquainted with the state of affairs that the liquor men are pretty badly scared. All that is necessary is for the Temperance men to follow up their vigerous action with "more of the same sort;" if they do so, there will not be a doggery here six months hence to offer liquid poison to those unfortunate persons who have formed a taste for it and would give worlds to quit drinking if it were in their power. It will be a millennial day for them and society when the opportunity to drink is taken away from them. Americans as they are, it would be a glorious thing to take away all such liberties from them. They will acknowledge it too when not under the influence of the Demon.—Journal.

☞ The highest tax paid in New York is by Wm. B. Astor, whose tax this year is something over $40,000.

How it Works.

A correspondent of the North-Western Christian Advocate, writing from Portland, Maine, speaks thus encouragingly of the of the effects of the Liquor Law of that State:

"I am sensible no description can give a full view of the amount of good the law is doing in this State. Since the amendments have been passed by such an overwhelming majority, rendering it so much easier of execution, and its penalties increasingly severe, the strife has entirely ceased. * * There is no more prospect of its repeal, than of the repeal of our law on stealing, said a gentleman to me the other day, who has been connected with the police of the city more than twenty years. There has never been a period of the same length, when there has been so little disturbance and crime, as for the last two months. I wish every man who doubts the good effect of this law could come and see for himself."

MODERATE DRINKING.—"It is easier," said the great moralist, Johnson, "it is easier to abstain than to be temperate," and the experience of all ages tends to confirm the truth of the apothegm. Let moderate drinkers then beware. The bold navigator, who with favoring winds, ventured to sail upon the verge of the Norwegian maelstrom, felt his heart die within him, and his courage quail when he perceived his vessel yield for an instant to the force of the current, which ran sweeping in mighty circles around the dreadful gulf. He has escaped to tell the tale, and boast of the successful gratification of a not unreasonable curiosity. But he has escaped alone; and the mariner would be esteemed a madman, who without object should imitate the example of his temerity. Yet seduced by similar instances amongst those who have drank moderately. and continued to drink of the intoxicating cup, our young men listen to the voice of the syren, disregard all warning, and glide rapidly down into irremediable destruction.

WHAT TEMPERANCE MEN ARE DOING.—In several counties legislative nominations have been made, and in nearly every county in the State conventions have been called for this purpose. In many places the people will generally sustain this outside movement. In others they will select from the political candidates such men as are known to be right on the Maine Law question. The Free Soilers are making the Temperance question an issue. Their candidates, State and county, are right, and they will get many votes from men who never voted with the Free Soilers before. The prospect is good, and we have high hopes for the general result.—Pa. Fountain.

THE EARTHQUAKE IN PERSIA.—E. M., the meteorological correspondent of the New York Courier, says:

The earthquake which destroyed Shiraz, Persia, was nearly simultaneous with the shock at Washington, Wheeling, and Lynchburgh, Virginia, and Zanesville, Ohio, on the 2d. Shiraz is in the vicinity of a salt lake as fully saturated as the waters of the Dead Sea. In 1824 Shiraz suffered greatly from a severe earthquake, and had not recovered when a second visitation made it a complete ruin. On the 4th of May there was a severe earthquake in the island of Antigua, and on the 5th, a shock was felt at Newcastle, Penn. The earth has been more agitated within the last eighteen months than at any period covered by my records. Within the field of my researches, earthquakes have been felt at least fifteen days out of the last eighteen months.

AMERICA IN LESS THAN FOUR DAYS.—We are enabled to announce that by a new and much improved construction of vessels, it will be perfectly practicable to accomplish the voyage between the United States and the United Kingdom in considerable less than four days; in fact, in about three and a half, the ports connecting the old and the new worlds being Halifax and Galway. This is no speculative statement. It is grounded on experiments which have already been made to test the sailing capabilities of vessels constructed on the new principle. With the submarine telegraph, which is about to be laid down between Halifax and Galway, and the passage of vessels in three days and a half across the Atlantic, America and Great Britain will virtually become one colossal country, inhabited and governed by the Saxon race.—English paper.

If we work on marble, it will perish; if we work upon brass, time will deface it.—If we rear temples, they will crumble to the dust; but if we work upon immortal minds—if we imbue them with high principles, with the fear of God, and the love of their fellow men, we engrave on these tablets something which no time can efface, but which will brighten to eternity.—Daniel Webster.

A DRUNKARD'S OPINION.—Dr. Snodgrass, in an address at one of the recent anniversary meetings, in New York, related the following incident: Said I to a friend of mine in Baltimore—a man of talent in one of the professions, a well-meaning, useful man in the days of his sobriety—"What think you of the Maine Law for Maryland?" "Think!" replied he; "I think well of it. Give me that and I shall have hope. I have signed your pledges over and over again, but only to break them as often. Shut up these drinking houses with your Maine Law prohibition—take away from my eyes these attractive saloons and sparkling decanters—remove the sight of these and the fumes of their contents—the Satanic temptations to ruin: and then, but not till then, I shall hope to remain a sober man—to be myself again." For my own part, my friends, such appeals have an irresistible force with me. I think that it is high time we had legal prohibition every where, when the very inebriates themselves are imploring its assistance for their agonized desponding souls!

To Printers.

The Committee of Publication for the "Temperance Chart," will receive sealed proposals, until October 25, 1853, for the printing of said paper, including the paper and the delivery of the sheets folded, to the Editor, at his office in Indianapolis. The proposals to state the price of paper, and rate of composition and press work, with a sample of the quality of the paper to be used.

WM. HANNAMAN.
JAMES HALL.
C. E. BABB.
R. T. BROWN.
August, 1853. J. B. ABBETT.

Notice.

The Grand Section of C. of T., of Indiana, will hold its Sixth Annual Session, in Temperance Hall, Indianapolis, commencing on Monday, October 24th, at 1½ o'clock, P. M. As there is much business of importance to transact, representatives will please be punctual in attending.

Sections will please forward their quarterly returns to the G. S. before the 20th of October, or they may loose their charters. HENRY OHR, G. S. of C. of T.

Indianapolis, August 17th, 1853.

Notice.

The Eighth Annual Session of the Grand Division of the Sons of Temperance of the State of Indiana, will commence in Temperance Hall in the City of Indianapolis, on Tuesday, October 25, 1853, at 6 o'clock P. M. P. S. SAGE, G. W. P.

C. WOODWARD, G. S.

August 1, 1853.

$25 Premium.

The undersigned Committee on the state of the Order of the Grand Section of Cadets of Temperance of Indiana, offer the above premium for the most acceptable Initiatory ceremony for Cadets of Temperance. Competitors for the same to be members of some Temperance organization.

All manuscripts to be forwarded to Henry Ohr, G. S., on or before the 20th day of October next.

THEOPHILUS ROBINSON,
H. C. NEWCOMB, } Com.
HENRY OHR,

Indianapolis, Aug. 6th, 1853.

Torchlight and Indiana Cadet please copy.

Call for a State Temperance Convention.

A State Temperance Convention will be held at Madison, Jefferson county, Indiana, beginning on the 28th of September next, and continuing as long as it may determine.

JOHN A. MCCLUNG,
WM. WILSON,
JOHN C. STEELE,
JOHN O'KANE,
WILLIAM HANNAMAN,
CHARLES WOODWARD,
J. W. GORDON, } State Central Committee.

☞ We have two Certificates of Scholarships in the "Commercial College of Indianapolis," which we will dispose of—any one wishing to attend this institution will do well to give us a call at the Chart office.

CONSTITUTION AND BY-LAWS,

WE are still prepared to print Constitution and By-Laws, where the alterations are few from the copy recommended by the Grand Division, at the following rates:

100 copies, (or less) $5 00
200 " 8 00
300 " 10 00

We will pay the postage on all ordered from us.

☞ All orders accompanied by the cash, will be promptly attended to.

Address, JOHN H. OHR,
Indianapolis, Indiana.

CHARTERS.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR A DIVISION S. OF T.

(Date.)

The undersigned inhabitants of ——, believing the Order of the Sons of Temperance to be well calculated to extend the blessings of total abstinence, and promote the general welfare of mankind, respectfully petition the Grand Division of the —— of ——, to grant them a Charter to open a new Division, to be called the —— Division, No. —, Sons of Temperance, of the —— of ——, to be located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves, individually and collectively, to be governed by the rules and usages of said Grand Division, and also, by those of the National Division.

Enclosed is the Charter Fee, $5 00. Books, $2 00.

This must be signed by at least eight persons of good character and standing in community, and sent to C. WOODWARD, G. S., Indianapolis, Ind, free of postage.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR A TEMPLE.

(Date.)

The undersigned, believing the Temple of Honor to be well calculated to cement more firmly our fraternal relations, and add to the general prosperity of the cause of Temperance, respectfully petition the Grand Temple of the —— of ——, to grant them a Charter to open a new Temple, to be called the —— Temple of Honor, No. —, of the —— of ——, to be located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves individually and collectively, to be governed by the rules and usages of the Grand Temple, and also by those of the Order at large.

Enclosed is the Charter Fee, $20 00.

To be directed to the G. W. R., free of postage.

This must be signed by at least twenty persons of good standing, and if not known to the G. W. T. or G. W. R., must send satisfactory references.

J. H. OHR, G. W. R.

Indianapolis, Ind.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR CADETS OF TEMPERANCE.

The undersigned, boys of ——, believing the Order of Cadets of Temperance to be well calculated to extend the blessings of total abstinence, and promote the general welfare of mankind, respectfully petition the Grand Section of the State of Indiana, to grant them a charter to open a new Section, to be called the —— Section, No. ——, Cadets of Temperance, of the State of Indiana, to be located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves, individually and collectively to be governed by the rules and usages of said Grand Section, and also those of the acting Head of the Order.

Enclosed is the fee for Charter, R. B.'s and officers' cards, $5 00.

It must also be stated whether the applicants are members of the Order or not; if they are, of what Section. The application to be directed to the Grand Secretary, free of postage.

It must also be certified by a W. P. or P. W. P, that the W. Patron elect is a Son of Temperance in good standing.

Address (post paid) HENRY OHR, G. S., C. o T., Indianapolis, Indiana.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR DAUGHTERS OF TEMPERANCE.

(Date.)

The undersigned, inhabitants of ——, believing the Order of the Daughters of Temperance to be well calculated to extend the blessings of Total Abstinence, and promote the general welfare of mankind, respectfully petition the Grand Union to grant them a charter to open a new Union to be called the —— Union, No. —, D. of T., of the State of Indiana, located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves, individually and collectively, to be governed by the rules and usages of said Grand Union.

Enclosed is the Charter Fee, $5 00.

The above must be signed by at least eleven females, of proper age and good standing in community.

Address (post paid,) Mrs. ELIZA RICHMOND, G. S. S., Indianapolis, Indiana.

New Watch and Jewelry Store.

No 1, Bates House, Washington Street,

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

WE have now open the largest and best assortment of fine Watches and rich Jewelry ever offered in this city, to which we invite the examination of the public.

Our stock is all new—selected with great care, and comprises Watches, Diamond Work, Chains, Pins, Rings, Pencils, Lockets, of all kinds; Silver Ware, Clocks, Perfumery, Brushes, Soaps, Plated Ware, Castors, Fruit Baskets, &c., which we will sell for CASH at New York prices. Mr. E. W. NEFF, of this city, has taken charge of the Watch repairing department, and will spare no pains to give satisfaction to our customers.

july 6-tf E J. BALDWIN & CO.

D. CRAIGHEAD. R. BROWNING.

CRAIGHEAD & BROWNING,

Dealers in all kinds of

Drugs, Medicines, Surgical Instruments, Paints, Oils, Chemicals, Varnishes, Dye Stuffs, Glassware Window Glass, Brushes, Cosmetics, Spices, Cigars, Tobacco, Perfumery, &c.,

WASHINGTON STREET,

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

ALL are respectfully invited to call and examine our stock and prices, as we feel confident we can render satisfaction both as to prices and quality of articles. Great care is taken in the selection of articles, in reference to their purity, as we endeavor at all times to keep such articles as are strictly pure and genuine. Every article will be waranted as represented. Orders from Physicians and others promptly attended to. Particular attention given to filling Prescriptions and compounding Medicines, which, in all cases, shall receive the personal attention of one of the firm. june 30

HANNAMAN & DUZAN,

DEALERS IN

DRUGS AND MEDICINES,

Surgical Instruments, Paints, Oils, Varnishes, Dye Woods, Medical and Window Glass, Brushes, Perfumery, Soaps, &c.

Washington, 3 doors west of Pennsylvania St.,

june 30 1y INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

W. W. ROBERTS,

Druggist and Apothecary.

Wholesale and Retail Dealer in

DRUGS, MEDICINES, PAINTS, OILS, AND DYE STUFFS, BRUSHES, FANCY GOODS, AMERICAN AND FRENCH WINDOW GLASS, &c.

WASHINGTON ST., INDIANAPOLIS.

Physicians, Country Merchants, and the people generally, are invited to examine his stock, which will be sold at the lowest cash price.

☞ QUALITY WARRANTED TO SUIT. ☜

june 22 4m

COMMERCIAL COLLEGE,

(Late Commercial Institute,)

Of Indianapolis,

Established March 31, 1851.

INCORPORATED, 1853.

W. McK. SCOTT, A. M., Founder and President.

JAMES C. HAYDEN, (Late Professor in Bacon's Mercantile College, Cincinnati,)

PROF. OF BOOK-KEEPING AND PENMANSHIP.

THE Session will commence at College Hall as follows:

1st Session on the first Monday of September.
2d Session on the 1st Monday of November.
3d Session on the 1st Monday of January.
4th Session on the 1st Monday of March.
5th Session on the 1st Monday of May.

Having secured, permanently, the services of the distinguished Professor above named, and leased for a term of years the commodious and beautiful Hall formerly known as CONCERT HALL, but now named COLLEGE HALL, which is to be fitted up in a style of great elegance, taste, and convenience, the President would say, that this College now offers advantages superior to all others, for imparting a sound, thorough, and accomplished business education

COURSE OF STUDIES.

The Course of Studies, as enlarged, will be as follows, viz:

1. Book-Keeping, by Single and Double Entry, in all its various branches, and its application to all kinds of business.
2. The Laws, Customs, and Usages of Trade and Commerce.
3. Mercantile Arithmetic, upon the short and easy system of cancelation, (taught in no other College.)
4. Commercial Law, in a series of Lectures, thorough and systematic.
5. Business Penmanship.
6. Commercial Correspondence.
7. Lectures upon Banking, Political Economy, and other subjects valusble to the business man.

EXPENSES.

Cards of Admission, invariably in advance, or secured, $25; Diplomas $3; Stationery $5; Boarding $2 50 per week; incidentals, at option of student, $15. Making entire expenses about $75.

On application, a Catalogne will be furnished, giving full particulars.

All letters will receive prompt attention on being directed, post-paid, to

june 8 W. McK. SCOTT, President.

"God never made his works for man to mend."
DR. FRANKLIN.

KIER'S ROCK OIL.

A NEW AND MOST IMPORTANT REMEDY FOR DISEASE.

DISCOVERED IN 1849.

IS drawn from a deep well near Pittsburgh—has been used with remarkable success in Ohio and Pennsylvania, and more Eastern States—and is now working its way West. An opportunity is now offered to the Afflicted for testing it. Where known and tried, it at once makes firm friends, and cures which are eloquent in its praise. Certificates of its power to heal are at hand—but we know well, reader, that such evidence, to have weight with you, now-a-days, must be in your own neighborhood.—You have only to try the Oil to be satisfied—it will SPEAK FOR ITSELF.

We have no war with the legion of Nostrums and Specifics of the day—we know but little about them—some say they are good for nothing. However that may be, the

Petroleum

will not be suppressed and kept back by reason of the above nostrums—duty and inclination both forbid it.

Those who are afflicted, are respectfully invited to get a Circular and look over the Directions for

Ague, Rheumatism, Piles, Diarrhœa, Flux, Tooth Ache, Burns, Worms, Scrofula, Coughs, Bronchitis, Croup, Old Sores, Cholera Morbus, Contractions of the Limbs and Joints, Sore Eyes, Blindness, Costiveness, Dyspepsia, and other Diseases.

By that time you may say, "it cures too much." But recollect it is not a HUMAN INVENTION, but compounded by Nature's master hand—and Nature does not do her work by halves.

The Oil is used both internally and externally.

As AGUE, SORE EYES, PILES, RHEUMATISM, and SCROFULA are so common in many parts of the West, we are constrained to say, that while this Oil will cure and relieve other diseases, it has been and is constantly used with most complete success in these cases.

☞ Price 50 cents per Bottle (half pint.)

Beware of all Rock Oil preparations, as some persons are offering a spurious article. Look for S. M. KIER'S name written on the label of the bottle.

For sale by the Druggists throughout Indiana, and by TOMLINSON BROTHERS, J P. POPE & Co., S. ROSENGARTEN, WM. TILLEY, and at wholesale by W. W. ROBERTS, Indianapolis, Indiana.

R. M. LYON, Fort Wayne,

may25 10w Proprietor in the Western States.

SOMETHING NEW.

LATHROP & STEVENS, Wholesale and Retail Dealers in BOOTS AND SHOES, at the West room in the Bates House, Washington Street, Indianapolis.

We are now opening a new and splendid stock of Boots and Shoes of every variety and style, which we are receiving direct from the manufacturers.—We design to keep constantly on hand a good assortment of the best quality of goods manufactured, which we can warrant to give satisfaction to all who may give them a trial. We will sell by the case, dozen, or single pair, at low prices for cash.—Our stock consists in part of Gents' fine Cloth, silk warp, glove kid, buck, patent calf, and enameled Gaiters and Ties of every variety and style; Ladies' fine silk warp Gaiters, Buskins, Ties, Slippers and Boots; Misses' ditto; Men's calf, goat, kip, and thick Boots and Brogans; Boys' and Youths' ditto; assorted Ladies, kid, goat and calf Boots and Buskins; Misses' ditto. Also every variety of Children's Shoes. Come and see for yourselves.

LATHROP & STEVENS,

may 25 4w Indianapolis, Indiana.

TEMPERANCE INN,

Bloomington, Indiana.

J. & S. M. ORCHARD, PROPRIETORS.

TRAVELLERS will find it to their advantage to call and try the accommodation of the TEMPERANCE INN. Stage office for all the different routes, in connection with this House. may25 6m ¶

THE LATEST WONDER of the 19th CENTURY.

DR. G. W. BENNETT'S Celebrated Eye-Balm.

A SPECIFIC FOR CHRONIC, SORE, INFLAMED, AND WEAK EYES.

Prepared only by Dr. George W. Bennett, and for sale by Merchants and Druggists generally.

THIS Balm is an excellent and certain cure for sore and inflamed Eyes, in all cases of Psoroic, Scrofulous, and Purulent Opthalmia, and what is commonly termed wild hairs in the eye-lids. It is a specific in Infantile. Purulent, and Scrofulous Inflamed, and Sore Eyes, and all in the various diseases of the Eyes, that prevail among the human family, in every climate. It will be found a sovereign remedy if properly applied.

W. W. ROBERTS, Indianapolis, Ind. General Agent for State of Indiana, to whom all orders must be addressed

Price---Twenty-five Cents.

I warrant the above Balm to cure if the directions are strictly observed, or return the money.

june 22 4m G. W. BENNETT.

REAL ESTATE AND GENERAL AGENCY OFFICE,

INDIANAPOLIS, INDIANA.

UNDER THE CONTROL OF W. M'K. SCOTT, Attorney & Counsellor at Law, and Notary Public.

The attention of the Agency will be devoted,

First—To the collection of debts and the payment of Taxes for non-residents in any county in the State. Also, the redemption of Lands sold for Taxes, sale, purchase or lease of Lands, purchase of adverse claims, examination and perfection of Title, &c., &c.

Second—To the prosecution of claims against the General Government, procuring Land Warrants, Patent Rights, and Pensions under the various Pension Laws, &c.

Third—All other Miscellaneous agencies as may be intrusted to the care of this office.

Fourth—The taking of Depositions and Attestation of all instruments requiring a seal

In all cases requiring an outlay of money for the benefit of individuals, the requisite funds must be transmitted in advance.

Prompt attention to all letters on business that are pre-paid. Address W. M'K. SCOTT,

Real Estate and General Agent,

jan 5-1y Indianapolis, Ind.

ADAMS & CO'S EXPRESS.

WE are now running a daily line East and West, accompanied by special messengers, and with the speed of the mails, running our own cars with the passenger trains.

Packages will be received at the cars up to the time of starting, and at our office until 1 o'clock each day.

We are prepared to transport packages, bank notes and specie, to and from any of the eastern cities, also, Louisville, Frankfort, and Lexington, Ky., St. Louis, Mo., or any points on the Ohio and Mississippi rivers; and to and from Terre Haute, and all intermediate points, and to forward freight from Terre Haute up and down the Wabash.

In addition to these, we have the most complete arrangements for transporting packages to and from California and Europe.

Exchange on England, Ireland, and Scotland, for sale, payable at any bank in the kingdom.

Foreign passage tickets; by Grinnell, Minturn & Co.'s line to Liverpool and London, constantly on hand, and for sale at the lowest rates.

Notes, drafts, and bills collected in any of the Eastern or Western cities

Orders for goods to be returned by Express, sent free. Our rates of charges have been greatly reduced, and the public will find this a safe and expeditious method of transportation.

Indianapolis, June 30, 1852. ADAMS & CO.

Office in Indianapolis in Journal Building, west side Pennsylvania Street.

Office open during business hours.

june30 1y C. WOODWARD, Agent.

The Cheapest Illustrated Paper for the Young.

PRICE ONLY TEN CENTS A YEAR, or nearly three papers for one cent, where 100 copies are taken.

Twenty-six numbers a year, and each number illustrated with from three to seven engravings.

The Youth's Penny Gazette,

A strictly Religious and Moral Paper, is published by the AMERICAN SUNDAY SCHOOL UNION and is designed to furnish the Children and Youth of the United States with reading matter, in a popular form, for the improvement of Mind and Heart.

It is published (not monthly, nor weekly, but) every other week, or twenty-six numbers in a year. It is religious but unsectarian, and the matter is carefully prepared with a view to the habits, character and prospects of American Youth

TERMS OF THE PENNY GAZETTE.

$10 a year, in advance, for 100 copies, to one address. $5 a year, in advance, for 40 copies, to one address. $3 a year, in advance, for 20 copies, to one address. Single subscriptions, 25 cents per year.

TERMS BY MAIL, POSTAGE PAID.

☞ When the postage is paid at the place of mailing, the terms are very low. For $15 remitted, we will send 100 copies of the paper for one year, to one address—we paying postage. For $7 remitted, we will send 40 copies of the paper to one address, for one year—we paying postage. For $3 50 remitted, we will send 20 copies of the paper for one year, to one address—we paying postage. Less than 20 cannot be sent at this cheap rate.

Subscriptions received at the Society's House, No. 146 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.

Feb 16 3w G. S. SCOFIELD, Agent.

TO BUILDERS.

North Western Christian University.

THE Building Committee of the Board of Directors of the North-Western Christiana University, propose contracting for the west wing of the University Building, to be put up on the University grounds in the vicinity of Indianapolis.

Sealed Proposals in detail, with prices affixed for doing the work necessary to the completion of the said Wing, will be received until the 19th day of July next, and may be handed to the undersigned, or to J. T. Cox. Secretary of the Company, at the Book Store of Cox & Mathes, in Indianapolis

The materials and work to be according to the plan, drawings and specifications prepared by Wm. Tinsley, Architect, which may be seen and examined at his room, on the east side of Pennsylvania street, three doors north of the north-east Diagonal, in Indianapolis. The specifications have been materially changed and modified, so as to reduce the cost of the building.

Proposals for the whole combined, would be preferred; but will be received for the different parts and portions thereof separotely. The whole to be completed and fit for use by the first day of September, 1854.

Payments will be made as the work progresses, at such short periods as may suit the covenience of the Contractors. Bond and security will be required for the performance of the work.

In behalf of the Building Committee:

OVID BUTLER,

President of the Board of Directors.

June 10, 1853. june 22 3w

LITTLE. DRUM & ANDERSONS

WHOLESALE DEALERS IN

STAPLE AND FANCY DRY GOODS, BOOTS, SHOES, HATS, CAPS, STATIONERY, NOTIONS, TRIMMINGS, GROCERIES, HARDWARE, QUEENSWARE, AND GLASSWARE,

North side of Washington Street,

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

WE are receiving Country Produce of all descriptions, and paying the highest market price. Dealers visiting Indianapolis are respectfully invited to call and examine our stock and prices, both for Produce and Merchandise generally. june30 tf

---

JAMES HALL,

MERCHANT TAILOR,

No. 2. Temperance, Hall, Indianapolis,

Manufactu'ng & Clothing Emporium,

Wholesale and Retail Dealer in Ready Made Clothing, Cloths, Cassimers, Vestings, Trimmings, Trunks, Sachels, Canes, Umbrellas, Hats, Caps, a every description of Gentlemen's Furnishing.

Also:

General Agency for the sale of GRAND AND SUBORDINATE REGALIA, EMBLEMS, COSTUMES, &c., FOR THE ORDERS OF MASONS, ODD FELLOWS, TEMPLE OF HONOR, SON, DAUGHTERS, AND CADETS OF TEMPERANCE. oct27 1y

---

The American Life and Health Insurance Company.

Office—No. 7, South Third St., Philadelphia.

Officers.

LEONARD JEWELL, President.
JAMES PEACOCK, Treasurer,
JOHN C. SIMS, Sec'y and Actuary.
THOS. S. SMITH, Solicitor

JOHN F. BIRD, FRED. A. FICKARDT, } Medical Examiners.

CHARLES WOODWARD, Indianapolis, Ind., General Agent for the State of Indiana.

THIS Company issues policies at Total Abstinence Rates, Joint stock Rates, and at Mutual Rates, which for $1000 on the life of a person 30 years of age, are as follows:

Age.	Total Abstinence.	Joint Stock.	Mutual
30	$15.40	$19.60	$23.60

A further table of Rates will be furnished at the Office.

The condition in Total Abstinence rates (believed to be the lowest in the Union,) is entire forfeiture upon the departure of the Insured from Total Abstinence in its strictest sense.

Policies at Joint Stock and Mutual rates, contain no condition except as usual in Life Insurance.

HEALTH INSURANCE DEPARTMENT.

All Moneys received from the Insured, for Annual Premiums, after deducting expenses, will be divided among the Sick

The Public have for some time been familiar with the subject of Life and Health Insurance, but it is obvious that too little thoughts has been given to the latter. LIFE Insurance benefits our successors, while HEALTH Insurance directly benefits ourselves. It makes provision for a time of sickness, when the products of a man's industry are cut off, and want unites with Disease to aggravate his distress. It is at this gloomy period, when he is prostrated and helpless, and when despondency would otherwise overwhelm him, that the holder of a Health Insurance Policy will realize its benefits.

RATES, under 50 years of age,

$2,00	per year,	for	$2,00	per week.
3,00	"	"	3,00	"
4,00	"	"	4,00	"
5,00	"	"	5,00	"
6,00	"	"	6,00	"

Over fifty and under sixty.

$2,50	per year,	for	$2,50	per week.
3,75	"	"	3,00	"
5,00	"	"	4,00	"
6,25	"	"	5,00	"
7,50	"	"	6,00	"

When the Fund shall amount to Three Dollars and upwards for every person insured and sufficient to warrant an additional distribution, the weekly allowances will be increased in accordance with the Rules of the Policy.

All the members of a Temple or Division insured at greatly reduced rates.

Applications for Agencies in any of the cities or towns in the State, should be made to the undersigned, post paid, or in person.

As Agent for the above Company, I am prepared to receive applications for Policies at any of the above rates.

CHARLES WOODWARD, Agent,
At ADAMS & CO.'S Express Office.

J. L. MOTHERSHEAD, Medical Examiner.

june 30 '52-1y

Ohio Life Insurance Company,

Capital $100,000.

JOINT STOCK AND MUTUAL,

CINCINNATI.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS.

Wm. Burnet, Jno. N. Ridgway, Chas. Goodman,
S. Robert, E. S. Haines, Jno. M. Blair,
J. W. Donohue, Eden B. Reeder, Wm. Person.

WM. BURNET, President.

S. W. REEDER, Sec'y J. W. DONOHUE, Vice Pres't

Office in Reeder's Building, Third street, between Almy's and City Bank.

This Company insures Lives at the lowest rates consistent with safety, either upon the Joint Stock or Mutual plan.

In the Joint Stock Department, premium payable quarterly, semi-annually or annually. On the Mutual plan, one-half the premium paid in Cash, the balance by a note bearing six per cent. interest—the interest only payable annually. Persons insuring on the mutual plan, participate in the profits of the Company in that department.

The undersigned having been appointed agent for the above Company, is prepared to fill applications for Life Insurance, on favorable terms.

Any information on the subject and pamphlets explaining the nature and utility of Life Insurance, furnished without charge, at the office of the Agent.

C. WOODWARD, Agent.

Office at Adam's & Co 's Express Office, Journal Building, Pennsylvania street, Indianapolis, Ind.

june 30, '52-1y.

Railroad City Book Store.

COX & MATHES,

South side of Washington. between Illinois and Meridian streets,

INDIANAPOLIS, INDIANA.

AT wholesale and retail, Standard and Miscellaneous Works, Law, and Medical Books, School Books, Plain and Fancy Stalionery, Blank Books, Wall Papers, &c., &c. mar 2

CHEAP WATCHES & JEWELRY.

Good Gold Watches at $24!

WE are now in our new Room No. 1, Palmer House, with a lot of beautiful Watches and Jewelry which we are selling lower than ever heretofore sold in Indianapolis, for instance we sell

Good 18 K Case Gold Lepines at $24.
" 18 K " " Levers at $28.
" Silver Anchor Levers $12 to $18.
" " Cylenders, $9 to $12.
" " Quarter's $6 to $10.

In addition to the above we have a fine assortment of other description of Watches all of which we will sell lower than any other firm dare sell in the place. I have in my employ a very superior Watch Repairer who will always be on on hand to do watch repairing of every description. Mr. Michot has worked in Geneva, Paris, New York and other large cities and has had great experience in his Branch of the business. All Watches warranted for one year, and the money in all cases refunded, provided they do not give entire satisfaction.

feb9 tf E. W. NEFF.

SMALL CHANGE.

THE undersigned is prepared to furnish Merchants and others with three cent pieces from the United States Mint at Philadelphia, free of transportation, in sums of 30, 60, and 90 dollars, upon deposit of Gold or Eastern Exchange. Also cents and half cents, upon payment of frieght on gold to Philadelphia, or on Eastern Exchange free of freight.

C. WOODWARD, Agent,

june 30 Adams & Co.'s Express.

A CHANCE TO MAKE MONEY.

Profitable and honorable Employment!

THE Subscriber is desirous of having an agent in each county and town of the Union. A capital of from $5 to $10 only will be required, and anything like an efficient, energetic man can make from three to five dollars per day; indeed some of the Agents now employed are realizing twice that sum. Every information will be given by addressing, (postage paid) WM. A. KINSLER,

june 15 3w ¶ Box 601, Philadelphia P. O.

THE ILLUSTRATED MAGAZINE OF ART.

THE five numbers of this Magazine which are published, place it at the head of publications of this kind No expense will be spared to make it in every respect worthy of the name, the "Illustrated Magazine of Art. The Engavings which are preparing for the future numbers are in the hands of first-class American and European Artists.

A Series of most interesting Tales will appear in it. "The School of Life," written and Illustrated by ANNA MARY, daughter of William and Mary Howitt, will shortly appear; also, "The Dead Bridal," an historical romance, illustrative of the most interesting period in the history of the Venetian Republic, by JONATHAN FREKE SLINGSBY, of the Dublin University Magazine; contributions, too, from WILLIAM and MARY HOWITT, PERCY B. ST. JOHN, and other writers of distinction in America and Europe.

The following is a brief outline of the plan of the Magazine:

I. The Historical Department will abound with picturesque representations of the most remarkable events which have occurred in this and other countries; accompanied with interesting anecdotes and details from the pen of the most eminent writers of the day. This department will contain several splendid engravings, designed by the first artists of the world, and engraved in the highest style of modern art.

II. The Men and Women of the Age. This department will consist of beautifully executed portraits of the leading characters of the age, especially of those who figure on the stage of humanity as the world's benefactors. Each portrait will be accompanied by an interesting biographical sketch.

III. The Wonders of Natural History, Botany, and other sciences, will be developed in choice Engravings of Beasts, Birds, Fishes, Insects, Forest Trees, Flowers, Geological and Fossil Specimens, &c., with accompanying descriptions.

IV. The Triumphs of Architectural Art will be displayed in exquisitely finished representations of Cathedrals, Churches, Palaces, and other models of ancient and modern Architectural Art.

V. The Works of the Great Masters, selected from the principal Galleries of Art in the World. In general, the portrait of the Master will be given, accompanied with a highly finished engraved copy of his chef d œuvre.

VI. The Scientific Portions will be rendered highly interesting by the familiar explanations, and the numerous diagrams which will accompany each subject.

VII. Manufactures. The principal manufacturing processes in use will be fully explained by minute details, and an abundance of beautiful engravings.

VIII. Machinery and Inventions will have due attention paid to them, and be described by numerous appropriate engravings.

IX. The Literary Department, independently of the various articles accompanying the illustrations, will comprise original and interesting narratives, contributed by the most popular writers of the day, with numerous illustrations.

In every respect, the "Illustrated Magazine of Art," will be decidedly

SUPERIOR TO ANY MAGAZINE OF THE DAY.

Each Monthly part will contain at least Thirty superb Engravings, four of which will be printed separately, on supefine Plate Paper.

The greatest care will be manifested in every department of production. The Paper will be of the first manufacture, and the Ink supplied from the celebrated Printing Ink Establishment of Messrs. Lawson & Co., of Paris. Six of the monthly portions, when completed, will form a volume which, for interest, originality, value and beauty, will defy competition. It will not only be an interesting family book, but a rich ornament for the drawing-room table, and a pleasant companion in the study.

The parts will appear on the First of every Month at Twenty-five Cents each.

ALEXANDER MONTGOMERY,

may 25 17 Spruce Street, New-York.

SPLENDIDLY ILLUSTRATED WORKS.

THE ALPS, SWITZERLAND, SAVOY AND LOMBARDY.

With the Magazine for June will be ready, Part I., price Twenty-five Cents, of a Magnificent Work to be completed in Twelve Monthly Parts, entitled

THE ALPS, SWITZERLAND, SAVOY AND LOMBARDY, with an account of the most recent Ascents to Mont Blanc, &c. By the Rev. Charles Williams. This work, when completed, will form a large thick Volume, in Imperial Octavo, containing upwards of Three Hundred beautiful Engravings, descriptive of the peculiar Scenery of those most interesting portions of Europe, with the Occupations of the Inhabitants, &c., &c.

Cassell's Natural History.

On the First of July will commence

CASSELL'S NATURAL HISTORY, which for variety, beauty and completeness, will claim to be considered as a first-class work, upon this most interesting subject. The First volume will be devoted to the Feathered Tribe of the Creation and will contain upwards of Three Hundred Engravings, in the first style of Art. The volume will be completed in Twelve Monthly Parts, Imperial Octavo. Price 25 cents each.

History of England.

On the First of July will appear Part I., price 25 cts. of THE ILLUSTRATED HISTORY OF ENGLAND, from the earliest period on record to the present time. Edited by ROBERT FERGUSON, LL. D.

This History, which is intended to form a great National Work, will extend to Four Volumes, Imperial Octavo; each Volume to be completed in Twelve Monthly Parts, price 25 cents each. The Work will comprehend the Political, Civil, and Domestic History of the Nation, and its Progress in Civilization, Literature, Art, &c. It will be profusely Illustrated with Engravings from Designs by GILBERT, PHILLIPPOTEAUX, WILLIAMS, and others. Representations of the most remarkable Events will be worked separately upon Plate Paper. The Portraits will form a complete Gallery, not only of the Monarchs, but of those individuals whose names are prominent in England's History. Also, Antiquities, including Autographs, Buildings, Costume, Furniture, Arms, Coins, Monuments, Manufactures &c., of each Epoch.

History of Hungary.

July First will be published, in one Handsome Volume, Imperial Octavo, price, One Dollar and Twenty-five Cents, in Cloth Boards,

THE ILLUSTRATED HISTORY OF HUNGARY, AND THE MAGYARS, from the Earliest Period to the clos of the late War. By EDWARD LAWRENCE GODKIN. The Volume will be Illustrated with One Hundred highly finished Engravings, including representations of the principal Battles; Portraits of the early Kings, and of the Stat-smen and Generals who figured in the War of Independence; Costumes of the Peasantry, &c.; Views of the chief Towns and Fortresses, &c.; with an accurate Description of the Manners and Customs of the People, their Literature, Commerce, Arts, &c.

ALEXANDER MONTGOMERY,

may25 Publisher, 17 Spruce Street, New-York.

MANSION HOUSE,

Cambridge City, Indiana.

J. CUNNINGHAM, Proprietor.

TRAVELLERS

Will find it to their advantage to call and try the accommodation of the MANSION HOUSE.

STAGE OFFICE also in connection with this House.

may 4 6m

INDIANA STATE LIBRARY

TEMPERANCE CHART.

A Weekly Journal:---Devoted to Temperance, Morality, Education, Literature, Useful Arts, Science, General Intelligenc, &c.

J. W. GORDON, M. D., EDITOR.] ORGAN OF THE GRAND DIVISION OF INDIANA. [JOHN H. OHR, PRINTER.

VOL. III. INDIANAPOLIS, IND., WEDNESDAY, SEPT. 7, 1853. NO. 11.

THE TEMPERANCE CHART,

IS PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY, BY THE GRAND DIVISION, S. of T. OF INDIANA.

Edited by J. W. Gordon, M. D.

To whom all Communications and Subscriptions must be addressed, post-paid.

OFFICE—in second story of Temperance Hall Building, Washington St., Indianapolis.

TERMS:

Single copy, one year, ... 75 cts.

☞ In advance in all cases,

TERMS OF ADVERTISING.—Circulation 4000 copies.

One Squre, (12 lines,)	for one week,	$0 50
" "	for each subsequent insertion,	25
" "	for 3 months,	3 00
" "	for 6 months,	5 00
" "	for 1 year without alteration,	8 00
" "	for 1 year, with changes,	12 00

A reduction made on larger advertisements.
Cuts double the above rates.
Advertisements must be handed in by Saturday, of each week, to insure insertion.
Applications for advertising, or for any kind of Printing for the Order, must be made to
J. H. OHR, Indianapolis.

POETRY.

Little at First, but Mighty at Last.

BY CHARLES MACKAY.

A traveler through a dusty road
  Strewed acorns on the lea,
And one took root and sprouted up,
  And grew into a tree;
Love sought its shade at evening time,
  To breathe its early vows,
And age was pleased in heats of noon,
  Do bask beneath its boughs;
The dormouse loved its dangling twigs,
  The birds sweet music bore,
It stood a glory in its place,
  A blessing evermore!

A little spring had lost its way
  Among the grass and fern;
A passing stranger scooped a well,
  Where weary men might turn;
He walled it in, and hung with care
  A ladle at the brink;
He thought not of the deed he did,
  But judged that toil might drink,
He pass'd again, and lo! the well,
  By summers never dried,
Diffus'd its blessings all around,
  And saved a life beside!

A dreamer dropped a random thought,
  'Twas old, and yet 'twas new;
A simple fancy of the brain,
  But strong in being true,
It shone upon a genial mind,
  And lo! its light became
A lamp of life, a beacon ray,
  A monitory flame.
The thought was small, its issue great,
  A watch-fire on the hill,
It shed its radiance far adown,
  And cheers the valley still!

A nameless man amid the crowd
  That thronged the daily mart,
Let fall a word of Hope and Love,
  Unstudied from the heart:
A whisper on the tumult thrown,
  A transitory breath,
It raised a brother from the dust,
  It saved a soul from death.
O germ! O fount! O word of love!
  O thought at random cast!
Ye were but little at the first,
  But mighty at the last!

MISCELLANEOUS.

Hygienics of Temperance.

BY S. A. CARTWRIGHT, M. D., OF NEW ORLEANS.

Whether water or alcohol be the better health-preserving agent, is a question to be determined by observation. Some account of the effects of each on a number of the Æsculapii themselves, is herewith respectfully presented to that profession whose office it is to keep in tune the curious harp of man's body, and to take cognizance of every thing which preserves or disturbs its harmony. Nothing tends more to disturb its harmony than water or alcohol. Hence the members of the medical profession, who may take sides in the temperance controversy, now agitating the people of every State in the Union, are not to be regarded as out of their province, but in a field properly belonging to them, where, instead of being viewed as intruders or intermeddlers, they are, by virtue of their calling, entitled to rank as chiefs.

The writer is one of three physicians, who located in Natchez thirty years ago. The new comers found only one practitioner in the city belonging to the same temperance school with themselves. The country and villages within fifteen miles around afforded only three more. All the rest believed in the hygienic virtues of alcoholic drinks, and taught the doctrine by precept and example. Besides the practising physicians, there were ten others in the city and adjacent country who had retired from the profession. They were all temperate. Thus, including the new comers, the total number of temperance physicians, in and near Natchez, thirty years ago, consisted of seventeen. Of these, five have died:—Dr. Henry Tooley, aged about seventy-five years: Dr. Andrew M'Creary, aged seventy; Dr. J. Ker, sixty; Dr. Wm. Dunbar, sixty; Dr. James A. McPheeters, forty-nine. In 1823, the average ages of the seventeen was about thirty-four years. According to the Carlisle tables of mortality, and those of the Equitable Insurance Company of London, seven instead of five would have been the ratio of mortality in England. Those at present living are Drs. D. Lattimore, W. Wren, Stephen Duncan, James Metcalf, W. N. Mercer, G. W. Grant, J. Sanderson, Benj. F. Young, T. G. Elliott, —— Phœnix, Prof. A. P. Merrill, and the writer.

On the other hand, every physician of Natchez and its vicinity, thirty years ago, whether practising or retired, who was in the habit of tippling, as the practice of drinking alcoholic beverages is called, has long since been numbered with the dead. Only two of them, who were comparatively temperate, lived to be gray. Their average term of life did not exceed thirty-five years, and the average term of life of those who were in the habit of taking alcoholic drinks frequently between meals, on an empty stomach, did not reach thirty years. In less than ten years after they commenced practice, the most of them died, and the whole of them have subsequently fallen, leaving not one behind in the city, country, or village, within twenty miles around.

To fill the places of those who died or retired from the profession, sixty-two medical men settled in Natchez and its vicinity between the years 1824 and 1835, embracing a period of ten years; not counting those of 1823, already mentioned.—Of the sixty-two new comers, thirty-seven were temperate, and twenty-five used alcoholic beverages between meals, though not often to the extent of producing intoxication. Of the thirty-seven who trusted to the hygienic virtues of nature's beverage—plain, unadulterated water—nine have died, and twenty-eight are living.—Of the twenty-five who trusted to the supposed hygienic virtues of ardent spirits, all are dead except three; and they have removed to distant parts of the country. Peace be to their ashes! Though mostly noble fellows, misled by the deceitful syren, singing the praises of alcoholic drinks, to live too fast, and to be cut off in the midst of useful manhood, it is to be hoped they have not lived in vain; as by their sacrifice science has gained additional proof of the fallacy of the theory which attributes health-preserving properties, in a southern clime, to alcoholic beverages in any shape or form.

While referred to in the mass, to correct a popular delusion, it would be unnecessary and improper to drag their names before the public. Not so, however, with those who owe life, fortune, and reputation to avoiding the shoals on which their brethren were wrecked. The public have a right to know who they are, and the cause of temperance is justly entitled to all the influence attached to their names. According to the Carlisle Tables, and those of the Equitable Insurance Company of London, thirty-seven individuals, at the average age of twenty-five years, (which was about the average age of the new comers who settled in Natchez), would, in a quarter of a century, lose nine of their number; whereas, of the thirty-seven temperance doctors, nine only have died in twenty-eight years. Of these, Drs. Wm. P. Foster, Cornell, and Ferguson, fell by the yellow fever of 1825; Dr. John Bell came to the South, with phthisis pulmonalis, from New Hampshire, and was a son of the Governor; Dr. H. Perrine, of quinine notoriety, was killed by the Indians in the Florida war; Dr. E. Johnson returned to Kentucky and died; Dr. Ogden fell a victim to some chronic ailment; Dr. J. W. Monette, always a dyspeptic, died after he had finished his History of the Valley of the Mississippi, and had made a handsome fortune by his practice; and Dr. Thomas Davis was cut off by the yellow fever of 1839—making nine in all. The remaining twenty-eight are still living, or were when last heard from. Dr. Campbell removed to London, where he was practicing medicine at last advices. Dr. J. Thistle, a year ago, removed to Davenport, Iowa; Dr. Wm. M. Gwin is at present a United States Senator from California. Doctors Stewart, Walker, Pollard, French, Hubbard, Page, Sidney Smith, and E. C. Hyde, removed to Louisiana, and are all engaged in the planting business, except the three last. Drs. Freiott and Weston returned to New York, Dr. Holt to Kentucky, Dr. James Young removed to Memphis, and Dr. Woodworth to Illinois. The remainder are still in Natchez and its neighborhood. They are Drs. F. A. W. Davis, Harpour, the two Leggets, Asa Metcalf, J. Foster, Atchison, Wood, Chamberlain, Ward, Calhoun, and Abercrombie.

If the property of all the temperance doctors of Natchez and its vicinity, dead and living, including those who have moved away, and including those who have retired from the profession, embracing those of 1823 and all who came in up to 1835—fifty-four in number—were equally divided, each would have upwards of a hundred thousand dollars for his share. Temperance, in that portion of the South at least, is not only hygienic but auriferous. They all began life poor, with nothing but their profession for a livelihood. Some of them are in possession of millions, and have long since retired from the duties of their profession. They nevertheless belong to the medical public, and have no right to object to their names being brought before that public for the scientific purpose of proving to the physicians, at the North, the hygienic virtues of temperance in the South. Many northern temperance men are so weak in the faith, as to be led to believe, on their coming South, that rain and river water, (the only kind to be had in Natchez, New Orleans, and some other parts of the South), actually requires the addition of some stimulating liquid to make it healthful. This weakness or distrust of temperance principles is owing to the want of well-authenticated facts from the South bearing on the question. Facts are better than theory to enable, not only physicians, but the people generally, to form rules of conduct on a subject of such importance. To have their proper weight, they should be authenticated, and the important truth made known, that of the whole number of temperance doctors of 1823 (thirty years ago,) in Natchez and its vicinity, more than two-thirds are still living in the year 1853, at ages varying from fifty-five to eighty-five years; that of the whole number of the intemperate, of the same period, not one remains, in town or country; that of thirty-seven temperate and twenty-five intemperate physicians, who came in afterwards, between the years 1823 and 1835, all of the former are living except nine, and all of the latter are dead except three. Hence it was necessary to mention the names of the temperance physicians, many of whom are known abroad as well as at home, as living proofs of the important truth, that a temperate, upright life is the surest, safest and best road to health, wealth, longevity, and respectability.

Many young medical men, as well as others, on coming South, mistake the noise of bar-rooms and grog-shops for the public sentiment of the country. Hence they are too apt to plunge into dissipation, under the delusion, that water is unwholesome unless mixed with stimulants: and that it is, moreover, essential to popularity and a good introduction to business, "when in Rome to do as Rome does." The error lies in mistaking the purlieus for the true Rome of the South, and in the enormous theory which attributes to alcoholic beverages the hygienic properties that pure unadulterated water alone possesses. It is not by dram-drinking that the above-named medical men preserved their health. Their names being known, they can be interrogated and answer for themselves. It was not by grog-shops or the influence or agency of the inmates of such places, that they succeeded in business and came into the inheritance of the fat of the land.—Boston Med. and Surg. Journal.

Infidelities ought to extinguish love, and we should not be jealous, even when we have reason to be so; it is only persons who avoid causing jealousy who are worth being jealous of.

We must be able to answer for our fortune to be able to answer for our future conduct.

The Picture with Two Faces.

A REVERIE IN ONE OF THE SALOONS OF SARATOGA.

"No, oh no!" the voice was soft, and the tones full of love; but the answer was harsh, and I heard a quick and heavy step upon the floor as of one who was resolved to bid defiance to all gentle persuasion. Then again the voice grew more earnest.

"Oh, no, you must not go to-night—oh, stay with me to-night."

But the answer was still more resolved, and I heard an oath, as he said. "He would not be chained by a woman," and again the heavy footsteps strided toward the door.

The room was next to mine, and I knew was occupied by a husband and wife. I had often seen them going in and out, and noticed the expression of concealed anxiety and suffering which a practiced eye may still detect on a heroic woman's countenance. On his face I had read selfishness, sensuality, and ungoverned passion, and I knew there must be misery in that little room, though wealth, and luxury, and refinement spread a vail over it to common eyes.

My ear was quickened by this knowledge, and I listened for the sequel of what I knew to be the attempt of an injured, but still true and loving wife, to dissuade her husband from some midnight revel; and again she pleaded:

"My dear, oh do not go—'tis late, and all will know that you go forth at this hour to some unhallowed resort. You must not go."

It was still for a moment, and then I heard a bound, as if neither bars nor bolts should keep him from going when and where he pleased. But the light step of love was quicker, and I heard the key turned, as she said, "You must not, must not"—and oh! the agony of those gentle tones.

There was a struggle—a faint scream, and she fell. In a moment more the key again turned, the door banged, and muffled steps stole down the staircase, over which I listened in breathless silence, till their echo died away in the street.

Then the stifled sobs fell on my ear—a moan that told me a heart was breaking. "Shall I go to her?" No, said a voice within, "He is her husband—it is one of of those secret griefs which proud woman never reveals, and is happier in feeling no one ever knows."

I could not sleep, and opened the casement to look out upon the garden, and far away over the quiet village, the groves and winding paths bathed in the moonlight, and thought, Oh, that man should mar such loveliness! There were no sounds or signs of life. Where were the revelers? Where, in a little village, could be concealed the dark places of iniquity, the poisoned cup and the maddening game? And I thought how many hearts are breaking! How many pillows are wet with the tears of anguish, and bosoms are heaving with the sigh of grief, of thoughts unuttered, but in the prayer, "My Father, forgive them, and give me strength to endure!"

A slight sound caught my ear, and I saw the curtain put back by a delicate hand, and a pale face, on which the moonbeams fell, looked forth, and I exclaimed, "How long—oh, how long!" I watched till nearly morning, and still she moved not; and I again sought rest, ere hum of voices and the tramp of feet should banish sleep from every eyelid.

When I awoke there were again voices, those soft tones were softer, and the harsh answers were harsher still: but they soon ceased, and the heavy slumbers of the debauchee alone disturbed the stillness.—The pale hand still rested on the window-sill, when the morning light streamed in; and when the bell summoned all to awake, I heard again that loving voice whispering in the ears of the sleeper, to arouse him from the stupidity which wine and revelry had produced. Muttered curses fell back upon her bleeding heart, but the affectionate appeals continued till he fully understood their import, when he arose and moved about in sullen silence at his morning toilet.

I descended to the parlor, and from my quiet nook observed that "happy couple" when they entered, the envied of all eyes. His are drawing-room smiles, and so well do they become him, that ordinary observers would never imagine that the saloon was the only place in which he ever wore them. But the beautiful and gentle creature by his side clings trustfully to his arm, and looks up lovingly into his face. It is not strange they believe her happy; and indeed she is. She loves with a true woman's devotion,—"with all his faults she loves him still." But the worm, that insidious worm, Neglect, is gnawing there, and the life-blood will soon be drained from that true heart.

I thought of those words, so true and beautiful, "Are there no martyrs of whom the world never hears?" "Pass you never, in your daily walks, slight forms with calm brows and mild eyes, whose whole life has been one prolonged self-struggle?" Lip, and cheek, and brow tell you no tale of the spirit's unrest."—Ah, yes, there is a whole array of martyr women, more heroic than any victor on the battle-field, of whom the world never hears, or knows, or dreams. But there is an Eye that pities and an Arm to save; and oh! how brightly will they shine in the ransomed hosts above!—Minnie Myrtle, in the New York Daily Times.

Christ's Humility as a Teacher.

Christ was a humble teacher. His spirit is one of meekness and lowliness. Let us beware of mistake here. These qualities may be passive; if so, they are infirmities; they are incompatible with decision, dignity, energy—with highest manhood. In Christ they are active. His answers are soft, because he chooses that the words which might burst from his lips, like the rebukes of Sinai, should distill as the dew of Hermon; his reproofs are gentle, not because they want force, but because they enter the heart obliquely; his censures are mild, not for lack of power, but for abundance of love; his manners are affable, not because he is fearful, or unsteady, or dependent, but because, while he holds the keys of death and hell, he wills, by bearing injuries, and reproaches, and persecutions, and crucifixion with a forgiving temper, to set revengeful man an example. He is humble, not because of his fallibility, but because he would correct the arrogance of fallible man; he is modest, not because he undervalues his own qualifications, but because man overvalues his; he was lowly, not because his mind was not set on high, but that he might teach us how, while we pour heavenly music on the skies, we may dwell upon the ground. On suitable occasions, when mild reproof had been neglected, he stands up like fire and breathes like famine. In his dilemmas there was a caustic that burned scribes and Pharisees to the quick; in his hand there was a scourge before which the defilers of the temple fled; in his parables there played a hidden lightning which ere long rent every tower and palace in Jerusalem; yet his prevailing manner how gentle! how sweet! To those who listen to learn he gives, with untiring patience, line upon line, and precept upon precept. In the wayside he halts to welcome she softest voice of supplicating sorrow. When he delivers his farewell to his disciples, we see how he would "gather his children together as a hen gathereth her brood under her wings." When the disciple that had denied him with oaths and cursing stood trembling in his presence, and he says, "Simon, son of Jonas, lovest thou me more than these?" we learn what that meaneth, "He will not break the bruised reed." Though Christ suffered even to the cross, he acted—ah, how gloriously! He touched all the realms of nature, and they felt him! they feel him now. Though he went down to the sepulcher, he ascended the skies, and bade his disciples follow him to heaven. Though he owned no foot of land, he gave notice of his coming conquest of the world.—Dr. Thompson, in Ladies' Repository for September.

RESPECTING THE SABBATH.—We have already noticed that some of the New York papers had made the suggestion to open the Crystal Palace on Sunday.—The suggestion does not seem to receive much favor, and the authorities, or those who have the control of the matter, we trust, will follow the example set in England in relation to the new palace there. A strong attempt was made to keep that open on the Sabbath, but with all the influence of the press, which was employed very largely in its favor, and of large public meetings, the number of petitioners in favor of this new form of Sabbath desecration, was only 12,000, while those who petitioned against it, exceeded 120,000.—The idea is now abandoned.—Carolinian.

STATE LIBRARY INDIANAPOLIS v. 3 #11

TEMPERANCE CHART.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.
WM. HANNAMAN, C. E. BABB,
JAMES HALL, R. T. BROWN,
JOHN B. ABBETT.

WEDNESDAY, SEPT. 7, 1853.

To Correspondents in General.—We wish to say one word to those who contribute articles for publication—Be short. In order to do this, however, you need not leave out anything of real interest connected with the subject upon which you write. But try to put your matter in the least possible space, and give the most substance with the fewest words.

In giving accounts of public meetings, or of any movement showing the state of feeling in your neighborhood, confine your statement to what will be useful or of interest to those of other places. Give merely what is likely to be of real benefit to the cause. Many things of a personal nature, which would be of interest to a few individuals, might not be of any use in promoting the general objects we have in view.

We hope no one will consider our remarks personal. We give them for the benefit of all concerned, and because our paper is small, and we wish to crowd into it as much as possible. Every one who reads the Chart is interested in having our suggestions carried out, and if all would try to do so, each correspondent would find himself paid for his own attention to the matter, by what he would gain from the observance of the rule by others.

We hope, too, that our friends will not be idle, but be continually picking up items for us, or presenting a good thought for our readers, having for their reward the benefit resulting to the cause. We wish to make the Chart as interesting and as influentlal and useful as possible. It has a great work to perform within the next year, as the Organ of the Temperance community in this State, and we trust that those who feel an interest in the object will labor for its advancement.

The Spirit of the Business.

The man who has been keeping the miserable establishment under the Palmer House, thrust himself, a few days ago, among some gentlemen who were conversing, and after inquiring if the yellow fever was spreading up the river, and being told a couple of cases had happened, one of them at Louisville, said he wished it would come here and kill every temperance man in the town.

This is merely carrying out the spirit of his employment, which is neither more nor less than the destruction of human life. Is it surprising that a man who has been engaged in such a work as presenting the bottle to his neighbors, and destroying them by inches, should utter such a wish? Or is it surprising that such a man should have the malice which fills his heart so stirred up against those who are humanely trying to stop his horrid work, that he would, Nero like, wish to have them all killed at one blow? It is, however, a little surprising that he should name as an instrument of his vengeance one of those scourges of our race which the world regards as more directly under the control of that Being whose law it is the regular and settled business of the liquor seller to break.

Dare such a man hold up his head or show his face in this community, and utter such a sentiment? Must he be permitted to go on with his horrible work, day after day, and no voice be raised against it? Have these men the effrontery to ask that all the terrible mischief which their vile business is doing (for they know it all) shall continue, and we stand by with our arms folded, and not put forth a hand to stop it? No: when we see our dearest friends drawn one after another into the jaws of the devouring monster, we will stop at nothing that honest men may do, to accomplish its destruction. This man, with others, will yet find that there is a moral influence here which will not only purify the atmosphere above ground, but will reach the holes and dens where this filthy, life-destroying business is now skulking, afraid to look at the light of day. The time will come, we trust, when the friends of humanity will compel the liquor seller to either reform or hide himself from a community he has so deeply wronged.

Street Meeting.

The meeting on Thursday last was well attended, and though there was but little excitement, and no unusual show of numbers, &c., a spirit was exhibited which showed that every thing was going on rightly. There was about the proceedings a coolness, a candor, and at the same time, a hostility to the traffic, and a determination to go forward with the reform already commenced, which shows that progress is making in the right direction.

The committee appointed to visit the places of selling liquor, and request them to discontinue, made a report. They had found forty-four retail places; thirty-three of the number were kept by Germans, three by Irishmen, three by Americans, and the rest by negroes. Some showed a spirit to fight it out, but most either claimed that they sold nothing stronger than wine or ale, or that they kept strictly within the limits of the law, or were willing to quit altogether. A good many sold according to law, that is, whisky by the gallon, and expected to continue to do so.

It was claimed by the speakers at the meeting, that the law condemned as nuisances places where liquor is sold and drank, and a disorderly house kept, and that a nuisance could be abated by a community without any process of law.

In view of the very large number of Germans in the above list, Mr. Ketchem made an appeal to that class of citizens, in which he made some very just remarks in reference to the manner in which they are treated, and the privileges they enjoy among us, and their consequent obligations to come up to the standard of American action in sending out a wholesome influence into the community.

We are satisfied that the cause of temperance now occupies a position in our city very different from what it ever has before.

The proceedings are somewhat lengthy, and we are not able from the crowded state of our columns, to give them entire.

The following preamble and resolution were passed:

As the Marshal and his Deputy have wholly failed in the discharge of their duties, both in enforcing the law against the Liquor establishments, and in the preservation of the peace of the community; therefore,

Resolved, That said Marshal and his Deputy be and they are requested to resign; and in case they fail to do so, that the City Council be and they are requested to remove them, and appoint more efficient and better men at their next meeting.

The Debate at Columbus.—The Debate on the Maine Law, at Columbus, came off at the appointed time, and according to some reports we have seen, without any very decided result. A correspondent of the Cincinnati Times, however, a paper not at all friendly to the cause of temperance, says, he thinks the Maine-law man, Dr. Jewett, pretty essentially used up his antagonist.

Preparations for War.—Mr. Prime, one of the editors of the New York Observer, is now traveling in Europe, and in describing a military review in Scotland, he remarks:

"All over Great Britain and Ireland the preparation for war is going on;—12,000 soldiers to-day are to be reviewed in the Park in Dublin. The state of things away in the East is the pretext, but the real cause is nearer home. Louis Napoleon has his eye upon England, and he remembers Waterloo. There may be a fight on a sudden, and every public meeting here, every debate in Parliament, and the constant talk of the people, show that they are looking out for it."

"An Independent Press."

Under this head, the Cincinnati Commercial has some very just remarks in relation to the party press of the United States; though what is said here is true in relation to political papers, is it not equally true that the most of those papers called "independent," have something to turn them aside from the truth—some hobby or special interest, either to prevent them from seeing things as they really are, or making them unwilling to give facts to their readers? Ah, how many papers in this country are battling for the right, contending for justice; and against the real evils that afflict society, are honestly and faithfully laboring for the best interests of the community, independently of dollars and cents, and in disregard of the portion of public opinion belonging to that potent tyrant the majority? How many of them, at least, will express an opinion which they have reason to fear would be unpalatable to a considerable portion of their readers, though they might be satisfied that the real welfare of the people required it?

But we are glad to see the remarks of the Commercial, and give it due credit for a worthy attempt to enlighten the public mind in regard to a state of things which not only stands in the way of the dissemination of sound information, but which is unworthy of our people.

The text and comments of the Commercial are as follow:

An Independent Press.—The simple truth is, a paper sustained by those in power and bound to do their bidding, is not worthy of the title of "Democratic," nor should it receive the countenance of Democrats. A sheet in which the reader can place no confidence, because compelled, if needs be, to defend and sustain every species of knavery and hypocrisy, is a lie upon Democratic principles, and a slander upon the American character.—Lancasterian.

This is true. The time is passed when it is any longer right for a public journal to ally itself to a political party, and become, right or wrong, its attorney and advocate. The practice has exhibited its own abuses, and the condition and course of the public press needs only to be watched to ascertain in what those abuses consist. There are certain topics, upon which the truth never reaches the popular mind through the medium of the newspapers. Conventional falsehoods, felt to be such, known to be such, are emitted and allowed to pass current upon mankind, under the cowardly impression that the truth is too unpalatable to be received, and too harsh to be told in its naked plainness, without risk to him who has the temerity to give it utterance. Such is the effect of the slavery of party upon the press.

Mankind have lost confidence in "the great popular educator," as some imaginative gentleman has seen fit to call it. Why? Let us answer by an illustration: The secular press of the United States is mainly divided into two great interests—the Democratic and the Whig. This division being founded upon the ambition of the leaders of each of these parties, to secure possession of the governing power, as well as upon dogmatic differences of sentiment; the main object of one is precisely the same as that of the other, to break down its antagonist. With this intent, the two great armies into which the press is divided, are eternally at issue, and constantly at war. Whatever one affirms, it becomes the duty of the other to deny.—If one discovers the elements of greatness in some aspiring individual, and endeavors to puff him into notoriety, he immediately becomes the subject of attack by the other—the praise and the blame being equally one-sided and injudicious.

If the Democratic press of the Union discovers a principle to be true, the Whig press finds it to be false and dangerous to the independence of the nation or the freedom of the citizen. If the Whig press becomes the advocate of a particular measure, the Democratic press is instantly arrayed against that measure, and is inimical to all who originated and advocated it. Whatever one believes the other disbelieves; whatever one reverences, the other despises; whatever one affirms, the other denies; whatever one supports, the other endeavors to overthrow. If you desire to learn what course has been taken by the press of one party, upon a given question, learn what course has been adopted by the other. Their business is to be at issue; and, like two hired pettifoggers, the end in view is, to get their case, one having just about as much respect for the right as the other. One would suppose that this game had been played about long enough to be seen through. The Lancasterian, quoted above, thinks it has.

It is almost always the fault of the lover not to know when he is no longer loved.

Correspondence.

For the Temperance Chart.

Mr. Editor:—We have just concluded in Manchester what may most emphatically be denominated "A Religious Temperance Camp Meeting." It was in session eight days, and some sixty joined the church. There was no liquor on the ground nor in the neighborhood, and consequently the most profound attention and good order characterized the entire encampment from beginning to end, to the manifest observance and delight of all present. It spoke volumes in favor of our glorious cause. Add to this, every single preacher upon the stand, from our loved Presiding Elder, F. C. Holliday, to the youngest in the ministry, either directly or indirectly, wove Temperance into every sermon, every exhortation, every prayer. Many of the open-handed thrusts at the liquor business was most timely and felicitous. And to crown the climax, at a social love feast meeting, held at the altar, our good brethren all around came out experimentally, deliberately, and happily for Temperance. The Rev. Mr. Young, direct from Maine, put on "the clincher." Nor did it kill off the meeting. Hearty responses were made throughout the vast assemblage. The results of our precious camp meeting will not only "tell for God," but for suffering humanity.

What a change, what a happy change, has been wrought among our people! At a camp meeting, held not far from here some thirty years ago, a good and sainted brother, Jacob Blasdell, with a warm heart full of sympathy and religion, introduced the subject of Temperance. He was requested to sit down, but his full soul held him to his purpose until he was literally pulled down by his "coat tail." To him be the immortal honor of setting in motion the Temperance ball in our loved Hoosier State. He was laughed at and pitied then, but loved and cherished and envied now. I tell you, sir, the leaven is at work, and work on it must, and work it will until the whole lump is leavened. The battle in this region goes on well; many who openly opposed my humble efforts in behalf of Temperance years ago, are now its bold and efficient defenders. Humble as were my efforts, under God they have not been in vain.

To cheer us all in our glorious enterprise, we have in our county, a thorough Temperance journal in "The Independent Press." It is a press of power and influence; the rummies all feel it; I trust it will press on until they are all pressed out. Do not forget the Independent Press, friends.

The conclusion to our friends throughout the State and throughout the land I would say,

"Cheer up my lively lads,
In spite of all Rum's powers,
Cheer up my lively lads,
The victory 'll soon be ours."

A. J. Cotton.

Manchester, August 20, 1853.

Temperance Meeting at Huntsville.

At a mass meeting of the friends of temperance, held at Huntsville, Indiana, August 22. B. Andrews was called to the chair, and G. O. Joles appointed Secretary.

A committee, consisting of Elza Lauk, M. A. Reeder, and Harvey Patty, was appointed to prepare business for the action of the meeting.

Rev. A. Loose was invited to address the audience, which he did in a powerful strain of argument in favor of the Maine Law.

The meeting then adjourned till three o'clock.

In the afternoon an address was delivered by Mr. Patty, after which the committee reported the following resolutions, which, after some discussion, were adopted.

1. Resolved, That the subject of temperance, or the strife for the ascendancy of temperance principles over intemperance, is a subject of the greatest importance, especially at this time.

2. Resolved, That it is right, and that the public good requires, and the public safety demands that there be some stringent laws, rules, and regulations adopted in the social circle, and the general policy of this country, to prevent the manufacture, sale, and use of ardent spirits as a beverage.

3. Resolved, That the day is now arrived when political action must be had upon this particular question; that our legislators must act, and act promptly and decidedly in favor of temperance.

4. Resolved, That the license system, as applied to the regulation of the sale of intoxicating liquors, is unjust, immoral, and inexpedient, and should all be repealed immediately.

5. Resolved, That the Legislature of this State, when again convened, should immediately proceed to prohibit entirely the manufacture of intoxicating liquors, except for mechanical and chemical purposes.

6. Resolved, That it should be made a penal offense for any person or persons to sell or give away alcoholic liquor in any quantity without good evidence that such liquor is wanted for mechanical or chemical purposes.

7. Resolved, That our laws should regard every person found intoxicated as a maniac, disqualified to discharge any of the duties of life; and further, that every person found so intoxicated should, by a proper officer, be lodged in some house of refuge, or other safe place, and there confined until fully restored to sobriety, and that such person should defray all expenses attending his arrest and confinement, unless he state where he obtained his liquor, in which case the expense should be borne by the vendor.

8. Resolved, That no person should be elected to fill any office whatever in the gift of the people of our State, from the lowest to the greatest, unless he is an avowed and efficient temperance man; and further, that this mass meeting regard all the resolutions above as correct in principle, and good and wholesome in practice.

The Secretary was directed to request the publication of the proceedings in the several papers, and the meeting adjourned sine die.

BARRETT ANDREWS, Pres.
G. O. Joles, Sec.

Although the meeting, as an organized body, adjourned on Saturday evening, this was by no means the end. On Sunday, at 9 o'clock A. M., an interesting experience meeting was held at the Methodist church, and at 11, a large congregation repaired to the grove, and listened with almost breathless attention to an eloquent address from D. P. Holloway, in favor of temperance and its handmaid—the Maine law. The exercises of the afternoon meeting commenced with a few remarks by Joel P. Davis, when Mr. Tho. Brown, of Winchester, addressed the people at some length in a manner both entertaining and instructive. William F. Kelso followed with a few brief but spirited and animating remarks, and the meeting closed.

Let us hope that the good seed sown so profusely at this meeting may take root and yield an hundred fold. G. O. J.

The Arabs of the Desert.—Rev. Dr. Duffield, in one of his letters from the East, thus speaks of the wild Arabs; and of the mode of defence against them which he considers most effectual:

"Each man carries his gun and sword, and cherishes the hostility and feuds that prevail among the different tribes, which commit occasional predatory invasions of each other's territories. These sons of Ishmael are wild as their sire, but I determined to pass unharmed in my journey—deadly weapons being, in my opinion, unsuited to the minister of Christ, and to make the Lord my defense. I laughed at all I read about 'arming to the teeth,' &c.; and now I treat it with contempt.—Wild as the poor Arabs are, they still have human hearts, and are affected by the voice of kindness. Would that travelers generally, studied less to irritate them."

New Orleans Howard Association.—The New Orleans Picayune says, it is frequently asked, in what consists the duty of a member of the Howard Association, and in what manner the relief is applied to applicants. It is briefly this: the members are detailed for duty in their respective districts. It is the duty of a member to patrol his district and search out the sick, by entering every hovel where disease is likely to be found, and by giving timely relief to stay its progress. If the patient can be removed with safety, he is put into a cab and sent to the hospital; if not, the physician is called, a nurse, if required, is furnished, and the prescriptions procured and applied by the member, who visits the patient at least twice a day.—Should the patient have a family, and have his home and nothing from its locality to prejudice a recovery, he is permitted to remain; and when, as is most frequently the case, his daily labor is their support and maintenance. his family is supplied with provisions until he is restored to usefulness.

Temperance in South America.

About four years since, says the Boston Traveller, the Copiapo railroad was commenced in South America, and within the territory of Chili. The road was begun and finished under the directions of a well-known American gentleman, who has resided for many years in that country, and who has contributed largely to its welfare and prosperity.

In the commencement of the road, the laborers were given to understand that their employer would introduce and enforce total abstinence from all intoxicating drinks. In order to do this, a most rigid surveillance was instituted, and any individual who was even suspected of bringing liquors for sale, was immediately banished from the premises. A stipulated portion of the road was completed weekly, and with the exception of one week only, the task was finished without any extraordinary effort. The laborers were never more happy in their daily tasks; had never before found a surplus of money in their hands; and consequently no tumults or broils occurred to mar the peace of their families.

The work was finally accomplished in the most superior style, and is now an object of admiration to distinguished and scientific gentlemen who have surveyed the whole structure. No case of discipline had occurred, and not a word of complaint of ill treatment was uttered.

The exception of one week, before referred to, was Passion Week, and the Church in Catholic countries strictly prohibits manual labor during this period.—On that occasion, the laborers had time to place themselves without the jurisdiction of the overseer, and the week was passed, as usual, in drunkenness and its consequent vices and disorders. The overseer's house was burnt, and the rails partially broken up, and such a panic prevailed as obliged the engineer, for the first time, to take up arms. But the tumult was soon quelled. It is to be lamented that the rum which produced this result was exported from New England.

Many other enterprises have been commenced in South America, by distinguished foreigners; but in almost every instance, the failure of success has been attributed to the use of ardent spirits. The importation into those countries, chiefly by New York and Boston merchants, has been so enormous for the last twenty years, that it threatens to sink that unhappy people irrecoverably in the abyss of poverty and moral degradation.

Niagara Falls and Lake Erie.—Professor Silliman, the eminent geologist, discredits the opinion advanced by some that the gradual wearing away of the rocks of Niagara Falls may possibly result in draining Lake Erie. In a recent lecture he remarked: "They will not halt at their present station, but retreat slowly and surely about two miles farther, when they will stop again for an unknown period, and probably forever, since at this place the hard limestone will form both base and top of the falls, and thus stop the destruction of the rock. Some have thought that they would finally reach Lake Erie, and that then the lake would be completely drained. Such an event is impossible.—At the point already mentioned, the torrent will gradually wear away the surface of the limestone, forming a rapid, and thenceforth Niagara will be one of the lost wonders of the world."

Another Great Cave in Kentucky.—Mr. G. P. McLane, of Mississippi, and others, partially explored a cave last week in Muhlenburg county, about ten miles South of Greenville. It was first discovered last winter by a person who tracked several raccoons into it. Mr. McLane and his companions went in, as they supposed, about two miles, when they came to a pit which they could not pass for the want of a ladder, but they saw that the cave extended beyond. While traveling the two miles, they discovered eight or ten branches leading off in different directions, some of them apparently larger than the direct avenue. A petrified monkey, as perfect in shape as if it were alive, was found in the cave some weeks ago, and we understand that it has been sent to the World's Fair in New York.—New Albany Tribune.

Cure for the Glanders.—Mr. Wm. Shepard, writing from North Sheffield, Ashtabula county, Ohio, states, that he cured a horse of the disease called the glanders, by the following means:

"I took a half pound of fine-cut tobacco and poured two quarts of warm water on it, and let it soak a few minutes, and washed his throat and so on up to his ears, and down his throat to his legs, and between his fore legs. It made him direful sick, and would have vomited if it had been possible for a horse to vomit. In three hours I bathed him again, and the next morning again. The final effect was, my horse could put his head to the ground after the second time bathing, and after the third time could feed as well as ever, and is well, and has done better ever since."

The Storm of 1703.

For one hundred and fifty years past, an annual sermon has been preached in the Baptist meeting-house, Little Wild street, London, on the 27th of November, in commemoration of the extraordinary storm of November 27, 1703, which was considered the most terrific and destructive tempest throughout Europe which the world has known since the universal deluge. Its moral lessons were considered so important, that a member of the church left a sum of money, the interest of which should be appropriated for ever, to support a sermon on each anniversary of the event, which is usually delivered by some of the most eminent ministers in the British metropolis, and has obtained the name of "The Storm Sermon." Several of them have been printed.

The late Dr. Samuel Stennett, a pastor of the Little Wild-street Church, and author of the hymns which bear his name, in his printed sermon on the subject, in endeavoring to account for the storm, says that, "having most probably taken its rise in America, it made its way across the Western Ocean, and collecting confederate matter in its passage over the seas, spent its fury on those parts of the world, whither his army of terrors was principally commissioned." A strong West wind set in about the middle of the month, the force of which increased every day to the 27th. On the 24th the storm commenced, which reached its height three days afterward. The violence of the wind produced a hoarse, dreadful noise, like one continued peal of thunder, and the excessive darkness of the night added greatly to the horror of the scene.

Many lives were lost, especially in London, not a few meeting death in its most terrific forms. And great indeed was the loss of property. In London and its vicinity more than eight hundred dwelling-houses were laid in ruins, above two thousand chimneys fell to the ground, and "the lead which covered the roofs of one hundred churches, was rolled up and hustled in prodigious quantities, to great distances."

Nor was the devastation less throughout the country. In one extensive plain on the banks of the Severn, not less than fifteen thousand sheep were driven into the river and drowned; and in the county of Kent alone, more than two hundred and fifty thousand trees were torn up by the roots.

The ravages of this awful storm were at sea still more tremendous. It was computed that not less than three hundred ships were entirely destroyed, among which were fifteen of the British Royal Navy, containing more than two thousand seamen, who "sank as lead in the mighty waters." The whole loss of property was estimated at four millions of pounds of money, of lives about eight thousand, and of cattle without number.

Toward the evening of the 27th, it pleased God gradually to abate the severity of the storm, till it became an entire calm; and men left the retreats in which they had taken refuge, to view "the desolations which God had made in the earth." It will be readily supposed that this was done with a variety of feelings, in accordance with their different characters.

In many cases, those who had been most filled with terror and confusion, having had their fears removed, dreadfully perverted its moral tendency, and proved that, "let favor be showed to the wicked, yet will they do wickedly." Shakspeare's plays of the Tempest and Macbeth were twice acted in the week succeeding this awful event, and one of them exactly a week after the storm had arrived at its greatest fury. On the whole, however, the general impression was salutary, and He who brought the stormy wind out of his treasury, caused it to fulfill his word. Royal authority appointed a day of humiliation and prayer, and the sense of the nation was expressed by immense crowds of all classes who attended public worship on that solemn day. Many reviewed, with humble gratitude, the deliverances which God had wrought for them.—London Watchman.

No man is a gentleman who, without provocation, would treat with incivility the humblest of his species. It is a vulgarity for which no accomplishments or dress can ever atone. Show me the man who desires to make every one happy around him, and whose greatest solicitude is never to give just cause of offense to any one, and I will show you a gentleman by nature and practice, although he may never have worn a suit of broadcloth, or ever have heard of a lexicon.

Chinese Language.—Who would have thought six years ago that the laws of one of the States of the Union would have to be published in English and Chinese for general circulation? Yet so it is. The ninth section of an act passed by the California Legislature for the foreign miner's tax has been printed in the Chinese language for the information of more than thirty thousand Chinese in the new State. Tong'k Achich, a Chinaman, certifies that the translation is "faithful and good."

The Chinese Insurgents.

The Rev. Mr. Spear, who has spent several years as a missionary in China, and has transferred his field of labor to San Francisco, hoping to operate with greater advantage than he could do in China itself, has just delivered a course of lectures in San Francisco, respecting the customs, arts, literature, and government of the Chinese, (with an account of the existing rebellion), which serves to throw much light on the subjects whereof he treats.—The rebellion, Mr. Spear says, has been going on more than three years in the South of China, and he regards it as one of the most important political and religious movements of the age. He is reported to have said:

"It had its origin in bands of men going through the country breaking idols and driving away their priests. Some said these men were Roman Catholics; but there are no Roman Catholics in that part of the empire. On their banners are inscribed the name of God—the Supreme, the Uncreated. Their progress has been rapid and irresistible. They have spread from city to city, and from province to province, and have shaken the imperial throne to its center. The present dynasty is a foreign dynasty, erected by the Mantchous after their conquest of China; and it is odious to the people. Even their shaved heads is a badge of subjection imposed by the haughty Mantchou. The present dynasty has now subsisted for nearly two hundred years, the usual period of Chinese dynasties, and the Chinese confidently believe that these are its last days. But it is as a religious movement that the rebellion commends itself to the heart of the Christian and the philanthropist.

"Some years ago, a man of great abilities and genius, but whose learning, from the corruption existing in the Board of Examination, had failed to procure for him the high rank as a magistrate to which it entitled him, became acquainted with the Christian missionaries, and received from them some tracts in the Chinese language. Upon these he meditated, until they produced his conversion. He then received instruction in religion from the missionaries, and returning home, spread the doctrines of Christianity throughout his country. From this seed, God has raised up the hosts which now bid fair to upturn the present usurping dynasty; and we have reason to hope that it will be the means of spreading the Gospel throughout the Asiatic world."

Mr. Spear concluded with a fervent exhortation that we should leave nothing in our power undone to forward this glorious work; and expressed the hope that the light of the Gospel was at length breaking through the thick darkness which has heretofore enshrouded half the nations of the earth.—Chicago Tribune.

Moral Reflections, Sentences, and Maxims.

Good taste springs more from judgment than from intellect.

Nothing ought more to humiliate men who have deserved great praise than the care which they still take to derive consequence from trifles.

People suffer more in our opinion, from the smallest infidelities committed towards ourselves, than from the greatest towards others.

Jealousy is always born with love, but it does not always die with it.

The generality of women mourn the death of their lovers not so much from the love they bore them as to appear more worthy of being loved.

The violences that others do to us are often less painful than those we put on ourselves.

We know well enough that we ought to speak very little of our wives; but we do not sufficiently know that we ought to speak still less of ourselves.

There are some good qualities which degenerate into faults when they are natural, and others which are never perfect when they are acquired. It must be reason, for instance, that should render us careful of our property and our confidence; and, on the contrary, it must be nature that should bestow on us goodness and courage.

Whatever distrust we may have of the sincerity of those who converse with us, we always believe that they tell us more truth than they do to others.

There are few virtuous women who are not weary of their profession.

The generality of virtuous women are like hidden treasures, only safe because they are not sought for.

There are few cowards who know the extent of their fear.

The violence we do ourselves to prevent falling in love is often more cruel than the severity of the loved object.

We always dread the sight of the person we love when we have been coquetting elsewhere.

Foreign Items.

Halifax, Aug. 30.

No change had taken place in Turkish affairs, since the announcement that the Porte had accepted, without modification, the note prepared by the four powers, and presented to and accepted by the Czar.

Lord John Russell had stated, in his place in Parliament that negotiations with the United States, regarding the Musquito territory, were still pending; but said he hoped they would reach a satisfactory termination before next session.

A select committee of the British Parliament had made a report on the slave trade, which has been published. It is long and very interesting.

Lieut. Maury had delivered a lecture at Lloyd's, London, for which he had received a vote of thanks, and resolutions complimenting him and the United States Government were passed.

The long-looked-for debate on the Eastern affairs has taken place in the British Parliament. The facts elicited are generally regarded as unsatisfactory; and the funds opened the next day rather depressed; but afterward stiffened up somewhat.

An agreement is said to be proposed between the English and Spanish Governments to the following effect:

1st. That England will consent to the importation into Cuba of apprentices from Africa for ten years' apprenticeship.

2nd. That a new census of every slave in Cuba will be found now by a mixed commission, authorized to search every estate in the island, so that in future they can ascertain whether new slaves have been introduced.

3rd. That in fifty years from the acceptance of these propositions, and treaty based thereon, the present slaves and their children will be set free.

Washington, Aug. 21.

The dispatches received at the Navy Department from Commodore Perry, at Shanghai, are dated May 16. He expected to sail immediately for Japan, leaving one vessel of his squadron behind, for the use of the United States Minister.—This fact is evidence that the Commodore considers that the revolution in China is approaching a crisis, as he has heretofore deemed it important to take every vessel of his squadron on the Japan expedition. He has heard from Japan, that the Japanese are preparing to receive him, through the Dutch officials in a friendly manner, although they are increasing and strengthening their fortifications on the coast.—Perry's crews are all well.

The information received here tends to confirm the opinion that several distinct revolutions, independent of each other, are progressing in China, and that they are likely to result in a division of the empire into numerous States. All the movements, however, are under Christian influence.

Ringgold's North Pacific Exploring Squadron was heard from at Madeira, July 18. All well. They are about sailing for Table Bay, Cape of Good Hope.

Dispatches are also received from Commodore Shubrick and the fishing ground squadron. Still all quiet. No new developments.

Secretary Marcy is in deep affliction in consequence of the death of his son, who suffered so long from consumption. He died on board the sloop of war Preble, when five days out at sea.

A Painful Sight.—Friday afternoon, in South street, near Fifth, we were attracted by a large crowd, on approaching we found that one of the marshal's police had taken in charge a well dressed, young, and good-looking female, who was in such a beastly state of intoxication that it was impossible for her to walk. The sight to us was one of the most painful we ever beheld. Before us was one of that sex whom we had been taught to look upon as belonging to a superior order of beings—as the sweeteners of man's life, made lovely, tender, and kind, to win men from vice to virtue—to be their solace and comfort in the hour of trouble and affliction: there she lay, helpless and disfigured by man's enemy and earth's curse—rum!

Many in the crowd looked on with a smile upon their face, as if there was no disgrace in a woman's drunkenness—others looked with a pitying eye, and a few with difficulty kept back the starting tear, for our own part we fervently wished never to see such a sight again, and our humble prayer was, that some remedy would be applied for the removal of temptation from those whose diseased appetites call for stimulating drinks.

The unfortunate woman was taken to the Southwark Station House.—Philadelphia Daily Register.

☞ The Yellow Fever, it is said, was first introduced into New Orleans in 1769, having been brought by a British vessel which had just arrived from the coast of Africa with a cargo of slaves.

To Printers.

The Committee of Publication for the "Temperance Chart," will receive sealed proposals, until October 25, 1853, for the printing of said paper, including the paper and the delivery of the sheets folded, to the Editor, at his office in Indianapolis. The proposals to state the price of paper, and rate of composition and press work, with a sample of the quality of the paper to be used.

Wm. Hannaman.
James Hall.
C. E. Babb.
R. T. Brown.
August, 1853. J. B. Abbett.

Notice.

The Grand Section of C. of T., of Indiana, will hold its Sixth Annual Session, in Temperance Hall, Indianapolis, commencing on Monday, October 24th, at 1½ o'clock, P. M. As there is much business of importance to transact, representatives will please be punctual in attending.

Sections will please forward their quarterly returns to the G. S. before the 20th of October, or they may loose their charters. Henry Ohr, G. S. of C. of T.

Indianapolis, August 17th, 1853.

Notice.

The Eighth Annual Session of the Grand Division of the Sons of Temperance of the State of Indiana, will commence in Temperance Hall in the City of Indianapolis, on Tuesday, October 25, 1853, at 6 o'clock P. M. P. S. Sage, G. W. P.

C. Woodward, G. S.

August 1, 1853.

$25 Premium.

The undersigned Committee on the state of the Order of the Grand Section of Cadets of Temperance of Indiana, offer the above premium for the most acceptable Initiatory ceremony for Cadets of Temperance. Competitors for the same to be members of some Temperance organization.

All manuscripts to be forwarded to Henry Ohr, G. S., on or before the 20th day of October next.

Theophilus Robinson,
H. C. Newcomb, } Com.
Henry Ohr,

Indianapolis, Aug. 6th, 1853.

Torchlight and Indiana Cadet please copy.

Call for a State Temperance Convention.

A State Temperance Convention will be held at Madison, Jefferson county, Indiana, beginning on the 28th of September next, and continuing as long as it may determine.

John A. McClung,
Wm. Wilson,
John C. Steele,
John O'Kane, } State Central Committee.
William Hannaman,
Charles Woodward,
J. W. Gordon,

☞ We have two Certificates of Scholarships in the "Commercial College of Indianapolis," which we will dispose of—any one wishing to attend this institution will do well to give us a call at the Chart office.

CONSTITUTION AND BY-LAWS,

WE are still prepared to print Constitution and By-Laws, where the alterations are few from the copy recommended by the Grand Division, at the following rates:

100 copies, (or less) $5 00
200 " 8 00
300 " 10 00

We will pay the postage on all ordered from us.

☞ All orders accompanied by the cash, will be promptly attended to.

Address, JOHN H. OHR,
Indianapolis, Indiana.

Mechanics, Inventors, & Manufacturers.

$450. IN SPLENDID PRIZES. $450.

VOLUME IX. of the Scientific American commences on the 17th of September. It is chiefly devoted to the advancement of the interests of Mechanics, Inventors, Manufacturers, and Farmers, by the diffusion of useful knowledge upon these important branches. It is edited by men practically skilled in the arts and sciences, and is widely regarded as a sound and able journal. Nearly all the Valuable Patents which issue weekly from the Patent Office are Illustrated with Engravings, and the Claims of all the Patents are published in its columns; thus making the paper a perfect Scientific and Mechanical Encyclopedia for future as well as present reference. The Scientific American is very extensively circulated—its circulation in the last Volume exceeding 18,000 copies per week. It is in form for binding; each Volume contains Several Hundred Engravings and over Four Hundred Pages of Reading Matter, with an Index. The practical receipts alone are worth to any family much more than the subscription price.

The Publishers offer the following valuable prizes for the largest list of subscribers sent in by the 1st of January next:—$100 will be given for the largest list; $75 for the second; $50 for the third; $45 for the fourth; $40 for the 5th; $35 for the 6th; $30 for the 7th; $25 for the 8th; $20 for the 9th; $15 for the 10th; $10 for the 11th; and $5 for the 12th. The cash will be paid to the order of the successful competitor, immediately after January 1st, 1854.

Terms:—One copy one year, $2; one copy six months, $1; five copies six months, $4; ten copies six months, $8; ten copies 12 months, $15; fifteen copies twelve months, $22; twenty copies twelve months, $28 in advance.

Southern and Western money taken for subscriptions.

Letters should be directed, post-paid, to Munn & Co. 128 Fulton street, N. Y.

CHARTERS.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR A DIVISION S. OF T.

(Date.)

The undersigned inhabitants of ——, believing the Order of the Sons of Temperance to be well calculated to extend the blessings of total abstinence, and promote the general welfare of mankind, respectfully petition the Grand Division of the —— of ——, to grant them a Charter to open a new Division, to be called the —— Division, No. —, Sons of Temperance, of the —— of ——, to be located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves, individually and collectively, to be governed by the rules and usages of said Grand Division, and also, by those of the National Division.

Enclosed is the Charter Fee, $5 00. Books, $2 00.

This must be signed by at least eight persons of good character and standing in community, and sent to C. WOODWARD, G. S., Indianapolis, Ind., free of postage.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR A TEMPLE.

(Date.)

The undersigned, believing the Temple of Honor to be well calculated to cement more firmly our fraternal relations, and add to the general prosperity of the cause of Temperance, respectfully petition the Grand Temple of the —— of ——, to grant them a Charter to open a new Temple, to be called the —— Temple of Honor, No. —, of the —— of ——, to be located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves individually and collectively, to be governed by the rules and usages of the Grand Temple, and also by those of the Order at large.

Enclosed is the Charter Fee, $20 00.

To be directed to the G. W. R., free of postage.

This must be signed by at least twenty persons of good standing, and if not known to the G. W. T. or G. W. R., must send satisfactory references.

J. H. OHR, G. W. R.

Indianapolis, Ind.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR CADETS OF TEMPERANCE.

The undersigned, boys of ——, believing the Order of Cadets of Temperance to be well calculated to extend the blessings of total abstinence, and promote the general welfare of mankind, respectfully petition the Grand Section of the State of Indiana, to grant them a charter to open a new Section, to be called the —— Section, No. ——, Cadets of Temperance, of the State of Indiana, to be located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves, individually and collectively to be governed by the rules and usages of said Grand Section, and also those of the acting Head of the Order.

Enclosed is the fee for Charter, R. B.'s and officers' cards, $5 00.

It must also be stated whether the applicants are members of the Order or not; if they are, of what Section. The application to be directed to the Grand Secretary, free of postage.

It must also be certified by a W. P. or P. W. P, that the W. Patron elect is a Son of Temperance in good standing.

Address (post paid) HENRY OHR, G. S., C. o T., Indianapolis, Indiana.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR DAUGHTERS OF TEMPERANCE.

(Date.)

The undersigned, inhabitants of ——, believing the Order of the Daughters of Temperance to be well calculated to extend the blessings of Total Abstinence, and promote the general welfare of mankind, respectfully petition the Grand Union to grant them a charter to open a new Union to be called the —— Union, No. —, D. of T., of the State of Indiana, located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves, individually and collectively, to be governed by the rules and usages of said Grand Union.

Enclosed is the Charter Fee, $5 00.

The above must be signed by at least eleven females, of proper age and good standing in community.

Address (post paid,) Mrs. ELIZA RICHMOND, G. S. S., Indianapolis, Indiana.

New Watch and Jewelry S tore.

No 1, Bates House, Washington Street,

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

WE have now open the largest and best assortment of fine Watches and rich Jewelry ever offered in this city, to which we invite the examination of the public.

Our stock is all new—selected with great care, and comprises Watches, Diamond Work, Chains, Pins, Rings, Pencils, Lockets, of all kinds; Silver Ware, Clocks, Perfumery, Brushes, Soaps, Plated Ware, Castors, Fruit Baskets, &c., which we will sell for CASH at New York prices. Mr. E. W. NEFF, of this city, has taken charge of the Watch repairing department, and will spare no pains to give satisfaction to our customers.

july 6-tf E J. BALDWIN & CO.

D. CRAIGHEAD. R. BROWNING.

CRAIGHEAD & BROWNING,

Dealers in all kinds of

Drugs, Medicines, Surgical Instruments, Paints, Oils, Chemicals, Varnishes, Dye Stuffs, Glassware Window Glass, Brushes, Cosmetics, Spices, Cigars, Tobacco, Perfumery, &c.,

WASHINGTON STREET,

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

ALL are respectfully invited to call and examine our stock and prices, as we feel confident we can render satisfaction both as to prices and quality of articles. Great care is taken in the selection of articles, in reference to their purity, as we endeavor at all times to keep such articles as are strictly pure and genuine. Every article will be waranted as represented. Orders from Physicians and others promptly attended to. Particular attention given to filling Prescriptions and compounding Medicines, which, in all cases, shall receive the personal attention of one of the firm. june 30

HANNAMAN & DUZAN,

DEALERS IN

DRUGS AND MEDICINES,

Surgical Instruments, Paints, Oils, Varnishes, Dye Woods, Medical and Window Glass, Brushes, Perfumery, Soaps, &c.

Washington, 3 doors west of Pennsylvania St.,

june 30 1y INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

W. W. ROBERTS,

Druggist and Apothecary.

Wholesale and Retail Dealer in

DRUGS, MEDICINES, PAINTS, OILS, AND DYE STUFFS, BRUSHES, FANCY GOODS, AMERICAN AND FRENCH WINDOW GLASS, &c.

WASHINGTON ST., INDIANAPOLIS.

Physicians, Country Merchants, and the people generally, are invited to examine his stock, which will be sold at the lowest cash price.

☞ QUALITY WARRANTED TO SUIT. ☜

june 22 4m

COMMERCIAL COLLEGE,

(Late Commercial Institute,)

Of Indianapolis,

Established March 31, 1851.

INCORPORATED, 1853.

W. McK. SCOTT, A. M., Founder and President.

JAMES C. HAYDEN, (Late Professor in Bacon's Mercantile College, Cincinnati,)

PROF. OF BOOK-KEEPING AND PENMANSHIP.

THE Session will commence at College Hall as follows:

1st Session on the first Monday of September.
2d Session on the 1st Monday of November.
3d Session on the 1st Monday of January.
4th Session on the 1st Monday of March.
5th Session on the 1st Monday of May.

Having secured, permanently, the services of the distinguished Professor above named, and leased for a term of years the commodious and beautiful Hall formerly known as CONCERT HALL, but now named COLLEGE HALL, which is to be fitted up in a style of great elegance, taste, and convenience, the President would say, that this College now offers advantages superior to all others, for imparting a sound, thorough, and accomplished business education

COURSE OF STUDIES.

The Course of Studies, as enlarged, will be as follows, viz:

1. Book-Keeping, by Single and Double Entry, in all its various branches, and its application to all kinds of business.
2. The Laws, Customs, and Usages of Trade and Commerce.
3. Mercantile Arithmetic, upon the short and easy system of cancelation, (taught in no other College.)
4. Commercial Law, in a series of Lectures, thorough and systematic.
5. Business Penmanship.
6. Commercial Correspondence.
7. Lectures upon Banking, Political Economy, and other subjects valusble to the business man.

EXPENSES.

Cards of Admission, invariably in advance, or secured, $25; Diplomas $3; Stationery $5; Boarding $2 50 per week; incidentals, at option of student, $15. Making entire expenses about $75.

On application, a Catalogne will be furnished, giving full particulars.

All letters will receive prompt attention on being directed, post-paid, to

june 8 W. McK. SCOTT, President.

"God never made his works for man to mend." DR. FRANKLIN.

KIER'S ROCK OIL.

A NEW AND MOST IMPORTANT REMEDY FOR DISEASE.

DISCOVERED IN 1849.

IS drawn from a deep well near Pittsburgh—has been used with remarkable success in Ohio and Pennsylvania, and more Eastern States—and is now working its way West. An opportunity is now offered to the Afflicted for testing it. Where known and tried, it at once makes firm friends, and cures which are eloquent in its praise. Certificates of its power to heal are at hand—but we know well, reader, that such evidence, to have weight with you, now-a-days, must be in your own neighborhood.—You have only to try the Oil to be satisfied—it will SPEAK FOR ITSELF.

We have no war with the legion of Nostrums and Specifics of the day—we know but little about them—some say they are good for nothing. However that may be, the

Petroleum

will not be suppressed and kept back by reason of the above nostrums—duty and inclination both forbid it.

Those who are afflicted, are respectfully invited to get a Circular and look over the Directions for

Ague, Rheumatism, Piles, Diarrhœa, Flux, Tooth Ache, Burns, Worms, Scrofula, Coughs, Bronchitis, Croup, Old Sores, Cholera Morbus, Contractions of the Limbs and Joints, Sore Eyes, Blindness, Costiveness, Dyspepsia, and other Diseases.

By that time you may say, "it cures too much." But recollect it is not a HUMAN INVENTION, but compounded by Nature's master hand—and Nature does not do her work by halves.

The Oil is used both internally and externally.

As AGUE, SORE EYES, PILES, RHEUMATISM, and SCROFULA are so common in many parts of the West, we are constrained to say, that while this Oil will cure and relieve other diseases, it has been and is constantly used with most complete success in these cases.

☞ Price 50 cents per Bottle (half pint.)

Beware of all Rock Oil preparations, as some persons are offering a spurious article. Look for S. M. KIER'S name written on the label of the bottle.

For sale by the Druggists throughout Indiana, and by TOMLINSON BROTHERS, J. P. POPE & Co., S. ROSENGARTEN, WM. TILLEY, and at wholesale by W. W. ROBERTS, Indianapolis, Indiana.

R. M. LYON, Fort Wayne,

may25 10w Proprietor in the Western States.

SOMETHING NEW.

LATHROP & STEVENS, Wholesale and Retail Dealers in BOOTS AND SHOES, at the West room in the Bates House, Washington Street, Indianapolis.

We are now opening a new and splendid stock of Boots and Shoes of every variety and style, which we are receiving direct from the manufacturers.—We design to keep constantly on hand a good assortment of the best quality of goods manufactured, which we can warrant to give satisfaction to all who may give them a trial. We will sell by the case, dozen, or single pair, at low prices for cash.—Our stock consists in part of Gents' fine Cloth, silk warp, glove kid, buck, patent calf, and enameled Gaiters and Ties of every variety and style; Ladies' fine silk warp Gaiters, Buskins, Ties, Slippers and Boots; Misses' ditto; Men's calf, goat, kip, and thick Boots and Brogans; Boys' and Youths' ditto; assorted Ladies, kid, goat and calf Boots and Buskins; Misses' ditto. Also every variety of Children's Shoes. Come and see for yourselves.

LATHROP & STEVENS,

may 25 4w Indianapolis, Indiana.

TEMPERANCE INN,

Bloomington, Indiana.

J. & S. M. ORCHARD, PROPRIETORS.

TRAVELLERS will find it to their advantage to call and try the accommodation of the TEMPERANCE INN. Stage office for all the different routes, in connection with this House. may25 6m ¶

THE LATEST WONDER of the 19th CENTURY.

DR. G. W. BENNETT'S

Celebrated Eye-Balm.

A SPECIFIC FOR CHRONIC, SORE, INFLAMED, AND WEAK EYES.

Prepared only by Dr. George W. Bennett, and for sale by Merchants and Druggists generally.

THIS Balm is an excellent and certain cure for sore and inflamed Eyes, in all cases of Psoroic, Scrofulous, and Purulent Opthalmia, and what is commonly termed wild hairs in the eye-lids. It is a specific in Infantile, Purulent, and Scrofulous Inflamed, and Sore Eyes, and all in the various diseases of the Eyes, that prevail among the human family, in every climate. It will be found a sovereign remedy if properly applied.

W. W. ROBERTS, Indianapolis, Ind. General Agent for State of Indiana, to whom all orders must be addressed.

Price---Twenty-five Cents.

I warrant the above Balm to cure if the directions are strictly observed, or return the money.

june 22 4m G. W. BENNETT.

REAL ESTATE AND GENERAL AGENCY OFFICE,

INDIANAPOLIS, INDIANA.

UNDER THE CONTROL OF W. M'K. SCOTT, Attorney & Counsellor at Law, and Notary Public.

The attention of the Agency will be devoted,

First—To the collection of debts and the payment of Taxes for non-residents in any county in the State. Also, the redemption of Lands sold for Taxes, sale, purchase or lease of Lands, purchase of adverse claims, examination and perfection of Title, &c., &c.

Second—To the prosecution of claims against the General Government, procuring Land Warrants, Patent Rights, and Pensions under the various Pension Laws, &c.

Third—All other Miscellaneous agencies as may be intrusted to the care of this office.

Fourth—The taking of Depositions and Attestation of all instruments requiring a seal

In all cases requiring an outlay of money for the benefit of individuals, the requisite funds must be transmitted in advance.

Prompt attention to all letters on business that are pre-paid. Address W. M'K. SCOTT,

Real Estate and General Agent,

jan 5-1y Indianapolis, Ind.

ADAMS & CO'S EXPRESS.

WE are now running a daily line East and West, accompanied by special messengers, and with the speed of the mails, running our own cars with the passenger trains.

Packages will be received at the cars up to the time of starting, and at our office until 1 o'clock each day.

We are prepared to transport packages, bank notes and specie, to and from any of the eastern cities, also, Louisville, Frankfort, and Lexington, Ky., St. Louis, Mo., or any points on the Ohio and Mississippi rivers; and to and from Terre Haute, and all intermediate points, and to forward freight from Terre Haute up and down the Wabash.

In addition to these, we have the most complete arrangements for transporting packages to and from California and Europe.

Exchange on England, Ireland, and Scotland, for sale, payable at any bank in the kingdom.

Foreign passage tickets; by Grinnell, Minturn & Co.'s line to Liverpool and London, constantly on hand, and for sale at the lowest rates.

Notes, drafts, and bills collected in any of the Eastern or Western cities.

Orders for goods to be returned by Express, sent free. Our rates of charges have been greatly reduced, and the public will find this a safe and expeditious method of transportation.

Indianapolis, June 30, 1852. ADAMS & CO.

Office in Indianapolis in Journal Building, west side Pennsylvania Street.

Office open during business hours.

june30 1y C. WOODWARD, Agent.

The Cheapest Illustrated Paper for the Young.

PRICE ONLY TEN CENTS A YEAR, or nearly three papers for one cent, where 100 copies are taken.

Twenty-six numbers a year, and each number illustrated with from three to seven engravings.

The Youth's Penny Gazette,

A strictly Religious and Moral Paper, is published by the AMERICAN SUNDAY SCHOOL UNION and is designed to furnish the Children and Youth of the United States with reading matter, in a popular form, for the improvement of Mind and Heart.

It is published (not monthly, nor weekly, but) every other week, or twenty-six numbers in a year. It is religious but unsectarian, and the matter is carefully prepared with a view to the habits, character and prospects of American Youth

TERMS OF THE PENNY GAZETTE.

$10 a year, in advance, for 100 copies, to one address. $5 a year, in advance, for 40 copies, to one address. $3 a year, in advance, for 20 copies, to one address. Single subscriptions, 25 cents per year.

TERMS BY MAIL, POSTAGE PAID.

☞ When the postage is paid at the place of mailing, the terms are very low. For $15 remitted, we will send 100 copies of the paper for one year, to one address—we paying postage. For $7 remitted, we will send 40 copies of the paper to one address, for one year—we paying postage. For $3 50 remitted, we will send 20 copies of the paper for one year, to one address—we paying postage. Less than 20 cannot be sent at this cheap rate.

Subscriptions received at the Society's House, No. 146 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.

Feb 16 3w G. S. SCOFIELD, Agent.

TO BUILDERS.

North Western Christian University.

THE Building Committee of the Board of Directors of the North-Western Christiana University, propose contracting for the west wing of the University Building, to be put up on the University grounds in the vicinity of Indianapolis.

Sealed Proposals in detail, with prices affixed for doing the work necessary to the completion of the said Wing, will be received until the 19th day of July next, and may be handed to the undersigned, or to J. T. Cox. Secretary of the Company, at the Book Store of Cox & Mathes, in Indianapolis.

The materials and work to be according to the plan, drawings and specifications prepared by Wm. Tinsley, Architect, which may be seen and examined at his room, on the east side of Pennsylvania street, three doors north of the north-east Diagonal, in Indianapolis. The specifications have been materially changed and modified, so as to reduce the cost of the building.

Proposals for the whole combined, would be preferred; but will be received for the different parts and portions thereof separotely. The whole to be completed and fit for use by the first day of September, 1854.

Payments will be made as the work progresses, at such short periods as may suit the covenience of the Contractors. Bond and security will be required for the performance of the work.

In behalf of the Building Committee:

OVID BUTLER,

President of the Board of Directors.

June 10, 1853. june 22 3w

LITTLE, DRUM & ANDERSONS

WHOLESALE DEALERS IN

STAPLE AND FANCY DRY GOODS, BOOTS, SHOES, HATS, CAPS, STATIONERY, NOTIONS, TRIMMINGS, GROCERIES, HARDWARE, QUEENSWARE, AND GLASSWARE,

North side of Washington Street,

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

WE are receiving Country Produce of all descriptions, and paying the highest market price. Dealers visiting Indianapolis are respectfully invited to call and examine our stock and prices, both for Produce and Merchandise generally. june30 tf

JAMES HALL,

MERCHANT TAILOR,

No. 2. Temperance, Hall, Indianapolis,

Manufactu'ng & Clothing Emporium,

Wholesale and Retail Dealer in Ready Made Clothing, Cloths, Cassimers, Vestings, Trimmings, Trunks, Sachels, Canes, Umbrellas, Hats, Caps, a every description of Gentlemen's Furnishing.

Also:

General Agency for the sale of GRAND AND SUBORDINATE REGALIA, EMBLEMS, COSTUMES, &C., FOR THE ORDERS OF MASONS, ODD FELLOWS, TEMPLE OF HONOR, SON, DAUGHTERS, AND CADETS OF TEMPERANCE. oct27 1y

The American Life and Health Insurance Company.

Office—No. 7, South Third St., Philadelphia.

Officers.

LEONARD JEWELL, President.
JAMES PEACOCK, Treasurer,
JOHN C. SIMS, Sec'y and Actuary.
THOS. S. SMITH, Solicitor
JOHN F. BIRD, FRED. A. FICKARDT, } Medical Examiners.

CHARLES WOODWARD, Indianapolis, Ind., General Agent for the State of Indiana.

THIS Company issues policies at Total Abstinence Rates, Joint stock Rates, and at Mutual Rates, which for $1000 on the life of a person 30 years of age, are as follows:

Age.	Total Abstinence.	Joint Stock.	Mutual
30	$15.40	$19.60	$23.60

A further table of Rates will be furnished at the Office.

The condition in Total Abstinence rates (believed to be the lowest in the Union,) is entire forfeiture upon the departure of the Insured from Total Abstinence in its strictest sense.

Policies at Joint Stock and Mutual rates, contain no condition except as usual in Life Insurance.

HEALTH INSURANCE DEPARTMENT.

All Moneys received from the Insured, for Annual Premiums, after deducting expenses, will be divided among the Sick

The Public have for some time been familiar with the subject of Life and Health Insurance, but it is obvious that too little thoughts has been given to the latter. LIFE Insurance benefits our successors, while HEALTH Insurance directly benefits ourselves. It makes provision for a time of sickness, when the products of a man's industry are cut off, and want unites with Disease to aggravate his distress. It is at this gloomy period, when he is prostrated and helpless, and when despondency would otherwise overwhelm him, that the holder of a Health Insurance Policy will realize its benefits.

RATES, under 50 years of age,

$2,00	per year,	for	$2,00	per week.
3,00	"	"	3,00	"
4,00	"	"	4,00	"
5,00	"	"	5,00	"
6,00	"	"	6,00	"

Over fifty and under sixty.

$2,50	per year,	for	$2,50	per week.
3,75	"	"	3,00	"
5,00	"	"	4,00	"
6,25	"	"	5,00	"
7,50	"	"	6,00	"

When the Fund shall amount to Three Dollars and upwards for every person insured and sufficient to warrant an additional distribution, the weekly allowances will be increased in accordance with the Rules of the Policy.

All the members of a Temple or Division insured at greatly reduced rates.

Applications for Agencies in any of the cities or towns in the State, should be made to the undersigned, post paid, or in person.

As Agent for the above Company, I am prepared to receive applications for Policies at any of the above rates.

CHARLES WOODWARD, Agent,

At ADAMS & CO.'S Express Office.

J. L. MOTHERSHEAD, Medical Examiner.

june 30 '52-1y

Ohio Life Insurance Company,

Capital $100,000.

JOINT STOCK AND MUTUAL,

CINCINNATI.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS.

Wm. Burnet, Jno. N. Ridgway, Chas. Goodman, S. Robert, E. S. Haines, Jno. M. Blair, J. W. Donohue, Eden B. Reeder, Wm. Person.

WM. BURNET, President.

S. W. REEDER, Sec'y J. W. DONOHUE, Vice Pres't

Office in Reeder's Building, Third street, between Almy's and City Bank.

This Company insures Lives at the lowest rates consistent with safety, either upon the Joint Stock or Mutual plan.

In the Joint Stock Department, premium payable quarterly, semi-annually or annually. On the Mutual plan, one-half the premium paid in Cash, the balance by a note bearing six per cent. interest—the interest only payable annually. Persons insuring on the mutual plan, participate in the profits of the Company in that department.

The undersigned having been appointed agent for the above Company, is prepared to fill applications for Life Insurance, on favorable terms.

Any information on the subject and pamphlets explaining the nature and utility of Life Insurance, furnished without charge, at the office of the Agent.

C. WOODWARD, Agent.

Office at Adam's & Co.'s Express Office, Journal Building, Pennsylvania street, Indianapolis, Ind.

june 30, '52-1y.

Railroad City Book Store.

COX & MATHES,

South side of Washington, between Illinois and Meridian streets,

INDIANAPOLIS, INDIANA.

AT wholesale and retail, Standard and Miscellaneous Works, Law, and Medical Books, School Books, Plain and Fancy Stationery, Blank Books, Wall Papers, &c., &c. mar 2

CHEAP WATCHES & JEWELRY.

Good Gold Watches at $24!

WE are now in our new Room No. 1, Palmer House, with a lot of beautiful Watches and Jewelry which we are selling lower than ever heretofore sold in Indianapolis, for instance we sell

Good 18 K Case Gold Lepines at $24.
" 18 K " " Levers at $28.
" Silver Anchor Levers $12 to $18.
" " Cylenders, $9 to $12.
" " Quarter's $6 to $10.

In addition to the above we have a fine assortment of other description of Watches all of which we will sell lower than any other firm dare sell in the place. I have in my employ a very superior Watch Repairer who will always be on on hand to do watch repairing of every description. Mr. Michot has worked in Geneva, Paris, New York and other large cities and has had great experience in his Branch of the business. All Watches warranted for one year, and the money in all cases refunded, provided they do not give entire satisfaction.

feb9 tf E. W. NEFF.

SMALL CHANGE.

THE undersigned is prepared to furnish Merchants and others with three cent pieces from the United States Mint at Philadelphia, free of transportation, in sums of 30, 60, and 90 dollars, upon deposit of Gold or Eastern Exchange. Also cents and half cents, upon payment of frieght on gold to Philadelphia, or on Eastern Exchange free of freight.

C. WOODWARD, Agent,

june 30 Adams & Co.'s Express.

A CHANCE TO MAKE MONEY.

Profitable and honorable Employment!

THE Subscriber is desirous of having an agent in each county and town of the Union. A capital of from $5 to $10 only will be required, and anything like an efficient, energetic man can make from three to five dollars per day; indeed some of the Agents now employed are realizing twice that sum. Every information will be given by addressing, (postage paid) WM. A. KINSLER,

june 15 3w ¶ Box 601, Philadelphia P. O.

THE ILLUSTRATED MAGAZINE OF ART.

THE five numbers of this Magazine which are published, place it at the head of publications of this kind No expense will be spared to make it in every respect worthy of the name, the "Illustrated Magazine of Art. The Engravings which are preparing for the future numbers are in the hands of first-class American and European Artists.

A Series of most interesting Tales will appear in it. "The School of Life," written and Illustrated by ANNA MARY, daughter of William and Mary Howitt, will shortly appear; also, "The Dead Bridal," an historical romance, illustrative of the most interesting period in the history of the Venetian Republic, by JONATHAN FREEKE SLINGSBY, of the Dublin University Magazine; contributions, too, from WILLIAM and MARY HOWITT, PERCY B. ST. JOHN, and other writers of distinction in America and Europe.

The following is a brief outline of the plan of the Magazine:

I. The Historical Department will abound with picturesque representations of the most remarkable events which have occurred in this and other countries; accompanied with interesting anecdotes and details from the pen of the most eminent writers of the day. This department will contain several splendid engravings, designed by the first artists of the world, and engraved in the highest style of modern art.

II. The Men and Women of the Age. This department will consist of beautifully executed portraits of the leading characters of the age, especially of those who figure on the stage of humanity as the world's benefactors. Each portrait will be accompanied by an interesting biographical sketch

III. The Wonders of Natural History, Botany, and other sciences, will be developed in choice Engravings of Beasts, Birds, Fishes, Insects, Forest Trees, Flowers, Geological and Fossil Specimens, &c., with accompanying descriptions.

IV. The Triumphs of Architectural Art will be displayed in exquisitely finished representations of Cathedrals, Churches, Palaces, and other models of ancient and modern Architectural Art.

V. The Works of the Great Masters, selected from the principal Galleries of Art in the World. In general, the portrait of the Master will be given, accompanied with a highly finished engraved copy of his chef d'œuvre.

VI. The Scientific Portions will be rendered highly interesting by the familiar explanations, and the numerous diagrams which will accompany each subject.

VII. Manufactures. The principal manufacturing processes in use will be fully explained by minute details, and an abundance of beautiful engravings.

VIII. Machinery and Inventions will have due attention paid to them, and be described by numerous appropriate engravings.

IX. The Literary Department, independently of the various articles accompanying the illustrations, will comprise original and interesting narratives, contributed by the most popular writers of the day, with numerous illustrations.

In every respect, the "Illustrated Magazine of Art," will be decidedly

SUPERIOR TO ANY MAGAZINE OF THE DAY.

Each Monthly part will contain at least Thirty superb Engravings, four of which will be printed separately, on supefine Plate Paper.

The greatest care will be manifested in every department of production. The Paper will be of the first manufacture, and the Ink supplied from the celebrated Printing Ink Establishment of Messrs. Lawson & Co., of Paris. Six of the monthly portions, when completed, will form a volume which, for interest, originality, value and beauty, will defy competition. It will not only be an interesting family book, but a rich ornament for the drawing-room table, and a pleasant companion in the study.

The parts will appear on the First of every Month at Twenty-five Cents each.

ALEXANDER MONTGOMERY,

may 25 17 Spruce Street, New-York.

SPLENDIDLY ILLUSTRATED WORKS.

THE ALPS, SWITZERLAND, SAVOY AND LOMBARDY.

With the Magazine for June will be ready, Part I., price Twenty-five Cents, of a Magnificent Work to be completed in Twelve Monthly Parts, entitled

THE ALPS, SWITZERLAND, SAVOY AND LOMBARDY, with an account of the most recent Ascents to Mont Blanc, &c. By the Rev. Charles Williams. This work, when completed, will form a large thick Volume, in Imperial Octavo, containing upwards of Three Hundred beautiful Engravings, descriptive of the peculiar Scenery of those most interesting portions of Europe, with the Occupations of the Inhabitants, &c., &c.

Cassell's Natural History.

On the First of July will commence

CASSELL'S NATURAL HISTORY, which for variety, beauty and completeness, will claim to be considered as a first-class work, upon this most interesting subject. The First volume will be devoted to the Feathered Tribe of the Creation and will contain upwards of Three Hundred Engravings, in the first style of Art. The volume will be completed in Twelve Monthly Parts, Imperial Octavo. Price 25 cents each.

History of England.

On the First of July will appear Part I., price 25 cts. of THE ILLUSTRATED HISTORY OF ENGLAND, from the earliest period on record to the present time. Edited by ROBERT FERGUSON, LL. D.

This History, which is intended to form a great National Work, will extend to Four Volumes, Imperial Octavo; each Volume to be completed in Twelve Monthly Parts, price 25 cents each. The Work will comprehend the Political, Civil, and Domestic History of the Nation, and its Progress in Civilization, Literature, Art, &c. It will be profusely Illustrated with Engravings from Designs by GILBERT, PHILLIPPOTEAUX, WILLIAMS, and others. Representations of the most remarkable Events will be worked separately upon Plate Paper. The Portraits will form a complete Gallery, not only of the Monarchs, but of those individuals whose names are prominent in England's History. Also, Antiquities, including Autographs, Buildings, Costume, Furniture, Arms, Coins, Monuments, Manufactures &c., of each Epoch.

History of Hungary.

July First will be published, in one Handsome Volume, Imperial Octavo, price, One Dollar and Twenty-five Cents. in Cloth Boards,

THE ILLUSTRATED HISTORY OF HUNGARY, AND THE MAGYARS, from the Earliest Period to the clos of the late War. By EDWARD LAWRENCE GODKIN. The Volume will be Illustrated with One Hundred highly finished Engravings, including representations of the principal Battles; Portraits of the early Kings, and of the Statesmen and Generals who figured in the War of Independence; Costumes of the Peasantry, &c.; Views of the chief Towns and Fortresses, &c.; with an accurate Description of the Manners and Customs of the People, their Literature, Commerce, Arts, &c.

ALEXANDER MONTGOMERY,

may25 Publisher, 17 Spruce Street, New-York.

MANSION HOUSE,

Cambridge City, Indiana.

J. CUNNINGHAM, Proprietor.

TRAVELLERS

Will find it to their advantage to call and try the accommodation of the MANSION HOUSE.

STAGE OFFICE also in connection with this House.

may 4 6m

INDIANA STATE LIBRARY

TEMPERANCE CHART.

A Weekly Journal:---Devoted to Temperance, Morality, Education, Literature, Useful Arts, Science, General Intelligenc, &c.

J. W. GORDON, M. D., Editor.] ORGAN OF THE GRAND DIVISION OF INDIANA. [JOHN H. OHR, Printer.

VOL. III. INDIANAPOLIS, IND., WEDNESDAY, SEPT. 14, 1853. NO. 12.

THE TEMPERANCE CHART,

IS PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY, BY THE GRAND DIVISION, S. of T. OF INDIANA.

Edited by J. W. Gordon, M. D.

To whom all Communications and Subscriptions must be addressed, post-paid.

Office—in second story of Temperauce Hall Building, Washington St., Indianapolis.

TERMS:

Single copy, one year, ... 75 cts.

☞ In advance in all cases,

TERMS OF ADVERTISING.—Circulation 4000 copies.

One Squre, (12 lines,) for one week,	$0 50
" " for each subsequent insertion,	25
" " for 3 months,	3 00
" " for 6 months,	5 00
" " for 1 year without alteration,	8 00
" " for 1 year, with changes,	12 00

A reduction made on larger advertisements.
Cuts double the above rates.
Advertisements must be handed in by Saturday, of each week, to insure insertion.
Applications for advertising, or for any kind of Printing for the Order, must be made to
J. H. OHR, Indianapolis.

MISCELLANEOUS.

A Man Buried in a Well.

In reading recently an excellent article from the pen of Mrs. Gage, entitled, "A man in a well," we were reminded of a startling incident that occurred in this city a few months since, and that we had made a minute of at the time, with the design of further comment.

We were passing from our office to our residence, and noticing a few people gathered in a yard on Main street, but supposing the cause a matter of ordinary interest, made no stop. A hand from the office soon came in with the startling intelligence that a man was buried in a well. We shall never forget the sensations that crept over us like a freezing chill, and then into the heart, with a choking, almost suffocating force. Twelve feet of sandy earth upon the victim! Hope died within us, and we involuntarly shut our eyes upon the scene which flashed across the mind.—Buried alive! The tale was too horrible, and yet clung like a nightmare to every thought.

The news spread with lightning speed, and on our return, dark masses of people were wedged around the spot. And still the brief but terrible words flashed from lip to lip, and the wildly excited living mass poured into the yard and broke like waves around the dense crowd. We leaned upon the fence and watched them as they came, for we have not the brass to run over men, women and children, when we can accomplish no good by such rudeness. Old and young, the officer and the citizen, the cold-featured land-shark and the laborer—mothers, wives and children, gathered with a startled look. Little was said, but the compressed lip and the eager eye told how much all felt. A son of the buried man was walking the yard in restless agony. It was a scene which we never wish to look upon again.

In the mean time, strong arms were plying the shovels with that energy which ever honors our common humanity on such occasions. The hot sun beat fiercely down, and the sweat rolled from bronzed features, but hundreds of hands were ready to relieve, and every man's soul throbbing in the blade. The yielding sand would often break in, and an audible sigh would stir the silent crowd. Timbers were put in, and the work continued unceasingly. So eager were the frenzied and foolish people to obtain a view of the spot, that there was constant danger of filling up faster than the shovels could throw out, and no efforts could beat them back.

After hours of hard digging, there was a low, yet strangely distinct murmur ran through the crowd, and the dense mass swayed like waves lifted by some magic power. We shall never forget the moment. "He's alive—they hear him speak!" We involuntarily straightened up from the fence where we were leaning, and with a glance heavenward, drew a deep, long breath. "He's alive!", The excitement was still more intense. The son wept afresh as he strode backward and forward across the yard, and we found warm tears falling upon our own hands.

And so the scene continued until the mass gave back and a shout rent the air. "He's out—he's alive!" That excited crowd would have borne that saved man with wild and frantic joy in triumphant procession through the city. He was saved from his living tomb.

One man saved! His family would welcome him as one from the dead. Our thoughts were busy as we wended our way to the office. How ready people are—how happy—to save one life. When danger comes upon a citizen like the swoop of an eagle from a clear sky, all gather as one man to the rescue.

The same people look unmoved upon the footprints of blood which thicken at their very doors. At noonday, a plague stalks before them, dragging its victims to a worse than living tomb. Men have had their vitals eat away by inches, and died in chains, helpless, uncared for. Girded with demons and writhing and frothing in a worse than a demon's hell, men of mind and manhood have thrown out their arms in convulsions, and died at their own firesides with their teeth tearing their own flesh. Their maniac howl came up like the despairing wail of the lost. And was there any gathering to the rescue? Any excited populace eager to save? No! With a passing remark, the corpse of a citizen—a husband and father—was borne to the church-yard, and the marble shields him who was killed by inches.

But one such case?

Father in heaven! many have died thus in Auburn. Since our brief residence, we have seen their blood smoke like an incense of wrath upon the iron track and in the public highway. There was one who wrestled with delirium tremens upon the sidewalk in broad day. He would have lived and died a sober man. But, said he, and the tears coursed in a flood down his bloated cheek, "I must die a drunkard.—There is not a rumseller in the city who will refuse me rum so long as I have money." Poor G——! He was robbed, degraded and killed by the rumsellers of Auburn, and is at rest in his grave. Did his neighbors rally to save him? Was there even a remonstrance against his murder?

We might pursue the record and invoke from the past a spectral train who have died by law in a Christian community.—The followers of Christ even, have passed by on the other side. They have not only held the garments of the murderers, but have themselves cast the stones. And all this time children have gone about sorrowing, and wept in vain. At the desolate home, women has been tortured with a cruelty more refined than hell can boast. Hopes, bread, heart's blood—all have been wrenched out day by day as years have gone slowly by. And did men and women ever gather around that accursed home to save the lost one from the clutches of licensed fiends, or beat them back from their human prey? Never. Thus the innocent and defenceless—the child and the mother—have been robbed of parent, and husband, and bread, and happiness and means for long years, and no shout of indignation has ever gone up from a darkening crowd against the worse than heathenish wrong.

We love humanity better when we see it stretching an eager hand to save a victim from a living tomb. But we turn with a tear from that cold and cruel barbarism which slumbers quietly while citizens and neighbors, with all their hopes of earth and heaven, are slaughtered in open day.—Cayuga Chief.

Condition of the poor in London.

Not far from the spot where we write, within no very great distance of the residence of many of our aristocracy, lies one of those dark and gloomy "courts," which all over London are thronged by the poor. It is not, we believe, worse than hundreds of others, but it has been explored, and to the humanity of those who have visited its dismal chambers, we are indebted for a description of the dwellings, and the daily life of our myriads of swarming population.

The "court" of which we write, Charlotte buildings, off Gray's-inn-lane, contains fifteen houses, and these fifteen houses give, each containing eight rooms, shelter, upon the very lowest calculation, to a population of nearly 1000 persons! The description of one of these houses is the description of all. Will our readers bear with us while we take them through its apartments, as it is described by an eyewitness. We begin with the two rooms upon the ground floor.

In the front room "there are no bedsteads, chairs, or tables, a few ragged clothes are drying before a little fire in the grate, above the mantel are a looking glass about three inches high, and some torn prints of the crucifixion, &c.; in the cupboards, without doors, are pieces of broken crockery; a kind of bed in one corner, with children asleep; the floor rotten in many parts, the walls and ceiling sadly cracked. The rent is 2s. 3d. per week, which is called for every Monday, and must be paid on Wednesday."

We are not told who are the inmates of this chamber, but the room immediately behind it "presents a sad scene of distress—the man, his wife, and some children, earn a living by chopping firewood; the man had been ill and not able to rise for two days; he was lying on a quantity of wood shavings, and was covered with an old black and ragged blanket; his skin did not appear as if it had been washed for weeks; he was very ill, and evidently in a state of fever; his wife was almost equally dirty; "we have no wood to chop," was the expression of the ultimate distress. This room was much dilapidated, and they had suffered greatly during the late severe weather, owing to the broken condition of the windows. The rent 1s. 9d. per week; the window overlooks a back yard, the condition of which was shocking."

These, it will be remembered, are not the haunts of the outcasts of society, who live by plunder. This wretched back room is the hiding place of a miserable couple who, with their children, attempt to earn their bread by a humble, and ill requited, but an honest industry. The expression of his worst distress is, "We have no wood to chop."

"The first floor," continues the writer, both back and front, was crowded with inhabitants. The people acknowledged that fifteen persons slept in the two little rooms last night; the walls were cracked and dirty, and the ceiling constantly falls upon the floor while the inmates are taking their food. One woman said that a part of the cracked hearth-stone above had fallen amongst the children. The rent of the front room is 2s. 2d; back 3s. 9d. Continuing our way up stairs, we found the state of the stair-case and rooms worse and worse. In the front room two pair, when our eyes had become accustomed to the Rembrandtish gloom, we found fifteen persons! Some had been selling onions, &c., in the streets, some begging, one or two were seemingly bricklayers, laborers, and others had been working the carrion heaps in the neighborhood.

The others presented the same dismal picture, with the addition of holes in the roof, through which the winds and rains, and snows, made their way upon the inmates of this wretched tenement. For these attics the rent was the some as for the lower apartments—an anomaly accounted for by the fact that "the landlord removes to the upper rooms those who may be a shilling or so in arrear of rent." The annual sum extorted from these miserable beings for the hire of this one house, amounts to upwards of £40!—a rent infinitely greater, in proportion, than is paid for the noblest palace of the West-End.

It is difficult to realize the appalling truth, that in one small court of this great metropolis, one thousand human beings are at this moment thus existing. Multiply this number by that of the similar receptacles of human misery that surround us, and we may venture to set against all the degradation of human nature that prevails over ten thousand square miles of the most savage district upon earth, the utter abasement of our fellow creatures, which is at the very hour when we write, contained within the limits of the metropolis of great and Christian England.

Let men prate as they will about our progress, we do not believe that scenes like these existed in the olden time. Discomforts there have been—distress, and hard and pinching times, but we do not believe that any generation but our own has ever witnessed so hideous a congregation of squalid, abject, and hopeless destitution as is to be found in these loathsome receptacles, to which our busy civilization drives its cast off and rejected victim to rot.—London Morning Chronicle.

An Active Young Lady.—The present editress of the magazine conducted by the factory girls at Lowell—a Miss Farley—writes to a friend:

"I am now proprietor of the New England Offering. I do all the publishing, editing, canvassing, and as it is bound at my Office I can, in a hurry, help fold, cut covers, stitch, &c. I have a little girl to assist me in the folding, stitching, &c.; the rest, after it comes from the printer's hands, is all my own work. I employ no agents, and depend upon no one for assistance.—My edition is four thousand."

Rusticity is sometimes got rid of in the camp, but never at the court.

The Dealer in Small Talk.

Another class of loquacious nuisances are those who deal in what is denominated small talk: they are of both sexes, and of all conditions of society. They are an impertinent set, constantly prattling about the common-place matters of life, are ever obtruding their nonsense upon the forbearance of their friends, and are prodigal spendthrifts of time. These notorious newsmongers are the pest of the social circle, they do almost as much harm, in an insidious way, to the well-being of society, as the babbler, by their retailing of the petty scandal of the day, and their uncharitable strictures upon the sayings and doings of others. Small talkers revel most at the tea table—a fact for which we do not pretend to account, unless it be that they derive their special inspiration from the beverage thereat dispensed. Births, marriages, and deaths, and love matches, liaisons and divorces, and the thousand peccadilloes their greedy ears drink in from the perturbed stream of life, form the material of their senseless and incessant chatter; and should they perchance find these sources to fail them, their pliant consciences make no scruple in drawing upon their imagination to supply the deficiency. They are not over fastidious at a fabrication, or, as it is sometimes called, a white lie; and they are ingenious in the art of putting a statement hypothetically, in suggesting an illiberal insinuation, or even in placing a palpable truth in an equivocal light, especially if it serve the purposes of personal scandal. The small talkers, may, however, be subdivided into two varieties; the latter class being accustomed to deal homœopathically in the diluted gossip of the day. These exhibit exemplary perseverance in the picking up and purveying of the smallest particles of chit-chat; and as they are usually provident of their stores, and they make a very little go a great way, you may have their second-hand nothings at less than cost.—These are among the insufferable social nuisances; they are both parvenu and plebeian, and are fit subjects for the school for adults.

The Unknown Dead.

A young man who labors in behalf of degraded humanity at the Five Points, in connection with Mr. Pease, gives a sad scene which he witnessed a few days since. Having learned that a human body had been lying unburied for several days in a room in Cow Bay, during the recent hot weather, he went to see about it. In the room where he found the corpse, were living some twenty wretches, white and black. The effluvia that filled the room was most intolerable. The body had been decaying for several days. There it lay, in a corner of the room, a mass of corruption. Near to it were three females, one white and two colored, sleeping the unrefreshing sleep of drunkenness. The others, male and female, black and white, were sitting or lying upon the floor, and so stupefied by rum, noxious vapors, and the intense heat, that when interrogated as to how long the corpse had lain in the room, they could not give an intelligible answer. Stepping carefully over the "living dead," he reached the corpse. It was that of a white woman, apparently about twenty-five years of age. She had doubtless been dead several days, for the form and features were discolored and distorted—so much so, that the body could not be identified. The taste that had been displayed in the dress then upon the body, although much faded, betokened that its now loathsome occupant had not been reared in dens of filth and infamy. The Coroner was notified; an inquest held, and Potter's Field now numbers among its inmates the once, doubtless, loved and loving—Unknown.

Yes, this poor unknown one who came to this loathsome end, was once, no doubt, beloved and tenderly cherished, but in her dying agonies she wrestled alone with death, and stranger hands took charge of the loathsome corpse. What evil demon wrought this awful wreck and ruin which were seen in that room? Rum! And the city authorities license men to create all this misery and wo, and we are told that it would be an illegal abridgment of men's rights to refuse them an opportunity of producing such scenes.—N. York Organ.

We should manage our fortune as we do our health—enjoy it when good, be patient when it is bad, and never apply violent remedies except in an extreme necessity.

Intemperance and Crime.

The chaplain of a House of Correction in England in making a recent report, gives extracts from reports of former years, as well as the results of later observation, as follows:

"The Chaplain makes it his business to converse with every person sent into the jail under a charge of felony, with a view to ascertain, as far as possible, some of the predominant causes of the commission of crime: and, from the accounts given by those unfortunate people, it would seem that intoxication is the great vice which most frequently leads its victim into the commission of more serious wickedness." (Report for 1825.)

"The chief cause which leads to the commission of criminal offences the Chaplain still believes to be the ale-houses and the beer-shops. They are answerable, directly or indirectly, for nearly three-fourths of the imputed felons tried within the last year." (Report for 1852.)

"Eighteen cases of murder and manslaughter, in one year, arising solely in the propensity to, and facilities for, the abuse of intoxicating liquors! Were any new cause of crime, prevalent as the one I speak of, suddenly to appear among us, the energies of the whole community would be, forthwith, directed to its suppression: but we have become familiar with the features of this old Destroyer; and, as if crime and ruin were not broadly written upon them, continue insensible to their real hideousness." (Report for 1838.)

Language similar to that which I have now quoted from my Reports of fifteen, twenty, and twenty-eight years ago, must still be used by those whose duty it is to lay bare the sources and provocations of crime. Whether taken in beer-houses, ale-houses, gin-shops, "hush-shops," dancing-rooms, or singing-rooms, DRINK is still the great Destroyer, and DRUNKENNESS still the NATIONAL SIN. I may be told that the general consumption of intoxicating liquor has diminished. If such be the fact, it is owing to the increased good sense of a numerous class who have discovered that liquor is far from being one of the necessaries of life—and may become its greatest curse. The assizes, sessions, and police reports bring, every day, proofs the most appalling, that the influence of drink, if restrained amongst the intelligent and moral, is concentrated upon the ignorant and heathenish. The recent act for the more effectual punishment of the brutalized savages convicted of assaults on woman, intimates, too plainly, the increased intemperance in which such assaults originate. But few persons can form anything like a true estimate of the horrors associated with the English slavery, which though we might ingeniously try to disguise it, by calling it a voluntary servitude, is productive of far more actual misery then—and quite as much disgrace as the 'involuntary servitude,' for which, as it exists in another hemisphere, our sympathy and indignation have been so forcibly and eloquently roused.

Though a jail Chaplain has fresh instances brought before him, day by day, of the degradation and sin caused by drunkenness, those instances serve chiefly to suggest and illustrate the dreadful extent to which the drunkard inflicts sorrow and pain—nay, wounds and death—without due investigation into his conduct being instituted. It is deplorable to see the hold which drink possesses on the very nature of the ignorant laborer, and his pitiable helplessness under the tyranny.—He feels that he cannot shake it off, himself; but he would be glad of liberation by some means which should not demand an impossible exercise of self-denial. "I wish beer was ten shillings a quart," is an exclamation I have often heard from men who felt the humiliating consciousness that nothing but a prohibitory price, or some other cause independent of their own sense and resolution, could restrain their ruinous propensity! This feeling—the wish that "something might be done" to make drunkenness more difficult, more impracticable—was strongly, instructively manifested, a few week ago, in the unfeigned earnestness with which our prisoners, to the number of 232, signed a petition to the House of Commons, praying for "such measures as will, on the one hand, lead to the entire suppression of the beer-house cure, and, on the other, promote whatever may hold out the prospect of wholesome and rational amusement for the working population of the kingdon."

LIBRARY INDIANAPOLIS

TEMPERANCE CHART.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.
WM. HANNAMAN, C. E. BABB,
JAMES HALL, R. T. BROWN,
JOHN B. ABBETT.

WEDNESDAY, SEPT. 14, 1853.

☞ The Fifth Annual Session of the Grand Union of the Daughters of Temperance of the State of Indiana will commence in the Hall of the Temple of Honor, in the city of Indianapolis, on Wednesday, October 28, 1853, at 3 o'clock P. M.

R. HINDS, G. P. S.
E. RICHMOND, G. S. S.

THE WASHINGTON MONUMENT.—The Board of Managers of the "National Monument Society," have issued a circular requesting those appointed to take ballots of the voters at the elections in the different States next month, to put up boxes near the polls, so that any, who may wish to do so, may deposit contributions for continuing the building of the Washington Monument; and making an appeal to the liberality of our citizens. They say that a small contribution from each voter throughout the Union would be sufficient to finish the monument. A similar attempt at the last presidential election resulted as favorably as could be expected. The Monument is now one hundred and thirty-six feet high.

DRUNKENNESS A DISEASE.—A writer in the Cincinnati Gazette, in presenting some features which a temperance law should contain, gives the following as the fifth, and then follows with the remark below:

"5th, ASYLUMS FOR DRUNKARDS to be established by law, and all common drunkards to be sent and kept there under medical treatment till cured."

The fifth provision is "founded on the well-known fact, that habitual drinking is often a disease for which a drunkard is not accountable, and which is like lunacy, curable if taken in time. There is the same need for a Drunkard's Asylum that there is of one for lunatics. It is one which humanity demands. and so long as those unfortunate beings exist, and so long as they shall be the cause of suffering to unhappy families, the State is under obligation to furnish this relief to the diseased and the suffering."

☞ An attack was made a short time since, on Mr. Hall, late Postmaster at Cincinnati, in the street in that city, by a Dr. Ames, a resident there, which resulted so seriously that the life of Mr. Hall is despaired of. First a sword cane and then a pistol was used by the assailant, wounding Mr. H. in several places, and finally lodging a ball in his side which penetrated the liver, and cannot probably be extracted. Cincinnati has recently been the scene of several personal assaults, besides some other disgraceful proceedings.

The most important item in all that chain which secures good order in a city, is that hook at the end, an honest, watchful, and efficient police. That we are afraid is lacking to some extent in Cincinnati.

☞ The use of steam power in carrying on farm labor is getting to be quite common in England. The steam plough has been used with the most perfect success, and it is believed by those who have tested the matter pretty well, that the use of steam engines for agricultural operations will soon be general, and that the advantages of it will be very great.

☞ The friends of Temperance in Madison are making arrangements for the reception of delegates to the Convention, and taking active measures to secure speakers, &c.

The first lover is kept a long time—when a second is not taken.

The Past and the Present.

The unexampled change which has taken place in this country within the recollection of comparatively young men, in regard to the use of ardent spirits, considering the insensibility of the public mind on that subject when the reform begun, and the deep hold the system of making, selling, and drinking liquor, had upon society, is surely nothing less than miraculous. The pecuniary interests involved in the traffic, which embraced one of the most powerful stimulants to action known to man; the already formed and inveterately confirmed appetite existing among a large class of our people, and the tendency in that direction of the habits of the more youthful portion of the community; the deep-rooted habits of thinking among all classes in relation to the whole subject, and the assistance rendered to all these by that peculiar trait of the American character, a disposition to cast off restraint, and indulge in an unlimited freedom, presented a series of obstacles in the way of this reform which at its commencement, seemed utterly insurmountable.

But what has been accomplished?

Who that was not an eye-witness of the facts could have any conception of the real condition of things before this reform commenced? Thick darkness, like that of Egypt, had settled down upon the people, with only here and there a single gospel ray penetrating the dismal gloom. The grim tyrant held possession of almost every nook and corner of the country. The flood-gates of evil seemed let loose, and intemperance deluged the land. In many, many neighborhoods, morality lay helpless, mourning the triumph of vice; and the victory of the exulting monster over all that was fair and lovely seemed complete.

This is no fancy picture. Many men not now forty years of age, well remember the reality.

Though a few good men, enlightened Christian men, who bore well that worthy name, were doing what such men will always do, trying to save those who could be saved among their more immediate acquaintances, yet if they saved a few individuals, there was nothing done to check the general current of the evil.

Though in many a private dwelling, prayers were going up from almost broken hearts that some dear friend might be saved, and as the fearful probabilities were balanced, amid the agony of those thoughts some plan might be half formed which for a moment would encourage a hope, yet that plan would soon be given up, and the heart could only fall back upon that strength which don't belong to earth. The grief of those hearts was never known to any beyond the family circle. No influence was borne out upon the air, passing from mind to mind, bringing them into union, and calling out stout hearts and firm nerves to act in behalf of those who had been robbed of their dearest hopes by the hands of heartless avarice. True, in such places in many instances, sprung up the germ which years afterwards brought forth its legitimate fruit in the most bitter and determined opposition to the liquor business, but it was not seen then.

An insensibility like the sleep of death had taken possession of the community.—The business of making, selling, and drinking ardent spirits, was carried on by those engaged in it, without the fear of God or man before their eyes. The avaricious money gatherer still took the price of the bread of those who had already been reduced to beggary by his cunning artifices. The poor besotted victim of a depraved appetite still went to receive his draught of poison which was daily bringing him nearer and nearer the grave. The man who helped make our laws, still continued to buy and hand it out for electioneering purposes, and tell the people how much he loved them, and what pleasure it gave him to drink with them. The man who delighted in an occasional revel, and who was determined not to have his liberty abridged, grasped the hand of the politician, thought he was a good fellow, took a drink of his liquor and wanted to see him elected. The farmer who was not in the regular habit of drinking, provided it for use upon all extra occasions, brought it among his workmen and children, drank of it himself, and encouraged them to do the same. All were invited, all were urged, and nearly every body drank.

The evil seemed to be interwoven with every mesh and fibre of society. Its influence was nearly the same every where, and men acted and spoke as if they thought this state of things was to continue forever.

Matters continued without much apparent change till some time after 1830. But a good work had commenced. Good men had begun to sow the seeds of reform, in various ways. Plans were formed for the purpose of accomplishing something. Dr. Beecher had delivered a series of lectures on the subject we believe as early as 1826. Others followed in various parts of the country. Temperance societies began to be formed, more particularly for the purpose of saving the young. The public mind began to be agitated. Every good thought on the subject was fostered, and the opposition to intemperance wherever it could be found, was brought out and organized. But for a good many years, the reform seemed to make but little progress, from the fact that those who felt the most and were willing to do all they could, were women and children, who were controlled by their husbands, fathers, and brothers, in a great many cases, so that they did not even dare to show their sympathy.

The moral portion of the community labored on with various degrees of success, till 1841, when the Washingtonian movement began, and its influence spread rapidly over the country. The inebriate saw an opportunity of breaking his fetters, and at once obstacles that had been piled mountain high, in the way of the advancing tide, now gave way, and the stream burst forth, gathering strength and weight from what had before obstructed its progress, and being increased from thousands of sources hitherto altogether concealed.—From that time to the present there has probably not been a single year that the cause of temperance has not made a real advance. Though the Washingtonian enterprise itself seemed to fail, the real hostility to the liquor business has gone on increasing in strength, extent and permanency up to this day. That movement found a well-formed public sentiment ready to meet it, and upon which it could fall back as it faltered, and with what sound materials it furnished could take up the work and go on. These sound materials were, to a considerable extent, from the families of those who had reformed, where a bitter hatred of the evil had been cherished from the time a thought had sprung up in their young minds. From all these sources, embracing in every part of the country the influence of thousands of men who have been intemperate, a temperance sentiment has been formed which is loosening the death grasp of this monster upon society. Instead of merely hoping that a single friend may be reformed or a few individuals be saved, we can now look forward with confidence to the time when the temptation itself will be removed. As we look at the past, how extraordiary seems the simple record of facts which is daily going in our temperance papers. We can hardly believe it possible, when we learn that there is scarcely a State in the Union where there is not a strong party, well organized, demanding, with a good hope of success, an entire and unqualified prohibition of the sale of intoxicating drink, and that in a number of States this has already been accomplished. Yet such is the fact; and temperance men look forward to the time, not far distant, as they believe, when a strong prohibitory law will exist in every State in the Union.

May we not say that such a change seems like the result of miracle?

☞ At a late Maine law meeting in Cincinnati, at the close of the principal address, one of the anties mounted the stand to reply. This occasioned some disturbance, which resulted in driving him from the ground. The meeting was afterwards rudely interfered with, and an attempt made to break it up by the anti-temperance men, among the rest an officer of one of the courts, who was drunk, but he was finally removed, and the watchmen succeeded in restoring order.

☞ Near two hundred thousand dollars have been contributed in various parts of the country, for the relief of New Orleans, more than one half of it in the North.

The Chinese Rebellion.

There is a good deal of speculation just now as to the moral character and religious faith of the Chinese insurgents, and it is probably difficult to ascertain exactly the truth on the subject. It is certain, however, that they have the Bible and use its instructions. They have published a book containing the ten commandments, with comments, and also all the principal precepts of Christianity, and they are very particular to enforce their observance.—But they seem to have an imperfect knowledge of the Christian system as a whole, and the spiritual results growing out of a full reception of, and submission to all its doctrines seem almost unknown among them. They have also a good deal of superstition and fanaticism mixed up with their proceedings.

"Many of the insurgents claim to be Protestants, when they are conversing with the English, and the whole aspect of their religion shows that it had a Protestant origin. Whether true religion will be increased by this accession is doubtful.—Should the insurgents be put down, there would be such a jealousy created against the Protestant religion, among the Imperialists, that missionaries would probably be driven from the country, and commercial relations with the Protestant powers avoided. The French residents in China, declare that the whole rebellion is got up expressly by the Protestants, (English and Americans), to assist their trade, and that, if successful, it will open China particularly to that religion."

The truth in regard to the whole matter would seem to be that aided by the light of Revelation they have partly come out from the darkness of heathenism, but that the influence of Christianity among them is still limited and partial.

The following is said to be a history of their origin:

"Their chief, Hung-Sin-tsinem, who is styled T'ai-p'ing Wang or Prince of Peace, is a native of one of the Canton provinces. He came to the house of a Christian Missionary in Canton, in 1846, to receive instruction in the principles of the Christian religion. His mind had been led to perceive the truth of the Christian doctrines from a tract which had fallen into his hands. He was a small man of good appearance and address, and advanced in Chinese literature, but otherwise nothing remarkable. He continued with the missionary some months and acquired a knowledge of the Bible and its doctrines. He requested baptism, but it was refused on the ground of want of evidence of personal faith and repentance.

"It is supposed that this person taught some others what he had learned, and that they commenced quite a reformation in the belief of the Chinese of some of the Southern provinces. When Government began to persecute them, they connected themselves with the robbers in these provinces and became their leaders from their superior knowledge, and soon embraced the idea of overturning the Government."

By late arrivals it seems the "patriot army," as they are called, is carrying all before it.

ADVANTAGES OF THE STEAMBOAT LAW.—A correspondent of the Scientific American says:

If you will look at the facts in the case, taking for example the Mississippi river and all its tributaries, I believe you will find from the 1st of January, when the law took effect, to this time, there has not been a passenger killed, or even an injury to one, upon all these waters, whilst in the seven months of 1852, corresponding to these, there were over 500 persons killed. Taking the explosions and accidents elsewhere in the United States for the same period, they scarcely amount to anything in comparison with the loss before.

If such benefits attend the steamboat law, perhaps a railroad law, equally as stringent, would have as good an effect.

THE YELLOW FEVER AT THE SOUTH.—New Oreleans, Sept. 3.—The total number of interments yesterday was 133, of which 110 were deaths of yellow fever.

Richard Hagan, a well known citizen, died Thursday.

The deaths at Mobile yesterday were forty-three, of which thirty-seven were of yellow fever, showing a large increase.

A letter from Natchez says there is not over four hundred people in that city, and that the deaths of yellow fever were ranging from thirteen to fifteen daily.

MUSKETOES.—From notices in our exchanges, it seems that this little tormentor is more troublesome this year, in many parts of the country, than it has ever been known. The same thing here has been a matter of common remark among our acquaintances for several weeks past.

Correspondence.

For the Temperance Chart.

DR. J. W. GORDON:—DEAR BROTHER:—Through the kindness of a friend, I have been furnished with a copy of the Chart for most of the time since my removal to this city, and have kept myself well posted up in regard to the movements in the cause of temperance, both by its friends in the country at large, and by the Legislature; and I assure you I have not been an indifferent spectator. Having been engaged for more than two years in sowing seed in the productive soil of Indiana, I was anxious to see what would be the product. I am too old a soldier in this warfare—too well acquainted with the monster, Mamman, and his crafty devices to suppose he would yield the field, and give up his favorite scheme, the Liquor Traffic, without trying every subterfuge and species of deceptive policy that could be concocted. Compromise, modification, and amendment are the watchwords of a certain class of political demagogues, who find themselves placed in positions by the people, where responsibility has to be taken, and decided action had, or a game at fraud and prevarication played off upon the people which will look as much like friendship and fairness towards our cause as possible, yet to be so far the other way as to satisfy our enemies. This game I find was played off upon you by your last Legislature, in which my old friend, Robert Dale Owen, was chief fugleman—very good hand at like "tricks."

But the main question recurs upon every turn of the wheel—"Will Indiana ever throw off the liquor traffic effectually, by adopting the Maine Liquor Law, or one of equal force?" I have surveyed the ground carefully, and you know that I have, at a considerable cost to myself, in toil and sweat, learned the character of the people—the lights and shades—odds and ends of the whole State, on this subject, and do not "reckon" or "guess" wholly at random, when I give you my judgment and convictions on the subject. This I will give you for what it is worth, and in few words: it is as follows:

If the friends of the Temperance Reform—of humanity and true religion—will but stand firm, one and undivided, in this great reform, they are as sure to succeed as the persevering effort is made.—Nothing is able to withstand the force of the popular will, if it is properly embodied and skilfully managed.

But with a persevering and laborious effort, much will depend upon the wisdom and adroitness of the movers in the enterprize. Two or three leading features in the line of policy to be pursued should never be lost sight of.

1st. Never allow the question to be removed from the eye and action of the people, in a political point of view, until all that is desired is obtained by legislative enactment. To keep this up in such a way as to force every man to act, and therefore to think and decide upon his action, it would be good policy to ask the legislature to publish the Maine Liquor Law, or one as good, and allow the people to decide by a vote, whether they desire such a law enacted in the State or not. If it is decided in its favor, the legislature will be instructed on the subject, and the responsibility will rest with the people who give the vote. This course will possess one or two favorable features. 1. It will keep up the question a long time before the people, and in such a form that it will be impossible to get rid of it. 2. It will provide a sure basis on which to sustain such a law after it is brought into existence. 3. It will train up a whole army of young voters, made ready for duty, by all the temperance movements that will be kept alive on the continued excitement on the subject.

2nd. The next fundamental point will be, "make hay while the sun shines"—to cultivate the soil well while these questions are passing the fearful ordeal of the popular will. While this is in progress, let every man who can slay the big timber be in the service of the cause, in the thickest of the fight. Let those who wield less heavy tools cut down the green saplings, and let all the rest of our forces pick brush, roll logs, grub, and clear away chips, so that the whole moral field be well cleared and cultivated. If success is ever realized, it will be by a long and severely fought battle. But is the cause to be given up because it will cost long and vigorous efforts? No! a thousand times, No! Then let every dollar and every appliance be put vigorously to work and kept steadily and patiently at it, satisfied with nothing less than a complete victory. This will insure it.

3d. Another point of paramount importance is to sustain the law when you get it. Unless there be a most thorough and universal training, drilling, and educating of the public mind on the subject, there will be a failure, and consequent disaster, which would throw you back for ten or twenty years, and roll your whole State as a stumbling block in the way of others that would like to travel in the same road. Indeed I have had more fears on this than any other point. There is such a peace-loving propensity in the mind of the masses, that "let every man mind his own business,"—"Don't like to interfere with my neighbors," that degenerates into a tolerance of vice and violations of law, which every good citizen is bound to maintain, that there is danger on this score.—To renovate and prepare the public mind on this subject will require several years' constant training before it will be properly awake and on its guard. The watchword must be Onward.

It was to disseminate such sentiments as would result in this course of policy that my whole energies were directed, while laboring in this Reform in your State; and I hope that I shall live to see the diadem of triumphant principles well adjusted upon the brow of Old Hoosier, and her bosom filled with righteousness and peace!

When I first entered the State, in 1845, it was as an agent of the American Colonization Society. I traveled and lectured throughout the State, and encountered, in the beginning, the most bitter opposition from a very large majority of the people. But by persevering in my efforts, publishing a cheap colonization paper, and circulating these in every part of the country, giving truth a voice in the ear of reason, I had the satisfaction to see my cause so far upon the vantage ground before I gave it up, as to promise ultimate success.—Having engaged a successor in this cause, I committed it to his hands, and have been gratified to see it since enjoying high legislative favor. I then enlisted into the Temperance Reform, and with the press again to aid me, I both traveled and edited the "Family Visitor," for two years, taxing my powers, both physical and mental, to the highest degree, regardless of cost to mind, body, or pocket, so that success crowned my object—the triumph of the great Temperance Reform.

After retiring from the battle-field, pretty badly worsted in health and finances—paying the printer for arrearages to the tune of two hundred and fifty dollars, for the public good, after he had generously thrown off nearly as much more, I now look back upon my work, and those entrusted with its care, with the deepest interest. Shall we lose our labor? If we do we shall have lost much, and our country a thousand times more. If we gain our object, though at years of toil yet to come, and much of our money, we shall be a thousand times rewarded for all, and shall with others, equally interested, "rejoice evermore."

Then, Doctor, as one of my old workfellows, and a tall captain in the service, let me exhort you to double diligence—let your motto be, "No quarter to the enemy,"—"Don't give up the ship."

As ever, yours,

B. T. KAVANAUGH.

St. Louis, Mo., Sept. 1, 1853.

For the Temperance Chart.

The Last Days of a Respectable Rumseller.

BY HOWARD DURHAM.

My journey of life is not yet very long, but short as it is, in looking back over something like twenty years, with which my memory is familiar, I recall some very dark scenes. My father was a drunkard when I was a boy, and there are scenes in the history of our family that might furnish material for a volume, but over these I would rather leave the vail of oblivion.

I propose calling up a scene to which I was an eyewitness in the city of Sandusky, when the cholera was raging there some four years ago. The city was almost desolate. With such fearful rapidity did the plague spread that the citizens rushed en masse from the city, leaving in many instances their dying friends behind them. The fashionable hotels were empty, and some of them without their conductors—the homes of the wealthy were forsaken, and a fearful gloom hung over the whole scene. From one end of the broad streets to the other, scarce a person was to be seen, save now and then some pale individual hurrying on with a coffin, or on some errand to the repositories of medicine. The syren of pleasure had fled aghast, and the demon of woe sate sullenly upon his throne, marking for his victims both old and young, rich and poor, the laborer and the sons and daughters of "elegant leisure." From wretched hovels and marbled edifices the cry of "Help! Help!" had rung out in weird tones on the midnight air; but one after another their voices were hushed by the dread destroyer, and as their bodies were removed, the stillness of death closed the scene.—The physicians, with but one or two exceptions, fled, and until others arrived from neighboring cities, there were none, except in few instances, to administer the little relief that seemed available.

Before my arrival the Destroyer had done his principal work, and I spent my time principally in surveying the general ruin. In the hospital, or the long rows of rudely constructed beds, lay the last of his victims. There lay the aged man and the form that had been found in the vigor of its strength—the youth whose vision rested in maturity a few steps in advance, and "the dying boy." Oh, it was sad to find childhood in a place like this. To see the little bony arms tossing madly in the poisoned air, and the eye, a little while before so bright with the sunshine of hope and love, rolling demoniacally beneath a wealth of golden hair, made my heart ache as it never ached before.—The victims had but little of the human in tbeir appearance. With a little more strength their groans and skeleton forms, their wild eyes staring upon the stranger, would have made the scene seem like what we have pictured in fancy of the wretchedness of the world of woe. Love, hope, and every sublime attribute of the soul were lost in the maniac wreck of humanity. I yet see them in my dreams, and start from my slumbers, as their ghastly eyes look in through the mist of my bewildered fancy. I wake, glad of having rid myself of the horrible scene even in my dreams.

With a friend I visited the mansion of one who had a little while before kept one of the fashionable hotels. The house was elegantly furnished; and in every way wore an air of luxury above the average. In the first room lay the wife and mother in a far-gone stage of the prevailing epidemic. She was waited on by two young children, one of them a bright-eyed boy of some twelve years, and the other a little girl. The older sons and daughters had fled, leaving these little creatures behind to shake hands as it were, and hold familiar converse with death. There lay the agonizing mother, a tender light seeming to gleam from her despairing eye upon her heroic little ones, who walked amid the ruin, like angels of mercy, sustained by Him who alone can sustain those whom he will.

But in the next room there was a more terrible sight. There lay on his bed the father and husband in the delirium tremens. He would fancy the room filled with demons, and implore us piteousiy to keep them from devouring him; and the next moment would go off into such ravings as defy the pen in description. He was one of the "fashionable" rum-sellers. For some years he had kept a "genteel" hotel, and hissed at any who talked of innovations upon his "respectable business." Who will say that the Maine law would not have been a world of benefit to him? And will it not be to all such. He had reached a point when we found him at which his "respectable" liquor-selling had been disrobed of its charms, and its effects stared out in the ghastly hideousness of reality.

The Maine law is the only redemption for the world from the ruin of intemperance. It must have come from God.—Every other law has failed in accomplishing the object sought, but this removes the temptation, and the possibility of going down to a drunkard's grave and a drunkard's eternity. Would that a host of our genteel hotel-keepers could have stood by me and seen the last acts in the life-drama of one of their fraternity in the case mentioned above—a scene that was more terrible than those over which the epidemic that had desolated the city presided. It was doubly horrible, for over that wreck of mind there was no ray of hope for the future.

For the Temperance Chart.

How Long?

BY M. LOUISA CHITWOOD.

How long shall it be, oh! how long? How long shall the mournful dirge of sorrow thrill up from the great harp of the universe? How long shall the strong man wrestle with temptation, and at last sink below the current? How long shall the innocent suffer, the strong oppress, while, like the roar of mighty waters, goes up the wail of desolated hearts to the white throne of pity. How often have we asked ourself these questions and listened earnestly for an answer. Then we have doubted, and feared, and grown weary; but should we? Oh no, no; for not the shadow of a sigh fades away from the mirror of eternity. Take courage, weary and desolate, "ye shall be comforted."—The human heart, what an insoluble enigma! sometimes full of music and sweet voices—sometimes a broken harp sounding weird memories—sometimes too dark and fearful to examine. The successful hypocrite is of all persons most to be pitied. We may mingle with the gay and fashionable; we may laugh and jest and be envied by all; we may deceive the whole world, but we cannot deceive ourself—we cannot forget when we would fain drink deep of oblivion. You can not forget, rumseller, it is all in vain; unconsciously you turn over the pages of life's book and read—ah, the embellishments were purchased at great cost—the writings burn your heart—your heart! Yes, you have one, and in it is at least one vulnerable spot, you can not deaden it entirely—you need not try. At times how it speaks! at times you dream over the joys of innocent childhood—you quell it—you go out upon the world's field a living lie—that smile, that haughty bearing, that scorning lip, is all practice. Oh, the drapery of flowers above a ruin—the rainbow bridge over a precipice. How long—not for ever, brave and strong ones, not forever dear Apostles of Philanthropy. Be not weary, listen not to the voice of croakers, listen not to your own heart when it faints,—labor constant, untiring vigilance, unflinching tenacity to the right will do every thing. Let each one do his part and all will be well. The white banner will wave triumphantly over the land of Washington.

For the Chart.

BRO. GORDON:—Pleasant View Division, No. 187, at her weekly meeting, Aug. 20, 1853, received a communication and gift of a Bible from the Pleasant View Union, D. of T., which supplies the place of our Bible destroyed when our Hall was burnt October last, which was a gift from the same Union, presented August 25, 1852. As in consequence of the removal of so many of their members they were compelled to disband, and the dissolution took place immediately after sending this last gift and communication, the Division could not respond to them only in their individual capacity, and therefore appointed me to tender them our grateful acknowledgements through the Chart.

In presenting the book they ask us to receive and study its precepts.

We say to them that we cordially accept the gift, and receive it as a renewed declaration of their unwavering faith in the final trinmph of the cause of temperance, that faith being based upon the contents of the volume they have presented.

In accepting the gift, dear sisters, we do not receive it as merely supplying the pecuniary loss, but again mutually pledging ourselves to its binding demands, as Christians and philanthropists. That you may more fully perceive that we are not unmindful of its holy requirements we will refer you to some of its precepts, the observance of which gives our hope of success, for success is sure where God is its foundation.—Rom. 14: 21—1st Cor. 8: 13—1st Thes. 5: 23—James 1: 27.

Finally D. of T., from the good reputation you individually possess, and the firmness you exhibited in your organization, we hesitate not to express our belief that although you act no longer in an organized capacity, you will, wherever your lot may be cast ever be found true to those principles we now again pledge ourselves to observe.

HEMAN KEELER,
For Pleasant View Division.

For the Chart.

Sabbath Temperance Meetings.

MR. EDITOR:—In the last number of the Chart, I noticed a report of a meeting, held upon the Sabbath, which continued through the day, and at which the subject of temperance generally was discoursed upon, and a speech made in favor of the Maine law. Now, as I learn that similar movements are becoming tolerably common, I would here, with all due respect, start the inquiry, for the consideration of the friends of Christianity who may countenance such meetings, whether a discussion of the subject of temperance in all its political aspects, kept up a considerable part of the day, under such circumstances, is in accordance with the original design of the institution of the Sabbath? Will no injury be done to the true interests of society, or will it in the end advance the cause of temperance? I hope all concerned will not fail to answer these inquiries, to themselves at least. S.

A NEW SCHEME TO COLONIZE LIBERIA.—A COMMUNICATION which appears in the New York Evening Post, signed Lewis H. Putnam, states that a plan has been formed for the settlement of thirty-one rural districts in the territory of the republic of Liberia, by the thirty-one states of the American Union. It is proposed to settle three hundred families in each district, each family having a farm of its own, making in all, an aggregate of nine thousand three hundred farms, and about forty-six thousand five hundred inhabitants. The proposal already made is that each state shall undertake the settlement of one of these districts, and for this purpose the executive of such state shall appoint a board of commissioners to supply every family of emigrants with the means of earning its support in compliance with the principles embodied in the plan. The Legislature of Virginia has already appropriated two hundred thousand dollars for colonization, and the several states of the Union are now asked to co-operate in the great work. Twenty-five thousand dollars remitted to the Government of Liberia will enable it to organize a board of commissioners to begin the work of supplying emigrants with farms, without any reference to the place of their nativity, but simply as citizens of the republic. An experiment has already been made by the New York Colonization Society and the Liberia Agricultural Association to establish sixty farms on a plan similar to the above, and with perfect success.

Last Friday afternoon, as we were walking up Walnut-street, we passed, when just opposite the United States Hotel, a fellow of curious appearance. He was, apparently, thirty years of age, and, from his reeling gait, was quite full of liquor. His roundabout and pantaloons were tattered, and plastered on every inch of available territory. On both hands he had several fingers bleeding, his chin and both cheeks were gashed, his nose dripped globules of blood, and both ears were slit and bruised; his two eyes were badly bunged up, and his lips were cracked and bleeding. Such a human being in such a condition, we never before saw, and we never again wish to see. He staggered along as well as he knew how, and that how was poorly enough, while people on both sides of the street stopped to gaze; some to pity, but most to sneer and laugh.—Verily, liquor is a fiend, and the fruits of drinking it are bitterness and disgrace.

Western Christian Advocate.

EASTERN MAIL.—Dr. Murphy, one of the special mail-agents, has been recently to Cleveland and Indianapolis for the purpose of ascertaining the practicability of bringing the Eastern mail by the route. He returned on Saturday and brought with him a portion of the Eastern mail. We received thus our New York exchanges 24 hours sooner than by the Cincinnati route. We understand that Dr. M. will immediately bring this route to the notice of the Postmaster General.—Lou. Journal.

We are sometimes less unhappy in being deceived by those we love than in being undeceived by them.

To Printers.

The Committee of Publication for the "Temperance Chart," will receive sealed proposals, until October 25, 1853, for the printing of said paper, including the paper and the delivery of the sheets folded, to the Editor, at his office in Indianapolis. The proposals to state the price of paper, and rate of composition and press work, with a sample of the quality of the paper to be used.

WM. HANNAMAN.
JAMES HALL.
C. E. BABB.
R. T. BROWN.
August, 1853. J. B. ABBETT.

Notice.

The Grand Section of C. of T., of Indiana, will hold its Sixth Annual Session, in Temperance Hall, Indianapolis, commencing on Monday, October 24th, at 1½ o'clock, P. M. As there is much business of importance to transact, representatives will please be punctual in attending.

Sections will please forward their quarterly returns to the G. S. before the 20th of October, or they may loose their charters. HENRY OHR, G. S. of C. of T.

Indianapolis, August 17th, 1853.

Notice.

The Eighth Annual Session of the Grand Division of the Sons of Temperance of the State of Indiana, will commence in Temperance Hall in the City of Indianapolis, on Tuesday, October 25, 1853, at 6 o'clock P. M. P. S. SAGE, G. W. P.

C. WOODWARD, G. S.

August 1, 1853.

$25 Premium.

The undersigned Committee on the state of the Order of the Grand Section of Cadets of Temperance of Indiana, offer the above premium for the most acceptable Initiatory ceremony for Cadets of Temperance. Competitors for the same to be members of some Temperance organization.

All manuscripts to be forwarded to Henry Ohr, G. S., on or before the 20th day of October next.

THEOPHILUS ROBINSON,
H. C. NEWCOMB, } Com.
HENRY OHR,

Indianapolis, Aug. 6th, 1853.

Torchlight and Indiana Cadet please copy.

Call for a State Temperance Convention.

A State Temperance Convention will be held at Madison, Jefferson county, Indiana, beginning on the 28th of September next, and continuing as long as it may determine.

JOHN A. MCCLUNG,
WM. WILSON,
JOHN C. STEELE,
JOHN O'KANE,
WILLIAM HANNAMAN,
CHARLES WOODWARD,
J. W. GORDON, } State Central Committee.

☞ We have two Certificates of Scholarships in the "Commercial College of Indianapolis," which we will dispose of—any one wishing to attend this institution will do well to give us a call at the Chart office.

CONSTITUTION AND BY-LAWS,

WE are still prepared to print Constitution and By-Laws, where the alterations are few from the copy recommended by the Grand Division, at the following rates:

100 copies, (or less) $5 00
200 " 8 00
300 " 10 00

We will pay the postage on all ordered from us.

☞ All orders accompanied by the cash, will be promptly attended to.

Address, JOHN H. OHR,
Indianapolis, Indiana.

Mechanics, Inventors, & Manufacturers.

$450. IN SPLENDID PRIZES. $450.

VOLUME IX. of the SCIENTIFIC AMERICAN commences on the 17th of September. It is chiefly devoted to the advancement of the interests of Mechanics, Inventors, Manufacturers, and Farmers, by the diffusion of useful knowledge upon these important branches. It is edited by men practically skilled in the arts and sciences, and is widely regarded as a sound and able journal. Nearly all the VALUABLE PATENTS which issue weekly from the PATENT OFFICE are ILLUSTRATED WITH ENGRAVINGS, and the CLAIMS of all the PATENTS are published in its columns; thus making the paper a perfect SCIENTIFIC AND MECHANICAL ENCYCLOPEDIA for future as well as present reference. The SCIENTIFIC AMERICAN is very extensively circulated—its circulation in the last Volume exceeding 18,000 copies per week. It is in form for binding; each Volume contains SEVERAL HUNDRED ENGRAVINGS and over FOUR HUNDRED PAGES of Reading Matter, with an Index. The practical receipts alone are worth to any family much more than the subscription price.

The Publishers offer the following valuable prizes for the largest list of subscribers sent in by the 1st of January next:—$100 will be given for the largest list; $75 for the second; $50 for the third; $45 for the fourth; $40 for the 5th; $35 for the 6th; $30 for the 7th; $25 for the 8th; $20 for the 9th; $15 for the 10th; $10 for the 11th; and $5 for the 12th. The cash will be paid to the order of the successful competitor, immediately after January 1st, 1854.

TERMS:—One copy one year, $2; one copy six months, $1; five copies six months, $4; ten copies six months, $8; ten copies 12 months, $15; fifteen copies twelve months, $22; twenty copies twelve months, $28 in advance.

Southern and Western money taken for subscriptions.

Letters should be directed, post-paid, to MUNN & Co. 128 Fulton street, N. Y.

CHARTERS.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR A DIVISION S. OF T.

(Date.)

The undersigned inhabitants of ——, believing the Order of the Sons of Temperance to be well calculated to extend the blessings of total abstinence, and promote the general welfare of mankind, respectfully petition the Grand Division of the —— of ——, to grant them a Charter to open a new Division, to be called the —— Division, No. —, Sons of Temperance, of the —— of ——, to be located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves, individually and collectively, to be governed by the rules and usages of said Grand Division, and also, by those of the National Division.

Enclosed is the Charter Fee, $5 00. Books, $2 00.

This must be signed by at least eight persons of good character and standing in community, and sent to C. WOODWARD, G. S., Indianapolis, Ind, free of postage.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR A TEMPLE.

(Date.)

The undersigned, believing the Temple of Honor to be well calculated to cement more firmly our fraternal relations, and add to the general prosperity of the cause of Temperance, respectfully petition the Grand Temple of the —— of ——, to grant them a Charter to open a new Temple, to be called the —— Temple of Honor, No. —, of the —— of ——, to be located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves individually and collectively, to be governed by the rules and usages of the Grand Temple, and also by those of the Order at large.

Enclosed is the Charter Fee, $20 00.

To be directed to the G. W. R., free of postage.

This must be signed by at least twenty persons of good standing, and if not known to the G. W. T. or G. W. R., must send satisfactory references.

J. H. OHR, G. W. R.

Indianapolis, Ind.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR CADETS OF TEMPERANCE.

The undersigned, boys of ——, believing the Order of Cadets of Temperance to be well calculated to extend the blessings of total abstinence, and promote the general welfare of mankind, respectfully petition the Grand Section of the State of Indiana, to grant them a charter to open a new Section, to be called the —— Section, No. ——, Cadets of Temperance, of the State of Indiana, to be located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves, individually and collectively to be governed by the rules and usages of said Grand Section, and also those of the acting Head of the Order.

Enclosed is the fee for Charter, R. B.'s and officers' cards, $5 00.

It must also be stated whether the applicants are members of the Order or not; if they are, of what Section. The application to be directed to the Grand Secretary, free of postage.

It must also be certified by a W. P. or P. W. P, that the W. Patron elect is a Son of Temperance in good standing.

Address (post paid) HENRY OHR, G. S., C. o T., Indianapolis, Indiana.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR DAUGHTERS OF TEMPERANCE.

(Date.)

The undersigned, inhabitants of ——, believing the Order of the Daughters of Temperance to be well calculated to extend the blessings of Total Abstinence, and promote the general welfare of mankind, respectfully petition the Grand Union to grant them a charter to open a new Union to be called the —— Union, No. —, D. of T., of the State of Indiana, located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves, individually and collectively, to be governed by the rules and usages of said Grand Union.

Enclosed is the Charter Fee, $5 00.

The above must be signed by at least eleven females, of proper age and good standing in community.

Address (post paid,) Mrs. ELIZA RICHMOND, G. S. S., Indianapolis, Indiana.

New Watch and Jewelry Store.

No 1, Bates House, Washington Street,

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

WE have now open the largest and best assortment of fine Watches and rich Jewelry ever offered in this city, to which we invite the examination of the public.

Our stock is all new—selected with great care, and comprises Watches, Diamond Work, Chains, Pins, Rings, Pencils, Lockets, of all kinds; Silver Ware, Clocks, Perfumery, Brushes, Soaps, Plated Ware, Castors, Fruit Baskets, &c., which we will sell for CASH at New York prices. Mr. E. W. NEFF, of this city, has taken charge of the Watch repairing department, and will spare no pains to give satisfaction to our customers.

july 6-tf E J. BALDWIN & CO.

D. CRAIGHEAD. R. BROWNING.

CRAIGHEAD & BROWNING,

Dealers in all kinds of

Drugs, Medicines, Surgical Instruments, Paints, Oils, Chemicals, Varnishes, Dye Stuffs, Glassware Window Glass, Brushes, Cosmetics, Spices, Cigars, Tobacco, Perfumery, &c.,

WASHINGTON STREET,

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

ALL are respectfully invited to call and examine our stock and prices, as we feel confident we can render satisfaction both as to prices and quality of articles. Great care is taken in the selection of articles, in reference to their purity, as we endeavor at all times to keep such articles as are strictly pure and genuine. Every article will be waranted as represented. Orders from Physicians and others promptly attended to. Particular attention given to filling Prescriptions and compounding Medicines, which, in all cases, shall receive the personal attention of one of the firm. june 30

HANNAMAN & DUZAN,

DEALERS IN

DRUGS AND MEDICINES,

Surgical Instruments, Paints, Oils, Varnishes, Dye Woods, Medical and Window Glass, Brushes, Perfumery, Soaps, &c.

Washington, 3 doors west of Pennsylvania St.,

june 30 1y INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

W. W. ROBERTS,

Druggist and Apothecary.

Wholesale and Retail Dealer in

DRUGS, MEDICINES, PAINTS, OILS, AND DYE STUFFS, BRUSHES, FANCY GOODS, AMERICAN AND FRENCH WINDOW GLASS, &c.

WASHINGTON ST., INDIANAPOLIS.

Physicians, Country Merchants, and the people generally, are invited to examine his stock, which will be sold at the lowest cash price.

☞ QUALITY WARRANTED TO SUIT. ☜

june 22 4m

COMMERCIAL COLLEGE,

(Late Commercial Institute,)

Of Indianapolis,

Established March 31, 1851.

INCORPORATED, 1853.

W. McK. SCOTT, A. M., Founder and President.

JAMES C. HAYDEN, (Late Professor in Bacon's Mercantile College, Cincinnati,)

PROF. OF BOOK-KEEPING AND PENMANSHIP.

THE Session will commence at College Hall as follows:

1st Session on the first Monday of September.
2d Session on the 1st Monday of November.
3d Session on the 1st Monday of January.
4th Session on the 1st Monday of March.
5th Session on the 1st Monday of May.

Having secured, permanently, the services of the distinguished Professor above named, and leased for a term of years the commodious and beautiful Hall formerly known as CONCERT HALL, but now named COLLEGE HALL, which is to be fitted up in a style of great elegance, taste, and convenience, the President would say, that this College now offers advantages superior to all others, for imparting a sound, thorough, and accomplished business education

COURSE OF STUDIES.

The Course of Studies, as enlarged, will be as follows, viz:

1 Book-Keeping, by Single and Double Entry, in all its various branches, and its application to all kinds of business.
2. The Laws, Customs, and Usages of Trade and Commerce.
3. Mercantile Arithmetic, upon the short and easy system of cancelation, (taught in no other College.)
4. Commercial Law, in a series of Lectures, thorough and systematic.
5. Business Penmanship.
6. Commercial Correspondence.
7 Lectures upon Banking, Political Economy, and other subjects valusble to the business man.

EXPENSES.

Cards of Admission, invariably in advance, or secured, $25; Diplomas $3; Stationery $5; Boarding $2 50 per week; incidentals, at option of student, $15. Making entire expenses about $75.

On application, a Catalogue will be furnished, giving full particulars.

All letters will receive prompt attention on being directed, post-paid, to

june 8 W. McK. SCOTT, President.

"God never made his works for man to mend." DR. FRANKLIN.

KIER'S ROCK OIL.

A NEW AND MOST IMPORTANT REMEDY FOR DISEASE.

DISCOVERED IN 1849.

IS drawn from a deep well near Pittsburgh—has been used with remarkable success in Ohio and Pennsylvania, and more Eastern States—and is now working its way West. An opportunity is now offered to the Afflicted for testing it. Where known and tried, it at once makes firm friends, and cures which are eloquent in its praise. Certificates of its power to heal are at hand—but we know well, reader, that such evidence, to have weight with you, now-a-days, must be in your own neighborhood.—You have only to try the Oil to be satisfied—it will SPEAK FOR ITSELF.

We have no war with the legion of Nostrums and Specifics of the day—we know but little about them—some say they are good for nothing. However that may be, the

Petroleum

will not be suppressed and kept back by reason of the above nostrums—duty and inclination both forbid it.

Those who are afflicted, are respectfully invited to get a Circular and look over the Directions for

Ague, Rheumatism, Piles, Diarrhœa, Flux, Tooth Ache, Burns, Worms, Scrofula, Coughs, Bronchitis, Croup, Old Sores, Cholera Morbus, Contractions of the Limbs and Joints, Sore Eyes, Blindness, Costiveness, Dyspepsia, and other Diseases.

By that time you may say, "it cures too much." But recollect it is not a HUMAN INVENTION, but compounded by Nature's master hand—and Nature does not do her work by halves.

The Oil is used both internally and externally.

As AGUE, SORE EYES, PILES, RHEUMATISM, and SCROFULA are so common in many parts of the West, we are constrained to say, that while this Oil will cure and relieve other diseases, it has been and is constantly used with most complete success in these cases.

☞ Price 50 cents per Bottle (half pint.)

Beware of all Rock Oil preparations, as some persons are offering a spurious article. Look for S. M. KIER'S name written on the label of the bottle.

For sale by the Druggists throughout Indiana, and by TOMLINSON BROTHERS, J P. POPE & Co., S. ROSENGARTEN, WM. TILLEY, and at wholesale by W. W. ROBERTS, Indianapolis, Indiana.

R. M. LYON, Fort Wayne,

may25 10w Proprietor in the Western States.

SOMETHING NEW.

LATHROP & STEVENS, Wholesale and Retail Dealers in BOOTS AND SHOES, at the West room in the Bates House, Washington Street, Indianapolis.

We are now opening a new and splendid stock of Boots and Shoes of every variety and style, which we are receiving direct from the manufacturers.—We design to keep constantly on hand a good assortment of the best quality of goods manufactured, which we can warrant to give satisfaction to all who may give them a trial. We will sell by the case, dozen, or single pair, at low prices for cash.—Our stock consists in part of Gents' fine Cloth, silk warp, glove kid, buck, patent calf, and enameled Gaiters and Ties of every variety and style; Ladies' fine silk warp Gaiters, Buskins, Ties, Slippers and Boots; Misses' ditto; Men's calf, goat, kip, and thick Boots and Brogans; Boys' and Youths' ditto; assorted Ladies, kid, goat and calf Boots and Buskins; Misses' ditto. Also every variety of Children's Shoes. Come and see for yourselves.

LATHROP & STEVENS,

may 25 4w Indianapolis, Indiana.

TEMPERANCE INN,

Bloomington, Indiana.

J. & S. M. ORCHARD, PROPRIETORS.

TRAVELLERS will find it to their advantage to call and try the accommodation of the TEMPERANCE INN. Stage office for all the different routes, in connection with this House. may25 6m ¶

THE LATEST WONDER of the 19th CENTURY.

DR. G. W. BENNETT'S

Celebrated Eye-Balm.

A SPECIFIC FOR CHRONIC, SORE, INFLAMED, AND WEAK EYES.

Prepared only by Dr. George W. Bennett, and for sale by Merchants and Druggists generally.

THIS Balm is an excellent and certain cure for sore and inflamed Eyes, in all cases of Psoroic, Scrofulous, and Purulent Opthalmia, and what is commonly termed wild hairs in the eye-lids. It is a specific in Infantile, Purulent, and Scrofulous Inflamed, and Sore Eyes, and all in the various diseases of the Eyes, that prevail among the human family, in every climate. It will be found a sovereign remedy if properly applied.

W. W. ROBERTS, Indianapolis, Ind. General Agent for State of Indiana, to whom all orders must be addressed.

Price---Twenty-five Cents.

I warrant the above Balm to cure if the directions are strictly observed, or return the money.

june 22 4m G. W. BENNETT.

REAL ESTATE AND GENERAL AGENCY OFFICE,

INDIANAPOLIS, INDIANA.

UNDER THE CONTROL OF W. M'K. SCOTT, Attorney & Counsellor at Law, and Notary Public.

The attention of the Agency will be devoted,

First—To the collection of debts and the payment of Taxes for non-residents in any county in the State. Also, the redemption of Lands sold for Taxes, sale, purchase or lease of Lands, purchase of adverse claims, examination and perfection of Title, &c., &c.

Second—To the prosecution of claims against the General Government, procuring Land Warrants, Patent Rights, and Pensions under the various Pension Laws, &c.

Third—All other Miscellaneous agencies as may be intrusted to the care of this office.

Fourth—The taking of Depositions and Attestation of all instruments requiring a seal

In all cases requiring an outlay of money for the benefit of individuals, the requisite funds must be transmitted in advance.

Prompt attention to all letters on business that are pre-paid. Address W. M'K. SCOTT,

Real Estate and General Agent,

jan 5–1y Indianapolis, Ind.

ADAMS & CO'S EXPRESS.

WE are now running a daily line East and West, accompanied by special messengers, and with the speed of the mails, running our own cars with the passenger trains.

Packages will be received at the cars up to the time of starting, and at our office until 1 o'clock each day.

We are prepared to transport packages, bank notes and specie, to and from any of the eastern cities, also, Louisville, Frankfort, and Lexington, Ky., St. Louis, Mo., or any points on the Ohio and Mississippi rivers; and to and from Terre Haute, and all intermediate points, and to forward freight from Terre Haute up and down the Wabash.

In addition to these, we have the most complete arrangements for transporting packages to and from California and Europe.

Exchange on England, Ireland, and Scotland, for sale, payable at any bank in the kingdom.

Foreign passage tickets; by Grinnell, Minturn & Co.'s line to Liverpool and London, constantly on hand, and for sale at the lowest rates.

Notes, drafts, and bills collected in any of the Eastern or Western cities.

Orders for goods to be returned by Express, sent free. Our rates of charges have been greatly reduced, and the public will find this a safe and expeditious method of transportation.

Indianapolis, June 30, 1852. ADAMS & CO.

Office in Indianapolis in Journal Building, west side Pennsylvania Street.

Office open during business hours.

june30 1y C. WOODWARD, Agent.

The Cheapest Illustrated Paper for the Young.

PRICE ONLY TEN CENTS A YEAR, or nearly three papers for one cent, where 100 copies are taken.

Twenty-six numbers a year, and each number illustrated with from three to seven engravings.

The Youth's Penny Gazette,

A strictly Religious and Moral Paper, is published by the AMERICAN SUNDAY SCHOOL UNION and is designed to furnish the Children and Youth of the United States with reading matter, in a popular form, for the improvement of Mind and Heart.

It is published (not monthly, nor weekly, but) every other week, or twenty-six numbers in a year. It is religious but unsectarian, and the matter is carefully prepared with a view to the habits, character and prospects of American Youth.

TERMS OF THE PENNY GAZETTE.

$10 a year, in advance, for 100 copies, to one address. $5 a year, in advance, for 40 copies, to one address. $3 a year, in advance, for 20 copies, to one address. Single subscriptions, 25 cents per year.

TERMS BY MAIL, POSTAGE PAID.

☞ When the postage is paid at the place of mailing, the terms are very low. For $15 remitted, we will send 100 copies of the paper for one year, to one address—we paying postage. For $7 remitted, we will send 40 copies of the paper to one address, for one year—we paying postage. For $3 50 remitted, we will send 20 copies of the paper for one year, to one address—we paying postage. Less than 20 cannot be sent at this cheap rate.

Subscriptions received at the Society's House, No. 146 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.

Feb 16 3w G. S. SCOFIELD, Agent.

TO BUILDERS.

North Western Christian University.

THE Building Committee of the Board of Directors of the North-Western Christiana University, propose contracting for the west wing of the University Building, to be put up on the University grounds in the vicinity of Indianapolis.

Sealed Proposals in detail, with prices affixed for doing the work necessary to the completion of the said Wing, will be received until the 19th day of July next, and may be handed to the undersigned. or to J. T. Cox. Secretary of the Company, at the Book Store of Cox & Mathes, in Indianapolis.

The materials and work to be according to the plan, drawings and specifications prepared by Wm. Tinsley, Architect, which may be seen and examined at his room, on the east side of Pennsylvania street, three doors north of the north-east Diagonal, in Indianapolis. The specifications have been materially changed and modified, so as to reduce the cost of the building.

Proposals for the whole combined, would be preferred; but will be received for the different parts and portions thereof separotely. The whole to be completed and fit for use by the first day of September, 1854.

Payments will be made as the work progresses, at such short periods as may suit the covenience of the Contractors. Bond and security will be required for the performance of the work.

In behalf of the Building Committee:

OVID BUTLER,

President of the Board of Directors.

June 10, 1853. june 22 3w

LITTLE. DRUM & ANDERSONS

WHOLESALE DEALERS IN

STAPLE AND FANCY DRY GOODS, BOOTS, SHOES, HATS, CAPS, STATIONERY, NOTIONS, TRIMMINGS, GROCERIES, HARDWARE, QUEENSWARE, AND GLASSWARE,

North side of Washington Street,

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

WE are receiving Country Produce of all descriptions, and paying the highest market price. Dealers visiting Indianapolis are respectfully invited to call and examine our stock and prices, both for Produce and Merchandise generally. june30 tf

JAMES HALL,

MERCHANT TAILOR,

No. 2. Temperance, Hall, Indianapolis,

Manufactu'ng & Clothing Emporium,

Wholesale and Retail Dealer in Ready Made Clothing, Cloths, Cassimers, Vestings, Trimmings, Trunks, Sachels, Canes, Umbrellas, Hats, Caps, a every description of Gentlemen's Furnishing.

Also:

General Agency for the sale of GRAND AND SUBORDINATE REGALIA, EMBLEMS, COSTUMES, &C., FOR THE ORDERS OF MASONS, ODD FELLOWS, TEMPLE OF HONOR, SON, DAUGHTERS, AND CADETS OF TEMPERANCE. oct27 1y

The American Life and Health Insurance Company.

Office—No. 7, South Third St., Philadelphia.

Officers.

LEONARD JEWELL, President.
JAMES PEACOCK, Treasurer.
JOHN C. SIMS, Sec'y and Actuary.
THOS. S. SMITH, Solicitor

JOHN F. BIRD, FRED. A. FICKARDT, } Medical Examiners.

CHARLES WOODWARD, Indianapolis, Ind., General Agent for the State of Indiana.

THIS Company issues policies at Total Abstinence Rates, Joint stock Rates, and at Mutual Rates, which for $1000 on the life of a person 30 years of age, are as follows:

Age.	Total Abstinence.	Joint Stock.	Mutual
30	$15.40	$19.60	$23.60

A further table of Rates will be furnished at the Office.

The condition in Total Abstinence rates (believed to be the lowest in the Union,) is entire forfeiture upon the departure of the Insured from Total Abstinence in its strictest sense.

Policies at Joint Stock and Mutual rates, contain no condition except as usual in Life Insurance.

HEALTH INSURANCE DEPARTMENT.

All Moneys received from the Insured, for Annual Premiums, after deducting expenses, will be divided among the Sick

The Public have for some time been familiar with the subject of Life and Health Insurance, but it is obvious that too little thoughts has been given to the latter. LIFE Insurance benefits our successors, while HEALTH Insurance directly benefits ourselves. It makes provision for a time of sickness, when the products of a man's industry are cut off, and want unites with Disease to aggravate his distress. It is at this gloomy period, when he is prostrated and helpless, and when despondency would otherwise overwhelm him, that the holder of a Health Insurance Policy will realize its benefits.

RATES, under 50 years of age,

$2,00	per year,	for	$2,00	per week,
3,00	"	"	3,00	"
4,00	"	"	4,00	"
5,00	"	"	5,00	"
6,00	"	"	6,00	"

Over fifty and under sixty.

$2,50	per year,	for	$2,50	per week.
3,75	"	"	3,00	"
5,00	"	"	4,00	"
6,25	"	"	5,00	"
7,50	"	"	6,00	"

When the Fund shall amount to Three Dollars and upwards for every person insured and sufficient to warrant an additional distribution, the weekly allowances will be increased in accordance with the Rules of the Policy.

All the members of a Temple or Division insured at greatly reduced rates.

Applications for Agencies in any of the cities or towns in the State, should be made to the undersigned, post paid, or in person.

As Agent for the above Company, I am prepared to receive applications for Policies at any of the above rates.

CHARLES WOODWARD, Agent,

At ADAMS & CO.'S Express Office.

J. L. MOTHERSHEAD, Medical Examiner.

june 30 '52-1y

Ohio Life Insurance Company,

Capital $100,000.

JOINT STOCK AND MUTUAL,

CINCINNATI.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS.

Wm. Burnet, Jno. N. Ridgway, Chas. Goodman, S. Robert, E. S. Haines, Jno. M. Blair, J. W. Donohue, Eden B. Reeder, Wm. Person.

WM. BURNET, President.

S. W. REEDER, Sec'y J. W. DONOHUE, Vice Pres't

Office in Reeder's Building, Third street, between Almy's and City Bank.

This Company insures Lives at the lowest rates consistent with safety, either upon the Joint Stock or Mutual plan.

In the Joint Stock Department, premium payable quarterly, semi-annually or annually. On the Mutual plan, one-half the premium paid in Cash, the balance by a note bearing six per cent. interest—the interest only payable annually. Persons insuring on the mutual plan, participate in the profits of the Company in that department.

The undersigned having been appointed agent for the above Company, is prepared to fill applications for Life Insurance, on favorable terms.

Any information on the subject and pamphlets explaining the nature and utility of Life Insurance, furnished without charge, at the office of the Agent.

C. WOODWARD, Agent.

Office at Adam's & Co 's Express Office, Journal Building, Pennsylvania street, Indianapolis, Ind.

june 30, '52-1y.

Railroad City Book Store.

COX & MATHEs,

South side of Washington, between Illinois and Meridian streets,

INDIANAPOLIS, INDIANA.

AT wholesale and retail, Standard and Miscellaneous Works, Law, and Medical Books, School Books, Plain and Fancy Stationery, Blank Books, Wall Papers, &c., &c. mar 2

CHEAP WATCHES & JEWELRY.

Good Gold Watches at $24!

WE are now in our new Room No. 1, Palmer House, with a lot of beautiful Watches and Jewelry which we are selling lower than ever heretofore sold in Indianapolis, for instance we sell

Good 18 K Case Gold Lepines at $24.
" 18 K " " Levers at $28.
" Silver Anchor Levers $12 to $18.
" " Cylenders, $9 to $12.
" " Quarter's $6 to $10.

In addition to the above we have a fine assortment of other description of Watches all of which we will sell lower than any other firm dare sell in the place. I have in my employ a very superior Watch Repairer who will always be on on hand to do watch repairing of every description. Mr. Michot has worked in Geneva, Paris, New York and other large cities and has had great experience in his Branch of the business. All Watches warranted for one year, and the money in all cases refunded, provided they do not give entire satisfaction.

feb9 tf E. W. NEFF.

SMALL CHANGE.

THE undersigned is prepared to furnish Merchants and others with three cent pieces from the United States Mint at Philadelphia, free of transportation, in sums of 30, 60, and 90 dollars, upon deposit of Gold or Eastern Exchange. Also cents and half cents, upon payment of frieght on gold to Philadelphia, or on Eastern Exchange free of freight.

C. WOODWARD, Agent,

june 30 Adams & Co.'s Express.

A CHANCE TO MAKE MONEY.

Profitable and honorable Employment!

THE Subscriber is desirous of having an agent in each county and town of the Union. A capital of from $5 to $10 only will be required, and anything like an efficient, energetic man can make from three to five dollars per day; indeed some of the Agents now employed are realizing twice that sum. Every information will be given by addressing, (postage paid) WM. A. KINSLER,

june 15 3w ¶ Box 601, Philadelphia P. O.

THE ILLUSTRATED MAGAZINE OF ART.

THE five numbers of this Magazine which are published, place it at the head of publications of this kind No expense will be spared to make it in every respect worthy of the name, the "Illustrated Magazine of Art. The Engavings which are preparing for the future numbers are in the hands of first-class American and European Artists.

A Series of most interesting Tales will appear in it. "The School of Life," written and Illustrated by ANNA MARY, daughter of William and Mary Howitt, will shortly appear; also, "The Dead Bridal," an historical romance, illustrative of the most interesting period in the history of the Venetian Republic, by JONATHAN FREKE SLINGSBY, of the Dublin University Magazine; contributions, too, from WILLIAM and MARY HOWITT, PERCY B. ST. JOHN, and other writers of distinction in America and Europe.

The following is a brief outline of the plan of the Magazine:

I. The Historical Department will abound with picturesque representations of the most remarkable events which have occurred in this and other countries; accompanied with interesting anecdotes and details from the pen of the most eminent writers of the day. This department will contain several splendid engravings, designed by the first artists of the world, and engraved in the highest style of modern art.

II. The Men and Women of the Age. This department will consist of beautifully executed portraits of the leading characters of the age, especially of those who figure on the stage of humanity as the world's benefactors. Each portrait will be accompanied by an interesting biographical sketch.

III. The Wonders of Natural History, Botany, and other sciences, will be developed in choice Engravings of Beasts, Birds, Fishes, Insects, Forest Trees, Flowers, Geological and Fossil Specimens, &c., with accompanying descriptions.

IV. The Triumphs of Architectural Art will be displayed in exquisitely finished representations of Cathedrals, Churches, Palaces, and other models of ancient and modern Architectural Art.

V. The Works of the Great Masters, selected from the principal Galleries of Art in the World. In general, the portrait of the Master will be given, accompanied with a highly finished engraved copy of his chef d'œuvre.

VI. The Scientific Portions will be rendered highly interesting by the familiar explanations, and the numerous diagrams which will accompany each subject.

VII. Manufactures. The principal manufaciuring processes in use will be fully explained by minute details, and an abundance of beautiful engravings.

VIII. Machinery and Inventions will have due attention paid to them, and be described by numerous appropriate engravings.

IX. The Literary Department, independently of the various articles accompanying the illustrations, will comprise original and interesting narratives, contributed by the most popular writers of the day, with numerous illustrations.

In every respect, the "Illustrated Magazine of Art," will be decidedly

SUPERIOR TO ANY MAGAZINE OF THE DAY.

Each Monthly part will contain at least Thirty superb Engravings, four of which will be printed separately, on supefine Plate Paper.

The greatest care will be manifested in every department of production. The Paper will be of the first manufacture, and the Ink supplied from the celebrated Printing Ink Establishment of Messrs. Lawson & Co., of Paris. Six of the monthly portions, when completed, will form a volume which, for interest, originality, value and beauty, will defy competition. It will not only be an interesting family book, but a rich ornament for the drawing-room table, and a pleasant companion in the study.

The parts will appear on the First of every Month at Twenty-five Cents each.

ALEXANDER MONTGOMERY,

may 25 17 Spruce Street, New-York.

SPLENDIDLY ILLUSTRATED WORKS.

THE ALPS, SWITZERLAND, SAVOY AND LOMBARDY.

With the Magazine for June will be ready, Part I., price Twenty-five Cents, of a Magnificent Work to be completed in Twelve Monthly Parts, entitled

THE ALPS, SWITZERLAND, SAVOY AND LOMBARDY, with an account of the most recent Ascents to Mont Blanc, &c. By the Rev. Charles Williams. This work, when completed, will form a large thick Volume, in Imperial Octavo, containing upwards of Three Hundred beautiful Engravings, descriptive of the peculiar Scenery of those most interesting portions of Europe, with the Occupations of the Inhabitants, &c., &c.

Cassell's Natural History.

On the First of July will commence

CASSELL'S NATURAL HISTORY, which for variety, beauty and completeness, will claim to be considered as a first-class work, upon this most interesting subject. The First volume will be devoted to the Feathered Tribe of the Creation and will contain upwards of Three Hundred Engravings, in the first style of Art. The volume will be completed in Twelve Monthly Parts, Imperial Octavo. Price 25 cents each.

History of England.

On the First of July will appear Part I., price 25 cts. of THE ILLUSTRATED HISTORY OF ENGLAND, from the earliest period on record to the present time. Edited by ROBERT FERGUSON, LL. D.

This History, which is intended to form a great National Work, will extend to Four Volumes, Imperial Octavo; each Volume to be completed in Twelve Monthly Parts, price 25 cents each. The Work will comprehend the Political, Civil, and Domestic History of the Nation, and its Progress in Civilization, Literature, Art, &c. It will be profusely Illustrated with Engravings from Designs by GILBERT, PHILLIPPOTEAUX, WILLIAMS, and others. Representations of the most remarkable Events will be worked separately upon Plate Paper. The Portraits will form a complete Gallery, not only of the Monarchs, but of those individuals whose names are prominent in England's History. Also, Antiquities, including Autographs, Buildings, Costume, Furniture, Arms, Coins, Monuments, Manufactures &c., of each Epoch.

History of Hungary.

July First will be published, in one Handsome Volume, Imperial Octavo, price, One Dollar and Twenty-five Cents, in Cloth Boards,

THE ILLUSTRATED HISTORY OF HUNGARY, AND THE MAGYARS, from the Earliest Period to the clos of the late War. By EDWARD LAWRENCE GODKIN. The Volume will be Illustrated with One Hundred highly finished Engravings, including representations of the principal Battles; Portraits of the early Kings, and of the Statsmen and Generals who figured in the War of Independence; Costumes of the Peasantry, &c.; Views of the chief Towns and Fortresses, &c.; with an accurate Description of the Manners and Customs of the People, their Literature, Commerce, Arts, &c.

ALEXANDER MONTGOMERY,

may25 Publisher, 17 Spruce Street, New-York.

MANSION HOUSE,

Cambridge City, Indiana.

J. CUNNINGHAM, Proprietor.

TRAVELLERS

Will find it to their advantage to call and try the accommodation of the MANSION HOUSE.

STAGE OFFICE also in connection with this House.

may 4 6m

INDIANA STATE LIBRARY

TEMPERANCE CHART.

A Weekly Journal:---Devoted to Temperance, Morality, Education, Literature, Useful Arts, Science, General Intelligenc, &c.

J. W. GORDON, M. D., EDITOR.] ORGAN OF THE GRAND DIVISION OF INDIANA. [JOHN H. OHR, PRINTER.

VOL. III. INDIANAPOLIS, IND., WEDNESDAY, SEPT. 21, 1853. NO. 13.

THE TEMPERANCE CHART,

IS PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY, BY THE GRAND DIVISION, S. of T. OF INDIANA.

Edited by J. W. Gordon, M. D.

To whom all Communications and Subscriptions must be addressed, post-paid.

OFFICE—in second story of Temperance Hall Building, Washington St., Indianapolis.

TERMS:

Single copy, one year, ... 75 cts.

☞ In advance in all cases,

TERMS OF ADVERTISING.—Circulation 4000 copies.

One Squre, (12 lines,) for one week,	$0 50
" " for each subsequent insertion,	25
" " for 3 months,	3 00
" " for 6 months,	5 00
" " for 1 year without alteration,	8 00
" " for 1 year, with changes,	12 00

A reduction made on larger advertisements.
Cuts double the above rates.
Advertisements must be handed in by Saturday, of each week, to insure insertion.
Applications for advertising, or for any kind of Printing for the Order, must be made to
J. H. OHR, Indianapolis.

POETRY.

A Hundred Years Ago.

'Tis not a century since they,
The red men traversed here,
And o'er those pleasant hills and vales
Pursued the bounding deer;
Here, too, that eloquence was poured
Around the council light,
That made the sturdy warrior bold,
And ready for the fight!

And oft they came exulting back,
The husband, sire, and son,
To vaunt before their savage shrine,
The ill their hands had done!
Yet of their mortal weal or woe,
No trace is left to-day,
For, like the foam upon the wave,
They all have passed away.

MISCELLANEOUS.

The Two-Penny Marriage.

"Mr. Pease, we want to be married."

"Want to be married—what for?"

"Why, you see, we don't think it is right for us to be living together this way any longer, and we have been talking over the matter to-day, and you see ——"

"Yes, yes, I see you have been talking over the matter, over the bottle, and have come to a sort of drunken conclusion to get married. When you get sober you will both repent of it, probably."

"No, sir, we are not very drunk now, not so drunk but what we can think, and we don't think we are doing right—we are not doing as we were brought up to do by our pious parents. We have been reading about the good things you have done for just such poor outcasts as we are, and we want you to try and do something for us."

"Read! Can you read? Do you read the Bible?"

"Well, not m[illegible]h lately; but we read the newspapers and sometimes we read something good in them. How can we read the Bible when we are drunk?"

"Do you think getting married will keep you from getting drunk?"

"Yes, for we are going to take the pledge, too, aud we shall keep it, depend upon that."

"Suppose you take the pledge and try that first, and if you can keep it till you can wash some of the dirt away, and get some clothes on, then I will marry you."

"No: that won't do. I will get to thinking what a poor, dirty, miserable wretch I am, and how I am living with this woman, who is not a bad woman by nature, and then I will drink, and then she will drink—oh, cursed rum!—and what is to prevent us? But if we were married, my wife, yes, Mr. Pease, my wife would say, 'Thomas,'—she would not say, 'Tom,—you dirty brute, don't be tempted;' and who knows but what we may be somebody yet—somebody that our own mothers would not be ashamed of."

Here the woman, who had been silent and rather moody, burst into a violent flood of tears, crying, "Mother! mother! I know not whether she is alive or not, and dare not inquire; but if we were married and reformed, I would make her happy once more."

"I could no longer withstand the appeal," said Mr. P., "and determined to give them a trial. I have married a good many poor, wretched-looking couples, but none that looked quite so much as this.—The man was hatless and shoeless, without coat or vest, with long hair and beard grimed with dirt. He was by trade a bricklayer, one of the best in the city.—She wore the last remains of a silk bonnet, and something that might pass for shoes, and an old, very old dress, once a rich merino, apparently without any under garments."

"And your name is Thomas—Thomas what?"

"Elting, sir. Thomas Elting, a good, true man, that is, shall be if you will marry us."

"Well, well. I am going to marry you."

"Are you? There, Mag, I told you so."

"Don't call me Mag. If I am going to be married, I will be by my right name, the one my mother gave me."

"Not Mag! Well, I never knew that."

"Now, Thomas, hold your tongue, you talk too much. What is your name?"

"Matilda. Must I tell tell the other? Yes, I will, and I never will disgrace it. I don't think I should ever have been as bad if I had kept it. That bad woman who first tempted me to ruin, made me take a false name. It is a bad thing for a girl to give up her name, unless for that of a good husband. Matilda Fraley.—Nobody knows me by that name in this bad city."

"Very well; Matilda and Thomas, take each other by the right hand, and look at me, for I am going to unite you in the holy bonds of marriage by God's ordinance. Do you think you are sufficiently sober to comprehend its solemnity?"

"Yes, sir."

"Marriage being one of God's holy ordinances, cannot be kept in sin, misery, filth, and drunkenness. Thomas, will you take Matilda to be your lawful, true, only, wedded wife?"

"Yes, sir."

"You promise that you will live with her, in sickness as well as in health, and nourish, protect, and comfort her, as your true and faithful wife; that you will be to her a true and faithful husband; that you will not get drunk, but clothe yourself, and keep clean."

"So I will."

"Never mind answering until I get through. You promise to abstain from every kind of drink that intoxicates, and treat this woman kindly, affectionately, and love her as a man should love his wedded wife. Now all of this, will you, here before me as the servant of the Most High—here in the sight of God in heaven, most faithfully promise, if I give you this woman to be your wedded wife?"

"Yes, I will."

"And you, Matilda, on your part, will you promise the same, and be a true wife to this man?"

"I will try, sir."

"But do you promise all this faithfully?"

"Yes, sir, I will."

"Then I pronounce you man and wife."

"Now, Thomas," said the new wife, after I had made out the certificate and given it to her, with an injunction to keep it safely,—"now pay Mr. Pease, and let us go home and break the bottle."

Thomas felt first in the right hand pocket, then the left, then back to the right, then he examined the watch-fob.

"Why, where is it?" says she, "You had two dollars this morning!"

"Yes, I know it, but I have only got two cents this evening. There, Mr. Pease, take them, it is all I have got in the world; what more can I give?"

Sure enough, what could he do more? I took them and prayed over them, that in parting with the last penny, this couple might have parted with a vice, a wicked, foolish practice which had reduced them to such a degree of poverty and wretchedness, that the monster power of rum could hardly send its victims lower.

So Tom and Mag were transformed into Mr. and Mrs. Elting, and having become somewhat more sober while in the house, seemed to fully understand their new position, and all the obligations they had taken upon themselves.

For a few days I thought occasionally of this two-penny marriage, and then it became absorbed with a thousand other scenes of wretchedness which I have witnessed since I have lived in t[illegible] of city misery. Time wore on an[illegible] many other happy couples—not [illegible] who came in their carriage, an[illegible] a golden marriage fee—a delicate way of giving to the needy—but among all I had never performed the rite for a couple quite so low as that of this two-penny fee, and I resolved I never would again. At length, however, I had a call for a full match to them, which I refused.

"Why do you come to me to be married, my friend?" said I to the man.—You are both too poor to live together; and besides you are both terrible drunkards, I know you are."

"That is just what we want to get married for, and take the pledge."

"Take that first."

"No, we must take all together, nothing else will save us."

"Will that?"

"It did one of my friends."

"Well, then, go and bring that friend here; let me hear and see how much it saved him, and then I will make up my mind what to do; if I can do any good I want to do it."

"My friend is at work—he has got a good job, and several hands working for him, and is making money, and won't quit till night. Shall I come this evening?"

"Yes, I will stay at home and wait for you."

I little expected to see him again, but about eight o'clock, the servant said, that that man and his girl, with a gentleman and lady, were waiting in the reception room. I told him to ask the lady and gentleman up to the parlor and sit a moment, while I sent the candidates for marriage away, being determined never to unite another drunken couple, not dreaming that there was any sympathy between the parties. They would not come up; they wanted to see that couple married. So I went down and found the squalidly wretched pair in company with a well-dressed laboring man, for he wore a fine black coat, silk vest, gold watch chain, clean white shirt and cravat, and polished calf-skin boots; and his wife was just as neatly and tidily dressed as anybody's wife, and her face beamed with intelligence, and the way she clung to the arm of her husband, as she seemed to shrink from my sight, told that she was a loving as well as pretty wife.

"This couple." says the gentlemen, "have come to be married."

"Yes, I know it, but I have refused. Look at them; do they look like fit subjects for such a holy ordinance? God never intended those whom he created in his own image should live in matrimony like this man and woman, I can not marry them."

"Can not! Why not? You married us when we were worse off—more dirty—worse clothed—and more intoxicated."

The woman shrunk back a little more out of sight. I saw she trembled violently, and put her clean cambric handkerchief up to her eyes.

What could it mean? Married them when they were worse off! Who were they?

"Have you forgotten us?" said the woman, taking my hands in hers, and dropping on her knees; "Have you forgotten Tom and Mag? We have not forgotten you, but pray for you every day!"

"If you have forgotten them, you have not forgotten the two-penny marriage.—No wonder you did not know us. I told Matilda she need not be afraid, or ashamed, if you did not know her. But I knew you would not. How could you? We were in rags and dirt then. Look at us now. All your work, sir. All the blessing of that pledge, and that marriage, and that good advice you gave us. Look at this suit of clothes, and her dress. All Matilda's work, every stitch of it. Come, and look at our house, as neat as she is. Everything in it to make a comfortable home; and, O sir, there is a cradle in our bedroom. Five hundred dollars already in bank, and I shall add as much more next week when I finish my job. So much for one year of a sober life, and a faithful, honest, good wife. Now this man is as good a workman as I am, only he is bound down with the fetters of drunkenness, and living with this woman just as I did. Now, he thinks that he can reform just as well as me; but he thinks he must take the pledge of the same man, and have his first effort sanctified with the same blessing, and then, with a good resolution, and Matilda and me to watch over them, I do believe they will succeed."

So they did. So may others by the same means. I married them and as I shook hands with Mr. Elting, at parting, he left two coins in my hand, with the simple remark that there was another two-penny marriage fee. I was in hopes that it might have been a couple of dollars this time, but I said nothing, and we parted with a mutual God bless you.—When I went up stairs I tossed the coins into my wife's lap, with the remark,—"Two pennies again, my dear."

"Two pennies! Why, husband, they are eagles—real golden eagles. What a deal of good they will do. What blessings followed that act."

"And will follow the present, if the pledge is faithfully kept. Truly, this is a good result of a Two-Penny Marriage.—New York Tribune.

☞ Says the Christian Register, Boston:—"The Hottentot son, on coming of age, is presented with a cudgel, with which he is commanded to beat his mother, and this request is very dutifully complied with by the son, in order to manifest his strength and ability. It is strange that the mother, though often fainting under the cruel beatings of the son, whom she has nursed in her bosom, does not reproach him, but admires his manliness and dexterity in proportion to the chastisement."

There are Christian mothers who endure worse treatment than this from their offspring, (shame on the offspring!) and who would willingly submit to a beating of the body, in exchange for breaking hearts and disappointed hopes. But in both cases maternal affection is slow to complain, and seldom deserts the unworthy child. No decent man will be an ungrateful son; yet, in truth, it is a mother's weakness and indulgence that, only too often, prevents the bright boy from becoming a decent man, and arms him with the weapons that strike at her own peace, sooner or later.

GOOD ADVICE.—We should make it a principle to extend the hand of friendship to every man who discharges faithfully his duties, and maintains good order; who manifests deep interest in the general welfare of society—whose deportment is upright, and whose mind is intelligent, without stopping to ascertain whether he swings a hammer or draws a thread. There is nothing so distant trom all natural claim as the reluctant, the backward sympathy, the forced smile, the checked conversation, the hesitating compliance, the well-off are apt to manifest to those a little down, with whom, in the comparison of intellect and principles of virtue they frequently sink into insignificance.

WHAT IS HAPPINESS?—I ask again, what is happiness? It aint bein' idle, that's a fact—no idle man or woman ever was happy since the world began. Eve was idle, and that's the way she got tempted, poor crittur: employment gives appetite and digestion. Duty makes pleasure doubly sweet by contrast. When the harness is off, if the work aint too hard, a critter likes to kick up his heels. When pleasure is the business of life, it ceases to be pleasure; and when it's all labor and no play, work, like an unstuffed saddle, cuts into the very bone. Neither labor nor idleness has a road that leads to happiness—one has no room for the heart, and the other corrupts it. Hard work is the best of the two, for that has, at all events, sound sleep—the other has restless pillows and unrefreshing slumbers—one is misfortune, the other is a curse;—and money aint happiness, that's as clear as mud.—Sam Slick's Wise Saws.

☞ What if your neighbor has bought a new carriage, and his farm is no larger than yours, and you can't afford it; you needn't say he cheated poor folks till he acquired the means to purchase it, or prophesy that he'll lose his property because he's so extravagant. Look out for your own affairs. See that your hay don't get wet, and your potatoes are dug in season, and the cattle don't break into your cornfield: in fact, my friend, mind your own business, and you'll have enough to do, without troubling yourself with your neighbor's.—Rural New-Yorker.

DOG FENNEL.—This weed is likely to create quite a sensation in the medical world. Some scientific gentlemen are at this time engaged in investigating its properties. It is said to answer the purpose of quinine, and may do away with that expensive drug. It has many other other valuable properties. The bruised leaves, applied as a poultice, will blister very quickly. This weed, so abundant in our country, may yet create more excitement than ginseng, as a drug and an article of commerce.

The Better Land.

A father and mother were living with their two children on a desert island in the midst of the ocean, on which they had been shipwrecked. Roots and vegetables served them for food, a spring supplied them with water, and a cavern in the rock with a dwelling. Storm and tempest often raged fearfully on the island.

The children could not remember how they had reached the island; they knew nothing of the vast continent; bread, milk, fruit, or whatever other luxury was yielded there, were unknown to them.

There landed one day upon the island four Moors in a small boat. The parents felt great joy, and hoped now to be rescued from all their troubles; but the boat was too small to take them all over together to the adjoining land, so the father determined to risk the passage first.

Mother and children wept when he embarked in the boat with its frail planks, and the four black men were about to take him away. But he said, "Weep not, it is better yonder; and you will all follow soon."

When the little boat returned and took away the mother, the children wept still more. But she also said, "Weep not: in the better land we shall all meet again."

At last came the boat to take away the two children. They were frightened at the black men, and shuddered at the fearful sea over which they had to pass.—With fear and trembling they drew near the land. But how rejoiced they were when their parents appeared upon the shore, offered them their hands, led them into the shade of lofty palm trees, and regaled them upon the flowery turf with milk, honey, and delicious fruits. "Oh! how groundless was our fear," said the children; "we ought not to have feared, but to have rejoiced, when the black men came to take us away to the better land."

"Dear children," said the father, "our voyage from the desert island to this beautiful country conveys to us a still higher meaning. There is appointed for us all a still longer voyage to a much more beautiful country. The whole earth, on which we dwell, is like an island. The land here is, indeed, only a faint shadow of heaven. The passage hither over the stormy sea is—death; that little boat resembles the bier, upon which men in black apparel shall at some time carry us forth. But when that hour strikes, then we, myself, your mother, or you, must leave this world. So fear not. Death, for pious men who have loved God, and have done his will, is nothing else but a voyage to the better land."

GONE ASTRAY.—Cold words to fall on a loving heart—he has gone astray. And is this the time to desert him? This the time to taunt him with words that roll like lava from your passions, and only sere his soul? No! he passes under clouds; he is light now—perhaps he has no other.

Many a true heart that would have come back, like the dove to the ark, from its first transgression, has been frightened beyond recall, by the angry look and menace—the taunt, the savage charity of an unforgiving soul. Be careful how you freeze the first warm emotions of repentance. Beware lest these pleading words, unheeded now, sting you in some shady valley of your future sorrow. Repentance, changed by neglect or unkindness, becomes like melted iron, hardened in the mould. Trifle with it never. Be the first to meet the erring with outstretched arms. Wipe the tear from his eye—pour the balm of consolation on the wounds that guilt has made. Let your heart be the grave for his transgressions, your pity find vent in bearing his burden; not in useless words. Oh! forgive the erring. Did not he who died on Calvary? Shield him from the contempt of grosser minds—make blueness and brightness and beauty where all was cloud and storm before in his sad life.

RECKONING WITHOUT THEIR HOST.—The groggeries and puppet shows that sprung up with the rapidity of the prophet's gourd, and as plentifully as Egyptian frogs, in the vicinity of the Crystal Palace, now present a mournful spectacle. Public sentiment struck them with blight and mildew, and about half of them have already disappeared. Buildings are left in an unfinished state, and the ominous words "To Let" are conspicuously placarded. Their owners calculated too largely upon the depravity of the race.—New York Organ.

INDIANA STATE LIBRARY INDIANAPOLIS

TEMPERANCE CHART.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.
WM. HANNAMAN, C. E. BABB,
JAMES HALL, R. T. BROWN,
JOHN B. ABBETT.

WEDNESDAY, SEPT. 21, 1853.

The State Temperance Convention at Madison.

☞ Doctor John [Jonathan] W. Gordon, editor of the Temperance Chart, and whilom an attache of the Whig Journal office at Indianapolis, announces nimself an independent candidate for Reporter of the Decisions of the Supreme Court. He is a violent partisan of the Whig Abolition school, but hopes, under the plea of "being free from the shackles of party nominations," to secure Democratic aid among the Temperance brotherhood. A State Temperance Convention is ordered to be holden at Indianapolis on the 28th September—but a few days prior to the election—to advance the interest of Temperance in Indiana; but more especially, we apprehend, to drill the Temperance men to fight and vote for this man Gordon.—We will see whether the good cause can be thus prostituted.—People's Friend.

We deem the foregoing remarks worthy of the consideration of all; and of none more than Temperance men. As editor of the Grand Division of Indiana, Gordon has for a while past measurably forsaken the cause of Temperance, and converted his paper into an instrument for paving his way to the office which he seeks. His course has demonstrated one fact—it is not the interest of Temperance, but his own elevation which enjoys the benefit of his best efforts; and the more promptly and emphatically he is repudiated by the Temperance organization, the less it will suffer by him. It is a matter of no consequence that he belongs to this or that political party. His mere attempt to prostitute the Organization to the promotion of selfish ends, has already, we doubt not, produced greater injury to the cause he professes to labor for, than he could ever repair; and should he succeed in his schemes, the consequences to the cause of Temperance are not hard to foresee.—Gosport Chronotype.

We quote the foregoing articles from the State Sentinel, into whose columns they were transferred from the "Gosport Chronotype." It is highly becoming that the Sentinel should thus give currency to its own manufactured falsehoods. Almost every sentence in both these articles is an echo of some unmitigated falsehood and slander, thrown back to the Sentinel from sources equally unsophisticated in villainy and corruption as Wm. J. Brown, of shake-the-head and infamous State-Treasury renown. No man who has the least regard for truth will say he has ever heard us connect, in speech or type, the coming election and the Temperance Convention at Madison. Every member of the State Temperance Committee, many of whom in intellectual and moral attributes, are elevated so far above the circle of depravity in which these libelers move, that they neither feel nor are annoyed by the venomous hisses of these human centipedes, can bear witness to what we say. The worm will pardon the comparison. The manifest object of all this is, to destroy the force of the Convention as a Temperance Organization—and means of effecting the salvation of Indiana.

The Sentinel dreads the impending future; for in it, its editor sees the triumph of Prohibition, and the prostration of such whisky-scullions as himself. He knows it will be remembered (and to have it recorded it is our sin) that he has been the mouth-piece of all that is degraded and degrading in the whisky traffic; and he fears the coming reckoning. It will not be forgotten that he defeated the lamented Morris for the Legislature, as the whisky candidate. It will not be forgotten that he libeled the Maine Law to defeat another excellent Temperance man for the Senate in 1852. It will not be forgotten, that as late as last winter, when the friends of Temperance were trying the passage of a law to redeem Indiana from the scourge and curse of intemperance, he, of all the editors in the State, constantly labored to defeat their efforts. It will not be forgotten, that he—Wm. J. Brown—the editor of the State Sentinel, called every Democrat a traitor to his party who voted for the following resolutions, offered by Dr. Grimes, of Delphi, and supported by Captain Rob. Millroy and other Democrats in the State Temperance Convention of last winter. Here are the resolutions:

"The following preamble and resolutions were introduced by Dr. Sam. Grimes, and unanimously adopted:

"Whereas, The experience of the past has clearly demonstrated, that Temperance laws can only be expected through the agency of open and avowed friends of such legislation; therefore

"Resolved, That we are determined and hereby solemnly pledge ourselves not to vote for any person hereafter as a member of either House of the General Assembly or any other officer, who is not the known and pledged friend of prohibitory laws fully adequate to the total destruction of the whole business of making, vending, or using intoxicating liquors as a beverage in our State: and that we will vote for and support the known and pledged friends of such legislation under all circumstances, against those who are not—disregarding all party organizations.

"Resolved, That we will not support men in any avocation of life, who make or traffic in intoxicating liquors in any form, as a beverage."

Temperance Democrats of Indiana, read the foregoing resolutions, and then ask yourselves how you like to be called traitors for voting a sentiment so just! Ask yourselves how now sounds in the mouth of that arch-traitor to every lesson of truth and disinterestedness, William J. Brown, to claim to be your friend, and the friend of your good and holy cause! Every Democrat in the Convention voted for those resolutions, and so did every Whig, and every Free-soiler too; but it was reserved for Mr. Brown, who now claims to be, par excellence, the friend of Temperance and Temperance men, to separate the Democrats from others, and apply to them that foulest term of odium—Traitors. No doubt, a long acquintance with the term, as applicable to himself, had made him familiar with it: and as he must have known the foul deeds by which he had won the name, he must have known also its full meaning. This is the friend of Temperance—this the man that loves the cause and its friends! Let his biography be written—"The climax of falsehood and impudence—the ne plus ultra of human depravity and villainy—William J. Brown.

The Chart not Partisan.

The Chart stands accused of pandering to the interests of party—of being, in other words, a Whig paper in disguise. This charge, made originally by the State Sentinel, has been, for particular purposes, bandied about over the State, by men who never exchanged with us, and who are either entirely ignorant of the character of our sheet, or entirely and wickedly reckless of what they say. We appeal to our columns for a vindication of our position, as neutral as between the parties, and independent as against all parties. Let the following notice of Lieut. Gov. Willard witness:

"Lieut. Gov. Willard.—In our homeward trip we met, in the cars between Jeffersonville and Edinburgh, a citizen of Kentucky, who gave us a piece of the history of our present Lieut. Governor, with which we were not previously acquainted; and as it reflects like honor both upon him and the institutions of our country, we publish it just as we received it. It is as follows: A few years since the Kentucky gentleman above referred to, wrote to a New York friend, requesting him to send him a school teacher. In compliance with this request, the New Yorker sent Mr. Willard, duly recommended, to this Kentucky friend. On his arrival in Kentucky, he was accordingly employed as a teacher, and continued to exercise the functions of that station in the same neighborhood for a year. During this time he read law, and seized upon every opportunity that offered, to improve his fine talent for public speaking. At the end of his year, he was prepared to enter the lists as a lawyer: and with a bold fearlessness and self-reliance characteristic of the man, he settled at New Albany, in Indiana, notwithstanding the just reputation of the bar at that place as one of the ablest in our State. His success has shown, that, although untried, he did not over-estimate his powers."

Again, of the State Sentinel, after a severe conflict, and an indication of amendment on its part, we say:

"The State Sentinel: not willing to be behind others in the race of improvement, this paper has donned a new dress, and is really a beautiful sheet. We are glad to witness the change, and, laying aside past differences, we heartily commend it to the favor of the public."

In addition to these, the same paper contains our notice of the first part of Mr. Porter's Reports, in which, his own friends being judges, we do that geutleman ample justice.

If at other times we have castigated gentlemen of both parties, it was because they merited it, and we do not desire to modify or change the record.

Harris's Panorama.

We regret that we are not able to say from personal observation what our friends assure us may be said in favor of this interesting work. It was opened for exhibition here last week, and the house was filled every evening with delighted spectators. We commend the worthy artist, Mr. Harris, to the kindness of our friends wherever he may go, and hope he may meet with that reception which he deserves. We hope to be able to give a more extended notice of this admirable painting upon its return to our city.

We copy the following notice from the Daily State Sentinel of Saturday last:

"Harris's Panorama still continues to be attended by crowded houses every evening, and to receive the hearty and unbounded applause of all who see it. This evening is positively the last exhiblt̃ion, as the painting is to be taken to Shelbyville on Monday. All who have not yet visited it, should therefore not fail to be present this evening.

"From Shelbyville, Mr. Harris designs visiting Edinburgh, Columbus, and Madison. He will be in the latter place during the meeting of the State Temperance Convention. He will thence proceed to Lafayette, in time to be there during the holding of the State Fair.

"Mr. Shepherd, Mr. Harris's partner, precedes the painting, and acts as agent. We commend him to the consideration and courtesies of our brethren of the press as a most liberal and estimable gentleman in every respect."

☞ The following preamble and resolutions were adopted by the 'Olive Branch Synod of theEvangelical Lutheran Church of the state of Indiana,' at its recent convention in this city.

Whereas, the use of all intoxicating drinks as a beverage, is destructive to the cause of religion, and the best interests of our common country; and Whereas, we have long prayed and labored for the total annihilation of this curse, and believing that for the accomplishment of this great and glorious end, the axe must be laid at the root of the tree, therefore, in relianec upon Divine aid,

Resolved, That we, the members of this Synod anew pledge ourselves the avowed and uncompromising enemies of all intoxicating liquors used as a beverage.

Resolved, That we do whatsoever our hands find to do with our might, to create a public sentiment which will call for, and sustain the enactment of a prohibitory law, similar in its genaral features to what is usually called the "Maine Law."

Resolved, That a copy of the "Maine Law" be appended to our minutes.

Resolved, That this preamble and resolutions be published in the public papers of the city.

Respectfully submitted,
D. SUMMERS.
D. S. ALTMAN
HENRY OHR.

☞ The Burlington Telegraph often utters sage advice to its readers. The following is worthy serious consideration, and special application:

"Reader, we will take it for granted that you are poor, and have to work for a living. Now, have you ever made an estimate of the amount of money you throw away foolishly in the course of a year, on things which you do not need, and which do you no sort of good? Again, have you ever thought of the amount you squander upon indulgences which not only do you no good, but actually do you serious injury? Pause—reflect—calculate, and amend thy ways. Do not become a miser, but cease to be your own enemy."

☞ Few things are necessary for the wants of this life, but it takes an infinite number to satisfy the demands of opinion.

☞ Nothing can constitute good breeding that has not good nature for its foundation.

Items of News.

New York, Saturday, Sept. 10.—The steamer Illinois arrived here this evening, from Aspinwall. She brings $685,000 in gold dust.

New Orleans, Sept. 7.—The yellow fever, of a milder type, has appeared in Galveston, Texas.

The yellow fever is bad at Vicksburg, Natchez, Donaldsonville, Port Gibson, Baton Rouge, and other places on the Lower Mississippi.

New York, Sept. 12.—The steamer Georgia put into Norfolk, in a leaky condition, Saturday; and the steamer Crescent City sailed from this port yesterday, for Norfolk, to bring up the Georgia's passengers. The Georgia was out in the gale last Tuesday, eighty miles south-west of Cape Hatteras, accompanied by a heavy rain, which put out the fires. The vessel then sprung a leak, but by the exertions of the passengers and crew the water was pumped out, and she succeeded in getting into Norfolk.

Philadelphia, Sept. 12.—A report that the steamer had arrived at Halifax, bringing news that war had been declared between Russia and Turkey, and that breadstuffs have enormously advanced, has been circulated extensively. It is false.

Louisville, Sept. 12.—The steamer U. S. Mail came in collision with the steamer Ben Coursin, this morning, and the former sunk immediately. She had no freight aboard, and will be raised to-morrow.

Washington, Sept. 13.—All the rumors of a rupture between Mr. Marcy and the President are false; on the contrary, Mr. Marcy has the fullest confidence in the President, and the Cabinet may be set down as a unit.

The Cabinet held a long session yesterday, in which foreign affairs were discussed. Ingraham will certainly be sustained in his proceedings in the Smyrna affair.

The election returns in Maine render it certain that there is no choice for Governor by the people.

There is probably an increased majority in the Legislature in favor of the Maine Law.

The vote was light throughout the State.

☞ Mr. Sandford, our Charge at Paris, recently appeared at one of the Emperor's levees, in the plain garb of an American gentleman. It is said that his dress produced some sensation, and was in striking contrast for its simplicity and propriety with the embroidered and bedizened court costume of other officials.

☞ The Richmond (Va.) Whig proposes, as a substitute for the Maine Law in that State, an amendment to the constitution, prohibiting any person from holding any office, who would not take an oath that he would not drink any alcoholic liquors while in office, and that he had drank none for twelve months preceding.

☞ Seventy-five thousand dollars spent in intoxicating liquors in a city of three thousand white inhabitants! An intelligent citizen of Houston, Texas, has recently made a close examination into the matter, and finds that about seventy-five thousand dollars are spent annually in that city for intoxicating liquors. This would be more than sufficient to build a good plank road from Houston to the Brazos.

English Emigration.—A London correspondent of the Tribune calculates that death and emigration have removed 36,146 persons more from Great Britain in the three months ending June 30, than have been born within the same period, by so much diminishing the population.—The previous quarter showed a diminution of 30,000.

Six Days Across the Atlantic.—We learn from the New York Herald, that a steamer is on the stocks, at the ship-yard of Mr. John W. Griffiths, at Greenpoint, which is expected to be ready for sea in February next. This steamer is being constructed under the plans and specifications of William Norris, civil engineer, and John W. Griffiths, naval architects, who have patented their improvements in this country, England, and France. The builders and patentees, as we are informed, are under engagements to cross the Atlantic, from New York to England, within six days, in all seasons, with greater comfort for passengers and less risk to life than by the present conveyance.

A Fearful Account.—Mr. Everett, late Secretary of State, is generally known as a gentleman of extensive information; one who will not "speak without book" on important subjects involving satistical facts. From a computation of his, it appears that the use of alcoholic beverages cost the United States directly, in ten years, [illegible]000,000; has burnt or otherwise destroyed $5,000,000 worth of property; has destroyed 300,000 lives; sent 250,000 to prison, and 100,000 children to the poor houses; caused 1,500 murders and 5,000 suicides; and has bequeathed to the country 1,000,000 orphan children.

Mr. Gough in England.

The friends of the Temperance Cause in the Mother Country have been on the tiptoe of expectation for some time past, of the arrival of the celebrated advocate of Temperance, John B. Gough, having been prepared by the encomiums of Professor Stowe and other American celebrities, to anticipate a rare treat, in the eloquence of the favorite Cis-Atlantic orator.

As Mr. Gough's forte lies in his freedom from all rules, in his genuine humor and deep pathos, rather than in studied elegance of language, with which the English ear has long been familiar, it might have been a matter of doubt whether the real would fulful the expectations of the ideal Gough; but we are happy to perceive that hopes have given place to certainty, by the successful debut of the Exile before an audience of his countrymen in the far-famed Exeter Hall.—Temperance Telegraph.

A letter from Liverpool, dated August 5th, received by the America, from Liverpool, says: "Mr. John B. Gough arrived here last Sunday morning, and on Tuesday evening he had a triumphal meeting at Exeter Hall, London, at which he quite equaled, to say the least, the highly-wrought expectations of even the most sanguine. We shall have him in Liverpool, and intend engaging for him the amphitheatre, the largest public building available for meetings in the place."—Boston Traveller.

Georgia.—A letter from Professor Luther M. Smith, of Oxford College, Ga., gives us a cheering account of the progress of the cause in that State. He says:

Oxford, Ga., Aug. 25, 1853.

The friends of temperance hope to procure the repeal of the present license system by the next Legislature, which assembles in November of the present year.—This done, half the battle will be won.—Deprive the iniquitous traffic in ardent spirits of legal sanction and protection, and the next movement will be to place it, where it deserves to be placed, under the ban of the law, as prejudicial to the interests and happiness of the people, and inimical to the perpetuity of our free institutions. So strongly is the tide of public sentiment setting in this direction, that in different sections of the State, the citizens, resolving no longer to endure in their midst those dens of corruption, the grog-shops, have determined not to await the enactment of a Maine Law for the entire State, and are making the necessary efforts to secure the passage, by the next Legislature, of prohibitory statutes for their respective counties. Auspicious omens cheer us from every quarter. The wise, the eloquent, the gifted, and good are everywhere enlisting their energies in behalf of this grand moral movement of the age. The brightest and noblest spirits of the land are rallying in the majesty of their might around the standard raised by the Atlanta Temperance Convention of last Spring. It is a pure and spotless banner, and destined soon, we trust, to wave in triumph over "the Empire State of the South."—N. Y. Organ.

☞ The Maine Law of Vermont and Massachusetts is making terrible havoc among the interests of the farmers. The families of the reformed drunkards are becoming fond of butter and cheese, and somehow, or some other how, manage to get money to pay for the good things of this life. The commercial papers state, that on August 2, 1853, there was sent from stations on the Vermont and Canada and Vermont Central railroads, 238,164 lbs of butter and cheese, going to Lowell and Boston. The same day, 117,478 lbs of butter and cheese were sent from the Ogdensburg railroad, making 452,642 lbs of butter and cheese sent over the Central Road in their weekly butter trains, and carried in refrigerator cars, kept cool and in as good order as it could have been kept in the best cellar.

☞ The following paragraph we take from the Erie Crescent's account of a late Temperance Lecture in that place, by P. T. Barnum:

"Barnum began his lecture by saying, that if there was any man or woman present who had not, either in his or her own person, or in that of some friend or relative, suffered from the use of intoxicating drinks, he would be obliged if such person would rise up. Of course, nobody rose.

"Do but consider, for a moment, the awful significance of that paragraph. Do but consider for a moment the fact—for fact it is and undeniable too—that of the millions of persons inhabiting the United States not one can be found who has not suffered from intemperance in the use of intoxicating drinks. That is a terrible reflection, but it is one that should be brought home to the mind and conscience of every voter in the Union."

☞ There is Railroad enough in operation to reach around the world, and four thousand miles over.

Dance of Death.

Aqua-ardiente and dulces were handed round; while all, men and women—the dancers excepted—smoked their cigarillos. But the most remarkable thing in the room seemed to me a large kind of scaffold, which occupied the other corner opposite the bed, consisting of a light frame-work, ornamented all over with artificial flowers, little pictures of saints, and a quantity of lighted wax candles. On the top of it, a most extraordinary well made wax figure of a little child was seated on a low wooden chair, dressed in a snow-white little frock; the eyes were closed, the pale cheeks tinged by a soft rosy hue, and the whole figure perfectly strewed with flowers. It was so deceptive, that when I drew near it at first, I thought it a real child, while a young woman below it, pale, and with tears in her eyes, might very well have been the mother. But that was most certainly a mistake; for at this moment one of the men stepped up to her, and invited her to the dance, and a few moments afterwards she was the merriest in the crowd. But it must really be a child—no sculptor could have formed that little face so exquisitely; and now one light went out, close to the little head, and the cheek lost its rosy hue. My neighbors at last remarked the attention with which I looked upon the figure or child, whichever it was; and the nearest informed me, as far as I could understand him, that the little thing up there was really the child of the woman with the pale face, who was dancing just then so merrily; the whole festivity taking place, in fact, only on account of that little angel. I shook my head doubtfully; and my neighbor, to convince me, took my arm and led me to the frame, where I had to step upon the chair and nearest table, and touch the cheek and hand of the child. It was a corpse! And the mother, seeing I had doubted it, but was now convinced, came up to me, and smilingly told me it had been her child, and was now a little angel in heaven. The guitars and cacaes commenced wildly again, and she had to return to the dance. I left the house in a dream, but afterwards heard the explanation of this ceremony. If a little child—I believe up to four years of age—dies in Chili, it is thought to go directly to heaven, and become a little angel; the mother being prouder of that, before the eyes of the world at least, than if she had reared her child to be a happy man or woman. The little corpse is exhibited then as I had seen it; and they often continue dancing and singing around it till it displays signs of putrefaction. But the mother, whatever the feelings of her heart may be, must laugh, and sing, and dance; she dare not give way to any selfish wishes, for is not the happiness of her child secure? Poor mother!—Gerstaecker's Voyage round the World.

Convention at Madison.

Gur friends will remember that the State Convention, at Madison, will assemble one week from this day, and we earnestly hope that active preparations will be made to give an interest to the meeting which will mark its assembling as an era in the progress of the Temperance cause in Indiana. Let large delegations be sent up from every county in the State.

The following resolutions were passed at an adjourned meeting in Madison, a few days since:

Pursuant to adjournment the friends of Temperance in this city assembled in Templars' Hall, on Thursday eveuing, the 8th inst., Rev. Joseph Cotton in the chair.

On motion of J. C. Thom, the committee of correspondence, previously appointed to invite speakers, was discharged.

Messrs. Wharton, Beckett, and Patton were appointed a committee of arrangements, to procure suitable places for the meetings of the Convention.

On motion of Mr. Silas Ritchie, it was unanimously resolved that all the friends of Temperance in this city be considered delegates to the State Temperance Convention.

On motion of J. C. Thom, it was unanimously resolved that the Friends of Temperance throughout Indiana and the adjoining States, be cordially invited to attend the ensuing State Temperance Convention, to be held in this city on the 28th inst., and that we open our doors for them and bid them welcome.

On motion, the Secretary was instructed to publish the proceedings of this meeting in the city papers, and all papers in the State friendly to the Temperance cause were requested to copy the same.

Adjourned to meet again on Thursday evening, 22d inst., at 7½ o'clock, at the same place.

ROB. J. WHARTON, Sec.

There are certain tears which often deceive ourselves, after having deceived others.

☞ The generality of young people fancy that they are natural, when they are only ill-bred and coarse.

Transmigration.

The iterated question, how people live in New York, will find an answer, at last, in the fact that every thing is saved—every thing, in its widest acceptation. You throw down the envelop of an old letter, or "the remainder" of a half-burned cigar lighter. It is trodden under foot, soiled, but not lost. Presently there comes along a man, a woman, or a child, "hooks" it out of the filth, deposits it in a bag, and goes on with the precious treasure. Who can tell what wonderful machines are busy to-day, masticating to pulp again those same fragments, or what glossy area for thought may not be "extended" thence to-morrow? What politician shall grow patriotic—what poet "find himself famous" thereon, nobody can tell. The wind flutters off a loose rag from a beggar, bears the odious thing a little way on its pure pinion, and lets it fall to its level again—the gutter; and there it lies, but not long. An old woman discovers it, flings it into her basket, where are more akin to it, and hobbles on her way. Next month you may admire some exquisite fabric. It is only that rag in disguise! A pailfull of sand is worth money; a shovelfull of mud is good; filth unimaginable has a price; trash the uttermost finds a market without going to "Cowes." The clippings from your whiskers, if you wear them, are worth something. anything you would naturally throw away is "thankfully received."—There's a mouth, and not a pig's either, for that potato-paring, and many a similar apparatus waters for the melon-rind you have just cast away. Those decayed lemons heaped in the gutter, that you hold your nose at, may suffer a change "into something rich and strange," that you will drink next summer. Who knows? Even the old bones of departed sheep and beeves that will never "come under" again, are carefully gathered from alley and street, and by-and-by will figure on somebody's waistcoat, glittering and glorious, under the name of buttons; or else ground to dust, become the magical powder that shall quicken the pulses in the cold bosom of Mother Earth, till it glows with the floral thoughts of the Summer, or heaves with the swells of the harvest. And thus it is, that in the great city, the transmigration of the meanest into the most beautiful is daily and hourly effected. N. Y. Tribune.

THE LAST PROPOSITION.—A gentleman in Iowa proposes to keep cities free from thunder storms "for so much per year." To most people this offer will be looked upon as preposterous, and yet it is not.—We have no doubt whatever, that an outlay of ten thousand dollars would keep New York as insulated as a glass table, with sealing-wax legs. What a gentleman in Iowa proposes to do for us has already been done for the vine-growers of the South of France. By means of a well-arranged system of lightning rods, a whole district has been rendered inaccessible to those destructive hail-storms which so frequently follow in the train of thunder-showers. What has been done in France can be done elsewhere. If we can teach lightning to write, we can teach it to behave itself.—Lowell Courier.

THE POWER OF A GOOD LIFE.—God and good angels alone know the vast, the incalculable influence that goes into the universe of spirit, and then flows into the universe of matter from the conquered evil, and the voiceless prayer of one solitary soul. Would'st thou bring the world unto God? then live near him thyself. If divine life pervades thine own soul, every thing that touches thee will receive the electric spark, though thou mayest be unconscious of being charged therewith.—This surely would be the highest, to strive to keep near the holy, not for the sake of our own reward here or hereafter, but that through love to God we might bless our neighbor. This should be our end and object.

☞ An interesting little daughter of Mr. John H. Richeson, between three and four years of age, fell, unobserved, into a cistern in a neighboring yard, about noon yesterday. An Irish girl missing her, preceeded to search for her, and finding her little toy bucket near the cistern, and a part of the covering removed, stirred the water attentively with a pole, and brought up the body of the little girl, lifeless but warm—it having been sunk for some time in five feet water. By great exertions, life was restored, and in half an hour she was entirely conscious, and before night running about as usual. The incident excited intense feeling in the community.—Maysville Eayle.

☞ The drunkard is in favor of the Maine Law, on the principle of self defence. He would grasp it withi[illegible] as the traveler would a revolve[illegible] n his [illegible] tacked by a highwayman, not [illegible] r, [illegible] the life of another, but to save hi[illegible] and to keep sorrow and suffering out of his home. The drunkard is struggling with a licensed outlaw, and he looks to Prohibition as his only hope and strength to conquer.

The American Union.

The following table will be found convenient for reference, and is worthy of being preserved:

1607. Virginia first settled by the English.
1614. New York first settled by the Dutch.
1620. Massachusetts first settled by Puritans.
1623. New Hampshire settled by the Puritans.
1624. New Jersey settled by the Dutch.
1627. Delaware settled by the Swedes and Fins.
1634. Maryland settled by Catholics.
1635. Connecticut settled by the Puritans.
1635. Rhode Island by Roger Williams.
1650. North Carolina by the English.
1682. Pennsylvania by William Penn.
1733. Georgia by General Oglethorpe.
1791. Vermont admitted into the Union.
1791. Ky. admitted into the Union.
1796. Tenn. admitted into the Union.
1802. Ohio admitted into the Union.
1811. La. admitted into the Union.
1816. Indiana admitted into the Union.
1817. Miss. admitted into the Union.
1818. Illinois admitted into the Union.
1819. Ala. admitted into the Union.
1820. Maine admitted into the Union.
1821. Missouri admitted into the Union.
1836. Mich. admitted into the Union.
1836. Ark. admitted into the Union.
1845. Florida admitted into the Union.
1845. Texas admitted into the Union.
1846. Iowa admitted into the Union.
1848. Wis. admitted into the Union.
1850. California admitted into the Union.

Cold Infidelity.

Few persons of the present day have done so much with the pen to corrupt the morals of mankind as Bulwer, the great licentious novelist and dramatist. How does such a man review his life—with what feelings and reflections? Hear this prime minister in the court of lewdness and debauchery. In writing to a gentleman in Boston, some years since, he said:

"I have closed my career as a writer of fiction. I am gloomy and unhappy. I have exhausted the powers of life in chasing pleasure where it is not to be found."

How much better if Bulwer had discovered his mistake at an earlier period!—Had he employed his gifted mind in strengthening the cords of virtue, in repressing unholy passions instead of fanning them, how different would have been his review of life! "I am gloomy and unhappy!" Richard Baxter said no such thing at the close of his useful life. He had written much, but he had not "chased pleasure where it is not to be found."

John Bunyan made no such record at the close of his life; nor did Owen, or Edwards, or Brainerd, or Fuller, or Scott, or Payson. Men will reap as they sow, in spite of all their hopes and efforts to the contrary. We have often thought of the Italian actor in Paris. He was "gloomy and unhappy," like Bulwer. He consulted a physician. His physician advised him to mingle in scenes of gayety. "Especially," said he, "go to the Italian theatre, and if Carlini does not dispel your gloom, your case must be desperate indeed." "Alas, sir," replied the patient, I, myself, am Carlini, and while I make all Paris full of laughter and merriment, I am dying with melancholy and chagrin."

What a commentary upon those pleasures in which so many ndulge to keep up their spirits, and drive away melancholy! A life devoted to usefulness—a life of honest piety—is the only one which comes to a close without painful results.

THE SULTAN AND THE UNITED STATES.—Mr. Marsh, the American Minister at Constantinople, on his recent return to that city from Greece, where he went about a year ago on the affairs of Dr. King, was handsomely received by the Sultan. Mr. Marsh was accompanied by the commander and officers of he Levant, and by Captain Walker, of the United States army, and made the Sultan a proper address, in which he gave him assurances of the entire sympathis of the President and people of the United States in the position in which he is placed by the demands of Russia. The Sultan, in reply, expressed his satisfaction with the good feeling which exists in the United States towards himself and his cause, and assured Mr. Marsh that it should be his constant endeavor to cultivate arl strengthen it.

BEGIN RIGHT.—If you are about to do a piece of work, you wil be careful to begin right; otherwise you will have to take it to pieces, and do it oer again. If you are going on a journey, you will be careful, at first, to get on the right road; for, if you start wrong, you will be continually going further and furter out of the way.

Now, you are starting in life, and life is a journey. If you start wrong, as I said, you will be all the tim going out of the way. You have a life work to do, but if you begin it wrong, all your labor will be worse than loss. Not only will you have to do it all over again but to undo what you have done.

Moral Reflections, Sentences, and Maxims.

If a man fancies he loves his mistress for her own sake, he is much mistaken.

We ought to console ourselves for our faults when we have strength of mind to confess them.

Envy is destroyed by true friendship, and coquetry by true love.

The greatest fault in penetration is not the not reaching the mark, but overshooting it.

We give advice, but we do not inspire conduct.

When our merit gives way, our taste gives way also.

Fortune displays our virtues and our vices, as light makes all objects apparent.

The constraint we put on ourselves to remain faithful to a person we love is scarcely better than an infidelity.

Our actions are like "bouts rimes," which every one makes refer to whatever he pleases.

We ought only to be astonished that we are still able to be astonished.

Men are almost equally difficult to satisfy when they have very much love, and when they have scarcely any left.

There are few people who are more often in the wrong than those who cannot endure to be so.

A fool has not stuff enough to be good.

If vanity does not entirely overthrow the virtues, at least it makes them all totter.

What renders the vanity of others insupportable is, that it wounds our own.

Fortune never appears so blind as she does to those on whom she confers no favors.

A man may be more cunning than another, but not more cunning than all others.

A MAGNIFICENT SPECULATION.—Our friend, Bateham, of the Cultivator, has just returned from an inspection of the famous peach orchard of Mr. Davis, about two miles east of Milford, Clermont county. He says it is the finest fruit sight he ever saw. One hundred acres of ground are covered with ten thousand peach trees. They were set out six years ago. In 1850, they averaged one basket, or three quarters of a bushel a tree, which brought him ten thousand dollars. This paid for his land and trees, with something over. Last year there was no fruit. This year they will average three baskets to a tree. They readily sell for from $1.25 to $1.50 per basket. The crop of this season will bring him $30,000, with a nett profit of $25,000. Before the peaches were ripe, Mr. Davis was offered twenty thousand dollars for the fruit this year. He had been offered one hundred dollars per acre for his trees alone, but he can do much better to keep them. The fruit is now in its glory, and presents one of the finest sights imaginable.

Such things should stimulate others to go and follow his example. There is no danger of overstocking the market, for railroads will soon carry the fruit to every State and city of the Union. Think of these things, farmers of Ohio.—Ohio State Journal.

THE YEAR OF PESTILENCE.—For a year past, the yellow fever has been raging with great virulence on the coast of South America and in a number of the West India islands. At the island of Hayti probably not less than one hundred American officers and seamen have died, besides a large number of the inhabitants. At Jamaica, Demerara, Antigua, &c., it has been very fatal. The West India English fleet has lost many seamen and several valuable officers by the disease. In one case a British steamer lost seventy-five men. In Cuba, the cholera and yellow fever together have carried off thousands. On the coast of South America, Rio Janeiro has been visited, the British consul, among others, falling a victi[illegible] the dreadful disorder. At Bahi[illegible] has been quite fatal; and a[illegible] reached New Orleans, and a[illegible] off more victims than at a[illegible] sit it has ever made to tha[illegible]

INTEMPERANCE AND [illegible] Starnes, of the middle ci[illegible] his statistics to Governor [illegible] as follows:—"In every [illegible] tried, of all kinds, there h[illegible] three and one-third cases [illegible] evidence connected the use [illegible] rits as a cause; or just one [illegible] ery hundred cases of crim[illegible] person, there have been forty [illegible] sixth cases with which the [illegible] nected the use of spirituous [illegible] cause; by which it appears [illegible] one-half of crime against t[illegible] more or less attributable to [illegible] quors."

☞ The error of one m[illegible] the sorrow of a whole life.

A MONUMENT TO AN HONEST BOY.—Nathan C. Ely, of New York City, has contributed ten dollars towards the erection of a monument to the little Norwegian boy, named Iverson, who was pitched into the lake and drowned by two of his associates, at Chicago, because he would not go into a garden and steal fruit for them. A Chicago citizen also contributed five dollars, and the Democratic Press appeals to the Sunday Schools to take up contributions for this purpose. Accounts of the cause of the little fellow's death were circulated among the Sunday School classes in Chicago, that they might learn of one who had so beautifully illustrated the principles of Christianity.

☞ The Fifth Annual Session of the Grand Union of the Daughters of Temperance of the State of Indiana will commence in the Hall of the Temple of Honor, in the city of Indianapolis, on Wednesday, October 28, 1853, at 3 o'clock P. M.

R. HINDS, G. P. S.
E. RICHMOND, G. S. S.

Notice.

The Grand Section of C. of T., of Indiana, will hold its Sixth Annual Session, in Temperance Hall, Indianapolis, commencing on Monday, October 24th, at 1½ o'clock, P. M. As there is much business of importance to transact, representatives will please be punctual in attending.

Sections will please forward their quarterly returns to the G. S. before the 20th of October, or they may loose their charters. HENRY OHR, G. S. of C. of T.

Indianapolis, August 17th, 1853.

Notice.

The Eighth Annual Session of the Grand Division of the Sons of Temperance of the State of Indiana, will commence in Temperance Hall in the City of Indianapolis, on Tuesday, October 25, 1853, at 6 o'clock P. M. P. S. SAGE, G. W. P.

C. WOODWARD, G. S.

August 1, 1853.

$25 Premium.

The undersigned Committee on the state of the Order of the Grand Section of Cadets of Temperance of Indiana, offer the above premium for the most acceptable Initiatory ceremony for Cadets of Temperance. Competitors for the same to be members of some Temperance organization.

All manuscripts to be forwarded to Henry Ohr, G. S., on or before the 20th day of October next.

THEOPHILUS ROBINSON,
H. C. NEWCOMB, } Com.
HENRY OHR,

Indianapolis, Aug. 6th, 1853.

Torchlight and Indiana Cadet please copy.

To Printers.

The Committee of Publication for the "Temperance Chart," will receive sealed proposals, until October 25, 1853, for the printing of said paper, including the paper and the delivery of the sheets folded, to the Editor, at his office in Indianapolis. The proposals to state the price of paper, and rate of composition and press work, with a sample of the quality of the paper to be used.

WM. HANNAMAN.
JAMES HALL.
C. E. BABB.
R. T. BROWN.
August, 1853. J. B. ABBETT.

Call for a State Temperance Convention.

A State Temperance Convention will be held at Madison, Jefferson county, Indiana, beginning on the 28th of September next, and continuing as long as it may determine.

JOHN A. MCCLUNG,
WM. WILSON,
JOHN C. STEELE,
JOHN O'KANE,
WILLI[illegible] HANNAMAN, } State Central Committee.
C[illegible]

CHARTERS.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR A DIVISION S. OF T.

(Date.)

The undersigned inhabitants of ——, believing the Order of the Sons of Temperance to be well calculated to extend the blessings of total abstinence, and promote the general welfare of mankind, respectfully petition the Grand Division of the —— of ——, to grant them a Charter to open a new Division, to be called the —— Division, No. —, Sons of Temperance, of the —— of ——, to be located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves, individually and collectively, to be governed by the rules and usages of said Grand Division, and also, by those of the National Division.

Enclosed is the Charter Fee, $5 00. Books, $2 00.

This must be signed by at least eight persons of good character and standing in community, and sent to C. WOODWARD, G. S., Indianapolis, Ind., free of postage.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR A TEMPLE.

(Date.)

The undersigned, believing the Temple of Honor to be well calculated to cement more firmly our fraternal relations, and add to the general prosperity of the cause of Temperance, respectfully petition the Grand Temple of the —— of ——, to grant them a Charter to open a new Temple, to be called the —— Temple of Honor, No. —, of the —— of ——, to be located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves individually and collectively, to be governed by the rules and usages of the Grand Temple, and also by those of the Order at large.

Enclosed is the Charter Fee, $20 00.

To be directed to the G. W. R., free of postage.

This must be signed by at least twenty persons of good standing, and if not known to the G. W. T. or G. W. R., must send satisfactory references.

J. H. OHR, G. W. R.

Indianapolis, Ind.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR CADETS OF TEMPERANCE.

The undersigned, boys of ——, believing the Order of Cadets of Temperance to be well calculated to extend the blessings of total abstinence, and promote the general welfare of mankind, respectfully petition the Grand Section of the State of Indiana, to grant them a charter to open a new Section, to be called the —— Section, No. ——, Cadets of Temperance, of the State of Indiana, to be located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves, individually and collectively to be governed by the rules and usages of said Grand Section, and also those of the acting Head of the Order.

Enclosed is the fee for Charter, R. B.'s and officers' cards, $5 00.

It must also be stated whether the applicants are members of the Order or not; if they are, of what Section. The application to be directed to the Grand Secretary, free of postage.

It must also be certified by a W. P. or P. W. P, that the W. Patron elect is a Son of Temperance in good standing.

Address (post paid) HENRY OHR, G. S., C. o T., Indianapolis, Indiana.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR DAUGHTERS OF TEMPERANCE.

(Date.)

The undersigned, inhabitants of ——, believing the Order of the Daughters of Temperance to be well calculated to extend the blessings of Total Abstinence, and promote the general welfare of mankind, respectfully petition the Grand Union to grant them a charter to open a new Union to be called the —— Union, No. —, D. of T., of the State of Indiana, located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves, individually and collectively, to be governed by the rules and usages of said Grand Union.

Enclosed is the Charter Fee, $5 00.

The above must be signed by at least eleven females, of proper age and good standing in community.

Address (post paid,) Mrs. ELIZA RICHMOND, G. S. S., Indianapolis, Indiana.

New Watch and Jewelry Store.

No 1, Bates House, Washington Street,

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

WE have now open the largest and best assortment of fine Watches and rich Jewelry ever offered in this city, to which we invite the examination of the public.

Our stock is all new—selected with great care, and comprises Watches, Diamond Work, Chains, Pins, Rings, Pencils, Lockets, of all kinds; Silver Ware, Clocks, Perfumery, Brushes, Soaps, Plated Ware, Castors, Fruit Baskets, &c., which we will sell for CASH at New York prices. Mr. E. W. NEFF, of this city, has taken charge of the Watch repairing department, and will spare no pains to give satisfaction to our customers.

july 6-tf E J. BALDWIN & CO.

D. CRAIGHEAD. R. BROWNING.

CRAIGHEAD & BROWNING,

Dealers in all kinds of

Drugs, Medicines, Surgical Instruments, Paints, Oils, Chemicals, Varnishes, Dye Stuffs, Glassware Window Glass, Brushes, Cosmetics, Spices, Cigars, Tobacco, Perfumery, &c.,

WASHINGTON STREET,

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

ALL are respectfully invited to call and examine our stock and prices, as we feel confident we can render satisfaction both as to prices and quality of articles. Great care is taken in the selection of articles, in reference to their purity, as we endeavor at all times to keep such [illegible] strictly pure [illegible] est object of all this is, [illegible] the force of the Convention as a Temperance Organization—and means of effecting the salvation of Indiana.

The Sentinel dreads the impending future; for in it, its editor sees the triumph of Prohibition, and the prostration of such whisky-scullions as himself. He knows it will be remembered (and to have it recorded it is our sin) that he has been the mouth-piece of all that is degraded and degrading in the whisky traffic; and he fears the coming reckoning. It will not be forgotten that he defeated the lamented Morris for the Legislature, as the whisky candidate. It will not be forgotten that he libeled the Maine Law to defeat another excellent Temperance man for the Senate in 1852. It will not be forgotten, that as late as last winter, when the friends of

---

COMMERCIAL COLLEGE,

(Late Commercial Institute,)

Of Indianapolis,

Established March 31, 1851.

INCORPORATED, 1853.

W. McK. SCOTT, A. M., Founder and President.

JAMES C. HAYDEN, (Late Professor in Bacon's Mercantile College, Cincinnati,)

PROF. OF BOOK-KEEPING AND PENMANSHIP.

THE Session will commence at College Hall as follows:

1st Session on the first Monday of September.
2d Session on the 1st Monday of November.
3d Session on the 1st Monday of January.
4th Session on the 1st Monday of March.
5th Session on the 1st Monday of May.

Having secured, permanently, the services of the distinguished Professor above named, and leased for a term of years the commodious and beautiful Hall formerly known as CONCERT HALL, but now named COLLEGE HALL, which is to be fitted up in a style of great elegance, taste, and convenience, the President would say, that this College now offers advantages superior to all others, for imparting a sound, thorough, and accomplished business education

COURSE OF STUDIES.

The Course of Studies, as enlarged, will be as follows, viz:

1. Book-Keeping, by Single and Double Entry, in all its various branches, and its application to all kinds of business.
2. The Laws, Customs, and Usages of Trade and Commerce.
3. Mercantile Arithmetic, upon the short and easy system of cancelation, (taught in no other College.)
4. Commercial Law, in a series of Lectures, thorough and systematic.
5. Business Penmanship.
6. Commercial Correspondence.
7. Lectures upon Banking, Political Economy, and other subjects valusble to the business man.

EXPENSES.

Cards of Admission, invariably in advance, or secured, $25; Diplomas $3; Stationery $5; Boarding $2 50 per week; incidentals, at option of student, $15. Making entire expenses about $75.

On application, a Catalogue will be furnished, giving full particulars.

All letters will receive prompt attention on being directed, post-paid, to

june 8 W. McK. SCOTT, President.

"God never made his works for man to mend."
DR. FRANKLIN.

KIER'S ROCK OIL.

A NEW AND MOST IMPORTANT REMEDY FOR DISEASE.

DISCOVERED IN 1849.

IS drawn from a deep well near Pittsburgh—has been used with remarkable success in Ohio and Pennsylvania, and more Eastern States—and is now working its way West. An opportunity is now offered to the Afflicted for testing it. Where known and tried, it at once makes firm friends, and cures which are eloquent in its praise. Certificates of its power to heal are at hand—but we know well, reader, that such evidence, to have weight with you, now-a-days, must be in your own neighborhood.—You have only to try the Oil to be satisfied—it will SPEAK FOR ITSELF.

We have no war with the legion of Nostrums and Specifics of the day—we know but little about them—some say they are good for nothing. However that may be, the

Petroleum

will not be suppressed and kept back by reason of the above nostrums—duty and inclination both forbid it.

Those who are afflicted, are respectfully invited to get a Circular and look over the Directions for Ague, Rheumatism, Piles, Diarrhœa, Flux, Tooth Ache, Burns, Worms, Scrofula, Coughs, Bronchitis, Croup, Old Sores, Cholera Morbus, Contractions of the Limbs and Joints, Sore Eyes, Blindness, Costiveness, Dyspepsia, and other Diseases.

By that time you may say, "it cures too much." But recollect it is not a HUMAN INVENTION, but compounded by Nature's master hand—and Nature does not do her work by halves.

The Oil is used both internally and externally.

As AGUE, SORE EYES, PILES, RHEUMATISM, and SCROFULA are so common in many parts of the West, we are constrained to say, that while this Oil will cure and relieve other diseases, it has been and is constantly used with most complete success in these cases.

☞ Price 50 cents per Bottle (half pint.)

Beware of all Rock Oil preparations, as some persons are offering a spurious article. Look for S. M. KIER'S name written on the label of the bottle.

For sale by the Druggists throughout Indiana, and by TOMLINSON BROTHERS, J. P. POPE & Co., S. ROSENGARTEN, WM. TILLEY, and at wholesale by W. W. ROBERTS, Indianapolis, Indiana.

R. M. LYON, Fort Wayne,

may25 10w Proprietor in the Western States.

SOMETHING NEW.

LATHROP & STEVENS, Wholesale and Retail Dealers in BOOTS AND SHOES, at the West room in the Bates House, Washington Street, Indianapolis.

We are now opening a new and splendid stock of Boots and Shoes of every variety and style, which we are receiving direct from the manufacturers.—We design to keep constantly on hand a good assortment of the best quality of goods manufactured, which we can warrant to give satisfaction to all who may give them a trial. We will sell by the case, dozen, or single pair, at low prices for cash.—Our stock consists in part of Gents' fine Cloth, silk warp, glove kid, buck, patent calf, and enameled Gaiters and Ties of every variety and style; Ladies' fine silk warp Gaiters, Buskins, Ties, Slippers and Boots; Misses' ditto; Men's calf, goat, kip, and thick Boots and Brogans; Boys' and Youths' ditto; assorted Ladies, kid, goat and calf Boots and Buskins; Misses' ditto. Also every variety of Children's Shoes. Come and see for yourselves.

LATHROP & STEVENS,

may 25 4w Indianapolis, Indiana.

TEMPERANCE INN,

Bloomington, Indiana.

We [illegible] M. ORCHARD, PROPRIETORS.

as follo[illegible]

tucky gent[illegible] ERS will find it to their advantage to to a New [illegible] accommodation of the TEMPERANCE send him a[illegible]ce for all the different routes, in con-ance with th[illegible] House. may25 6m ¶ sent Mr. Will[illegible]

this Kentucky [illegible] ONDER of the 19th CENTURY.

Kentucky, he [illegible] W. BENNETT'S

as a teacher, [illegible] ted Eye-Balm.

the functions o[illegible] R CHRONIC, SORE, INFLA-neighborhood [illegible] ND WEAK EYES.

time he read [illegible] Dr. George W. Bennett, and for opportunity th[illegible] nts and Druggists generally.

fine talent for[illegible] n excellent and certain cure for end of his yea[illegible] amed Eyes, in all cases of Psoroic, the lists as a[illegible] urulent Opthalmia, and what is fearlessness a[illegible] wild hairs in the eye-lids. It is of the man, h[illegible] ttile, Purulent, and Scrofulous In-

Indiana, not[illegible] Eyes, and all in the various dis-tion of the b[illegible] s, that prevail among the human ablest in ou[illegible] climate. It will be found a sover-shown, that, [illegible] properly applied.

over-estimate[illegible] ERTS, Indianapolis, Ind, General of Indiana, to whom all orders must [illegible]e---Twenty-five Cents.

[illegible] above Balm to cure if the directions

[illegible]ved, or return the money.

G. W. BENNETT.

REAL ESTATE AND GENERAL AGENCY OFFICE,

INDIANAPOLIS, INDIANA.

UNDER THE CONTROL OF W. M'K. SCOTT, Attorney & Counsellor at Law, and Notary Public.

The attention of the Agency will be devoted,

First—To the collection of debts and the payment of Taxes for non-residents in any county in the State. Also, the redemption of Lands sold for Taxes, sale, purchase or lease of Lands, purchase of adverse claims, examination and perfection of Title, &c., &c.

Second—To the prosecution of claims against the General Government, procuring Land Warrants, Patent Rights, and Pensions under the various Pension Laws, &c.

Third—All other Miscellaneous agencies as may be intrusted to the care of this office.

Fourth—The taking of Depositions and Attestation of all instruments requiring a seal

In all cases requiring an outlay of money for the benefit of individuals, the requisite funds must be transmitted in advance.

Prompt attention to all letters on business that are pre-paid. Address W. M'K. SCOTT,

Real Estate and General Agent,

jan 5-1y Indianapolis, Ind.

ADAMS & CO'S EXPRESS.

WE are now running a daily line East and West, accompanied by special messengers, and with the speed of the mails, running our own cars with the passenger trains.

Packages will be received at the cars up to the time of starting, and at our office until 1 o'clock each day.

We are prepared to transport packages, bank notes and specie, to and from any of the eastern cities, also, Louisville, Frankfort, and Lexington, Ky., St. Louis, Mo., or any points on the Ohio and Mississippi rivers; and to and from Terre Haute, and all intermediate points, and to forward freight from Terre Haute up and down the Wabash.

In addition to these, we have the most complete arrangements for transporting packages to and from California and Europe.

Exchange on England, Ireland, and Scotland, for sale, payable at any bank in the kingdom.

Foreign passage tickets; by Grinnell, Minturn & Co.'s line to Liverpool and London, constantly on hand, and for sale at the lowest rates.

Notes, drafts, and bills collected in any of the Eastern or Western cities.

Orders for goods to be returned by Express, sent free. Our rates of charges have been greatly reduced, and the public will find this a safe and expeditious method of transportation.

Indianapolis, June 30, 1852. ADAMS & CO.

Office in Indianapolis in Journal Building, west side Pennsylvania Street.

Office open during business hours.

june30 1y C. WOODWARD, Agent.

The Cheapest Illustrated Paper for the Young.

PRICE ONLY TEN CENTS A YEAR, or nearly three papers for one cent, where 100 copies are taken.

Twenty-six numbers a year, and each number illustrated with from three to seven engravings.

The Youth's Penny Gazette,

A strictly Religious and Moral Paper, is published by the AMERICAN SUNDAY SCHOOL UNION and is designed to furnish the Children and Youth of the United States with reading matter, in a popular form, for the improvement of Mind and Heart.

It is published (not monthly, nor weekly, but) every other week, or twenty-six numbers in a year. It is religious but unsectarian, and the matter is carefully prepared with a view to the habits, character and prospects of American Youth.

TERMS OF THE PENNY GAZETTE.

$10 a year, in advance, for 100 copies, to one address. $5 a year, in advance, for 40 copies, to one address. $3 a year, in advance, for 20 copies, to one address. Single subscriptions, 25 cents per year.

TERMS BY MAIL, POSTAGE PAID.

☞ When the postage is paid at the place of mailing, the terms are very low. For $15 remitted, we will send 100 copies of the paper for one year, to one address—we paying postage. For $7 remitted, we will send 40 copies of the paper to one address, for one year—we paying postage. For $3 50 remitted, we will send 20 copies of the paper for one year, to one address—we paying postage. Less than 20 cannot be sent at this cheap rate.

Subscriptions received at the Society's House, No. 146 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.

Feb 16 3w G. S. SCOFIELD, Agent.

TO BUILDERS.

North Western Christian University.

THE Building Committee of the Board of Directors of the North-Western Christiana University, propose contracting for the west wing of the University Building, to be put up on the University grounds in the vicinity of Indianapolis.

Sealed Proposals in detail, with prices affixed for doing the work necessary to the completion of the said Wing, will be received until the 19th day of July next, and may be handed to the undersigned, or to J. T. Cox, Secretary of the Company, at the Book Store of Cox & Mathes, in Indianapolis.

The materials and work to be according to the plan, drawings and specifications prepared by Wm. Tinsley, Architect, which may be seen and examined at his room, on the east side of Pennsylvania street, three doors north of the north-east Diagonal, in Indianapolis. The specifications have been materially changed and modified, so as to reduce the cost of the building.

Proposals for the whole combined, would be preferred; but will be received for the different parts and portions thereof separately. The whole to be completed and fit for use by the first day of September, 1854.

Payments will be made as the work progresses, at such short periods as may suit the convenience of the Contractors. Bond and security will be required for the performance of the work.

In behalf of the Building Committee:

OVID BUTLER,

President of the Board of Directors.

June 10, 1853. june 22 3w

LITTLE, DRUM & ANDERSONS

WHOLESALE DEALERS IN

STAPLE AND FANCY DRY GOODS, BOOTS, SHOES, HATS, CAPS, STATIONERY, NOTIONS, TRIMMINGS, GROCERIES, HARDWARE, QUEENSWARE, AND GLASSWARE,

North side of Washington Street,

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

WE are receiving country Produce of all descriptions, and paying the highest market price. Dealers visiting Indianapolis are respectfully invited to call and examine our stock and prices, both for Produce and Merchandise generally. june30 tf

---

JAMES HALL,

MERCHANT TAILOR,

No. 2. Temperance Hall, Indianapolis,

Manufacturing Clothing Emporium,

Wholesale and Retail Dealer in Ready Made Clothing, Cloths, Cassimers, Vestings, Trimmings, Trunk Sachels, Canes, Umbrellas, Hats, Caps, a every description of Gentlemen's Furnishing.

Also:

General Agency for the sale of GRAND AND SUBORDINATE REGALIA, EMBLEMS, CEREMONIES, &c., FOR THE ORDERS OF MASONS, ODD FELLOWS, TEMPLE OF HONOR, SONS, DAUGHTERS, AND CADETS OF TEMPERANCE. oct27 1y

---

The American Life and Health Insurance Company.

Office—No. 7, South Third St., Philadelphia.

Officers.

LEONARD JEWELL, President.
JAMES PEACOCK, Treasurer.
JOHN C. SIMS, Sec'y and Actuary.
THOS. S. SMITH, Solicitor

JOHN F. BIRD, FRED. A. FICKARDT, } Medical Examiners.

CHARLES WOODWARD, Indianapolis, Ind., General Agent for the State of Indiana.

THIS Company issues policies at Total Abstinence Rates, Joint stock Rates, and at Mutual Rates, which for $1000 on the life of a person 30 years of age, are as follows:

Age.	Total Abstinence.	Joint Stock.	Mutual
30	$15.40	$19.60	$23.60

A further table of Rates will be furnished at the Office.

The condition in Total Abstinence rates (believed to be the lowest in the Union.) is entire forfeiture upon the departure of the Insured from Total Abstinence in its strictest sense.

Policies at Joint Stock and Mutual rates, contain no condition except as usual in Life Insurance.

HEALTH INSURANCE DEPARTMENT.

All Moneys received from the Insured, for Annual Premiums, after deducting expenses, will be divided among the Sick

The Public have for some time been familiar with the subject of Life and Health Insurance, but it is obvious that too little thoughts has been given to the latter. LIFE Insurance benefits our successors, while HEALTH Insurance directly benefits ourselves. It makes provision for a time of sickness, when the products of a man's industry are cut off, and want unites with Disease to aggravate his distress. It is at this gloomy period, when he is prostrated and helpless, and when despondency would otherwise overwhelm him, that the holder of a Health Insurance Policy will realize its benefits.

RATES, under 50 years of age,

$2,00	per year,	for	$2,00	per week.
3,00	"	"	3,00	"
4,00	"	"	4,00	"
5,00	"	"	5,00	"
6,00	"	"	6,00	"

Over fifty and under sixty.

$2,50	per year,	for	$2,50	per week.
3,75	"	"	3,00	"
5,00	"	"	4,00	"
6,25	"	"	5,00	"
7,50	"	"	6,00	"

When the Fund shall amount to Three Dollars and upwards for every person insured and sufficient to warrant an additional distribution, the weekly allowances will be increased in accordance with the Rules of the Policy.

All the members of a Temple or Division insured at greatly reduced rates.

Applications for Agencies in any of the cities or towns in the State, should be made to the undersigned, post paid, or in person.

As Agent for the above Company, I am prepared to receive applications for Policies at any of the above rates.

CHARLES WOODWARD, Agent,
At ADAMS & CO.'S Express Office.

J. L. MOTHERSHEAD, Medical Examiner.

june 30 '52-1y

Ohio Life Insurance Company,

Capital $100,000.

JOINT STOCK AND MUTUAL,

CINCINNATI.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS.

Wm. Burnet, Jno. N. Ridgway, Chas. Goodman, S. Robert, E. S. Haines, Jno. M. Blair, J. W. Donohue, Eden B. Reeder, Wm. Person.

WM. BURNET, President.

S. W. REEDER, Sec'y J. W. DONOHUE, Vice Pres't

Office in Reeder's Building, Third street, between Almy's and City Bank.

This Company insures Lives at the lowest rates consistent with safety, either upon the Joint Stock or Mutual plan.

In the Joint Stock Department, premium payable quarterly, semi-annually or annually. On the Mutual plan, one-half the premium paid in Cash, the balance by a note bearing six per cent. interest—the interest only payable annually. Persons insuring on the mutual plan, participate in the profits of the Company in that department.

The undersigned having been appointed agent for the above Company, is prepared to fill applications for Life Insurance, on favorable terms.

Any information on the subject and pamphlets explaining the nature and utility of Life Insurance, furnished without charge, at the office of the Agent.

C. WOODWARD, Agent.

Office at Adam's & Co.'s Express Office, Journal Building, Pennsylvania street, Indianapolis, Ind.

june 30, '52-1y.

Railroad City Book Store.

COX & MATHES,

South side of Washington, between Illinois and Meridian streets,

INDIANAPOLIS, INDIANA.

AT wholesale and retail, Standard and Miscellaneous Works, Law, and Medical Books, School Books, Plain and Fancy Stationery, Blank Books, Wall Papers, &c., &c. mar 2

CHEAP WATCHES & JEWELRY.

Good Gold Watches at $24!

WE are now in our new Room No. 1, Palmer House, with a lot of beautiful Watches and Jewelry which we are selling lower than ever heretofore sold in Indianapolis, for instance we sell

Good 18 K Case Gold Lepines at $24.
" 18 K " " Levers at $28.
" Silver Anchor Levers $12 to $18.
" " Cylenders, $9 to $12.
" " Quarter's $6 to $10.

In addition to the above we have a fine assortment of other description of Watches all of which we will sell lower than any other firm dare sell in the place. I have in my employ a very superior Watch Repairer who will always be on on hand to do watch repairing of every description. Mr. Michot has worked in Geneva, Paris, New York and other large cities and has had great experience in his Branch of the business. All Watches warranted for one year, and the money in all cases refunded, provided they do not give entire satisfaction.

feb9 tf E. W. NEFF.

SMALL CHANGE.

THE undersigned is prepared to furnish Merchants and others with three cent pieces from the United States Mint at Philadelphia, free of transportation, in sums of 30, 60, and 90 dollars, upon deposit of Gold or Eastern Exchange. Also cents and half cents upon payment of frieght on gold to Philadelphia, or on Eastern Exchange free of freight.

C. WOODWARD, Agent,

june 30 Adams & Co.'s Express.

A CHANCE TO MAKE MONEY.

Pos[illegible]e and honorable Employment!

[illegible]bles[illegible]

THE [illegible]riber is desirous of having an agent in each [illegible]nty and town of the Union. A capital of from $5 to $10 only will be required, and anything like an efficient, energetic man can make from three to five dollars per day; indeed some of the Agents now employed are realizing twice that sum. Every information will be given by addressing, (postage paid) WM. A. KINSLER,

june 15 3w ¶ Box 601, Philadelphia P. O.

THE ILLUSTRATED MAGAZINE OF ART.

THE five numbers of this Magazine which are published, place it at the head of publications of this kind No expense will be spared to make it in every respect worthy of the name, the "Illustrated Magazine of Art. The Engavings which are preparing for the future numbers are in the hands of first-class American and European Artists.

A Series of most interesting Tales will appear in it. "The School of Life," written and Illustrated by ANNA MARY, daughter of William and Mary Howitt, will shortly appear; also, "The Dead Bridal," an historical romance, illustrative of the most interesting period in the history of the Venetian Republic, by JONATHAN FREKE SLINGSBY, of the Dublin University Magazine; contributions, too, from WILLIAM and MARY HOWITT, PERCY B. ST. JOHN, and other writers of distinction in America and Europe

The following is a brief outline of the plan of the Magazine:

I. The Historical Department will abound with picturesque representations of the most remarkable events which have occurred in this and other countries; accompanied with interesting anecdotes and details from the pen of the most eminent writers of the day. This department will contain several splendid engravings, designed by the first artists of the world, and engraved in the highest style of modern art.

II. The Men and Women of the Age. This department will consist of beautifully executed portraits of the leading characters of the age, especially of those who figure on the stage of humanity as the world's benefactors. Each portrait will be accompanied by an interesting biographical sketch.

III. The Wonders of Natural History, Botany, and other sciences, will be developed in choice Engravings of Beasts, Birds, Fishes, Insects, Forest Trees, Flowers, Geological and Fossil Specimens, &c., with accompanying descriptions.

IV. The Triumphs of Architectural Art will be displayed in exquisitely finished representations of Cathedrals, Churches, Palaces, and other models of ancient and modern Architectural Art.

V. The Works of the Great Masters, selected from the principal Galleries of Art in the World. In general, the portrait of the Master will be given, accompanied with a highly finished engraved copy of his chef d'œuvre.

VI. The Scientific Portions will be rendered highly interesting by the familiar explanations, and the numerous diagrams which will accompany each subject.

VII. Manufactures. The principal manufacturing processes in use will be fully explained by minute details, and an abundance of beautiful engravings.

VIII. Machinery and Inventions will have due attention paid to them, and be described by numerous appropriate engravings.

IX. The Literary Department, independently of the various articles accompanying the illustrations, will comprise original and interesting narratives, contributed by the most popular writers of the day, with numerous illustrations.

In every respect, the "Illustrated Magazine of Art," will be decidedly

SUPERIOR TO ANY MAGAZINE OF THE DAY.

Each Monthly part will contain at least Thirty superb Engravings, four of which will be printed separately, on supefine Plate Paper.

The greatest care will be manifested in every department of production. The Paper will be of the first manufacture, and the Ink supplied from the celebrated Printing Ink Establishment of Messrs. Lawson & Co., of Paris. Six of the monthly portions, when completed, will form a volume which, for interest, originality, value and beauty, will defy competition. It will not only be an interesting family book, but a rich ornament for the drawing-room table, and a pleasant companion in the study.

The parts will appear on the First of every Month at Twenty-five Cents each.

ALEXANDER MONTGOMERY,

may 25 17 Spruce Street, New-York.

SPLENDIDLY ILLUSTRATED WORKS.

THE ALPS, SWITZERLAND, SAVOY AND LOMBARDY.

With the Magazine for June will be ready, Part I., price Twenty-five Cents, of a Magnificent Work to be completed in Twelve Monthly Parts, entitled

THE ALPS, SWITZERLAND, SAVOY AND LOMBARDY, with an account of the most recent Ascents to Mont Blanc, &c. By the Rev. Charles Williams. This work, when completed, will form a large thick Volume, in Imperial Octavo, containing upwards of Three Hundred beautiful Engravings, descriptive of the peculiar Scenery of those most interesting portions of Europe, with the Occupations of the Inhabitants, &c., &c.

Cassell's Natural History.

On the First of July will commence

CASSELL'S NATURAL HISTORY, which for variety, beauty and completeness, will claim to be considered as a first-class work, upon this most interesting subject. The First volume will be devoted to the Feathered Tribe of the Creation and will contain upwards of Three Hundred Engravings, in the first style of Art. The volume will be completed in Twelve Monthly Parts, Imperial Octavo. Price 25 cents each.

History of England.

On the First of July will appear Part I., price 25 cts. of THE ILLUSTRATED HISTORY OF ENGLAND, from the earliest period on record to the present time. Edited by ROBERT FERGUSON, LL. D.

This History, which is intended to form a great National Work, will extend to Four Volumes, Imperial Octavo; each Volume to be completed in Twelve Monthly Parts, price 25 cents each. The Work will comprehend the Political, Civil, and Domestic History of the Nation, and its Progress in Civilization, Literature, Art, &c. It will be profusely Illustrated with Engravings from Designs by GILBERT, PHILLIPPOTEAUX, WILLIAMS, and others. Representations of the most remarkable Events will be worked separately upon Plate Paper. The Portraits will form a complete Gallery, not only of the Monarchs, but of those individuals whose names are prominent in England's History. Also, Antiquities, including Autographs, Buildings, Costume, Furniture, Arms, Coins, Monuments, Manufactures &c., of each Epoch.

History of Hungary.

July First will be published, in one Handsome Volume, Imperial Octavo, price, One Dollar and Twenty-five Cents, in Cloth Boards,

THE ILLUSTRATED HISTORY OF HUNGARY, AND THE MAGYARS, from the Earliest Period to the close of the late War. By EDWARD LAWRENCE GODKIN. The Volume will be Illustrated with One Hundred highly finished Engravings, including representations of the principal Battles; Portraits of the early Kings, and of the Statesmen and Generals who figured in the War of Independence; Costumes of the Peasantry, &c.; Views of the chief Towns and Fortresses, &c.; with an accurate Description of the Manners and Customs of the People, their Literature, Commerce, Arts, &c.

ALEXANDER MONTGOMERY,

may25 Publisher, 17 Spruce Street, New-York.

MANSION HOUSE,

Cambridge City, Indiana.

J. CUNNINGHAM, Proprietor.

TRAVELLERS

Will find it to their advantage to call and try the accommodation of the MANSION HOUSE.

STAGE OFFICE also in connection with this House.

may 4 6m

INDIANA STATE LIBRARY

TEMPERANCE CHART.

A Weekly Journal:---Devoted to Temperance, Morality, Education, Literature, Useful Arts, Science, General Intelligenc, &c.

J. W. GORDON, M. D., EDITOR.] ORGAN OF THE GRAND DIVISION OF INDIANA. [JOHN H. OHR, PRINTER.

VOL. III. INDIANAPOLIS, IND., WEDNESDAY, SEPT. 28, 1853. NO. 14.

THE TEMPERANCE CHART,

IS PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY, BY THE GRAND DIVISION, S. of T. OF INDIANA.

Edited by J. W. Gordon, M. D.

To whom all Communications and Subscriptions must be addressed, post-paid.

OFFICE—in second story of Temperance Hall Building, Washington St., Indianapolis.

TERMS:

Single copy, one year, ... 75 cts.

☞ In advance in all cases,

TERMS OF ADVERTISING.—Circulation 4000 copies.

One Squre, (12 lines,) for one week,	$0 50
" " for each subsequent insertion,	25
" " for 3 months,	3 00
" " for 6 months,	5 00
" " for 1 year without alteration,	8 00
" " for 1 year, with changes	12 00

A reduction made on larger advertisements.
Cuts double the above rates.
Advertisements must be handed in by Saturday, of each week, to insure insertion.
Applications for advertising, or for any kind of Printing for the Order, must be made to
J. H. OHR, Indianapolis.

POETRY.

The Strayed Lamb.

A giddy lamb, one afternoon,
Had from the fold departed;
The tender shepherd missed it soon,
And sought it broken-hearted.

Not all the flock that shared his love,
Could from the search delay him;
Nor clouds of midnight darkness move,
Nor fear of suffering stay him.

Bnt night and day he went his way,
In sorrow, till he found it;
And when he saw it fainting lay,
He clasped his arms around it.

And closely sheltered in his breast,
From every ill to save it;
He brought it to his home of rest,
And pitied and forgave it.

And so the Saviour will receive
The LITTLE ONES that fear him;
Their pains remove, their sins forgive,
And draw them gently near Him;

Bless while they live, and when they die,
When soul and body sever,
Conduct them to his home on high,
To dwell with Him for ever.

MISCELLANEOUS.

The Carson League.

As most of our readers know, perhaps, this is a combination of Temperance men, in the State of New York, organized under the influence of Mr. Thomas Carson, and extending throughout several of the interior counties of that State. At the World's Convention, Mr. Carson, gave an account of the plan and its operations, as follows:

MR. PRESIDENT:—For many years the friends of Temperance have been endeavoring in various ways to do something to rid the country of the curse of rum-selling. We have made speeches, passed resolutions, and sung songs, but our efforts have been unsuccessful. Parties have been organized, but no definite plan of action has been adopted, and the rum power, embodying the money power, the political power, and the legal power of the country, has been able to successfully attack friends, fathers, and children, and to make us pay them for it. We propose in our plan to combine the money, the political, and the legal power, for the benefit of Temperance. To illustrate, we will suppose the existence of a town having one million of dollars of taxable property. The taxes upon property amount to fifty cents upon one thousand dollars, and that of this amount it has been shown by authentic statistics, that thirty-five cents are swallowed up, either directly or indirectly, in supporting the results of rum-selling, the pauper's courts, criminal lawsuits, assaults and batteries, penitentiaries and jails. The rum power has the assessors and collectors, and the taxes must be collected, or the property sold under the hammer. There are generally from fifteen to forty rum shops in every country town, and in these rum shops the ballot-box is controled. Every grog-shop can produce from five to fifty votes, and politicians, understanding this, seek to get the influence of as many grog-shops as possible, and the man that gets the influence of the most grog-shops is generally the successful candidate. We have a law in the State against rum-selling. Supervisors, under the influence of the rum interest, select drunken grand and petit juries, and with drunken judges, the law becomes a cypher. Here, it will be seen, that rum has also the political and legal power also.

The statute law prescribes that at least twenty-five dollars can be collected for every glass of liquor sold, and thus the man who sells four glasses of liquor becomes indebted to the town in the sum of one hundred dollars, and yet no judge or jury can bring himself to the resolution to bring in a verdict of guilty in such cases.—Again, we have a law of the States constituting it a misdemeanor to sell liquor, and any citizen can, by going before a justice of the peace, get a warrant issued for the individual guilty of the offence, and the grand jury can indict and a judge can fine him in the sum of two hundred and fifty dollars, and imprison him likewise. We propose in the League to assess the property of a town, and take thirty-five cents out of every $1000 worth of property, if needs be, (which is the amount now paid to support rum-selling,) and apply it to the suppression of the traffic. There is economy in the method, for the causes are taken care of instead of the effects. Whenever we can concentrate the money, political, and legal powers, and a few men to use that power, there is no difficulty in shutting up the rum-sellers immediately.

There are very few men, especially those in our cities or villages who will work in the cause of Temperance. They may hold meetings, sing songs, and pass resolutions, but when it comes to practically apply the means at their command, they shrink back because they fear the influence of the rum power.

In Yates county in this State, about the middle of last December, there were forty-six rum-sellers in the County Site, Penn Yann. After having suffered for years a meeting was held to adopt means to put an end to the traffic. Our plans were there discussed and explained to the people, and were received with favor.—We requested that the ministers should, on the next Sunday, preach each a sermon on individual responsibility. This was done. On the next Tuesday evening a meeting was held wherein $300,000 worth of property was entered for assessment. A committee of ladies and gentlemen canvassed the place, and the amount was increased to a million of dollars of property, to be taxed to put down the rum traffic. We taxed this to the amount of five hundred dollars, and when we had proceeded so far the rum-sellers shut up their shops. There was the evidence, not simply of a moral sentiment in the community, but also of a moral power. The directors of the League formed, came together and hired a man whose sole duty was to prosecute rum-sellers. The drunkard's wife and children were notified that if the husband or father got drunk, that information as to who sold the liquor, could be left with the agent of the League. In a short time the organization was perfected throughout the county, and soon every grog-shop was shut up except those which were licensed, and then men who sold liquor had to do it according to law. A few days after, some half dozen young men left a groggery drunk, about twelve o'clock on Saturday night, where they had been slily drinking, and one fell before the railroad cars, and had his arm cut off by its being run over. He was taken to his father's house, and as soon as he was able, the agent went to him, procured the names of those who had sold the liquor, and some two or three men were arrested and bound over to appear before the grand jury. They were tried and convicted, and one fined $25, and the other $50.—One paid up, being satisfied that it was a sin to sell rum; the other refused and was sent to jail, but at the end of two or three days, he also became satisfied that it was a sin, paid up, and finding that he could not sell rum, he swore that nobody else should if he could not, and now he is one of the most efficient men engaged in the work. No temperance man can equal in usefulness a well-whipped rum seller, though he might sing songs from June to January.

In Chatauque county, they have $4,000-000 worth of property which may be taxed to put rum-sellers to jail, but not to pay them with, and the excellent workings of that plan may be seen wherever it has been tried; and if the people of New York are willing to pay a small tax on their property, and desire to have the rum traffic stopped, it can be stopped completely in sixty days.

In some parts, where it has been tried, the jails have ceased to be occupied, except by rum-sellers, and that is what is wanted. The Maine Law is a good enactment, but we want some means of enforcing it, or else it will be good for nothing.

The rest of the remarks of the speaker went further to illustrute the workings of the movement. He was listened to with much interest.

A DROP OF WATER.—What queer things inhabit a drop of water! We saw a globule magnified the other day, and were really horrified at the result. The leader of the infinitessimals appeared to be an animated jew's-harp. Another of a lesser grade wore the appearance of a manure fork, and for the space of half a minute gave himself up to the lascivious pleasure which seemed to flow from waltzing, with what was doubtless a feminine animalcule in the shape of a bass-viol, with two setts of strings. Some were got up on the principle of gridirons, the handle acting as the steering apparatus. Many of them were circular in their construction, and were got up with all the spokes and regularity of cart-wheels—these, perhaps, were in the express business, and did the carrying trade for animalcule in some distant drop on the other side of the tumbler.—One queer-looking specimen—a sort of old fogy animalcule—was made like a balloon, his digestive powers being in the more buoyant part of the machine, while his eyes were carried in a sort of parachute which hung beneath. We examined matters for over an hour, and yet, in all that time, we never saw a single wriggle that could lay claim to any kind of common sense, either in his looks or movements. A queerer little world of monstrosities it would puzzle even a nightmare to produce.—N. Y. Dutchman.

A STUPENDOUS CLAIM.—A Western Pennsylvania Company has set up a claim to the whole of the Western Reserve of Ohio, under a grant from Connecticut, alleged to have been made after the year 1762, when Charles II. granted to that colony a patent for the Reserve. In 1795, it will be remembered, she sold the Reserve to another Company, relinquishing all claim to jurisdiction over the territory to the United States in 1800. These Pennsylvania parties to-day applied to the General Land Office to make to them pattents for all the Reserve! The officer replied, as we learn from parties interested in the "speculation," that the Government, never having had a claim to a proprietorship over that territory, they cannot entertain the application; and that the State of Connecticut is the party to whom the Pennsylvania Company must look for redress, if they really have rights involved in the case.—Evening Star.

INTOXICATE—TO POISON.—It may not be generally known that the word "intoxicate" literally means "to poison." It is derived from the Latin word, toxicum, poison; and the Latins derived their word toxicum from the Greek word toxon, which signifies a bow or arrow; and was so called because the heathen used to poison the arrow, so that a slight wound might result in death.

Webster says that Pliny informs us that the word is derived from "laxa," the Latin name of a tree which the Greeks called smilax. This was a poisonous tree, and was, probably, one of the sources whence the ancients obtained the poison, in which they dipped their arrows. This will harmonize the two accounts of the word.

Alcoholic beverages are intoxicating; and therefore poisonous. The state of being intoxicated is one which is produced by introducing into the system a virus, or poison. Look at an intoxicated man.—Why that extraordinary exhilaration?—that perfect delirium?—that miserable mumbling articulation?—that inability to walk straight, or regulate the muscles generally?—why that total prostration of mental and physical energy, and absolute unconsciousness? Would a harmless non-poisonous article produce such results as these? Certainly not. Intoxication is an effect; and we defy any physiologist to attribute that effect to any other than a poisonous agent acting npon the system.

Let the question, then, be asked, shall men be prohibited from dealing out poisons to be used as ordinary articles of beverage? It is easy to decide now.—Day-Spring.

Tobacco.

Blackwood, for August, has an article entitled, "The Narcotics we indulge in," in which we find some interesting facts relative to tobacco. Introduced into England so late as 1586, the use of the filthy weed has in three centuries gained a surprising universality. Notwithstanding the early opposition of Pope, Sultan, Czar, and King, tobacco is now the narcotic in most general use. In Europe, the pipe and the cigar are the solace of all ranks and conditions, from the plains of sunny Castile to the frozen Archangel. The Turks and Persians have the pipe perpetually in their mouth; in India all classes and both sexes smoke, and in China the practice is so universal that every female, from the age of eight or nine years, wears an appendage to her dress, a small, silken pocket, to hold tobacco and a pipe! In North America the plant is the popular idol to which all classes pay tribute. In South America, both sexes indulge in smoking, it being an every-day matter to see women puffing cigars in the streets of Lima, and in Paraguay the dear creatures put the weed in their mouths and chew it.

Of course, to supply so general a demand there must be an immense production of the article. The total produce of tobacco grown on the face of the globe has been calculated to amount to the enormous quantity of two millions of tons.—As the United States are among the largest consumers of the article, so they are the largest producers. The annual production in this country in 1850 was 199,753,646 lbs, this being about one-twentieth part of the whole supposed product of the globe. Yet in 1662 the quantity raised in Virginia was only 60,000 lbs. The English consume annually about 30,000,000 lbs, the duty on which amounts to a poll tax of three shillings upon every man, woman and child in the kingdom.

And yet how few can state distinctly the kind of enjoyment derived from smoking, or for what reasons they indulge in it. We suspect it is the soothing, care-dispelling effects which brings the practice most into favor. And yet it provokes thirst, increases the secretion of the saliva, and when indulged in to excess, produces nausea, vomiting. purging, universal trembling, staggering, convulsive movements, paralysis, torpor, and death. Cases are on record of persons killing themselves by smoking seventeen or eighteen pipes at a sitting. With some constitutions it never agrees, but Dr. Pereira says that "no well-ascertained ill effects have been shown to result from the habitual practice of smoking." Doctors disagree upon this point, however, and we have good authority for pronouncing smoking, or the use of tobacco, in any form, a very injurious practice.

Dr. Madden thinks the pleasure of the reverie consequent on the indulgence of the pipe consists in a temporary annihilation of thought. People really cease to think when they have been long smoking! Turks when asked what they have been thinking of during their long smoking reveries, invariably reply, "Of nothing."—As the German professors are great smokers, this will account for the production of their numerous books, so full "of nothing."

The chemical ingredients of tobacco are well knownto be virulently poisonous. He who smokes a hundred grains of tobacco may draw into his mouth from three to eight grains of one of the most subtle of all known poisons. Some of the effects of tobacco may undoubtedly be ascribed to this peculiar ingredient.

The varieties of flavor in tobacco are derived from the nature of the soil it grows upon and of the manure applied.—It is well known to Europeans that pig's dung carries its gout into the tobacco raised by its means. But the more refined organs of the Druses of Mount Lebanon readily recognize by the flavor of their tobacco, the kind of manure employed in its cultivation, and esteem above all others, that which has been aided in its growth by the droppings of the goat.

Whatever the effects of tobacco may be upon the human system, it is certainly exhausting to the soil upon which it is grown. The ashes of the plant, when smoked, are equal to one-fourth or one-fifth of the whole weight of the dried leaf, and they consist of earthy or mineral matter which the tobacco plant has drawn from the soil. As these substances, thus taken from the soil, are among those which are most necessary to vegetation and least abundant even in fertile soils, it will readily be understood that the frequent growth and removal of tobacco from the same field must greatly affect its fertility, and sooner or later exhaust it. This will account for the degeneration of the once fertile fields of Virginia, and the patches of deserted wilderness, once flourishing tobacco plantations, now to be seen in that State.—Portland Transcript.

The Venom of Rattlesnakes.

A late Boston Traveller contains a report of the proceedings at a meeting of the Bostou Society of Natural History, at their recent session. One of the papers read was in relation to the rattlesnake, which is of especial interest to the naturalist: and one portion of it is of great interest to all, and more particularly to our agricultural friends, who, in some sections of the country, are more especially exposed to the bite of these reptiles. Various experiments, conducted under the most favorable circumstances, have shown that the action of this poison on animals is that of a most powerful sedative, acting through the blood on the nervous centers.

This is shown, says the report, by the remarkable fact that its full and complete antidotes are the most active stimulants. Of these, alcohol in some shape is the first. Two cases are given. Mr. R. was bitten just above his heel, three quarters of a mile from home. The usual symptoms of acute pain and large swelling immediately followed; he succeeded, however in reaching his house, but complained of blindness and universal pain. Brandy was then given to the amount of a quart in an hour. This produced a little nausea, but not the least intoxication. In the next two hours, another quart had been given, followed by relief of pain and subsidence of swelling, but without the least intoxication. Stimulants were kept up during the ensuing forty-eight hours, with the gradual passing off of the local and other symptoms. He kept his room the three following days, complaining only of a general soreness. After this he was about as usual; but a few weeks after, his hair fell off entirely.

Miss F. was bitten in her middle finger. The usual severe symptoms immediately followed, but brandy, with the addition of a little ammonia, was freely given, and continued in large doses, until relief of symptoms, but without the least appearance of intoxication, although in health the individual could not probably have borne a single ounce. The symptoms gradually disappeared, and on the third day the patient was well generally, although the finger sloughed.

These statements are of unquestionable reliability, and they are of great moment. A specific for this poison, and for the hydrophobia, would be of incalculable worth.

As to the latter, we remember a very interesting account of a cure effected on himself, if we are not mistaken, by an equally free use of laudanum, by the eminent gentleman recently at the head of the Pittsfield (Mass.) Medical College.—Perhaps we can favor our readers with a particular statement hereafter in relation to that case.

THE DOG PHILOSOPHY.—The best explanation we ever heard of the philosophy of the Maine Law was given by an old man in Morristown, N, J.

"This law," said he, "is based on what I call the 'Dog Philosophy.' You notice the butcher, as he goes round with his meat, he has a dog under his wagon.—The question with the thief is not, 'Is it right for me to steal? (he knows well enough it ain't right!) but is it SAFE?'—and this settles the matter. He is afraid of the dog's nippers.

"But why don't the dog eat the meat? Ah! here what I call the 'dog philosophy,' comes again. He would like to eat the meat, but if he did, he knows his master would give him a terrible beating—and he dare not do it! Just so," said he, "it is with the rum-seller. Until the question with him is, 'Is it SAFE for me to sell rum?' you can do nothing with him.—You must give him a touch of the 'Dog Philosophy.'"—Herald of Prohibition.

There is a kind of elevation which does not depend on fortune. It is a certain air which distinguishes us, and seems to destine us for great things; it is a price which we imperceptibly set on ourselves. By this quality we usurp the deference of other men; and it puts us, in general, more above them than birth, dignity, or even merit itself.

INDIANAPOLIS
v. 3 #14

TEMPERANCE CHART.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.
WM. HANNAMAN, C. E. BABB,
JAMES HALL, R. T. BROWN,
JOHN B. ABBETT.

WEDNESDAY, SEPT. 28, 1853.

World's Temperance Convention.

We had intended to notice the proceedings of this body, in the last number of the Chart, but from the reports that had reached us, up to that time, we were not able to make out any thing worth publishing. Neither have we any thing yet which will be of much interest to our readers.

The first two days of the meeting presented continued scenes of confusion and disturbance, and they were scarcely able to effect an organization. A number of women, it appears, had been sent up as delegates by certain societies, and among them were some who had before been prominent as defenders of woman's rights.—These ladies seized upon the first opportunity to make themselves heard by the Convention, and seemed disposed to be quite forward in taking a part in all its deliberations. This was offensive to some of the members, and a couple of resolutions were finally offered by Mr. Cary of Ohio, depriving them of the privilege of participating in the public discussions of the Convention. The resolutions were as follows:

Resolved, That inasmuch as this Convention has been interrupted in its proceedings by a faction of disorganizers, assembled in New York City, for the purpose, and whose design is to involve the cause of temperance, world-wide in its popularity, with their peculiar notions, and topics not connected with the Temperance Reform, it becomes a duty we owe to ourselves and to the world, to avow distinctly that our great and only purpose is to prohibit the manufacture and traffic of intoxicating liquors as a beverage; and we solemnly protest against, and will resist every effort from any quarter, to involve this with any other question, moral, social, political, or religious.

Resolved, That the common usages of society have excluded women from the public platform, and whether right or wrong it is not our province to determine; but we will conform our action, during the preseut Convention, to public usages, and exclude females from participating in the public discussions of this Convention.

Upon finding they could not do as they pleased, they and their friends left and organized in another place, under the name of the "Whole World's Tempernnce Convention."

In the present condition of public sentiment in relation to the propriety of women taking the position claimed by these persons, it was certainly altogether improper for them to thrust themselves into a meeting assembled for another purpose, and conduct in such a manner as to be offensive to those who happened to differ from them on that subject. Their course was calculated to spring the question of woman's rights at once upon the Convention, where it had no business. As the question of the propriety of woman's mingling in such public discussions was a disputed one in the community, what right had they and their friends to come in there and attempt to force the meeting to tacitly acknowledge that they were right, thus virtually deciding the whole matter, ro far as the Convention was concerned. For ourselves, we believe they were properly rebuked. On this subject we fully endorse the following remarks of the New York organ, both pro and con., considering them exactly to the point:

☞ The conduct of the disturbers of the World's Convention is the more to be regretted, because it tends to create a strong prejudice in a multitude of the best and most humane minds of the country against the subject of the amelioration of woman's condition. There is a wide and most important field of reform in behalf of woman; but if the bitter and malignant spirit that presided over the leaders of the late disturbance is to lead the van in woman's cause, we can easily foresee how greatly that cause must be hindered, and thousands of generous hearts be prevented from co-operating. There are many things to be done, and that can and will be done to relieve women, if the common sense and good feeling of the country are not outraged by professed reformers in that direction. The worst enemies of Women's Rights just now, are the bitter brawlers who have taken those rights under their special patronage.—N. Y. Organ.

The proceedings of the Convention will be published as soon as they can be obtained in a condensed form.

China.—The failure of the Imperial army in their attack on Chi-Re-Ang is confirmed.

The Imperial fleet returned to Shanghai.

Chi-Re-Ang is said to be the key to the Chinese Empire, and the Friend of China is of the opinion that this fruitless attack decides the fate of the Empire.

Rev. Mr. Taylor, an American missionary, who was in the camp of the insurgents, says they did not suffer the least injury during the attack, from the cannon of the Imperialists.

An army of the insurgents had started from Nankin for Pekin, but it was afterwards recalled.

The "Maine Law" at Home.

We publish two articles this week in relation to the practical result of the existence of the Maine Law, where it has been longest tried. The statements that follow are from Neal Dow, the author of the law, in reply to a publication by Mr. John Neal, which has been quoted by anti-Maine Law men with a great deal of apparent satisfaction. Surely no one who has given currency to Mr. Neal's statements believes for a moment that the effect of the law has been an increase of intemperance. The way such things are picked up and spread before the public shows how anxious some papers are to get hold of something to prejudice the public mind on the subject.

To Mr. Neal's general declarations, Mr. Dow opposes facts, and the opinions of men in whom the people have publicly reposed confidence, and who can of course be trusted.

Therc could be but two objections to the Maine Law in the mind of any temperance man, viz. its inefficiency, and its want of harmony with the general character of our government. In regard to the first, the matter is becoming settled in the minds of the people, by an increase of information, and the prejudice against the law which has been kept up by the efforts of pretended friends, but secret enemies of the cause, is rapidly disappearing. The second objection has been removed by the expressed opinions of some of our best jurists.

It may be true that the law as it stands is not an effectual remedy for the evil; it may be that the law ltself is slightly defective, or that it is not rigidly enforced; but can not a law be made which will entirely stop the sale of liquor, and will not the same condition of public opinion which sustains the continued existence of such a law, secure its enforcement? If not what becomes of the boasted value of our representative form of government? If an important law, one affecting the interests of every member of the community, can stand, year after year, as a dead letter on our statute books, for want of the means to give it vitality, then truly constitutional republicanism is a name, and nothing more. But it is not so. Once settle the right of the people to pass a law prohibiting the manufacture and sale of intoxicating drink, and we ask no more. The next step is to get public opinion in a proper condition and the law passed, and then temperance men will have the cord in their hands with which to strangle the monster. With such a law, liquor-selling could be as effectually stopped as any other class of crime is by our present laws; and if there be no liquor sold, there will be none drank.

Mr. Neal's statement, then, as to the actual results of the "Liquor Law of Maine," stripped of its guise, may be reduced to this—that it has failed entirely of its objects; that there is more liquor now sold and drank in Maine, under the operation of the law, than at any time before for twenty years. His declaration is by no means new. It has been made often by enemies of the law for the last two years. Often have similar statements been published by anti-temperance newspapers out of Maine, but always by anonymous writers.

Such declarations are so notoriously false, that never has any one been bold enough to publish them over his own signature, until Mr. Neal did it; and the wonder among the people of Portland is excited, not more by the untruthfulness of his statements than by his bold effrontery in making them. I have no hesitation in appealing to the Rev. Mr. Chickering, and every other member of the High-street Church, to which Mr. Neal belongs, upon the declaration that his statements upon this subject, are entirely, unqualifiedly, and notoriously untrue.

The facts in relation to the working of the Maine Liquor Law in Portland and through Maine, have been published often for the last two years, in most of the papers of the State, and never has any attempt been made by any responsible person to disprove them.

At the time of the enactment of the Law, rum-selling was carried on openly, in all parts of the State. In Portland there were between three and four hundred open rum-shops, and immediately after the enactment of the law, not one. The wholesale trade in liquors was at once annihilated throughout the State, and the retail trade, so far as it existed at all, was carried on with great secrecy and caution.

In Portland, intemperance almost entirely disappeared, and a large number of men were reformed. So thoroughly did the law accomplish its objects, that temptations to intemperance were in a great measure removed out of the path of the young and inexperienced. In proof of this I cite a fact:

A Mr. Carleton came to Portland to attend a lawsuit, and brought a witness who was a very intemperate man. Mr. C. feared his witness would become intoxicated, and be of no use to him. They arrived in town at 7 o'clock P. M., and from that time until 12 at night, Mr. C. saw nothing of him. At that hour the witness came to the hotel, perfectly sober, and said to Mr. C. that he had "traveled more than five miles, and couldn't find a drop." And the reformation of more or less intemperate men of Portland is within the knowledge of almost every citizen.

It was the unanimous declaration of all the watchmen and police, that the city was like an entireiy new place, so quiet and free from all indications of intemperance were the streets, both by day and night. Many shops, which before were rum-shops, were converted to other branches of trade, and almost every indication of intemperance was banished from the city.

At the end of the municipal year 1851-52, the mayor made an official report to the city council on the operation of the law in Portland. This was ordered to be printed and distributed through the city, which was done; and its statements were not at the time nor have they since been denied. Parts of that report were afterwards printed in a tract, by the Central Executive Temp. Committee of Maine, and distributed extensively through the State. The following extracts are taken from that report:

"A great many families in this city situated thus poor and miserable a year since, are now comfortable and happy, being entirely relieved by the suppression of the grog shops, from their former troubles. The extinguishment of the traffic in intoxicating drinks will not only be the means of saving a great amount of money to the poorer part of the people, but the productive industry of the country will be stimulated to an extent that we cannot foresee. The whole of the sum which was formerly expended for strong drinks by the people of this city and State will henceforth be expended for the necessaries and comforts of life, with the additional amount which will accrue from the more industrious habits of the people, or will be added year by year to the accumulating wealth of the State."

"There were committed to the Alms House from June 1, 1850, to March 20, 1851, (before the law), 252; from June 1, 1851, to March 20, 1852, (after the law,) 146—☞difference in nine months, 106. Number in Alms House, March 20, 1851, 112; number in Alms House, Mar. 20, 1852, 90—difference 22. Number of families assisted out of the Alms House from June 1, 1850, to March 20, 1851, 135; to June 1, 1852, 90—difference in nine months, just one third, 45. Seventy-five of the ninety in the Alms House, March 20, 1852, came there through intemperance—four of the ninety were not brought there through that cause; the history of the remaining eleven is not known.

"Committed to the House of Correction for intemperance, from June 1, 1850, to March 20, 1851, 46; for larceny, etc., 12—in all 58; from June 1, 1851, to March 20, 1852, for intemperance, 10; for larceny, etc., 3—in all, 13; a difference in nine months of more than three-fourths! Committed in April, 1851, 9; in May, 10—19. The 'Maine Law' was enacted in June 2, 1851, and from the first of that month to March 20, 1852, ten months, the number committed was only ten, although great activity was displayed by the police in arresting all offenders.

At the term of the District Court in Portland, March, 1852, but one indictment was found for larceny, and that was the result of mistake; while at the March term of 1851, seventeen indictments were found. These results have been obtained, notwithstanding an increased vigilance in arresting persons found under the influence of strong drinks."

"Committed to the jail for drunkenness, larceny, etc., from June 1, 1850, to Mar. 20, 1851, 279; for corresponding period of 1851-2, 135; differeuce, 144. Deduct liquor-sellers (72) imprisoned in the latter term, and we have 62 for drunkenness, larceny, etc., against 279 for the corresponding period before the enactment of the 'Maine Law,' a deduct'on of almost seven ninths in the short period of nine months! There were in jail, on the 20th of March, 1851, 35 persons; on the 20th of March, 1852, 7 persons, 3 of whom were liquor-sellers—without them the number would be 4 against 25 of the corresponding day of 1851, a falling off of more than eighty-three per cent in the short period of nine months.

"There were committed to the watch house from June 1, 1850, to, and including March, 1851, 431 persons. For the corresponding period of 1851-2, after the enactment of the 'Maine Law,' the number was 180, a deduction of almost three-fifths, notwithstanding the increased vigilance of the police in the latter period, in arresting persons found in the streets in a state of intoxication."

Such were the actual effects of the liquor law in Portland, and generally throughout the State, where it was enforced. In many parts of the State, rum-selling is entirely unknown at the present time, so thorough has been the effect of the law.

During my late tour through the Eastern and Northern parts of the State, I could not learn that there was any open grog shop. Rum-selling, where it exists at all, is carried on secretly, and in large districts of country it is extinguished; and everywhere a marked improvement is seen in the condition of the people, as acknowledged by all unprejudiced persons whom I met. Even in the frontier towns, such as Eastport, Calais, Hodgedon, Houlton, and Presque Isle, intemperance is greatly diminished.

For the entire truth of my declarations, so far as Portland is concerned, I have no hesitation in referring, though without consultation with them, to the Aldermen of 1851-2: Stephen Frothingham, George Pearson, Samuel Chase, John K. Cummings, Charles Jones, Wm. W. Thomas, aad Hiram Brooks, Esqrs.; to J. N. Thompson, City Marshal; to Wm. Huse, City Marshal of the present year; to all the Clergymen, and every other man in Portland of any character for truth and veracity.

I only add, in conclusion, that Mr. Neal had abundant means at hand of learning that the facts were quite contrary to his declarations. He did not choose to avail himself of the sources of correct information, but boldly made statements in relation to a most important subject, which had no foundation in truth.

Aug. 27, 1853. Neal Dow.

Grand Division, Eastern New-York.—The Grand Division of Eastern New-York appropriately closed the proceedings of the week, by a grand demonstration on Friday evening in Metropolitan Hall—Judge O'Neall, M. W. P., presiding,—The addresses by Doctor Perry, Judge O'Neall, Dr. Kennedy, of Brooklyn, Mr. Cassell, of England, Dr. Fickardt, of Pa., Mr. Jacobs, ef Michigan, and J. Long, G. W. P., of Va. The speaking was excellent generally, but the closing address by Mr. Long, seemed to take the fancy of the large audience, and they were uuwilling to let him stop when he wished to. Cries of "Go on," spurred him up as often as he tried to sit down, though it was getting late when he began. We are happy to say that the meeting gave great satisfaction, and there is reason to believe that much good was done.

☞ The Massachusetts State Temperance Convention met in Boston, on Monday evening last, and continued until the evening of Tuesday at 10 o'clock. Garrison and his set declined lending their aid when tney found that the Convention would not admit women to speak. Notwithstanding this, the Convention had an excellent meeting. Such men as Judge Hoar, Dr. Lyman Beecher, Dr. Lees, of England, &c., did the best they could to atone for the silence of the women folks. A proposition to raise $1,000,000, to be employed in carrying out the law, was discussed, and some progress made in subscribing.—N. Y. Organ.

We have few faults which are not more excusable than the means we take to conceal them.

Items of News.

Since the Henry Clay and Reindeer catastrophes, it has been an understood thing among the captains of the Hudson River steamboats that there is to be no racing, and no carrying more than thirty pounds of steam under any circumstances whatever. This compact has been, and we trust ever will be, religiously observed.

Mexico not disposed to War.—J. M. Conrad, editor of the Brownsville Flag, states that there is no talk of war on the frontier, between Mexico and the United States, and no warlike preparations are being made by the former. To prevent smuggling, which is carried to an indefinite extent on the frontier, a corps of revenue rangers, consisting of from twelve to twenty mounted men, have been organized, who patrol the river from its mouth to Laredo, and this has probably been magnified into a hostile array.

Movements are making by our Government towards securing the Sandwich Island station for our mail and trading ships in the commerce about to be opened between China and Japan.

Ex-President Van Buren has made arrangements to spend the coming winter in Switzerland.

On Thursday last, an aged resident of Brookline, N. H., while thrashing in his barn suddenly fell dead, and was found stretched upon the floor with his flail in his hand. He was 76 years of age.

An Incident.—A little boy, clad poorly, standing in front of the Weston Hotel, was accosted this morning by a rude young man, with the question—"Does your mother know you are out?" The little fellow looked at his interrogator for a moment, while his bosom heaved and tears gathered in his eyes, and replied, "Sir, my dear mother is dead!"—Buffalo Republic.

Dr. Tobert de Lamballe, a distinguished physician of Paris, announces that a shock of electricity, given to a patient dying from the effects of chloroform, immediately counteracts its influence, and returns the sufferer to life. The fact is worth knowing, if it is a fact.

Rapid Increase of Population in Oregon.—At the late election for delegate in Oregon, eight thousand votes were thrown. This shows a great increase of population. In 1849 the vote did not exceed 700; in 1851, 2,500. Since 1851, Washington Territory has been taken from Oregon.—Such an increase is unexampled in the history of any State or Territory, except California.—Central Christian Herald.

Argument for the Maine Law.—Archibald Nichol, the turnkey at the city lock-up, made his report to the mayor yesterday afternoon. During the past month he has had 660 prisoners under his charge—of these, 604 were charged with intoxication, 50 with larceny, and 6 with riot.—Phil. Register, Sept. 2.

India-Rubber Teeth.—The Scientific American says, that this article, in the form of petrified white India rubber, has been patented in England for making artificial teeth, gums, and palates. It adds: The adhesion is complete; it can be molded with perfection to suit every inequality of the gums and teeth, and supplies an artificial periosteum, as it were, to the teeth, when they become painful by the wearing away of the gum. Added to these is the elasticity of the material, which completely obviates the inconveniences that arise from any motion with artificial teeth made by other means.

The Largest Tree in the World.—There is a cedar-tree growing in the mountains of Calaveras county, Califor., about twenty miles north of Murphy's, which is said to be the largest tree in the world.—At the ground its circumference was 92 feet; four feet above that it was 88; and ten feet above that it was 61 feet in circumference; and after that the tapering of the shaft was very gradual. Its height is 300 feet. This tree is by no means a deformity, as trees with large trunks usually are. It is throughout one of perfect symmetry, while its enormous proportions inspire the beholder with emotions of awe and sublimity. Elegance and beauty are inseparable concomitants of its grandeur.

☞ The cutting up of a dead body by the Physician will transmute a quiet community into an infuriated mob. The same community will look unmoved upon a score of rum murders, and the desolation of as many families. The rumseller kills and desolates for money; the physician dissects for the advancement of science. There is a wide difference! There is humanity in killing the man legally, and then protecting his corpse.

Of all our faults, that which we most readily admit is indolence. We persuade ourselves that it cherishes all the peacefnl virtues; and that, without entirely destroying the others, it merely suspends their functions.

Madmen and fools see only through their humor.

From the Indiana Free Democrat.

The Drunkard's Boy.

A LIFE-LAY.

BY J. W. GORDON.

My thoughts, still constant to the mournful Past,
Brood sadly over its departed years,
Whose shadows on my young heart early cast
A cloud of grief that burst full oft in tears.

I can but love the Past; and yet 'twas drear;
For Hope smiled not for me on childhood's dreams,
And the first sounds that smote my infant ear,
Were sounds of hate, that froze life's gushing streams.

A father's curse was my first birth-day gift—
His glance of wrath, the star that woke life's morn;
And first in youth's frail boat 'twas mine to drift
Before the tempest of his drunken scorn.

But o'er my helplessness a mother's love
Watched, like an angel from the climes on high;
And her pure smile, like starlight from above,
Shone brightly on the tears that dimm'd my eye.

And oft I've watched her calm, sweet face,
While Sorrow's shadows darkly o'er it stole,
Till down her cheeks hot tear-drops streamed apace,
Wrung out by grief from her o'er-tortured soul.

At first I knew not why my mother wept,
Tho' oft her rending sighs had made me start,
While blest in deep forgetfulness I slept—
A thoughtless child upon her sinless heart.

Time with his years swept by, and knowledge came
To teach my heart its deep excess of wo,
To scorch my cheek with the hot breath of shame,
And clothe in dark eclipse all things below.

Then, then, I learned the cause of mother's tears;
For, then, I saw her houseless in the storm,
With all her helpless brood, in life's young years,
Who clung and wept around her blighted form.

And oft beneath the chill and starless sky,
Hid in the bending corn we spent the weary night,
And starting oft as each soft breeze pass'd by,
Still dreaded more to see the morning light.

At times we fled for weary miles, and sought
'Mid strangers, what we should have found at home—
A place of hope, where love's best dreams are wrought—
And tinged with hues of heavenly bliss to come.

The cold wind pierced us as we sped along—
With no kind star to beam upon our path—
The cheerless victims of a bitter wrong—
A drunken Father's wild, unmeaning wrath.

Our grief was deep, and voiceless as the grave;
For Fear had locked expression in each breast,
As o'er wild rocks, by Ten-mile's babbling wave,
We wandered on to find some place of rest.

Our way was long, and rough, and cold the wind,
That howled and moaned among the bending trees,
Whose waving forms appeared to my young mind,
Huge giants rudely nodding to the breeze.

Oh, there are moments when the full heart feels
A whole eternity of speechless wo;
Whose wizard touch our rising tears congeals,
Or turns upon the heart their lava flow!

Dark moments, when the fiends of hell career,
In triumph o'er our hopes, and aims, and hearts,—
When all we love on earth, or far or near,
At once from the o'erweening soul departs.

And such were these, when we were driven forth,
To wander houseless 'neath inclement night—
Then what were life and all its longings worth
To those who saw not Hope's reviving light?

Though youngest in that mournful band, I felt
Hope's life-light from my wo-sick soul depart,
While on one thought my mind in madness dwelt—
A thought of death; for death possess'd my heart.

I longed to die; but could not pass away;
And sighed to sleep within the grave's embrace,
Where sorrow ne'er invades the listless clay,
Nor sighs disturb the silence of the place.

Thus years, that seem'd eternities, crawl'd by,
And waves of anguish laved my writhing heart,
When, lo! amid our night of grief, a cry
Broke forth, and bade the fearful gloom depart.

THE PLEDGE, to touch no more the madd-'ning bowl,
My father heard, and signed with purpose high;
Then stood erect, a man in form and soul,
Resolved to keep that pledge, or live or die.

That pledge was kept, and all our wrongs forgot;
For Peace and Love made home "sweet home" again,
And not a shadow on that heart-loved spot,
Fell from the Demon's wing its hearth to stain.

And when my Father's three score years and ten
Had flown, to my fond eyes 'twas kindly given,
To see him leave the ranks of living men,
And smiling pass away from earth to heaven.

And now, when flit the shadows of the past,
Like clouds, across my dreams of long-ago,
His farewell smile upon those clouds is cast,
Like sunset glories, bright'ning all below!

Indianapolis, Ind., Sept. 5, 1853.

Liquor-Selling in Maine.

The Boston Commonwealth publishes the following from a correspondent writing from Melrose, under date of Sept. 5th: "I notice in your paper of to-day an extract from the Boston Transcript, to the effect that "the sale of liquors as (he) witnessed it, in the hotels of Maine, was as open and undisguised as such sale is in the city of New York." I have just returned from a four weeks' tramp in Maine, from Portland to Bangor, and, though I visited several hotels, and availed myself of every opportunity to visit localities where rum might reasonably be supposed to abound, I did not see a drop of liquor sold, or given away, or exposed for sale during my absence. I was in hotels in Portland, Lewiston, Auburn, Danville, Livermore, Wilton, Hallowell, Winthrop, Augusta, and Bangor, and saw in but two hotels any indication of liquor about the premises. In one, the landlord, an old schoolmate, pointed with peculiar significance to a secret pannel, but a shake of the head negatively, on my part, seemed to be the secret sign of "Shut pan!" In another hotel, a fiery visaged gentleman said to another "Come;" whereupon the two suddenly looked at me, a stranger, and said, "No more!" I honestly believe those two chaps had something to drink in that hotel, but as they went up to their own room, I concluded they carried "cholera medicine" in their baggage.

I did not see one person intoxicated in Maine! I was in several cities on the seaboard, and in many large villages; and though I watched with special reference to the working of the Maine Law, I could not detect the "trail of the serpent" at all, except as already mentioned.

There may be hotels in Maine where the traffic is as open and undisguised as the Transcript says, but I have yet to see the other one who can affirm as much.—Undoubtedly there is much liquor consumed in Maine, but any person, having any knowledge of Maine five years since, and of Maine at the present time, must be hopelessly "cross-eyed," physically and mentally, who can say that "there is a more general use of intoxicating drinks throughout the State than ever before." So "teetotal" a strabismus the world never witnessed before.

A man does not please long when he has only one species of wit.

The Record of Blood.

For one week we have attempted to gather from our exchanges, a record of rum's bloody work. We turn away from our task with a siekness of heart. Let the friends of the traffic turn away with shame.

Two men in Philadelphia jumped from upper stories while laboring under mania a potu, and destroyed themselves.

Police officers overrun with the results of rowdyism and crime.

In Portsmouth, Penn., a fellow, to revenge upon a drunken comrade, lured him to a neighbor's house, and then found the neighbor, telling him that his comrade was taking improper liberties with his wife. The husband returned and shot them both.

From the Richmond Palladium, Ind., we clip the following items:

On Saturday evening a Price fight took place nearly opposite our office between a turner and two of our neighbor's jours, and in a very short space of time, two printers' cases were turned over and knocked into pi. Capt. Whisky presided in all three.

On the same evening, a skull was nearly mashed by a "slung shot," opposite Buhl's Brewery. The owner of the caput is now walking about, and the one who did the deed has sloped. Quite a city is Richmond!

One day last week, Watkins, the keeper of the liquor-shop nuisance east of the Sloan House, was fined five dollars and costs, by the Mayor, for retailing whisky. He found a lawyer, in this city, "mean enough" to plead with the Mayor that his fine should not be higher.

John O'Neal, a laborer in a stone quarry above New Paris, died suddenly, on Monday night last, and was buried in the Catholic graveyard near this city, on Wednesday. The cause of his death, we learn, was whisky—having drank, for some time, half a gallon per day. The proprietor of the "Devil's Kitchen," at the North end of Paris, should be compelled to maintain the widow and orphan children he has thus manufactured, for the balance of their natural lives.

A woman got drunk and fell through the railroad bridge, in this city, the other day, and was drowned.

Daniel Hilliard staggered into a grog-shop in Seneca Falls, also, and dropped down a corpse. The Overseer of the Poor of the town was present, and took charge of the body which he refused to protect during its life. Coroner's verdict, "Death by exhaustion caused by intemperance."—Carson League.

James Shirly was hung at Hollidaysburg, Pa., on the 12th of August. On being asked, just before the drop fell, if he had anything to say, he replied as follows:

"I have nothing, excepting that I hope to meet all these gentlemen present, in Paradise hereafter. I die better than I thought I should. This is not the backing up of the spirit of the man; it is the Spirit of God that enables me to do so; I never was a bad man naturally; I wish to say that the cause of all this is Intemperance!"

An intoxicated colored woman, a few days since, had both her legs cut off on the railroad track near Geneva. The Gazette calls it a lesson to inebriates. And to sober men as well. This is the third death of the kind in that vicinity.—Cayuga Chief.

The Columbus (O.) Journal, of Tuesday, says: "One of our rowdies, and, when drunk, desperadoes, called 'Marsh Clark,' was about the market early this morning. He went into the doggery at the North-west corner of the market-house, and while the barkeeper was getting him a drink, he seized one of the bottles of liquor within his reach and decamped. He paraded the bottle and treated those who were within the building, and after the contents were gone, he dashed the bottle upon the pavement. He then drew a knife and cut one of his companions, named John Ritter, very badly in the abdomen. Clark was arrested and confined in the calaboose. It is one of the beautiful blossoms of our doggery system. What a glorious thing it is to be free!"

PREVENTION OF RAILROAD ACCIDENTS.—In Prussia, every station, however small, and however near to the next one, has telegraphic communication with it, to signal a clear line and no stoppage. The plan adopted is very simple, the wires being put into requisition as the train is leaving a station. The current operates on hammers, which strike large bells; the return current producing a like effect at the starting point—and although the train be at full speed, the sound is sufficiently loud for the guard to hear the bells, and to know there is no stoppage at the next station, where he may expect a similar signal for the succeeding one. Should he not hear the bells, then he knows he must stop.

Whatever disgrace we have merited, it is almost always in our power to re-establish our reputation.

Pertinent Questions.

The South Carolina Temperance Advocate is one of our most efficient co-laborers in the South. In a late number we find some questions to professiug Christians, which are as pertinent here as there. We quote the following:

HAVE YOU THOUGHT OF IT?—We ask our Christian friends if they have ever thought of it, that by withholding their influence from the cause of Temperance, they are positively supporting the grog-shop system? If not as directly as the man who goes up to the bar and launches out his shilling for a drink, or his dollar for a gallon of the stuff, as certainly and as effectually as the veriest old toper in the grog-seller's service. The difference is only in name and appearance. It is decidedly more respectable to oppose temperance by a nod, or shrug, or look of disapprobation, than to come out boldly as the liquor drinker does, and declare to the world that he loves the poison, and cares not who knows it.

Have you ever thought of it, that your indifference to the cause, and your repudiation of Temperance principles under a pledge, might be the cause of your neighbor's indulging in the evil habit of drinking, because he regarded you as a pattern of excellence, and would flatter himself with the delusive notion, that if you saw no use for a Temperance pledge, he saw none?

Have you ever thought of it, that your son was in danger of becoming a drunkard because you, his father, saw no use for a Temperance pledge?

Have you ever thought of it, that a man is not obliged to drink liquor, get drunk, and all that, to be a friend to the grog-shop system! but that a tacit admission of the fact, that men ought to be allowed, under sanction of the law, to sell it, is quite enough to enlist you as a friend of the trade?

Have you ever thought of it, that your allowing its use in any shape or form, as a beverage, is helping to make drunkards, and supporting drunkard makers?

Have you ever thought of it, that you are your brother's keeper, and responsible for the improvement of every talent and the judicious exercise of all the influence you may possess over others?

WASHINGTON ITEMS.—The Russian, Prussian, and Austrian ministers have filed in the State Department at Washington, a protest against the conduct of Capt. Ingraham.

Russia and Prussia take sides with Austria against the United States. Mr. Marcy's views on this momentous matter, are matured, and will probably be submitted at the cabinet meeting to-morrow. Those views occupy upwards of eighty manuscript pages; and the paper will be the grand document of the Administration, and will be spread before the public in a few days.

The French and China Missions are believed to be settled, but the names of persons appointed have not transpired.

HOLY LIFE.—The beauty of a holy life constitutes the most eloquent and effective persuasive to religion, which one human being can address to another. We have many ways of doing good to our fellow-creatures, but none so efficacious as leading a virtuous, upright, and well-ordered life. There is an energy of moral suasion in a good man's life, passing the highest efforts of the orator's genius. The seen but silent beauty of holiness speaks more eloquently of God and duty, than the tongues of men and angels. Let parents remember this. The best inheritance a parent can bequeath to a child is a virtuous example, a legacy of hallowed remembrances and associations.

EVERY WORD TRUE.—How many a giant mind has been frittered away in pursuit of the unbenefiting objects of low ambition! How often do we see powers perishing for lack of thought—shriveling into insignificance for want of intelligence to feed upon, which use might have polished to the brightest brilliancy, and exercise would have made equal to achieve the noblest purposes? How many scatter, in idleness or indifference to their value, the little minute particles of time, till golden hours, and days, and years are wasted, the treasures of life all scattered, and death finds nothing but a poor, naked and useless thing at last.

THERE is a deep and beautiful meaning in the saying of the wife of Jagellon, Duke of Lithuana. Some peasants coming to her in tears, complained that the servants of the King, her husband, had carried off their cattle. She went to her husband, and obtained instant redress. "Their cattle have been restored to them," said the Queen, "but who shall give them back their tears?"

We have not courage to say, as a general proposition, that we have no faults, and our enemies have no good qualities; but, in detail, we are not far from thinking so.

Moral Reflections, Sentences, and Maxims.

There is merit without elevation, but there is no elevation without some merit.

Elevation is to merit what dress is to a handsome person.

Fortune sometimes makes use of our faults in order to elevate us; and there are some troublesome people whose merit would be badly rewarded if we were not very glad to purchase their absence.

It seems that Nature has concealed at the bottom of our minds, talents and abilities of which we are not aware. The passions alone have the privilege of bringing them to light, and of giving us sometimes views more certain and more perfect than art could possibly produce.

We arrive complete novices at the different ages of life, and we often experience in spite of the number of our years.

Coquettes make a merit of being jealous of their lovers, to conceal their being envious of other women.

Those who are over-reached by our cunning are far from appearing to us as ridiculous as we appear to ourselves when the cunning of others has over-reached us.

The most dangerous weakness of old people who have been amiable is to forget that they are no longer so.

We should often be ashamed of our best actions if the world could see all the motives which produced them.

The greatest effort of friendship is not to show our own faults to a friend, but to make him see his own.

☞ The Fifth Annual Session of the Grand Union of the Daughters of Temperance of the State of Indiana will commence in the Hall of the Temple of Honor, in the city of Indianapolis, on Wednesday, October 26, 1853, at 3 o'clock P. M.

R. HINDS, G. P. S.
E. RICHMOND, G. S. S.

Notice.

The Grand Section of C. of T., of Indiana, will hold its Sixth Annual Session, in Temperance Hall, Indianapolis, commencing on Monday, October 24th, at 1½ o'clock, P. M. As there is much business of importance to transact, representatives will please be punctual in attending.

Sections will please forward their quarterly returns to the G. S. before the 20th of October, or they may loose their charters. HENRY OHR, G. S. of C. of T.

Indianapolis, August 17th, 1853.

Notice.

The Eighth Annual Session of the Grand Division of the Sons of Temperance of the State of Indiana, will commence in Temperance Hall in the City of Indianapolis, on Tuesday, October 25, 1853, at 6 o'clock P. M. P. S. SAGE, G. W. P.

C. WOODWARD, G. S.

August 1, 1853.

$25 Premium.

The undersigned Committee on the state of the Order of the Grand Section of Cadets of Temperance of Indiana, offer the above premium for the most acceptable Initiatory ceremony for Cadets of Temperance. Competitors for the same to be members of some Temperance organization.

All manuscripts to be forwarded to Henry Ohr, G. S., on or before the 20th day of October next.

THEOPHILUS ROBINSON,
H. C. NEWCOMB,
HENRY OHR, } Com.

Indianapolis, Aug. 6th, 1853.

Torchlight and Indiana Cadet please copy.

To Printers.

The Committee of Publication for the "Temperance Chart," will receive sealed proposals, until October 25, 1853, for the printing of said paper, including the paper and the delivery of the sheets folded, to the Editor, at his office in Indianapolis. The proposals to state the price of paper, and rate of composition and press work, with a sample of the quality of the paper to be used.

WM. HANNAMAN.
JAMES HALL.
C. E. BABB.
R. T. BROWN.
August, 1853. J. B. ABBETT.

CONSTITUTION AND BY-LAWS,

WE are still prepared to print Constitution and By-Laws, where the alterations are few from the copy recommended by the Grand Division, at the following rates:

100 copies, (or less) $5 00
200 " 8 00
300 " 10 00

We will pay the postage on all ordered from us.

☞ All orders accompanied by the cash, will be promptly attended to.

Address, JOHN H. OHR,
Indianapolis, Indiana.

CHARTERS.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR A DIVISION S. OF T.

(Date.)

The undersigned inhabitants of ——, believing the Order of the Sons of Temperance to be well calculated to extend the blessings of total abstinence, and promote the general welfare of mankind, respectfully petition the Grand Division of the —— of ——, to grant them a Charter to open a new Division, to be called the —— Division, No. —, Sons of Temperance, of the —— of ——, to be located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves, individually and collectively, to be governed by the rules and usages of said Grand Division, and also, by those of the National Division.

Enclosed is the Charter Fee, $5 00. Books, $2 00.

This must be signed by at least eight persons of good character and standing in community, and sent to C. WOODWARD, G. S., Indianapolis, Ind, free of postage.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR A TEMPLE.

(Date.)

The undersigned, believing the Temple of Honor to be well calculated to cement more firmly our fraternal relations, and add to the general prosperity of the cause of Temperance, respectfully petition the Grand Temple of the —— of ——, to grant them a Charter to open a new Temple, to be called the —— Temple of Honor, No. —, of the —— of ——, to be located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves individually and collectively, to be governed by the rules and usages of the Grand Temple, and also by those of the Order at large.

Enclosed is the Charter Fee, $20 00.

To be directed to the G. W. R., free of postage.

This must be signed by at least twenty persons of good standing, and if not known to the G. W. T. or G. W. R., must send satisfactory references.

J. H. OHR, G. W. R.

Indianapolis, Ind.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR CADETS OF TEMPERANCE.

The undersigned, boys of ——, believing the Order of Cadets of Temperance to be well calculated to extend the blessings of total abstinence, and promote the general welfare of mankind, respectfully petition the Grand Section of the State of Indiana, to grant them a charter to open a new Section, to be called the —— Section, No. ——, Cadets of Temperance, of the State of Indiana, to be located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves, individually and collectively to be governed by the rules and usages of said Grand Section, and also those of the acting Head of the Order.

Enclosed is the fee for Charter, R. B.'s and officers' cards, $5 00.

It must also be stated whether the applicants are members of the Order or not; if they are, of what Section. The application to be directed to the Grand Secretary, free of postage.

It must also be certified by a W. P. or P. W. P, that the W. Patron elect is a Son of Temperance in good standing.

Address (post paid) HENRY OHR, G. S., C. o T., Indianapolis, Indiana.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR DAUGHTERS OF TEMPERANCE.

(Date.)

The undersigned, inhabitants of ——, believing the Order of the Daughters of Temperance to be well calculated to extend the blessings of Total Abstinence, and promote the general welfare of mankind, respectfully petition the Grand Union to grant them a charter to open a new Union to be called the —— Union, No. —, D. of T., of the State of Indiana, located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves, individually and collectively, to be governed by the rules and usages of said Grand Union.

Enclosed is the Charter Fee, $5 00.

The above must be signed by at least eleven females, of proper age and good standing in community.

Address (post paid,) Mrs. ELIZA RICHMOND, G. S. S., Indianapolis, Indiana.

New Watch and Jewelry Store.

No 1, Bates House, Washington Street,

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

WE have now open the largest and best assortment of fine Watches and rich Jewelry ever offered in this city, to which we invite the examination of the public.

Our stock is all new—selected with great care, and comprises Watches, Diamond Work, Chains, Pins, Rings, Pencils, Lockets, of all kinds; Silver Ware, Clocks, Perfumery, Brushes, Soaps, Plated Ware, Castors, Fruit Baskets, &c., which we will sell for CASH at New York prices. Mr. E. W. NEFF, of this city, has taken charge of the Watch repairing department, and will spare no pains to give satisfaction to our customers.

july 6-tf E J. BALDWIN & CO.

D. CRAIGHEAD. R. BROWNING.

CRAIGHEAD & BROWNING,

Dealers in all kinds of

Drugs, Medicines, Surgical Instruments, Paints, Oils, Chemicals, Varnishes, Dye Stuffs, Glassware Window Glass, Brushes, Cosmetics, Spices, Cigars, Tobacco, Perfumery, &c.,

WASHINGTON STREET,

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

ALL are respectfully invited to call and examine our stock and prices, as we feel confident we can render satisfaction both as to prices and quality of articles. Great care is taken in the selection of articles, in reference to their purity, as we endeavor at all times to keep such articles as are strictly pure and genuine. Every article will be waranted as represented. Orders from Physicians and others promptly attended to. Particular attention given to filling Prescriptions and compounding Medicines, which, in all cases, shall receive the personal attention of one of the firm. june 30

HANNAMAN & DUZAN,

DEALERS IN

DRUGS AND MEDICINES,

Surgical Instruments, Paints, Oils, Varnishes, Dye Woods, Medical and Window Glass, Brushes, Perfumery, Soaps, &c.

Washington, 3 doors west of Pennsylvania St.,

june 30 1y INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

W. W. ROBERTS,

Druggist and Apothecary.

Wholesale and Retail Dealer in

DRUGS, MEDICINES, PAINTS, OILS, AND DYE STUFFS, BRUSHES, FANCY GOODS, AMERICAN AND FRENCH WINDOW GLASS, &c.

WASHINGTON ST., INDIANAPOLIS.

Physicians, Country Merchants, and the people generally, are invited to examine his stock, which will be sold at the lowest cash price.

☞ QUALITY WARRANTED TO SUIT. ☜

june 22 4m

COMMERCIAL COLLEGE,

(Late Commercial Institute,)

Of Indianapolis,

Established March 31, 1851.

INCORPORATED, 1853.

W. McK. SCOTT, A. M., Founder and President.

JAMES C. HAYDEN, (Late Professor in Bacon's Mercantile College, Cincinnati,)

PROF. OF BOOK-KEEPING AND PENMANSHIP.

THE Session will commence at College Hall as follows:

1st Session on the first Monday of September.
2d Session on the 1st Monday of November.
3d Session on the 1st Monday of January.
4th Session on the 1st Monday of March.
5th Session on the 1st Monday of May.

Having secured, permanently, the services of the distinguished Professor above named, and leased for a term of years the commodious and beautiful Hall formerly known as CONCERT HALL, but now named COLLEGE HALL, which is to be fitted up in a style of great elegance, taste, and convenience, the President would say, that this College now offers advantages superior to all others, for imparting a sound, thorough, and accomplished business education

COURSE OF STUDIES.

The Course of Studies, as enlarged, will be as follows, viz:

1 Book-Keeping, by Single and Double Entry, in all its various branches, and its application to all kinds of business.
2. The Laws, Customs, and Usages of Trade and Commerce.
3. Mercantile Arithmetic, upon the short and easy system of cancelation, (taught in no other College.)
4. Commercial Law, in a series of Lectures, thorough and systematic.
5. Business Penmanship.
6. Commercial Correspondence.
7 Lectures upon Banking, Political Economy, and other subjects valusble to the business man.

EXPENSES.

Cards of Admission, invariably in advance, or secured, $25; Diplomas $3; Stationery $5; Boarding $2 50 per week; incidentals, at option of student, $15. Making entire expenses about $75.

On application, a Catalogue will be furnished, giving full particulars.

All letters will receive prompt attention on being directed, post-paid, to

june 8 W. McK. SCOTT, President.

"God never made his works for man to mend." DR. FRANKLIN.

KIER'S ROCK OIL.

A NEW AND MOST IMPORTANT REMEDY FOR DISEASE.

DISCOVERED IN 1849.

IS drawn from a deep well near Pittsburgh—has been used with remarkable success in Ohio and Pennsylvania, and more Eastern States—and is now working its way West. An opportunity is now offered to the Afflicted for testing it. Where known and tried, it at once makes firm friends, and cures which are eloquent in its praise. Certificates of its power to heal are at hand—but we know well, reader, that such evidence, to have weight with you, now-a-days, must be in your own neighborhood.—You have only to try the Oil to be satisfied—it will SPEAK FOR ITSELF.

We have no war with the legion of Nostrums and Specifics of the day—we know but little about them—some say they are good for nothing. However that may be, the

Petroleum

will not be suppressed and kept back by reason of the above nostrums—duty and inclination both forbid it.

Those who are afflicted, are respectfully invited to get a Circular and look over the Directions for

Ague, Rheumatism, Piles, Diarrhœa, Flux, Tooth Ache, Burns, Worms, Scrofula, Coughs, Bronchitis, Croup, Old Sores, Cholera Morbus, Contractions of the Limbs and Joints, Sore Eyes, Blindness, Costiveness, Dyspepsia, and other Diseases.

By that time you may say, "it cures too much." But recollect it is not a HUMAN INVENTION, but compounded by Nature's master hand—and Nature does not do her work by halves.

The Oil is used both internally and externally.

As AGUE, SORE EYES, PILES, RHEUMATISM, and SCROFULA are so common in many parts of the West, we are constrained to say, that while this Oil will cure and relieve other diseases, it has been and is constantly used with most complete success in these cases.

☞ Price 50 cents per Bottle (half pint.)

Beware of all Rock Oil preparations, as some persons are offering a spurious article. Look for S. M. KIER'S name written on the label of the bottle.

For sale by the Druggists throughout Indiana, and by TOMLINSON BROTHERS, J. P. POPE & Co., S. ROSENGARTEN, WM. TILLEY, and at wholesale by W. W. ROBERTS, Indianapolis, Indiana.

R. M. LYON, Fort Wayne,

may25 10w Proprietor in the Western States.

SOMETHING NEW.

LATHROP & STEVENS, Wholesale and Retail Dealers in BOOTS AND SHOES, at the West room in the Bates House, Washington Street, Indianapolis.

We are now opening a new and splendid stock of Boots and Shoes of every variety and style, which we are receiving direct from the manufacturers.—We design to keep constantly on hand a good assortment of the best quality of goods manufactured, which we can warrant to give satisfaction to all who may give them a trial. We will sell by the case, dozen, or single pair, at low prices for cash.—Our stock consists in part of Gents' fine Cloth, silk warp, glove kid, buck, patent calf, and enameled Gaiters and Ties of every variety and style; Ladies' fine silk warp Gaiters, Buskins, Ties, Slippers and Boots; Misses' ditto; Men's calf, goat, kip, and thick Boots and Brogans; Boys' and Youths' ditto; assorted Ladies, kid, goat and calf Boots and Buskins; Misses' ditto. Also every variety of Children's Shoes. Come and see for yourselves.

LATHROP & STEVENS,

may 25 4w Indianapolis, Indiana.

TEMPERANCE INN,

Bloomington, Indiana.

J. & S. M. ORCHARD, PROPRIETORS.

TRAVELLERS will find it to their advantage to call and try the accommodation of the TEMPERANCE INN. Stage office for all the different routes, in connection with this House. may25 6m

THE LATEST WONDER of the 19th CENTURY.

DR. G. W. BENNETT'S

Celebrated Eye-Balm.

A SPECIFIC FOR CHRONIC, SORE, INFLAMED, AND WEAK EYES.

Prepared only by Dr. George W. Bennett, and for sale by Merchants and Druggists generally.

THIS Balm is an excellent and certain cure for sore and inflamed Eyes, in all cases of Psoroic, Scrofulous, and Purulent Opthalmia, and what is commonly termed wild hairs in the eye-lids. It is a specific in Infantile, Purulent, and Scrofulous Inflamed, and Sore Eyes, and all in the various diseases of the Eyes, that prevail among the human family, in every climate. It will be found a sovereign remedy if properly applied.

W. W. ROBERTS, Indianapolis, Ind. General Agent for State of Indiana, to whom all orders must be addressed.

Price---Twenty-five Cents.

I warrant the above Balm to cure if the directions are strictly observed, or return the money.

june 22 4m G. W. BENNETT.

REAL ESTATE AND GENERAL AGENCY OFFICE,

INDIANAPOLIS, INDIANA.

UNDER THE CONTROL OF W. M'K. SCOTT, Attorney & Counsellor at Law, and Notary Public.

The attention of the Agency will be devoted,

First—To the collection of debts and the payment of Taxes for non-residents in any county in the State. Also, the redemption of Lands sold for Taxes, sale, purchase or lease of Lands, purchase of adverse claims, examination and perfection of Title, &c., &c.

Second—To the prosecution of claims against the General Government, procuring Land Warrants, Patent Rights, and Pensions under the various Pension Laws, &c.

Third—All other Miscellaneous agencies as may be intrusted to the care of this office.

Fourth—The taking of Depositions and Attestation of all instruments requiring a seal

In all cases requiring an outlay of money for the benefit of individuals, the requisite funds must be transmitted in advance.

Prompt attention to all letters on business that are pre-paid. Address W. M'K. SCOTT,

Real Estate and General Agent,

jan 5-1y Indianapolis, Ind.

ADAMS & CO'S EXPRESS.

WE are now running a daily line East and West, accompanied by special messengers, and with the speed of the mails, running our own cars with the passenger trains.

Packages will be received at the cars up to the time of starting, and at our office until 1 o'clock each day.

We are prepared to transport packages, bank notes and specie, to and from any of the eastern cities, also, Louisville, Frankfort, and Lexington, Ky., St. Louis, Mo., or any points on the Ohio and Mississippi rivers; and to and from Terre Haute, and all intermediate points, and to forward freight from Terre Haute up and down the Wabash.

In addition to these, we have the most complete arrangements for transporting packages to and from California and Europe.

Exchange on England, Ireland, and Scotland, for sale, payable at any bank in the kingdom.

Foreign passage tickets; by Grinnell, Minturn & Co.'s line to Liverpool and London, constantly on hand, and for sale at the lowest rates.

Notes, drafts, and bills collected in any of the Eastern or Western cities.

Orders for goods to be returned by Express, sent free. Our rates of charges have been greatly reduced, and the public will find this a safe and expeditious method of transportation.

Indianapolis, June 30, 1852. ADAMS & CO.

Office in Indianapolis in Journal Building, west side Pennsylvania Street.

Office open during business hours.

june30 1y C. WOODWARD, Agent.

The Cheapest Illustrated Paper for the Young.

PRICE ONLY TEN CENTS A YEAR, or nearly three papers for one cent, where 100 copies are taken.

Twenty-six numbers a year, and each number illustrated with from three to seven engravings.

The Youth's Penny Gazette,

A strictly Religious and Moral Paper, is published by the AMERICAN SUNDAY SCHOOL UNION and is designed to furnish the Children and Youth of the United States with reading matter, in a popular form, for the improvement of Mind and Heart.

It is published (not monthly, nor weekly, but) every other week, or twenty-six numbers in a year. It is religious but unsectarian, and the matter is carefully prepared with a view to the habits, character and prospects of American Youth

TERMS OF THE PENNY GAZETTE.

$10 a year, in advance, for 100 copies, to one address. $5 a year, in advance, for 40 copies, to one address. $3 a year, in advance, for 20 copies, to one address. Single subscriptions, 25 cents per year.

TERMS BY MAIL, POSTAGE PAID.

☞ When the postage is paid at the place of mailing, the terms are very low. For $15 remitted, we will send 100 copies of the paper for one year, to one address—we paying postage. For $7 remitted, we will send 40 copies of the paper to one address, for one year—we paying postage. For $3 50 remitted, we will send 20 copies of the paper for one year, to one address—we paying postage. Less than 20 cannot be sent at this cheap rate.

Subscriptions received at the Society's House, No. 146 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.

Feb 16 3w G. S. SCOFIELD, Agent.

TO BUILDERS.

North Western Christian University.

THE Building Committee of the Board of Directors of the North-Western Christiana University, propose contracting for the west wing of the University Building, to be put up on the University grounds in the vicinity of Indianapolis.

Sealed Proposals in detail, with prices affixed for doing the work necessary to the completion of the said Wing, will be received until the 19th day of July next, and may be handed to the undersigned, or to J. T. Cox. Secretary of the Company, at the Book Store of Cox & Mathes, in Indianapolis.

The materials and work to be according to the plan, drawings and specifications prepared by Wm. Tinsley, Architect, which may be seen and examined at his room, on the east side of Pennsylvania street, three doors north of the north-east Diagonal, in Indianapolis. The specifications have been materially changed and modified, so as to reduce the cost of the building.

Proposals for the whole combined, would be preferred; but will be received for the different parts and portions thereof separotely. The whole to be completed and fit for use by the first day of September, 1854.

Payments will be made as the work progresses, at such short periods as may suit the covenience of the Contractors. Bond and security will be required for the performance of the work.

In behalf of the Building Committee:

OVID BUTLER,

President of the Board of Directors.

June 10, 1853. june 22 3w

LITTLE, DRUM & ANDERSONS

WHOLESALE DEALERS IN

STAPLE AND FANCY DRY GOODS, BOOTS, SHOES, HATS, CAPS, STATIONERY, NOTIONS, TRIMMINGS, GROCERIES, HARDWARE, QUEENSWARE, AND GLASSWARE,

North side of Washington Street,

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

WE are receiving Country Produce of all descriptions, and paying the highest market price. Dealers visiting Indianapolis are respectfully invited to call and examine our stock and prices, both for Produce and Merchandise generally. june30 tf

JAMES HALL,

MERCHANT TAILOR,

No. 2. Temperance, Hall, Indianapolis,

Manufactu'ng & Clothing Emporium,

Wholesale and Retail Dealer in Ready Made Clothing, Cloths, Cassimers, Vestings, Trimmings, Trunks, Sachels, Canes, Umbrellas, Hats, Caps, a every description of Gentlemen's Furnishing.

Also:

General Agency for the sale of GRAND AND SUBORDINATE REGALIA, EMBLEMS, COSTUMES, &c., FOR THE ORDERS OF MASONS, ODD FELLOWS, TEMPLE OF HONOR, SON, DAUGHTERS, AND CADETS OF TEMPERANCE. oct27 1y

The American Life and Health Insurance Company.

Office—No. 7, South Third St., Philadelphia.

Officers.

LEONARD JEWELL, President.
JAMES PEACOCK, Treasurer.
JOHN C. SIMS, Sec'y and Actuary.
THOS. S. SMITH, Solicitor
JOHN F. BIRD, FRED. A. FICKARDT, } Medical Examiners.

CHARLES WOODWARD, Indianapolis, Ind., General Agent for the State of Indiana.

THIS Company issues policies at Total Abstinence Rates, Joint stock Rates, and at Mutual Rates, which for $1000 on the life of a person 30 years of age, are as follows:

Age.	Total Abstinence.	Joint Stock.	Mutual
30	$15.40	$19.60	$23.60

A further table of Rates will be furnished at the Office.

The condition in Total Abstinence rates (believed to be the lowest in the Union,) is entire forfeiture upon the departure of the Insured from Total Abstinence in its strictest sense.

Policies at Joint Stock and Mutual rates, contain no condition except as usual in Life Insurance.

HEALTH INSURANCE DEPARTMENT.

All Moneys received from the Insured, for Annual Premiums, after deducting expenses, will be divided among the Sick

The Public have for some time been familiar with the subject of Life and Health Insurance, but it is obvious that too little thoughts has been given to the latter. LIFE Insurance benefits our successors, while HEALTH Insurance directly benefits ourselves. It makes provision for a time of sickness, when the products of a man's industry are cut off, and want unites with Disease to aggravate his distress. It is at this gloomy period, when he is prostrated and helpless, and when despondency would otherwise overwhelm him, that the holder of a Health Insurance Policy will realize its benefits.

RATES, under 50 years of age,

$2,00	per year,	for	$2,00	per week.
3,00	"	"	3,00	"
4,00	"	"	4,00	"
5,00	"	"	5,00	"
6,00	"	"	6,00	"

Over fifty and under sixty.

$2,50	per year,	for	$2,50	per week.
3,75	"	"	3,00	"
5,00	"	"	4,00	"
6,25	"	"	5,00	"
7,50	"	"	6,00	"

When the Fund shall amount to Three Dollars and upwards for every person insured and sufficient to warrant an additional distribution, the weekly allowances will be increased in accordance with the Rules of the Policy.

All the members of a Temple or Division insured at greatly reduced rates.

Applications for Agencies in any of the cities or towns in the State, should be made to the undersigned, post paid, or in person.

As Agent for the above Company, I am prepared to receive applications for Policies at any of the above rates.

CHARLES WOODWARD, Agent,

At ADAMS & CO.'S Express Office.

J. L. MOTHERSHEAD, Medical Examiner.

june 30 '52-1y

Ohio Life Insurance Company,

Capital $100,000.

JOINT STOCK AND MUTUAL,

CINCINNATI.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS.

Wm. Burnet, Jno. N. Ridgway, Chas. Goodman, S. Robert, E. S. Haines, Jno. M. Blair, J. W. Donohue, Eden B. Reeder, Wm. Person.

WM. BURNET, President.

S. W. REEDER, Sec'y J. W. DONOHUE, Vice Pres't

Office in Reeder's Building, Third street, between Almy's and City Bank.

This Company insures Lives at the lowest rates consistent with safety, either upon the Joint Stock or Mutual plan.

In the Joint Stock Department, premium payable quarterly, semi-annually or annually. On the Mutual plan, one-half the premium paid in Cash, the balance by a note bearing six per cent. interest—the interest only payable annually. Persons insuring on the mutual plan, participate in the profits of the Company in that department.

The undersigned having been appointed agent for the above Company, is prepared to fill applications for Life Insurance, on favorable terms.

Any information on the subject and pamphlets explaining the nature and utility of Life Insurance, furnished without charge, at the office of the Agent.

C. WOODWARD, Agent.

Office at Adam's & Co.'s Express Office, Journal Building, Pennsylvania street, Indianapolis, Ind.

june 30, '52-1y.

Railroad City Book Store.

COX & MATHES,

South side of Washington, between Illinois and Meridian streets,

INDIANAPOLIS, INDIANA.

AT wholesale and retail, Standard and Miscellaneous Works, Law, and Medical Books, School Books, Plain and Fancy Stationery, Blank Books, Wall Papers, &c., &c. mar 2

CHEAP WATCHES & JEWELRY.

Good Gold Watches at $24!

WE are now in our new Room No. 1, Palmer House, with a lot of beautiful Watches and Jewelry which we are selling lower than ever heretofore sold in Indianapolis, for instance we sell

Good 18 K Case Gold Lepines at $24.
" 18 K " " Levers at $28.
" Silver Anchor Levers $12 to $18.
" " Cylenders, $9 to $12.
" " Quarter's $6 to $10.

In addition to the above we have a fine assortment of other description of Watches all of which we will sell lower than any other firm dare sell in the place. I have in my employ a very superior Watch Repairer who will always be on on hand to do watch repairing of every description. Mr. Michot has worked in Geneva, Paris, New York and other large cities and has had great experience in his Branch of the business. All Watches warranted for one year, and the money in all cases refunded, provided they do not give entire satisfaction.

feb9 tf E. W. NEFF.

SMALL CHANGE.

THE undersigned is prepared to furnish Merchants and others with three cent pieces from the United States Mint at Philadelphia, free of transportation, in sums of 30, 60, and 90 dollars, upon deposit of Gold or Eastern Exchange. Also cents and half cents, upon payment of frieght on gold to Philadelphia, or on Eastern Exchange free of freight.

C. WOODWARD, Agent,

june 30 Adams & Co.'s Express.

A CHANCE TO MAKE MONEY.

Profitable and honorable Employment!

THE Subscriber is desirous of having an agent in each county and town of the Union. A capital of from $5 to $10 only will be required, and anything like an efficient, energetic man can make from three to five dollars per day; indeed some of the Agents now employed are realizing twice that sum. Every information will be given by addressing, (postage paid) WM. A. KINSLER,

june 15 3w Box 601, Philadelphia P. O.

THE ILLUSTRATED MAGAZINE OF ART.

THE five numbers of this Magazine which are published, place it at the head of publications of this kind No expense will be spared to make it in every respect worthy of the name, the "Illustrated Magazine of Art. The Engavings which are preparing for the future numbers are in the hands of first-class American and European Artists.

A Series of most interesting Tales will appear in it. "The School of Life," written and Illustrated by ANNA MARY, daughter of William and Mary Howitt, will shortly appear; also, "The Dead Bridal," an historical romance, illustrative of the most interesting period in the history of the Venetian Republic, by JONATHAN FREKE SLINGSBY, of the Dublin University Magazine; contributions, too, from WILLIAM and MARY HOWITT, PERCY B. ST. JOHN, and other writers of distinction in America and Europe

The following is a brief outline of the plan of the Magazine:

I. The Historical Department will abound with picturesque representations of the most remarkable events which have occurred in this and other countries; accompanied with interesting anecdotes and details from the pen of the most eminent writers of the day. This department will contain several splendid engravings, designed by the first artists of the world, and engraved in the highest style of modern art.

II. The Men and Women of the Age. This department will consist of beautifully executed portraits of the leading characters of the age, especially of those who figure on the stage of humanity as the world's benefactors. Each portrait will be accompanied by an interesting biographical sketch.

III. The Wonders of Natural History, Botany, and other sciences, will be developed in choice Engravings of Beasts, Birds, Fishes, Insects, Forest Trees, Flowers, Geological and Fossil Specimens, &c., with accompanying descriptions.

IV. The Triumphs of Architectural Art will be displayed in exquisitely finished representations of Cathedrals, Churches, Palaces, and other models of ancient and modern Architectural Art.

V. The Works of the Great Masters, selected from the principal Galleries of Art in the World. In general, the portrait of the Master will be given, accompanied with a highly finished engraved copy of his chef d'œuvre.

VI. The Scientific Portions will be rendered highly interesting by the familiar explanations, and the numerous diagrams which will accompany each subject.

VII. Manufactures. The principal manufaciuring processes in use will be fully explained by minute details, and an abundance of beautiful engravings.

VIII. Machinery and Inventions will have due attention paid to them, and be described by numerous appropriate engravings.

IX. The Literary Department, independently of the various articles accompanying the illustrations, will comprise original and interesting narratives, contributed by the most popular writers of the day, with numerous illustrations.

In every respect, the "Illustrated Magazine of Art," will be decidedly

SUPERIOR TO ANY MAGAZINE OF THE DAY.

Each Monthly part will contain at least Thirty superb Engravings, four of which will be printed separately, on supefine Plate Paper.

The greatest care will be manifested in every department of production. The Paper will be of the first manufacture, and the Ink supplied from the celebrated Printing Ink Establishment of Messrs. Lawson & Co., of Paris. Six of the monthly portions, when completed, will form a volume which, for interest, originality, value and beauty, will defy competition. It will not only be an interesting family book, but a rich ornament for the drawing-room table, and a pleasant companion in the study.

The parts will appear on the First of every Month at Twenty-five Cents each.

ALEXANDER MONTGOMERY,

may 25 17 Spruce Street, New-York.

SPLENDIDLY ILLUSTRATED WORKS.

THE ALPS, SWITZERLAND, SAVOY AND LOMBARDY.

With the Magazine for June will be ready, Part I., price Twenty-five Cents, of a Magnificent Work to be completed in Twelve Monthly Parts, entitled

THE ALPS, SWITZERLAND, SAVOY AND LOMBARDY, with an account of the most recent Ascents to Mont Blanc, &c. By the Rev. Charles Williams. This work, when completed, will form a large thick Volume, in Imperial Octavo, containing upwards of Three Hundred beautiful Engravings, descriptive of the peculiar Scenery of those most interesting portions of Europe, with the Occupations of the Inhabitants, &c., &c.

Cassell's Natural History.

On the First of July will commence

CASSELL'S NATURAL HISTORY, which for variety, beauty and completeness, will claim to be considered as a first-class work, upon this most interesting subject. The First volume will be devoted to the Feathered Tribe of the Creation and will contain upwards of Three Hundred Engravings, in the first style of Art. The volume will be completed in Twelve Monthly Parts, Imperial Octavo. Price 25 cents each.

History of England.

On the First of July will appear Part I., price 25 cts. of THE ILLUSTRATED HISTORY OF ENGLAND, from the earliest period on record to the present time. Edited by ROBERT FERGUSON, LL. D.

This History, which is intended to form a great National Work, will extend to Four Volumes, Imperial Octavo; each Volume to be completed in Twelve Monthly Parts, price 25 cents each. The Work will comprehend the Political, Civil, and Domestic History of the Nation, and its Progress in Civilization, Literature, Art, &c. It will be profusely Illustrated with Engravings from Designs by GILBERT, PHILLIPPOTEAUX, WILLIAMS, and others. Representations of the most remarkable Events will be worked separately upon Plate Paper. The Portraits will form a complete Gallery, not only of the Monarchs, but of those individuals whose names are prominent in England's History. Also, Antiquities, including Autographs, Buildings, Costume, Furniture, Arms, Coins, Monuments, Manufactures &c., of each Epoch.

History of Hungary.

July First will be published, in one Handsome Volume, Imperial Octavo, price, One Dollar and Twenty-five Cents, in Cloth Boards,

THE ILLUSTRATED HISTORY OF HUNGARY, AND THE MAGYARS, from the Earliest Period to the clos of the late War. By EDWARD LAWRENCE GODKIN. The Volume will be Illustrated with One Hundred highly finished Engravings, including representations of the principal Battles; Portraits of the early Kings, and of the Statesmen and Generals who figured in the War of Independence; Costumes of the Peasantry, &c.; Views of the chief Towns and Fortresses, &c.; with an accurate Description of the Manners and Customs of the People, their Literature, Commerce, Arts, &c.

ALEXANDER MONTGOMERY,

may25 Publisher, 17 Spruce Street, New-York.

MANSION HOUSE,

Cambridge City, Indiana.

J. CUNNINGHAM, Proprietor.

TRAVELLERS

Will find it to their advantage to call and try the accommodation of the MANSION HOUSE.

STAGE OFFICE also in connection with this House.

may 4 6m

INDIANA STATE LIBRARY

TEMPERANCE CHART.

A Weekly Journal:---Devoted to Temperance, Morality, Education, Literature, Useful Arts, Science, General Intelligenc, &c.

J. W. GORDON, M. D., EDITOR.] ORGAN OF THE GRAND DIVISION OF INDIANA. [JOHN H. OHR, PRINTER.

VOL. III. INDIANAPOLIS, IND., WEDNESDAY, OCT. 5, 1853. NO. 15.

THE TEMPERANCE CHART,

IS PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY, BY THE GRAND DIVISION, S. of T. OF INDIANA.

Edited by J. W. Gordon, M. D.

To whom all Communications and Subscriptions must be addressed, post-paid.

OFFICE—in second story of Temperance Hall Building, Washington St., Indianapolis.

TERMS:

Single copy, one year,..... 75 cts.

☞ In advance in all cases,

TERMS OF ADVERTISING.—Circulation 4000 copies.

One Squre, (12 lines,) for one week,	$0 50
" " for each subsequent insertion,	25
" " for 3 months,	3 00
" " for 6 months,	5 00
" " for 1 year without alteration,	8 00
" " for 1 year, with changes,	1002

A reduction made on larger advertisements.
Cuts double the above rates.
Advertisements must be handed in by Saturday, of each week, to insure insertion.
Applications for advertising, or for any kid of Printing for the Order, must be made to
J. H. OHR, Indinnapolis.

POETRY.

Mr. Tipple-none.

Tipple-alittle, Tipple-more,
And Mr. Tipple-none,
Began to talk together once;
Thus did their language run:

Said Tipple-a-little to Tipple-none—
"My dearest sir, I think
'Tis wrong to banish from the land
All but teetotal drink.

"Because a little spirit's good,
Whene'er the flesh is weak,
But then, to drink too much is wrong,
'Tis not for that I speak.

"But when one's wet, or when one's dry,
Or when one's cold, or when One's not exactly one of these,
I like a little then."

"That's just the thing," quoth Tipple-much,
Rising from where he sat,
And trying to balance as he walked—
"That's right, I'll stick to that.

"But then to drink too much, why, that—Why, that I should despise:"
"That's right, that's right," quoth Tipple-more,
Who looked more drunk than wise;

"That's just the talk I like," quoth he;
"Come, brother, join our band;
We'll take another glass on that,"
And seized him by the hand.

With bloodshot eyes and ragged clothes,
Came then poor Tipple-all,
To join his brother at the bar,
And for the liquor call.

"Is Tipple-a-little then your friend?"
Good Tipple-none replied,
"You see how all these Tipples range
Themselves upon your side.

"'Tis right they should, for one by one,
From grade to grade you fall;
Thus Tipple-a-little comes at last
To be poor Tipple-all.

"Yet each approves your arguments,
All say, Don't drink too much;
And every lane in 'Drunkendom,'
Is crowded full of such.

"So let me caution all of you,
And counsel every one—
To take the only name that's safe,
And that is—TIPPLE-NONE."

MISCELLANEOUS.

The Farm House;

ITS SCENES OF HAPPINESS AND MISERY.

BY "S. E. G."

"My good woman, can you lnform me if the old house at the turn of the road is for sale?" inquired a gentleman one morning of a woman in a small town in New Hampshire.

"If you call that house old, what must you think of my age—I was a woman grown when the timber of that house stood in the forest yonder? Old, do you call it? Well, it may be with sin and sorrow, but not with time."

"I hope I have not given offence, ma'am," he replied, surprised at her not answering his question, and the sharpness of her tones.

"Oh no, sir, but I can hardly keep my temper when the 'old house,' as you call it, is talked of. It is for sale, and may be you would like to buy it. It was a pretty place once, and might be again if another owner had it; and I guess 'Squire Flint would sell it for a little or nothing, for it's a terrible eyesore to him; and they say it is haunted, but I don't believe that. If any house is haunted it would be the 'Squire's, I reckon. There is a history connected with that house."

"Would you favor me with it, good woman?"

"May be you would not care to hear an old woman's story, if you think of buying it."

The stranger insisted on hearing it.

"Well," she replied, "if you'll just walk down to the house, I'll tell it."

Accordingly they wended their way to the house.

Neither fences nor gate impeded their way to the door, which creaked on its hinges as they entered.

The house was well built, and covered considerable ground, but low, like most of the farm houses in the "Granite State." It was not decayed, but seemed suffering much from neglect. The old woman seated herself on the steps of the door, and motioned the stranger to be seated on a chopping-block beside her. Then drawing a long breath, and wrapping her cloak closely about her, commenced:

"Well, as I was saying, I was a woman grown when this house was built. I lived in the house over the hill there,"—pointing with her finger to one half hid by the trees in front. "There were no houses nearer than 'Squire Flint's,—the old Squire I mean,—and his was about two miles up the road. He kept tavern, and a rummy old thing it was, I tell you.—Well, as I was saying, I had no neighbors, and felt proper lonesome, at times, when Joe was at work in the field.

"I had been married about two years, and my Ben was three months old, when one day my husband came running into the house almost out of breath: 'Susy,' says he, 'I have got some news to tell you. A smart chap from down below has bought the hundred acre lot, and is going to build a house right away. He says, as soon as he gets it done, he is going to be married to a real pretty girl in Massachusetts, and coming here to live. I am so glad! I shall have some one near me when I am in the field, and you will have a neighbor to chat with now and then.' I was almost as glad as he was, only a little afraid that she would think herself above me; but in a few days, young 'Squire Flint came with a young man to our house, and introduced him as Mr. Bailey, the man who had bought the hundred-acre lot of him, ('Squire Flint owned it).

"As soon as I clapped my eyes upon him, I knew I should like him—so sociable, and not a mite proud. And he laughed and played with little Ben, and said he was glad to find such pleasant neighbors as 'Squire Flint and us for Fanny when she should come. The next day he went into the woods to cut timber for his house. Husband said he would go and help him, for he would not know good from bad; but he came home laughing, and said Bailey could teach him his A, B, C in timber. Bailey told him his father had a saw mill, and he was acquainted with all kinds of timber. Well, his house was built as soon as the timber was dry.—Bailey boarded with us. He worked like a dog. I thought my Joe was a smart one, but I think he beat him sometimes. Well, the house was done aud partly furnished. The best furniture came from down below. When he brought his wife he wanted me to have the fire made, and be there to receive him when he came. I told him I would, but did not tell him all I would do. Just as soon as he was gone, I came right over to the house, scrubbed the floor and sanded it, then put up green boughs in the corner, and burnt out the oven. Then I went home. The next day I told Joe I thought I would bake something nice for them. He said he would if he was me. So he brought me in one of the best pumpkins; I took the top of the milk, and a better batch of pies you never see. Then I fried a pot of dough-nuts, made of sugar and cream, and Joe helped me carry them over.

"The next day he was a coming home. So I put on little Ben's best frock and my Sunday gown, and Joe had on his Sunday suit, too, and while he went out to water Bailey's cattle (he had stocked his farm pretty well), I kindled the first fire on the hearth. About four in the afternoon they arrived. I was ail in a tremble for fear he had brought a fine lady when I saw how finely she was dressed, but I got over it in a minute, for he brought her right to me and introduced her. She shook my hand in real earnest, said she felt almost acquainted, she had heard James tell so much of me. I took her to the closet and showed her the things I had cooked. She seemed chock-full, and could not speak, but burst right out crying. James tried to pacify her, said she had never left her mother before, and hoped she would not be home sick.

"'I am not thinking of home yet,' she replied, 'but I did not think of finding such kind friends among strangers.'

"'Oh, never mind,' says I, 'the pies and the dough-nuts, they didn't cost much. We country people don't mind doing a chore for a neighbor now and then.'

"She soon felt better, and James took her over the house, and out doors and all round. She didn't know anything of farming, but was dreadfully pleased with the little brook that ran near the door, and said she should never tire of watching the sun as he set behind the Monadnock. I did not wonder James thought so much of her; she was the prettiest creature I ever saw, and not a bit more than eighteen, a slender thing, her skin clear red and white, and the bluest eyes I ever looked in. I could not see, for the life of me, how she could work with such little white hands. I felt afraid she would make a poor farmer's wife, bnt I was much mistaken.

"She went right to work the next day and put the things to rights.

"I went over and showed her about churning, and she was as much pleased with her first ball of butter as a child with a rattle. But she was not a child, I tell you; and though I loved her like a sister, and she loved me, I could not help feeling that she was above me. I told her so one day, and it made her feel sad.

"'Don't say so, Susey,' (we called each other by our given names), 'Don't say so,' said she; 'I suppose I have had better advantages than you, but that don't make me any better. You know you have been a mother to me ever since I came here.'

"Such a happy winter I guess never was passed by any body.

"She was in to my house and I to her's most every day, while Joe and James were busy as bees, logging in the woods, or helping one another thrash.

"When I think of them times, I can scarcely believe I am in the same world. Oh, sir," said she, looking into my face with her tearful eyes, "don't never touch the cursed stuff that has caused such misery;—but I am getting before my story." She abruptly continued:

"As I was saying we were happy as we well could be. Well, the next Fall, Fanny had a little girl. I think James was a little disappointed because it was not a boy, but he did not say anything, he was so anxious about Fanny. She was dreadful sick, but a prettier little creature never saw the light—just like her mother, all but her eyes, and there she was all father. He had the handsomest black eyes I ever saw. He always thought a good deal of little Ben, and used frequently to bring little Fanny over to our house, and set her down beside him, and say she should be his wife one of those days.

"About this time old 'Squire Flint died. Bailey had not paid quite up for his place, but the young 'Squire, who had taken the tavern, and inherited his father's property, told him not to worry himself, he would wait.

"The young 'Squire was married, nnd was called a pretty high chap. I knew that after old Flint died, they had greater doings at the tavern, clubs and all sorts of things. My husband said no good would come of it, and there didn't.

"James Bailey was a smart spoken man, and had read a great deal, and 'Squire Flint made him President of the Club. I don't think Fanny liked it very well, but she did not say much—I often found her in tears. I suspected something was wrong, and I soon found out what it was.

"One night I was sick, and Joe went to Fanny's to get me something. It was passed eleven o'clock, and James was not at home when he went in. She said she was expecting him every moment. In a few minutes he came in, much the worse for liquor. Joe said it made his heart ache to hear him talk to Fanny, and James told him he thought he had better be at home, he didn't want him there. He felt ashamed to have Joe see him in such a situation. Well, after that, things went on worse and worse. James neglected his work, and his farm, from being the best cultivated one in the town, became the worst. Most of his time was spent at the tavern. Fanny looked like death.—She had two children now, one a fine little boy, but James took but little notice of his children, and none of his wife. But poor thing, she did not say a word, and she loved him, with all his faults, better than life. I knew she was almost broken hearted, but I could not say a word to her.

"Once, after he had been very bad for drinking as usual at the tavern, when some hard words passed between him and his companions, and something was said about a man visiting Bailey's wife, Bailey resented it, and they had quite a row.—'Squire Flint turned them all out of his house, and Bailey went home swearing vengeance. That evening Joe and I had been to Fanny's to try to persuade her to leave him, offering to take her home with us. She would not listen to it. She said she should not live long, and should she die, she wished me take little Fanny and send her boy to her brother in Connecticut. I could not bear to hear her talk of dying, and tried to cheer her; but somehow or other the words stopped in my throat. I knew that life was a burden to her, but I wanted her to live for her children.

"Husband and I scarcely shut our eyes that night thinking of poor Fanny and her children. And we spoke of James too; what a good husband and neighbor he was before Flint made him a drunkard, for husband always said he tried hard to make James dissipated. He said he would go and see James early in the morning, and advise him to give up his place and move away; for he really thought if he could get him out of Flint's influence he would reform. Early the next morning he went to Fanny's thinking he should find James sober. I had taken my pail to go and milk, when my husband shrieked, 'Susan! Susan! for the love of heaven come here!' I dropped my pail and ran, and sir," said she, looking fearfully into the house,—"such a sight may I never see again! On the floor lay Bailey with his throat cut from ear to ear, and in the bed room there," pointing to one that led from the kitchen, "on that bed lay Fanny and her two children covered with gore. He had nearly severed their heads from their bodies, and then destroyed himself!

"We buried them, sir, but when I saw their dead pale faces covered with blood shed by that husband and father, I could hardly help cursing that man that had caused all this misery for the sake of making money. After the funeral, I raked out the fire that five years before I had built on that hearth-stone with so much pleasure. Oh! thought I, if every seller and drinker of ardent spirits could look upon this desolate fireside, and think of the misery they had caused, they would stop their murderous work.

"It is thirty years since; but when I think of those things, it seems but yesterday. I have brought up four boys, and I have taken them to this house, and told them its story; and I don't believe one of them would take a drop of liquor to save their lives!"

The stranger seemed much affected by the recital, and after a few moments' silence, replied, "I will buy this place, and get you to tell the story to my boys, and while I live not one drop of ardent spirits shall ever cross its threshold,"—Maine Temperance Watchman.

NEW WAY TO RAISE THE WIND.—At the World's Temperance Convention, at New York, on Thursday, the Rev. Mr. Hunt, of Pennsylvania, sold at auction a barrel of flour, which had been received from Wisconsin. It was sent to the Convention for that purpose, and the proceeds were to be applied in distributing temperance tracts in Wisconsin. The bids started at ten dollars, but before the Reverend Auctioneer stopped, he sold the barrel, after a good deal of hammering, and "going, going," for the round sum of one hundred dollars.

☞ Time, thought, and money are three talents given us for the service of God, and we have no more right to waste one than the other.

The Steam Fire Engine.

A communication from the builder of the Cincinnati steam fire engine appears in the Franklin Institute for this month. From this account, we learn that the boiler of the engine is one continuous coil of iron pipe, which is surrounded by the fire.—The water injected into this receiver is almost immediately converted into steam, and five minutes only are required to put the machine in operation. Four men and four horses is all the force required.

As regards the pumping power of the engine, it is said it can throw one or six streams, and will discharge about two thousand barrels per hour. It has two suctions, six and a half inches in diameter, and twenty-four feet long, each consisting of one piece. They are always attached to the engine, cross each other in front, and lay back on either side. The greatest throw of water yet made is stated to be two hundred and forty feet from the end of the nozzle, measuring one inch and three quarters, to where the solid body of the stream fell, and two hundred and ninety-one feet to the point reached by the spray.

By way of illustration, we may notice its performance at one fire, to show the effect produced by this machine, compared with that by the hand apparatus. A fire occurred on the 20th of May, 1853, on Twelfth and Main streets, at three o'clock P. M.; the alarm was given, the steam engine ran eight squares, laid her hose, which was one square from the fire, and put the first water on the fire, which was all done in about five minutes; the hand apparatus, notwithstanding there were some of them stationed only two squares from the fire, were not at work until the steam engine was under way.

In eight and a half hours' work, (making due allowance for loss of water,) she poured into the fire about 15,000 barrels of water: it was a large brewery, with ale cellar; the wind was high and nothing but a cataract of water could have saved the entire square from destruction. This will show what can be done with steam in putting out fires. Arrangements are now making for four more of these machines by the chief engineer of the fire department. This will give the fire department of Cincinnati the greatest strength of any in the Union.

TO BE REMEMBERED.—In noticing the fact that a little girl was recently stung to death by hornets in the Miami Valley, the Cincinnati Enquirer says:

"Had some one present known that a lump of wet saleratus applied to the stung parts of the little sufferer, would have instantly stopped the pain and prevented all swelling, the life of the child would have been saved." Remember this hereafter.

Rules for Home Education.

The following are worthy of being printed in letters of gold, and of being placed in a conspicuous position in every household:

1. From your children's earliest infancy you must inculcate the necessity of instant obedience.
2. Unite firmness with gentleness. Let your children always understand that you mean exactly what you say.
3. Never promise them anything, unless you are sure that you can give them what you promise.
4. If you tell a child to do something, show him how to do it, and see that it is done.
5. Always punish your children for wilfully disobeying you, but never punish in anger.
6. Never let them perceive that they can vex you, or make you lose your self-command.
7. If they give way to petulance and temper, wait till they are calm, and then gently reason with them on the impropriety of their conduct.
8. Remember that a little present punishment, when the occasion arises, is much more effectual than the threatening of a great punishment should the fault be renewed.
9. Never give your children anything because they cry for it.
10. On no account allow them to do at one time what you have forbidden, under like circumstances, at another.
11. Teach them that the only sure and easy way to appear good, is to be good.
12. Accustom them to make their little recitals with perfect truth.
13. Never allow of tale-bearing.

INDIANA STATE LIBRARY INDIANAPOLIS

TEMPERANCE CHART.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.
WM. HANNAMAN, C. E. BABB,
JAMES HALL, R. T. BROWN,
JOHN B. ABBETT.

WEDNESDAY, OCT. 5, 1853.

To Subordinate Divisions.
NEW RITUAL.

The new Ritual of our Order has been received at this office.

All Divisions wishing it, must order immediately and enclose Two Dollars to the undersigned, when it will be sent free of expense.

C. WOODWARD, G. S.

Indianapolis, Oct. 5, 1853.

Maine Law in Michigan.

Our temperance friends in Michigan are looking forward with interest to the taking effect of their liquor law, which will be in December. They seem to be confidently expecting a grand triumph of their cause, as soon as they have the power to bring the rum-seller to justice. The State Central Committee called a meeting, to be held on the 29th of September, to prepare for a systematic arrangement for carrying out the provisions of the law, securing the prosecution of offenders, etc. The Committee says, "It is expected that forms of proceedings, regulations for the Agents, and other matters of practical importance under the law, will be acted upon at the Convention."

This is the way. First secure the law, and then take systematic and efficient means to carry it out. The Maine Law and the Carson League together will do wonders in the way of purifying the moral atmosphere. The Temperance Advocate, at Detroit, says the law will be enforced.

Still-House Pork.

At New Richmond, a town on the Ohio river, about twenty miles above Cincinnati, there are two distilleries, at which two hundred and five barrels of whiskey are manufactured per day. Grain, to the amount of several hundred bushels, (besides considerable water,) is used in the process, and after the spirit is extracted, the remainder, is fed to hogs, of which, it is said, there are sixteen thousand constantly kept on hand. The pens are emptied and filled about three times a year, making altogether forty-eight thousand hogs per year. Of this number, upwards of three thousand die annually, on account of the alcoholic nature of their food, and the remainder which don't quite die, are killed, nicely barrelled, and sent out for somebody to eat. Many a pound of it, we presume, is devoured by hungry men, little suspecting that it is any other than the real "corn-fed." We are of opinion that taking this whisky business, in all its various branches, there is about as much dirt mixed up with it as can be found short of the back yard of a slaughterhouse, and that is the dirtiest place we know of.

STRAWS SHOW WHICH WAY THE WIND BLOWS.—The Cincinnati Atlas, after speaking of the prospect of the passage of the Maine Law in Ohio, and the effect in causing distillers to delay further investments, says, "In various counties in the State, there are already preparations made to discontinue the business. At the State Fair we conversed with a number of farmers, and learned that there was a marked disinclination to invest more money in distilling, until the Maine Law question is decided. Voters, decide it good this Fall, or they will be kept in suspense another year."

☞ In Cincinnati, on Tuesday, John Ooff was fined twenty dollars and costs for disturbing a temperance meeting.

The Madison Convention.

As we were not able to be present at the Convention we are necessarily dependent upon other sources of information for a report of its proceeedings. The resolutions given below show the spirit of the meeting. They ocupy the true ground, and we have no doubt correctly represent the real position of the temperance men of the State. The time has come to act, and we trust that the results of this meeting and of those that are to follow will be such as to strengthen the hands of those who desire to see our State delivered at once and forever from the withering curse of intemperance. We hope the time will soon come when sneaking, skulking politicians, who seek whisky votes, and are on both sides or no side, as best advances their interest, will be driven out and the friends of sobriety and decency, take their places.

The Convention adjourned to meet on the 2d Wednesday of January in Indianapolis.

Mr. C Fletcher, of this place was chair- of the meeting.

We learn that although there were scarcely as many present as was expected, yet a good part of the State was represented, and a good spirit prevailed The official report of the proceedings will probably be received soon.

The resolutions which were drawn by Rev. Mr. Steele of Indianapolis, are as follows:

1. Resolved, That in the opinion of the friends of temperance, here, in convention assembled, the time has arrived when the public sentiment of this States requires the enactment of a law which shall entirely prohibit the manufacture or sale, as a beverage, of every description of ardent spirits, or liquors that can intoxicate those who use them.

2. Resolved, That in the election of members of the next legislature, we are determined to make an efficient prohibitory law the issue above all mere party considerations. We, therefore, that such an issue may be made as definite as possible, hereby appoint the following gentlemen, to-wit: J. Sulllivan, of Madison, J. L. Ketcham, of Indianapolis, A. C. Downey, of Rising Sun aud S. A. Huff of Lafayette, a committee, whose duty it shall be to prepare a bill to that effect, to be submitted to the consideration of the State temperance convention which shall assemble at Indianapolis on the second Wednesday of January next, and to the essential features of which said candidates should be required to pledge themselves.

3. Resolved, That we earnestly desire that the friends of a prohibitory law, in eve- county in the State shall hold at an early day, county conventions, for the purpose of sending delegates to the State Convention at Indianapolis on the day above designated, (to which meeting the propriety of requiring the same pledges from all candidates may be submitted,) and to take such other measures as they may deem proper to secure the enactment of the law above indicated, and to advance the great temperance reformation, now so rapidly progressing throughout our whole country.

4. Resolved, That a committee of five be appointed to devise the best plan of conducting the next summer's campaign, to secure the election of the right kind of men to the Legislature, and of raising the means of defraying the incidental expenses; and that said committee report to the convention at Indianapolis.

5. Resolved, That, in view of the fact that many counties of our State are not represented in this convention, and, in the expectation of a full representation in January, we defer until then the arrangemcnt of a plan, in detail, for the canvass of 1854.

The Committee appointed under the 4th resolution consisted of Messrs, C. Fletcher (chosen as chairman of the committee by the convention), W. Hannaman, John Wilkins, Dr. Thompson and Robert Taylor.

☞ Hon. E. A. Hannegan, well known in this State and elsewhere, formerly United States Senator, has recently taken strong ground in favor of a prohibitory law to prevent the manufacture and sale of ardent spirits. In a speech at Covington, a short time since, he said he was ready to vote for the Maine Law, but seemed to think that even that was not strong enough. His speech is spoken of by the Covington paper as a splendid exhibition of eloquence. It is with most unalloyed pleasure we welcome Mr. Hannegan to the Temperance ranks. We hope that in the contest which we will soon be called upon to enter in this State, he will perform an important part, and if so, his influence will surely be felt.

The anti-temperance Resolutions.

The recent temperance movements in this place have had the very natural effect of stirring up the enemy, and exciting whatever of opposition to wholesome laws there was still existing among us. A short time since, some German anti-temperance men met together, and passed a set of resolutions, declaring their independence, and their determination to continue their opposition. As we wish to give a hearing to all, we publish these resolutions as follows:

WHEREAS, the constitution of the United States declares every man free (his own master) and responsible for his conduct only so far as it interferes with the welfare of his fellow-men, and as we cannot see that by taking a glass of beer or wine on the Sabbath, or on any other day, we thereby endanger the welfare of our fellow men. Therefore,

Resolved, That we declare the Temperance law as unconstitutional, and will never be willing to be subjected to the same; further,

Resolved, That we oppose every candidate for whatever office it may be, that does not pledge himself to use all his influence against the Temperance law; further,

Resolved, That we will withhold our patronage from any merchant or business man who has ever aided or voted for this law; further,

Resolved, That we will never support as a candidate for any office, one who has ever officially aided or voted for the Temperance law.

Soon after the passage of these resolutions, at a meeting of the Social Order, they were referred to a committee, and that committee reported the following by way of an offset. An address accompanies these resolutions of the committee, which we would publish but find our colums too much crowded. The resolutions touch the point exactly, and as well as being mostly admirably suited to the occasion, contain sentiments upon which every good citizen would wish to base his conduct.

We may refer to this subject again. The following are the resolutions:

1st. Resolved, That the Temperance community will give employment to those who may be injured by the loss of the patronage of the friends of intemperance—and at the same time we earnestly recommend to our adversaries the propriety of their taking care of and providing for their own victims—now contemplated by the late Temperance Law so odious to the aforesaid Association.

2d. Resolved, That as American citizens we yield obedience to all laws enacted by the majority, whether acceptable to our feelings or not, until the same are repealed, or adjudged by the proper tribunal as unconstitutional. And as such citizens we will hold such as band together to resist the laws of the land as unworthy of being recognized as American citizens.—And we hold it the height of presumption for those who have taken protection under our blessed Government to attempt to dictate or to expound our Constitutional rights in opposition to the solemn adjudications of such men as Chief Justice Taney and Justice McLean of the Supreme Bench of the United States.

3d. As the use of intoxicating drinks is calculated to dethrone reason and render the victim a dangerous and nncertain agent in the private and public employments of life; therefore,

Resolved, That all who hold officinl stations—railroad and other companies, and keepers of public houses—be requested not to take into their employment such as use or advocate the use of intoxicating drinks; and that a copy of this resolution be presented to such companies and officers in this city. And that we will not patronize or employ any company or individuals who keep such persons in their business if we can avoid it.

Resolved, That although the scope of the resolutions of the German Association are calculated to impress the community that the whole of one class of immigrants were interested and involved in this move against temperance and good order—we are pleased to recognize in many of the Germans, the stanchest friends of temperance, religion and true liberty.

THE NEW RITUAL.—It will be seen by a notice from the G. S., that the new Ritual is out, and he has now a supply on hand for those who may wish them. As there has been a good deal of interest manifested in regard to it, we presume there will be an immediate demand for it throughout the State. Send your orders enclosing money, to C. Woodward, G. S.

The Governor of South Carolina has appointed Thursday, the 13th of October, as a day of fasting and humiliation throughout the State.

The "Maine Law" at Home.

For the special information of those who are in the habit of seizing upon whatever they can find to bring this law into ridicule and prove all prohibitory measures useless, we give this week some more testimony in relation to its effects for the last two years, by a man who has had the best possible opportunity of observing its operations. The following is an extract of a letter from Rev. Mr. Hadley, general Missionary for the city of Portland, to a friend in Massachusetts. In discharging his duties, Mr. H. visits the poor and destitute at their own homes, and his labors are confined principally to that class where the marks of intemperance, if they exist at all, would be likely to be found. He states also that in addition to his own observation, he has taken special pains to obtain information from other sources, and his statements can therefore be relied on. We offer no apology for occupying so much of our space with matters of this kind.—The question before the people throughout the country is, how shall we get rid utterly of the evil of intemperance, and will a prohibitory law be effectual in accomplishing this object? To test this, there is no better way than to note the operations of such a law where it has been tried, and judge by the facts. We expect to lay before our readers an array of such facts, within the course of the next year, which will cheer the hearts of the lovers of good order, and prove that such a law will be an advantage to Indiana. Mr. H. says:

I am prepared to say, that during my residence here as a minister to the poor for the space of four years and five months, there never has been less demand for charity in cases where intemperance has been the cause, than during the past five months. Political demagogues and the haters of the Maine Law and its author, may ascribe to me what motive they please, in making this assertion. Suffice it to say, that, so far as I cherish political opinions and sympathies, I am with the party last year in power, and not with the present city or State Administration, nor with Mr. Neal Dow. In religious opinions, he and myself are apart toto cœlo. You say that your informant says that "John Neal's assertions are all true—that there is more drinking in Portland than ever, and that Mr. Hadley has said that he wishes the law repealed." Of Mr. Neal's assertions, I am not disposed to say much. I am willing they should go for all they are worth. They have not appeared to be calculated to injure the Law—certainly not in Portland, and I think not in the State of Maine. I wish everybody who has time, would carefully read them all. But as to there being "more drinking in Portland than "ever,"—this is such a palpable falsehood that it needs no refutation here.

I have embraced every opportunity for a month past, to collect statistics of the former liquor traffic in this city and through the State. My information was not derived from "ramrods" nor from enthusiastic admirers of the Maine Law. Much of it is received from those who were opposed to it when it went into effect, nearly all from those who have been extensively engaged in the trade or manufacture of the article, and several of whom did not relinquish it till compelled by the statute in question. And what is the result of my researches and inquiries?

First,—of distilleries. Of these there were for many years previous to the year 1836, seven in operation, some with two, some with three coppers. One of those with two coppers—by no means the largest or most efficient, was accustomed to turn out 500 gallons a day, regularly, month after month, year after year! One single copper in another establishment was of sufficient capacity to produce 900 gallons a day. Allowing 250 gallons to each copper, and two of the distilleries to have three of these—a calculation below the truth, we have the amount of 4,000 gallons per diem, or 1,252,000 gallons a year, to say nothing of Sundays. One man told me that several of these distilleries were accustomed to operate on the first day of the week!

Then, there was a time when 400,000 gallons came through the Custom House in a year. In my hasty note to Mr. Chapin, I supposed this to be when the distilleries were in full operation. There may be a slight error in this calculation. But be it as it may,—the most respectable merchants in this city, whose statements are beyond question as to veracity, who have been most extensively engaged in the trade, assure me that the most of their sales were of liquors brought from Boston, New York, &c., not through the Custom House. The language of one of the most intelligent and respectable of these men is, that what came through the Custom House "was but as a drop of a bucket," and he gave it as as his cool, deliberate opinion, that not more than ONE FIFTIETH part as much liquor is now sold and consumed in this city and throughout the State as there was twenty and thirty years ago—when the population of both city and State were not much more than half what it is at present. Others, equally well qualified to judge, express a similar opinion.

One of our most respectable merchants positively asserts, that he has sold four times as much himself in a year, as he has any reason to believe has been sold in the same time here, since the enactment of the law, and at the time there were nine or ten large wholesale liquor stores in the city, some of which sold much more than he did, to say nothing of what was sent out directly from the distilleries. If there is any necessity for it, I presume these gentlemen will allow me to use their names, but I choose not to do it without their permission. One of them asserts that he seldom if ever sold a bill of goods, in the times alluded to, that was not headed by a hogshead of N. E. Rum, next a barrel of W. I. Rum, &c. I have made particular inquiry as to whence came the foreign liquors, wines, brandies, gins, rum, &c., and the uniform response has been "they were manufactured chiefly in Boston and New York"—they were "mixed."—Now, admitting what is provable to a demonstration—that about a million and a quarter of gallons was manufactured here—and what appears to be undoubted—that almost as much more was brought here from abroad, besides what came through the Custom House, which was but a "drop of a bucket," we have the snug little amount of two and a half millions of gallons, when our population was not more then sixteen or seventeen thousand. We ought to have at least four millions now, to make the equal proportion! How is it? Have we really more than one thousand gallons a week brought into this city in coat pockets, flour barrels and cases in imitation of Bibles? I do not believe it. It is true that there is a little illicitly smuggled in, and that occasionally some of our "promising" young men are "guzzling" it in their rooms. What then? Why, the Law has not yet wholly annihilated the use of alcohol, nor corrected the vicious habits of all the slaves of appetite. But it has closed more than three hundred grog shops, and stopped the open trade entirely. We have not now a drop manufactured here—none comes through the Custom House, and most that is used is secreted in Irish dens. Genteel and fashionable families make some use of wines and liquors,—not a fourth part as much as formerly, and not more than they did three years ago. But, perhaps, you or some one may ask if the traffic in liquors did not greatly diminish before the enactment of the law. I will let these wholesale dealers answer,—the very men who say that it has diminished forty-nine fiftieths. None of these have put the diminution at more than two-thirds, before June, 1851; most of them say one-half. Call it two-thirds. Then publie opinion and human progress diminished it from its worst state about thirty-three parts, (or two-thirds,) and the Maine Law sixteen parts or sixteen-seventeenths at once! This is not derived, I repeat, from the special friends of the law, but partly from its enemies, and mostly from those who have be come its friends by seeing its operation.—There are many such among our most influential citizens.

I would no more dispute a man who says that there is more drinking in Portland than ever, than I would dispute one who should say that he had seen Tom Thumb and Goliah standing on a level, and that Tom was head and shoulders higher than Goliah. But I do not claim so much for the Law as my informants allow. I do, iudeed, think that the sale and consumption has fallen off 49-50, but I think that the Law has only reduced the amount to about one-tenth on the whole of what it was three years ago.

I wish to speak of the retail trade as I found it, and as the Law found it, and of its effects, but time will not possibly allow at present.

☞ A newspaper correspondent at New Orleans advises all strangers to keep away from the city till the appearance of frost. He says, that business situations made vacant by the pestilence, are filled constantly, at a moment's warning, by persons thoroughly acclimated, and in no danger from the fever, who are continually on the lookout for a place. There is an abundant supply of such persons in the city, well qualified, speaking two or three languages, and some of them so anxious to obtain situations that notices are seen of clerkships, etc., wanted, "wages no object."

The writer thinks it will not be worth while for printers to go there this winter, as there will be enough, upon the return of the resident printers, to do all the work. The Typographical Association have exhausted their funds in supporting their sick, and have been assisted by printers in other parts of the country.

Do Something.

Men are more apt to claim credit for what they are than for what they do.—They are proud of the possession of faculties, but seldom realize their obligation to use them for any other puapose than their own gratification. But after all, true merit lies only in fostering, calling out, perfecting, and using, for some practical purpose, the powers which Nature has given us. This is every man's duty; instead of wrapping ourselves up, and with a dignified contempt of the world, feeling how great or how good we are. True, it is very well to be able to look into matters with the eye of a philosopher; and there is nothing more disgusting than the busy, noisy, fruitless operations of ignorant quackery. But we had better run the risk of failure occasionally, and consequent ridicule (for a snarling, sit-still world will ridicule failure), than to never attempt anything. There is a great deal more of pretension than of performance in the world, and that man is most deserving of commendation who perfects knowledge by action, and improves his ability to act by the use of knowledge. Action is the end of existence, but knowledge is necessary to prepare for it. We know of scarcely any thing outside of Holy Writ that embodies more wisdom than the motto of the justly celebrated David Crockett, "First, be sure you are right, then go ahead."

Foreign Items.

New York, Sept. 29.—The steamship Washington arrived at three o'clock this afternoon. She brings 242 passengers.

The Washington brings Liverpool dates to the 13th.

Cotton was heavy. Sales for three days 15,000 bales. Breadstuffs are buoyant, and flour has advanced 1s. since Friday, and fully 3d. on wheat. Buyers are holding back at the advances. Corn is firm and wanted at last quotations.

The London Times announces that the Emperor of Russia rejects the Turkish modifications, and war is considered inevitable.

The lost jewels of the Hungarian crown have been found buried near Orschora.

Previous accounts state that the English and French consuls had left Jassay, which was creating a great panic.

Gen. Purdurs was advancing with a fresh corps of Russians upon Moldavia.

The Czar was to proceed at once to Warsaw to meet the Emperor of Austria at Olmutz on the 23d of September.

The troops of Omar Pasha, on the Lower Danube, insist on fighting the Russians, and it is feared that the Pasha will not be able to subdue their fanaticism to effect further negotiations.

The weather in England is again unfavorable; in consequence, breadstuffs are some firmer.

There is an increased pressure in the money market.

There was a panic on the stock exchange; foreign stocks experiencing a sudden and severe depreciation. It was feared that the Bank would raise the interest to five per cent. Consols opened Tuesday, at 95¾ to 96, and closed at 96 and 96¼.

The America arrived out on the 11th.

The cholera was progressing in England and Ireland.

The Washington fell in with the ship Revenue, from Baltimore, for Australia, dismasted, and towed her into this port. She had been in a crippled condition for ninety days.

Richardson's Circular of the 13th says that there were heavy rains on the 12th, otherwise the weather was pleasant, but unseasonably cold. There was a large attendance at the markets, and the lots of fresh wheat held over were taken by millers at 2d to 3d advance since Friday—inferior kinds not quotably higher. Flour 9d to 1s higher. Feeding corn on spot, 30s 6d to 31s. McHenry lard advancing. Bacon, extreme prices; shoulders quiet; cheese brisk.

Ashland.—The property of Henry Clay was sold recently, and the beautiful farm near Lexington, containing upwards of three hundred acres, was bought by one of his sons. The Louisville Courier says of it, "We see it stated that this beautiful property belonged, at an early day, to Daniel Boone, whose fame is intimately associated with the history of Kentucky, and whose name is coupled with many of the thrilling and fearful legends of western adventure. Col. Nathaniel Hart, who fell at the battle of the river Raisin, afterwards purchased it, and it subsequently descended to Mrs. Clay, whose maiden name was Lucretia Hart."

New Orleans, Sept. 28.—Interments twenty-nine, including fourteen of yellow fever.

Items of News.

New York, Sept. 29.—The Washington Union will publish to-morrow Mr. Marcy's letter on the Kostza affair.

Gen. Talmadge, ex-senator and ex-minister to Russia, died very suddenly at the Metropolitan Hotel, on his return from the Crystal Palace.

The Pacific Railroad Company met today, and $43,000,000 were subscribed by fifty-seven persons from every section of the country. Adjourned for two weeks.

The Herald professes to give the conclusion of Mr. Marcy's letter. He maintains that Kostza was seized within the nationality of the United States, and that Capt. Ingraham's interference was right and proper, and refuses to consent that Kostza be given up to the Austrian consul at Smyrna, and insists that the Emperor of Austria shall place Kostza in the same position as he was when arrested.

Cincinnati, Sept. 29.—J. S. Dye was fined $500, which he paid, and was discharged.

Philadelphia, Sept. 29.—The Episcopal Convention, of this diocese, has admitted the colored church, at Philip, into the Union with the convention by a vote of 139 to 15 of the clergy, and 7 to 33 of the laity.

Mobile, Sept. 28.—Interments fourteen, including eight of yellow fever. The epidemic is decreasing.

Baltimore, Sept. 29.—Gen. Allison, speaker of the House of Representatives of Florida, has been sworn in as Governor, both the Governor and President of the Senate having left the State.

New York, Sept. 26.—A letter from a gentleman attached to Governor Stevens' Pacific Railway surveying party, dated Fort Union, August 6th, states that the whole party was stopping there, having made, so far, three different lines of survey. No accident had occurred, except to a soldier named White, who had accidentally shot himself dead.

The whole company were to move again on the 8th, in two parties, to Fort Benton, and thence to the mountains.

☞ It is better to throw a guard about the baby's cradle, than to sing a psalm at a bad man's death bed: better to have a care while the bud is bursting to the sun, than when the heat has scorched the heart of the unguarded bosom.

☞ "Why did you not pocket some of those pears?" said one boy to another; "nobody was there to see."

"Yes, there was. I was there to see myself, and I don't ever mean to see myself do such a thing."

I looked at the boy who made this noble answer; he was poorly clad, but he had a noble face, and I thought how there were always two to see your sins, yourself and your God.

Information Wanted.—John Phillips, of Mercer county, Ky., left home about three months ago, and has not since been heard from. Said Phillips is small, about thirty-five years of age, light haired, and of light complexion. He is a miller, sawyer, and engineer. Any information respecting him will be thankfully received by his distressed wife. Address, Ploughboy office, Harrisburgh, Ky.

☞ The Boston Chief of the Police has been instructed to cause complaints to be entered in the Police Court against all persons known to the officers of police as keepers, agents, or clerks of tippling shops, and to procure, as far as may be at his command, evidence which shall lead to the conviction of such offenders, and the suppression of such illegal traffic.

☞ The sum subscribed to aid the sufferers by the epidemic in New Orleans, and sent to the Howard Association, now amounts to $223,714. The daily expenditure of the Howard Association is set down at $500. "Material aid" continues to pour in, and is now transferred to the coast towns, which are suffering.

Dr. Lyman Beehcer and Temperance.—A correspondent of the Congregational Herald says:

"Dr. Lyman Beecher was never more active in the Temperance cause than now. He attends our county meetings, makes speeches, reports addresses and resolutions, and urges on the work almost with the fire and ardor of his younger days.—He knows more, and can tell more, about the history of Temperance, than any other man living, and he is not at a loss for wit and weapons adapted to the modern tactics of the enemy. He goes for the Maine Law with all his might, and has no patience with its opponents."

☞ Alas! how little do we appreciate a mother's tenderness while living! How heedless are we in youth of all her anxieties and kindness! But when she is dead and gone, what cares and coldness of the world come withering to our hearts when we experience how hard it is to find true sympathy, how few love us for ourselves, how few will befriend us in misfortune: then it is we think of the mother we have lost!

Law and Order in Boston.

The following remarks were made by Mr. M'Clure, of Boston, at the World's Temperance Convention:

This resolution, above all, demands serious attention. Never was there so much drunkenness in Boston as at present, although the Maine Law is there on the statute book. And the reason is, because the Mayor, and, I think, all the City Government (there may be exceptions), are on the side of rum. I am placed in a position to know much of their movements. Every day, exeept Sunday, I am in the Police Office; every Sunday I am from three to five hours in the Jail; in the evenings I am at the homes of the drunkards, unless lecturing. More than nineteen-twentieths of the persons sent to jail are sent there by intoxicating liquors. I knew a case of a man charged with the murder of his wife. The policeman who took him (who is in favor of temperance, though instructed to wink at the doings of the rumsellers), told me that, when arrested, the man was in delirium tremens. The man sbstinately persisted in refusing to open his lips to any one; I sent my little girl, a child of nine years old, to his cell; she put her little hand through the bars, and said, handing him a temperance paper, "Mr. Wilson, I am sorry for you;" and then, for the first time, he spoke, and said, "God have mercy on me!" He told me afterward, that rum was the cause of his fall. When I was coming here, he took my hand, and said, "For God's sake, warn all against the fatal draught!" A woman died in fifteen minutes after being in the police court at Boston; her last words were, "If you had executed the law against the rumsellers as rigidly as that against me, I would not have been brought to this." Oh, the terrible responsibility of those who spare the rumseller, but limit his victim to death! I am the agent of a Temperance Society, who have placed me in that court to watch over those men; and while we have a city government that screens rumsellers, it must mercilessly follow their victims upon their wake. Within a few months, I have gone bail for sixty men and women who were drunkards, and not a man or woman has deceived me. [Hear, hear, and cheers.] I am the agent of the Shakspeare Division of the Sons of Temperance, and I have seen many a poor creature rescued from a death on the granite floor of the prison, and take a happy place on the carpet of that soeiety.

Now, sir, we have had some quarrels here—quarrels between men and women; but let that not make our enemies glad; for though man and wife may fight, when any one interferes, they unite in pitching into him. [Laughter.]

Our little confusion will show we know how to fight, and it should be a warning, not a comfort to the enemy. [Laughter and applause.] We will batter down the castle of Old Alcohol, and bury him in the ruins. [Loud plaudits.] The cause advances; there will be twenty-five delegates from one society at a Convention next week in Massachusetts. Mr. M'Clure closed amid long-continued applause.

Plastering Machine.—A machine for the purpose of superseding manual labor in the operation of plastering walls, has been invented by Isaac Hussey, of Harveysburgh, Ohio, who has taken means to secure a patent. It consists of a movable frame upon rollers that can be adjusted to suit any height, and of a smaller frame, sliding within it. The latter serves to support a mortar box containing the trowel, which is raised and lowered by means of a drum and endless chain. When in operation the trowel is supplied with mortar by a rod and a follower, which are worked by a lever, the quantity being regulated or shut off, as required, by a slide that covers the opening in the box. For plastering ceilings it is only requisite to raise the mortar box to the top of the frame, and for side walls it is adjusted accordingly by turning it to a proper position. For this last named operation, the box is shifted by a sliding frame, which is moved back and forth for that purpose by means of the already mentioned lever. There are also various cords and pulleys attached to the machine for facilitating the operations of the different parts, which are included in the invention and forming part of it.—Scientific American.

Partnership in Crime.—Nor shall the place be forgotten in which occurred this shedding of blood. It was one of the thousand ante-chambers of hell, which mar, like plague-spots, the fair face of our State. You need not be told that I mean a tippling-shop—the meeting-place of Satan's minions, and the foul cess-pool, which, by spontaneous generation, breeds and nurtures all that is loathsome and disgusting in profanity, babbling, vulgarity, and Sabbath-breaking. I would not be the owner of a groggery for the price of this world converted into precious ore. For the pitiful sum of a dime, he furnished the poison which made the deceased a fool, and converted this trembling culprit into a demon.—Charge of a Judge.

"Country Exchanges."—The Editor of the New York Musical World and Times, some time since, paid his respects to his "Country Exchanges" in the following language, which savors much "more of truth than poetry:"

"We sometimes find in a dirty looking eight-by-ten newspaper, published somewhere on the borders of civilization, articles more interesting, and written in better style than often appear in the 'mammoth weeklies,' or 'leviathan monthlies,' that emanate from the literary hot-houses of large cities; and many of the papers which we receive are not only well filled, but elegantly got up, printed on excellent paper and clear type, and in all respects worthy of commendation.

"Your country editor is generally an earnest man. He is a hard worker and a vigorous thinker. He has often to contend with difficulties and overcome obstacles, the mere thought of which would crush the soul of a city fopling. He has not a dozen or twenty assistants to make selections, read and prune correspondence, review books, notice magazines, look after and correct dispatches, attend public meetings, exhibitions, concerts, and lectures, and give reports thereof; he has no array of compositors to 'set a column in eight minutes,' no proof reader to correct typographical errors, no foreman to see that the paper is made up just right, leaving him simply to write the 'leader,' and a few self-suggesting paragraphs, nor has he a 'lightning press' to print off his paper at the rate of ten thousund an hour, while he is sleeping quietly at home, or enjoying a supper along with his friends."

Touching Incident.—We learn, says the Memphis Whig, from a reliable source, that as a married couple were traveling on a steamboat bound from New Orleans to an up-stream port, the man sickened and died. When the boat touched at Memphis, the bereaved and distressed widow landed there with the corpse, an undertaker was sent for, who came and took the measure for a coffin. The coffin was prepared, the body deposited therein, and all was in readiness to take the mortal remains of that dear husband to its last resting place. The lady, with all the fond affection and deep love of a wife, begged the privilege of taking one more look, a last parting kiss of him who was more dear to her than all others upon earth. The lid was taken off, and she laid upon that cold, icy brow, bathing it in tears, and smothering those cold lips with warm kisses, a sort of consciousness and symptoms of life became apparent; the body was taken from the coffin, and a physician sent for. Our tale is soon told. The man soon became convalescent, and but a few days since, the happy couple took passage from Memphis on an up-stream boat, and are now en route for their place of destination. But for that fond, loving wife, the husband might now be lying in the cold damp grave.

The Women of Glasgow.—A correspondent of the "Baptist Register," who writes from Glasgow, makes the following reference to the health of the women there, and its causes:

Many of the people here are very healthy—young girls, and married ladies, and even elderly ladies have rosy cheeks and a very youthful, healthy appearance. The ladies are fond of exercise; some of them walk from three to six miles per day. They love to jump from the healthy mattress bed into the bathing-tub every morning. The lady shoemakers here deserve a premium, for making shoes and gaiters. Instead of the sole being thin as a sheet of paper, as is often the case in America and Portugal, they are made very durable and substantial; and I can safely say, that the ladies of Glasgow, Greenock, and Paisley, wear stouter gaiters and shoes in the summer, than are worn by the ladies in the United States in the winter. Whatever may be the attainments of the ladies of Scotland, in other sciences, one thing in them is, in my mind, very praiseworthy—the care they take of their health. I am informed, by competent and very respectable physicians, that multitudes of the ladies of Scotland seldom take a teaspoonful of medicine, or enjoy the privilege of beholding the face of a physician, in his official capacity, till some months or years after marriage.

Singular Coincidence.—It is a little singular, that of five of the presidential candidates—one, Webster, is dead; another, and the successful candidate, lost his little boy, soon after his election, by a most distressing accident, and his own and his wife's lives were saved almost miraculously; while the third, fourth, and fifth, viz., Fillmore, Cass, and Douglass, have each had to mourn the loss of their wives since the canvass. Surely Death strikes in high places.

☞ There is nothing like courage in misfortune; next to faith in God, and in his overruling Providence, a man's faith in himself is his salvation.

The quality least met with in gallantry is love.

It is reported that a company to construct a railroad to the Pacific is now being organized in this city, at the head of which, it is said, are Erastus Corning, Simon Draper, and other capitalists. The object is to provide a substantial six feet gauge road from New York to the Pacific ocean, running through Missouri, Arkansas, Texas, Northern Mexico, and California. The estimated cost is $100,000,000, which is to be the capital of the company. It is said that thirteen of the most responsible contractors of the United States have undertaken to build one hundred miles each on the route above described, and to take in payment fifty per cent. cash, twenty-five per cent. in the bonds of the company, and twenty-five per cent. in its stock.—Scientific American.

☞ The Fifth Annual Session of the Grand Union of the Daughters of Temperance of the State of Indiana will commence in the Hall of the Temple of Honor, in the city of Indianapolis, on Wednesday, October 26, 1853, at 3 o'clock P. M.

R. HINDS, G. P. S.
E. Richmond, G. S. S.

Notice.

The Grand Section of C. of T., of Indiana, will hold its Sixth Annual Session, in Temperance Hall, Indianapolis, commencing on Monday, October 24th, at 1½ o'clock, P. M. As there is much business of importance to transact, representatives will please be punctual in attending.

Sections will please forward their quarterly returns to the G. S. before the 20th of October, or they may loose their charters. Henry Ohr, G. S. of C. of T.

Indianapolis, August 17th, 1853.

Notice.

The Eighth Annual Session of the Grand Division of the Sons of Temperance of the State of Indiana, will commence in Temperance Hall in the City of Indianapolis, on Tuesday, October 25, 1853, at 6 o'clock P. M. P. S. Sage, G. W. P.

C. Woodward, G. S.

August 1, 1853.

$25 Premium.

The undersigned Committee on the state of the Order of the Grand Section of Cadets of Temperance of Indiana, offer the above premium for the most acceptable Initiatory ceremony for Cadets of Temperance. Competitors for the same to be members of some Temperance organization.

All manuscripts to be forwarded to Henry Ohr, G. S., on or before the 20th day of October next.

Theophilus Robinson,
H. C. Newcomb, } Com.
Henry Ohr,

Indianapolis, Aug. 6th, 1853.

Torchlight and Indiana Cadet please copy.

To Printers.

The Committee of Publication for the "Temperance Chart," will receive sealed proposals, until October 25, 1853, for the printing of said paper, including the paper and the delivery of the sheets folded, to the Editor, at his office in Indianapolis. The proposals to state the price of paper, and rate of composition and press work, with a sample of the quality of the paper to be used.

Wm. Hannaman.
James Hall.
C. E. Babb.
R. T. Brown.
August, 1853. J. B. Abbett.

TEMPLES OF HONOR.

The undersigned having received the Revised Constitutions of the Temple of Honor, is now prepared to furnish Temples with the Constitution and Bylaws, at the following rates, where not many alterations are made from the form kept standing:

100 copies,	$12 00	300 copies	$20 00
200 "	16 00	400 "	24 00

Subordinate, Degree, and Social Degree Constitutions, (in one book) are furnished at the above rates.

A copy of the form kept standing, will be sent to any Temple, by making application for the same.

Temples wishing Constitutions at the above rates, must send in their orders soon, as the form cannot be kept standing long.

JOHN H. OHR, G. W. R.

Indianapolis, Oct. 4th, 1853.

CONSTITUTION AND BY-LAWS,

We are still prepared to print Constitution and By-Laws, where the alterations are few from the copy recommended by the Grand Division, at the following rates:

100 copies, (or less)	$5 00
200 "	8 00
300 "	10 00

We will pay the postage on all ordered from us.

☞ All orders accompanied by the cash, will be promptly attended to.

Address, JOHN H. OHR,
Indianapolis, Indiana.

CHARTERS.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR A DIVISION S. OF T.

(Date.)

The undersigned inhabitants of ——, believing the Order of the Sons of Temperance to be well calculated to extend the blessings of total abstinence, and promote the general welfare of mankind, respectfully petition the Grand Division of the —— of ——, to grant them a Charter to open a new Division, to be called the —— Division, No. —, Sons of Temperance, of the —— of ——, to be located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves, individually and collectively, to be governed by the rules and usages of said Grand Division, and also, by those of the National Division.

Enclosed is the Charter Fee, $5 00. Books, $2 00.

This must be signed by at least eight persons of good character and standing in community, and sent to C. WOODWARD, G. S., Indianapolis, Ind., free of postage.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR A TEMPLE.

(Date.)

The undersigned, believing the Temple of Honor to be well calculated to cement more firmly our fraternal relations, and add to the general prosperity of the cause of Temperance, respectfully petition the Grand Temple of the —— of ——, to grant them a Charter to open a new Temple, to be called the —— Temple of Honor, No. —, of the —— of ——, to be located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves individually and collectively, to be governed by the rules and usages of the Grand Temple, and also by those of the Order at large.

Enclosed is the Charter Fee, $20 00.

To be directed to the G. W. R., free of postage.

This must be signed by at least twenty persons of good standing, and if not known to the G. W. T. or G. W. R., must send satisfactory references.

J. H. OHR, G. W. R.

Indianapolis, Ind.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR CADETS OF TEMPERANCE.

The undersigned, boys of ——, believing the Order of Cadets of Temperance to be well calculated to extend the blessings of total abstinence, and promote the general welfare of mankind, respectfully petition the Grand Section of the State of Indiana, to grant them a charter to open a new Section, to be called the —— Section, No. ——, Cadets of Temperance, of the State of Indiana, to be located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves, individually and collectively to be governed by the rules and usages of said Grand Section, and also those of the acting Head of the Order.

Enclosed is the fee for Charter, R. B.'s and officers' cards, $5 00.

It must also be stated whether the applicants are members of the Order or not; if they are, of what Section. The application to be directed to the Grand Secretary, free of postage.

It must also be certified by a W. P. or P. W. P, that the W. Patron elect is a Son of Temperance in good standing.

Address (post paid) HENRY OHR, G. S., C. o T., Indianapolis, Indiana.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR DAUGHTERS OF TEMPERANCE.

(Date.)

The undersigned, inhabitants of ——, believing the Order of the Daughters of Temperance to be well calculated to extend the blessings of Total Abstinence, and promote the general welfare of mankind, respectfully petition the Grand Union to grant them a charter to open a new Union to be called the —— Union, No. —, D. of T., of the State of Indiana, located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves, individually and collectively, to be governed by the rules and usages of said Grand Union.

Enclosed is the Charter Fee, $5 00.

The above must be signed by at least eleven females, of proper age and good standing in community.

Address (post paid,) Mrs. ELIZA RICHMOND, G. S. S., Indianapolis, Indiana.

New Watch and Jewelry Store.

No 1, Bates House, Washington Street,

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

WE have now open the largest and best assortment of fine Watches and rich Jewelry ever offered in this city, to which we invite the examination of the public.

Our stock is all new—seleeted with great care, and comprises Watches, Diamond Work, Chains, Pins, Rings, Pencils, Lockets, of all kinds; Silver Ware, Clocks, Perfumery, Brushes, Soaps, Plated Ware, Castors, Fruit Baskets, &c., which we will sell for CASH at New York prices. Mr. E. W. NEFF, of this city, has taken charge of the Watch repairing department, and will spare no pains to give satisfaction to our customers.

july 6-tf E J. BALDWIN & CO.

D. CRAIGHEAD. R. BROWNING.

CRAIGHEAD & BROWNING,

Dealers in all kinds of

Drugs, Medicines, Surgical Instruments, Paints, Oils, Chemicals, Varnishes, Dye Stuffs, Glassware Window Glass, Brushes, Cosmetics, Spices, Cigars, Tobacco, Perfumery, &c.,

WASHINGTON STREET,

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

ALL are respectfully invited to call and examine our stock and prices, as we feel confident we can render satisfaction both as to prices and quality of articles. Great care is taken in the selection of articles, in reference to their purity, as we endeavor at all times to keep such articles as are strictly pure and genuine. Every article will be waranted as represented. Orders from Physicians and others promptly attended to. Particular attention given to filling Prescriptions and compounding Medicines, which, in all cases, shall receive the personal attention of one of the firm. june 30

HANNAMAN & DUZAN,

DEALERS IN

DRUGS AND MEDICINES,

Surgical Instruments, Paints, Oils, Varnishes, Dye Woods, Medical and Window Glass, Brushes, Perfumery, Soaps, &c.

Washington, 3 doors west of Pennsylvania St.,

june 30 1y INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

W. W. ROBERTS,

Druggist and Apothecary.

Wholesale and Retail Dealer in

DRUGS, MEDICINES, PAINTS, OILS, AND DYE STUFFS, BRUSHES, FANCY GOODS, AMERICAN AND FRENCH WINDOW GLASS, &c.

WASHINGTON ST., INDIANAPOLIS.

Physicians, Country Merchants, and the people generally, are invited to examine his stock, which will be sold at the lowest cash price.

☞ QUALITY WARRANTED TO SUIT. ☜

june 22 4m

COMMERCIAL COLLEGE,

(Late Commercial Institute,)

Of Indianapolis,

Established March 31, 1851.

INCORPORATED, 1853.

W. McK. SCOTT, A. M., Founder and President.

JAMES C. HAYDEN, (Late Professor in Bacon's Mercantile College, Cincinnati.)

PROF. OF BOOK-KEEPING AND PENMANSHIP.

THE Session will commence at College Hall as follows:

1st Session on the first Monday of September.
2d Session on the 1st Monday of November.
3d Session on the 1st Monday of January.
4th Session on the 1st Monday of March.
5th Session on the 1st Monday of May.

Having secured, permanently, the services of the distinguished Professor above named, and leased for a term of years the commodious and beautiful Hall formerly known as CONCERT HALL, but now named COLLEGE HALL, which is to be fitted up in a style of great elegance, taste, and convenience, the President would say, that this College now offers advantages superior to all others, for imparting a sound, thorough, and accomplished business education

COURSE OF STUDIES.

The Course of Studies, as enlarged, will be as follows, viz:

1 Book-Keeping, by Single and Double Entry, in all its various branches, and its application to all kinds of business.

2. The Laws, Customs, and Usages of Trade and Commerce.

3. Mercantile Arithmetic, upon the short and easy system of cancelation, (taught in no other College.)

4. Commercial Law, in a series of Lectures, thorough and systematic.

5. Business Penmanship.

6. Commercial Correspondence.

7 Lectures upon Banking, Political Economy, and other subjects valusble to the business man.

EXPENSES.

Cards of Admission, invariably in advance, or secured, $25; Diplomas $3; Stationery $5; Boarding $2 50 per week; incidentals, at option of student, $15. Making entire expenses about $75.

On application, a Catalogne will be furnished, giving full particulars.

All letters will receive prompt attention on being directed, post-paid, to

june 8 W. McK. SCOTT, President.

"God never made his works for man to mend."
DR. FRANKLIN.

KIER'S ROCK OIL.

A NEW AND MOST IMPORTANT REMEDY FOR DISEASE.

DISCOVERED IN 1849.

IS drawn from a deep well near Pittsburgh—has been used with remarkable success in Ohio and Pennsylvania, and more Eastern States—and is now working its way West. An opportunity is now offered to the Afflicted for testing it. Where known and tried, it at once makes firm friends, and cures which are eloquent in its praise. Certificates of its power to heal are at hand—but we know well, reader, that such evidence, to have weight with you, now-a-days, must be in your own neighborhood.—You have only to try the Oil to be satisfied—it will SPEAK FOR ITSELF.

We have no war with the legion of Nostrums and Specifics of the day—we know but little about them—some say they are good for nothing. However that may be, the

Petroleum

will not be suppressed and kept back by reason of the above nostrums—duty and inclination both forbid it.

Those who are afflicted, are respectfully invited to get a Circular and look over the Directions for

Ague, Rheumatism, Piles, Diarrhœa, Flux, Tooth Ache, Burns, Worms, Scrofula, Coughs, Bronchitis, Croup, Old Sores, Cholera Morbus, Contractions of the Limbs and Joints, Sore Eyes, Blindness, Costiveness, Dyspepsia, and other Diseases.

By that time you may say, "it cures too much." But recollect it is not a HUMAN INVENTION, but compounded by Nature's master hand—and Nature does not do her work by halves.

The Oil is used both internally and externally.

As AGUE, SORE EYES, PILES, RHEUMATISM, and SCROFULA are so common in many parts of the West, we are constrained to say, that while this Oil will cure and relieve other diseases, it has been and is constantly used with most complete success in these cases.

☞ Price 50 cents per Bottle (half pint.)

Beware of all Rock Oil preparations, as some persons are offering a spurious article. Look for S. M. KIER'S name written on the label of the bottle.

For sale by the Druggists throughout Indiana, and by TOMLINSON BROTHERS, J P. POPE & Co., S. ROSENGARTEN, WM. TILLEY, and at wholesale by W. W. ROBERTS, Indianapolis, Indiana.

R. M. LYON, Fort Wayne,

may25 10w Proprietor in the Western States.

SOMETHING NEW.

LATHROP & STEVENS, Wholesale and Retail Dealers in BOOTS AND SHOES, at the West room in the Bates House, Washington Street, Indianapolis.

We are now opening a new and splendid stock of Boots and Shoes of every variety and style, which we are receiving direct from the manufacturers.—We design to keep constantly on hand a good assortment of the best quality of goods manufactured, which we can warrant to give satisfaction to all who may give them a trial. We will sell by the case, dozen, or single pair, at low prices for cash.—Our stock consists in part of Gents' fine Cloth, silk warp, glove kid, buck, patent calf, and enameled Gaiters and Ties of every variety and style; Ladies' fine silk warp Gaiters, Buskins. Ties, Slippers and Boots; Misses' ditto; Men's calf, goat, kip, and thick Boots and Brogans; Boys' and Youths' ditto; assorted Ladies, kid, goat and calf Boots and Buskins; Misses' ditto. Also every variety of Children's Shoes. Come and see for yourselves.

LATHROP & STEVENS,

may 25 4w Indianapolis, Indiana.

TEMPERANCE INN,

Bloomington, Indiana.

J. & S. M. ORCHARD, PROPRIETORS.

TRAVELLERS will find it to their advantage to call and try the accommodation of the TEMPERANCE INN. Stage office for all the different routes, in connection with this House. may25 6m ¶

THE LATEST WONDER of the 19th CENTURY.

DR. G. W. BENNETT'S

Celebrated Eye-Balm.

A SPECIFIC FOR CHRONIC, SORE, INFLAMED, AND WEAK EYES.

Prepared only by Dr. George W. Bennett, and for sale by Merchants and Druggists generally.

THIS Balm is an excellent and certain cure for sore and inflamed Eyes, in all cases of Psoroic, Scrofulous, and Purulent Opthalmia, and what is commonly termed wild hairs in the eye-lids. It is a specific in Infantile, Purulent, and Scrofulous Inflamed, and Sore Eyes, and all in the various diseases of the Eyes, that prevail among the human family, in every climate. It will be found a sovereign remedy if properly applied.

W. W. ROBERTS, Indianapolis, Ind. General Agent for State of Indiana, to whom all orders must be addressed.

Price---Twenty-five Cents.

I warrant the above Balm to cure if the directions are strictly observed, or return the money.

june 22 4m G. W. BENNETT.

REAL ESTATE AND GENERAL AGENCY OFFICE,

INDIANAPOLIS, INDIANA.

UNDER THE CONTROL OF W. M'K. SCOTT, Attorney & Counsellor at Law, and Notary Public.

The attention of the Agency will be devoted,

First—To the collection of debts and the payment of Taxes for non-residents in any county in the State. Also, the redemption of Lands sold for Taxes, sale, purchase or lease of Lands, purchase of adverse claims, examination and perfection of Title, &c., &c.

Second—To the prosecution of claims against the General Government, procuring Land Warrants, Patent Rights, and Pensions under the various Pension Laws, &c.

Third—All other Miscellaneous agencies as may be intrusted to the care of this office.

Fourth—The taking of Depositions and Attestation of all instruments requiring a seal

In all cases requiring an outlay of money for the benefit of individuals, the requisite funds must be transmitted in advance.

Prompt attention to all letters on business that are pre-paid. Address W. M'K. SCOTT,

Real Estate and General Agent,

jan 5-1y Indianapolis, Ind.

ADAMS & CO'S EXPRESS.

WE are now running a daily line East and West, accompanied by special messengers, and with the speed of the mails, running our own cars with the passenger trains.

Packages will be received at the cars up to the time of starting, and at our office until 1 o'clock each day.

We are prepared to transport packages, bank notes and specie, to and from any of the eastern cities, also, Louisville, Frankfort, and Lexington, Ky., St. Louis, Mo., or any points on the Ohio and Mississippi rivers; and to and from Terre Haute, and all intermediate points, and to forward freight from Terre Haute up and down the Wabash.

In addition to these, we have the most complete arrangements for transporting packages to and from California and Europe.

Exchange on England, Ireland, and Scotland, for sale, payable at any bank in the kingdom.

Foreign passage tickets; by Grinnell, Minturn & Co.'s line to Liverpool and London, constantly on hand, and for sale at the lowest rates.

Notes, drafts, and bills collected in any of the Eastern or Western cities.

Orders for goods to be returned by Express, sent free. Our rates of charges have been greatly reduced, and the public will find this a safe and expeditious method of transportation.

Indianapolis, June 30, 1852. ADAMS & CO.

Office in Indianapolis in Journal Building, west side Pennsylvania Street.

Office open during business hours.

june30 1y C. WOODWARD, Agent.

The Cheapest Illustrated Paper for the Young.

PRICE ONLY TEN CENTS A YEAR, or nearly three papers for one cent, where 100 copies are taken.

Twenty-six numbers a year, and each number illustrated with from three to seven engravings.

The Youth's Penny Gazette,

A strictly Religious and Moral Paper, is published by the AMERICAN SUNDAY SCHOOL UNION and is designed to furnish the Children and Youth of the United States with reading matter, in a popular form, for the improvement of Mind and Heart.

It is published (not monthly, nor weekly, but) every other week, or twenty-six numbers in a year. It is religious but unsectarian, and the matter is carefully prepared with a view to the habits, character and prospects of American Youth.

TERMS OF THE PENNY GAZETTE.

$10 a year, in advance, for 100 copies, to one address. $5 a year, in advance, for 40 copies, to one address. $3 a year, in advance, for 20 copies, to one address. Single subscriptions, 25 cents per year.

TERMS BY MAIL, POSTAGE PAID.

☞ When the postage is paid at the place of mailing, the terms are very low. For $15 remitted, we will send 100 copies of the paper for one year, to one address—we paying postage. For $7 remitted, we will send 40 copies of the paper to one address, for one year—we paying postage. For $3 50 remitted, we will send 20 copies of the paper for one year, to one address—we paying postage. Less than 20 cannot be sent at this cheap rate.

Subscriptions received at the Society's House, No. 146 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.

Feb 16 3w G. S. SCOFIELD, Agent.

TO BUILDERS.

North Western Christian University.

THE Building Committee of the Board of Directors of the North-Western Christiana University, propose contracting for the west wing of the University Building, to be put up on the University grounds in the vicinity of Indianapolis.

Sealed Proposals in detail, with prices affixed for doing the work necessary to the completion of the said Wing, will be received until the 19th day of July next, and may be handed to the undersigned, or to J. T. Cox. Secretary of the Company, at the Book Store of Cox & Mathes, in Indianapolis.

The materials and work to be according to the plan, drawings and specifications prepared by Wm. Tinsley, Architect, which may be seen and examined at his room, on the east side of Pennsylvania street, three doors north of the north-east Diagonal, in Indianapolis. The specifications have been materially changed and modified, so as to reduce the cost of the building.

Proposals for the whole combined, would be preferred; but will be received for the different parts and portions thereof separotely. The whole to be completed and fit for use by the first day of September, 1854.

Payments will be made as the work progresses, at such short periods as may suit the covenience of the Contractors. Bond and security will be required for the performance of the work.

In behalf of the Building Committee:

OVID BUTLER,

President of the Board of Directors.

June 10, 1853. june 22 3w

1,000 BOOK AGENTS WANTED,

TO SELL PICTORIAL AND USEFUL WORKS FOR THE YEAR 1851.

$1,000 Dollars a Year.

WANTED in every County of the United States, active and enterprising men, to engage in the sale of some of the best Books published in the country. To men of good address, possessing a small capital of from $25 to $100, such inducements will be offered as to enable them to make from $3 to $5 a day profit.

☞ The Books published by us are all useful in in their character, extremely popular, and command large sales wherever they are offered.

For further particular, address, (postage paid.)

ROBERT SEARS, Publisher,

oct 5 1m 181 William Street, New York.

JAMES HALL,

MERCHANT TAILOR,

No. 2. Temperance, Hall, Indianapolis,

Manufactn'ng & Clothing Emporium,

Wholesale and Retail Dealer in Ready Made Clothing, Cloths, Cassimers, Vestings, Trimmings, Trunks, Sachels, Canes, Umbrellas, Hats, Caps, a every description of Gentlemen's Furnishing.

Also:

General Agency for the sale of GRAND AND SUBORDINATE REGALIA, EMBLEMS, COSTUMES, &C., FOR THE ORDERS OF MASONS, ODD FELLOWS, TEMPLE OF HONOR, SON, DAUGHTERS, AND CADETS OF TEMPERANCE. oct27 1y

The American Life and Health Insurance Company.

Office—No. 7, South Third St., Philadelphia.

Officers.

LEONARD JEWELL, President.
JAMES PEACOCK, Treasurer,
JOHN C. SIMS, Sec'y and Actuary.
THOS. S. SMITH, Solicitor

JOHN F. BIRD, FRED. A. FICKARDT, } Medical Examiners.

CHARLES WOODWARD, Indianapolis, Ind., General Agent for the State of Indiana.

THIS Company issues policies at Total Abstinence Rates, Joint stock Rates, and at Mutual Rates, which for $1000 on the life of a person 30 years of age, are as follows:

Age.	Total Abstinence.	Joint Stock.	Mutual
30	$15.40	$19.60	$23.60

A further table of Rates will be furnished at the Office.

The condition in Total Abstinence rates (believed to be the lowest in the Union,) is entire forfeiture upon the departure of the Insured from Total Abstinence in its strictest sense.

Policies at Joint Stock and Mutual rates, contain no condition except as usual in Life Insurance.

HEALTH INSURANCE DEPARTMENT.

All Moneys received from the Insured, for Annual Premiums, after deducting expenses, will be divided among the Sick

The Public have for some time been familiar with the subject of Life and Health Insurance, but it is obvious that too little thoughts has been given to the latter. LIFE Insurance benefits our successors, while HEALTH Insurance directly benefits ourselves. It makes provision for a time of sickness, when the products of a man's industry are cut off, and want unites with Disease to aggravate his distress. It is at this gloomy period, when he is prostrated and helpless, and when despondency would otherwise overwhelm him, that the holder of a Health Insurance Policy will realize its benefits.

RATES, under 50 years of age,

$2,00	per year,	for	$2,00	per week.
3,00	"	"	3,00	"
4,00	"	"	4,00	"
5,00	"	"	5,00	"
6,00	"	"	6,00	"

Over fifty and under sixty.

$2,50	per year,	for	$2,50	per week.
3,75	"	"	3,00	"
5,00	"	"	4,00	"
6,25	"	"	5,00	"
7,50	"	"	6,00	"

When the Fund shall amount to Three Dollars and upwards for every person insured and sufficient to warrant an additional distribution, the weekly allowances will be increased in accordance with the Rules of the Policy.

All the members of a Temple or Division insured at greatly reduced rates.

Applications for Agencies in any of the cities or towns in the State, should be made to the undersigned, post paid, or in person.

As Agent for the above Company, I am prepared to receive applications for Policies at any of the above rates.

CHARLES WOODWARD, Agent,

At ADAMS & CO.'S Express Office.

J. L. MOTHERSHEAD, Medical Examiner.

june 30 '52-1y

Ohio Life Insurance Company,

Capital $100,000.

JOINT STOCK AND MUTUAL,

CINCINNATI.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS.

Wm. Burnet, Jno. N. Ridgway, Chas. Goodman, S. Robert, E. S. Haines, Jno. M. Blair, J. W. Donohue, Eden B. Reeder, Wm. Person.

WM. BURNET, President.

S. W. REEDER, Sec'y J. W. DONOHUE, Vice Pres't

Office in Reeder's Building, Third street, between Almy's and City Bank.

This Company insures Lives at the lowest rates consistent with safety, either upon the Joint Stock or Mutual plan.

In the Joint Stock Department, premium payable quarterly, semi-annually or annually. On the Mutual plan, one-half the premium paid in Cash, the balance by a note bearing six per cent. interest—the interest only payable annually. Persons insuring on the mutual plan, participate in the profits of the Company in that department.

The undersigned having been appointed agent for the above Company, is prepared to fill applications for Life Insurance, on favorable terms.

Any information on the subject and pamphlets explaining the nature and utility of Life Insurance, furnished without charge, at the office of the Agent.

C. WOODWARD, Agent.

Office at Adam's & Co.'s Express Office, Journal Building, Pennsylvania street, Indianapolis, Ind.

june 30, '52-1y.

Railroad City Book Store.

COX & MATHES,

South side of Washington, between Illinois and Meridian streets,

INDIANAPOLIS, INDIANA.

AT wholesale and retail, Standard and Miscellaneous Works, Law, and Medical Books, School Books, Plain and Fancy Stalionery, Blank Books, Wall Papers, &c., &c. mar 2

CHEAP WATCHES & JEWELRY.

Good Gold Watches at $24!

WE are now in our new Room No. 1, Palmer House, with a lot of beautiful Watches and Jewelry which we are selling lower than ever heretofore sold in Indianapolis, for instance we sell

Good 18 K Case Gold Lepines at $24.
" 18 K " " Levers at $28.
" Silver Anchor Levers $12 to $18.
" " Cylenders, $9 to $12.
" " Quarter's $6 to $10.

In addition to the above we have a fine assortment of other description of Watches all of which we will sell lower than any other firm dare sell in the place. I have in my employ a very superior Watch Repairer who will always be on on hand to do watch repairing of every description. Mr. Michot has worked in Geneva, Paris, New York and other large cities and has had great experience in his Branch of the business. All Watches warranted for one year, and the money in all cases refunded, provided they do not give entire satisfaction.

feb9 tf E. W. NEFF.

SMALL CHANGE.

THE undersigned is prepared to furnish Merchants and others with three cent pieces from the United States Mint at Philadelphia, free of transportation, in sums of 30, 60, and 90 dollars, upon deposit of Gold or Eastern Exchange. Also cents and half cents, upon payment of frieght on gold to Philadelphia, or on Eastern Exchange free of freight.

C. WOODWARD, Agent,

june 30 Adams & Co.'s Express.

A CHANCE TO MAKE MONEY.

Profitable and honorable Employment!

THE Subscriber is desirous of having an agent in each county and town of the Union. A capital of from $5 to $10 only will be required, and anything like an efficient, energetic man can make from three to five dollars per day; indeed some of the Agents now employed are realizing twice that sum. Every information will be given by addressing, (postage paid) WM. A. KINSLER,

june 15 3w ¶ Box 601, Philadelphia P. O.

THE ILLUSTRATED MAGAZINE OF ART.

THE five numbers of this Magazine which are published, place it at the head of publications of this kind No expense will be spared to make it in every respect worthy of the name, the "Illustrated Magazine of Art. The Engavings which are preparing for the future numbers are in the hands of first-class American and European Artists.

A Series of most interesting Tales will appear in it. "The School of Life," written and Illustrated by ANNA MARY, daughter of William and Mary Howitt, will shortly appear; also, "The Dead Bridal," an historical romance, illustrative of the most interesting period in the history of the Venetian Republic, by JONATHAN FREKE SLINGSBY, of the Dublin University Magazine; contributions, too, from WILLIAM and MARY HOWITT, PERCY B. ST. JOHN, and other writers of distinction in America and Europe

The following is a brief outline of the plan of the Magazine:

I. The Historical Department will abound with picturesque representations of the most remarkable events which have occurred in this and other countries; accompanied with interesting anecdotes and details from the pen of the most eminent writers of the day. This department will contain several splendid engravings, designed by the first artists of the world, and engraved in the highest style of modern art.

II. The Men and Women of the Age. This department will consist of beautifully executed portraits of the leading characters of the age, especially of those who figure on the stage of humanity as the world's benefactors. Each portrait will be accompanied by an interesting biographical sketch.

III. The Wonders of Natural History, Botany, and other sciences, will be developed in choice Engravings of Beasts, Birds, Fishes, Insects, Forest Trees, Flowers, Geological and Fossil Specimens, &c., with accompanying descriptions.

IV. The Triumphs of Architectural Art will be displayed in exquisitely finished representations of Cathedrals, Churches, Palaces, and other models of ancient and modern Architectural Art.

V. The Works of the Great Masters, selected from the principal Galleries of Art in the World. In general, the portrait of the Master will be given, accompanied with a highly finished engraved copy of his chef d'œuvre.

VI. The Scientific Portions will be rendered highly interesting by the familiar explanations, and the numerous diagrams which will accompany each subject.

VII. Manufactures. The principal manufaciuring processes in use will be fully explained by minute details, and an abundance of beautiful engravings.

VIII. Machinery and Inventions will have due attention paid to them, and be described by numerous appropriate engravings.

IX. The Literary Department, independently of the various articles accompanying the illustrations, will comprise original and interesting narratives, contributed by the most popular writers of the day, with numerous illustrations.

In every respect, the "Illustrated Magazine of Art," will be decidedly

SUPERIOR TO ANY MAGAZINE OF THE DAY.

Each Monthly part will contain at least Thirty superb Engravings, four of which will be printed separately, on supefine Plate Paper.

The greatest care will be manifested in every department of production. The Paper will be of the first manufacture, and the Ink supplied from the celebrated Printing Ink Establishment of Messrs. Lawson & Co., of Paris. Six of the monthly portions, when completed, will form a volume which, for interest, originality, value and beauty, will defy competition. It will not only be an interesting family book, but a rich ornament for the drawing-room table, and a pleasant companion in the study.

The parts will appear on the First of every Month at Twenty-five Cents each.

ALEXANDER MONTGOMERY,

may 25 17 Spruce Street, New-York.

SPLENDIDLY ILLUSTRATED WORKS.

THE ALPS, SWITZERLAND, SAVOY AND LOMBARDY.

With the Magazine for June will be ready, Part I., price Twenty-five Cents, of a Magnificent Work to be completed in Twelve Monthly Parts, entitled

THE ALPS, SWITZERLAND, SAVOY AND LOMBARDY, with an account of the most recent Ascents to Mont Blanc, &c. By the Rev. Charles Williams. This work, when completed, will form a large thick Volume, in Imperial Octavo, containing upwards of Three Hundred beautiful Engravings, descriptive of the peculiar Scenery of those most interesting portions of Europe, with the Occupations of the Inhabitants, &c., &c.

Cassell's Natural History.

On the First of July will commence

CASSELL'S NATURAL HISTORY, which for variety, beauty and completeness, will claim to be considered as a first-class work, upon this most interesting subject. The First volume will be devoted to the Feathered Tribe of the Creation and will contain upwards of Three Hundred Engravings, in the first style of Art. The volume will be completed in Twelve Monthly Parts, Imperial Octavo. Price 25 cents each.

History of England.

On the First of July will appear Part I., price 25 cts. of THE ILLUSTRATED HISTORY OF ENGLAND, from the earliest period on record to the present time. Edited by ROBERT FERGUSON, LL. D.

This History, which is intended to form a great National Work, will extend to Four Volumes, Imperial Octavo; each Volume to be completed in Twelve Monthly Parts, price 25 cents each. The Work will comprehend the Political, Civil, and Domestic History of the Nation, and its Progress in Civilization, Literature, Art, &c. It will be profusely Illustrated with Engravings from Designs by GILBERT, PHILLIPPOTEAUX, WILLIAMS, and others. Representations of the most remarkable Events will be worked separately upon Plate Paper. The Portraits will form a complete Gallery, not only of the Monarchs, but of those individuals whose names are prominent in England's History. Also, Antiquities, including Autographs, Buildings, Costume, Furniture, Arms, Coins, Monuments, Manufactures &c., of each Epoch.

History of Hungary.

July First will be published, in one Handsome Volume, Imperial Octavo, price, One Dollar and Twenty-five Cents, in Cloth Boards,

THE ILLUSTRATED HISTORY OF HUNGARY, AND THE MAGYARS, from the Earliest Period to the clos of the late War. By EDWARD LAWRENCE GODKIN. The Volume will be Illustrated with One Hundred highly finished Engravings, including representations of the principal Battles; Portraits of the early Kings, and of the Statesmen and Generals who figured in the War of Independence; Costumes of the Peasantry, &c.; Views of the chief Towns and Fortresses, &c.; with an accurate Description of the Manners and Customs of the People, their Literature, Commerce, Arts, &c.

ALEXANDER MONTGOMERY,

may25 Publisher, 17 Spruce Street, New-York.

MANSION HOUSE,

Cambridge City, Indiana.

J. CUNNINGHAM, Proprietor.

TRAVELLERS

Will find it to their advantage to call and try the accommodation of the MANSION HOUSE.

STAGE OFFICE also in connection with this House.

may 4 6m

INDIANA STATE LIBRARY

TEMPERANCE CHART.

A Weekly Journal:---Devoted to Temperance, Morality, Education, Literature, Useful Arts, Science, General Intelligenc, &c.

J. W. GORDON, M. D., Editor.] ORGAN OF THE GRAND DIVISION OF INDIANA. [JOHN H. OHR, Printer.

VOL. III. INDIANAPOLIS, IND., WEDNESDAY, OCT. 12, 1853. NO. 16.

THE TEMPERANCE CHART,

IS PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY, BY THE GRAND DIVISION, S. of T. OF INDIANA.

Edited by J. W. Gordon, M. D.

To whom all Communications and Subscriptions must be addressed, post-paid.

Office—in second story of Temperauce Hall Building, Washington St., Indianapolis.

TERMS:

Single copy, one year, ... 75 cts.

☞ In advance in all cases,

TERMS OF ADVERTISING.—Circulation 4000 copies.

One Squre, (12 lines,) for one week,	$0 50
" " for each subsequent insertion,	25
" " for 3 months,	3 00
" " for 6 months,	5 00
" " for 1 year without alteration,	8 00
" " for 1 year, with changes,	1002

A reduction made on larger advertisements.
Cuts double the above rates.
Advertisements must be handed in by Saturday, of each week, to insure insertion.
Applications for advertising, or for any kid of Printing for the Order, must be made to
J. H. OHR, Indinnapolis.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Mrs. Dennison.

Mrs. Mary A. Dennison, whose recent volume of "Home Pictures" is attracting so much attention, we regard as one of our best delineators of social and domestic scenes. There is truth to nature in nearly everything she writes; and often a tenderness and pathos that overcome the feelings irresistably. Witness the following from the Olive Branch. A poor wife and her daughter are toiling hard, early and late, amid self-denial and privations, to pay a debt incurred by the husband and father. The daughter, who has twenty dollars in her purse, goes to the house of a rich creditor, in order to tender him the sum in part payment, when this scene transpires:—

"Softly her feet sunk in the luxurious hall carpet. Statuary in bronze and marble lined all the way to the staircase. The splendor of the room into which she was ushered, seemed to her inexperienced eyes too beautiful for actual use, and he who came in with his kind glance and handsome face. the noblest perfection of manhood she had ever seen.

"Well, young lady," he said blandly smiling, "to what am I indebted for this pleasure?"

"My father, sir, died in your debt," said Eva, blushingly, speaking very low and softly. "By the strictest economy and very hard work, we, my mother and I, have been able to pay all his creditors but yourself. If you will be kind enough to receive the balance of your account in small sums—I am sorry they must be so small, sir—we can, in the course of a few years. fully liquidate the debt, and then," a sweet expression lighted up her eyes—"we shall have fulfilled my father's dying wish, that every stain might be wiped from his honor."—She paused for a moment, and said again falteringly, "My father was very unfortunate sir, and broken in health for many years; but, oh, sir, he was honorable; he would have paid the last cent if it had left him a beggar."

Very thoughtful sat Mr. Miner, his dark eyes fastened upon the gentle face before him. After a moment of silence he raised his head, threw back the mass of curling hair that shadowed his handsome brow and said—

"I remember your father well. I regretted his death. He was a fine fellow, a fine fellow," he added musingly: "but, my dear young lady, have you the means? do you not embarrass yourself by making these payments?"

Eva blushed again and looking up, ingenuously replied. "I am obliged to work, sir, but no labor would be too arduous that might save the memory of such a father from disgrace."

'This she spoke with deep emotion. The rich man turned with a choking in his throat and tears glistening on his lashes. Eva timidly held out the two gold pieces, he took them, and, bidding her stay a moment, hastily left the room.

Almost instantly returning, he handed her a sealed note, saying. "There is the receipt young lady, and allow me to add that the mother of such a child must be a happy woman. The whole debt, I find, is nine hundred and seventy-five dollars.

You will see by my note what arrangements I have made, and I hope they will be satisfactory.'

Eva left him with a lighter heart, and a burning cheek at his praise. His manner was so gentle, so fatherly, that she felt he would not impose hard conditions, and it would be a pleasure to pay one so kind and forbearing.

At last she was home, and breathlessly sitting at her mother's feet, she opened her letter. Wonder of wonders—a bank note enclosed; she held it without speaking, or looking at its value.

"Read it,' she said, after a moment's bewilderment, placing the letter in her mother's hands—'here are fifty dollars; what can it mean?"

"This," said the sick woman, bursting into tears, "it is a receipt in full, releasing you from payment of your father's debt. Kind, generous man—Heaven will bless him—God will shower mercies upon him. From a grateful heart I call upon the Father to reward him for this act of kindness. Oh, what shall we say, what shall we do to thank him?"

"Mother." said Eva, smiling through her tears, "I felt as if he were an angel of goodness. Oh, they do wrong, who say that all who are wealthy have hard hearts. Mother, can it be possible we are so rich? I wish he knew how happy he has made us, how much we love and reverence him whenever we think or speak of him, or even hear him spoken of?"

"He has bound two hearts to him for ever," murmured her mother.

"Yes, dear Mr. Miner! little he thought how many comforts we wanted. Now we need not stint the fire; we may buy coal and have one cheerful blaze, please God. And the tea, and the strip of carpet, the little luxuries for you, dear mother; and the time. and a very few books for myself. I declare, I'm so thankful, I feel as if I ought to write back and tell him that we shall love him as long as we live."

"That evening the grate, heaped with Lehigh, gave the little room an air of ruddy comfort. Eva sat near, her curls bound softly back from her pure forehead, inditing a touching letter to their benefactor. Her mother's face, lightened with the loss of carking care, shone with a placid smile, and her every thought was a prayer calling down blessings upon the good rich man.

In another room, far different from the widow's home, but also bright with the blace of a genial fire, whose red light made richer the polish of costly furniture sat the noble merchant.

"Pa, what makes you look so happy?" asked Lina, a beautiful girl, passing her smooth hand over his brow.

"Don't I always look happy, my little Lina?"

"Yes, but you keep shutting your eyes and smiling—so;" and her bright face reflected his own. "I think you've had something very nice to-day; what was it?"

"Does my little daughter really want to know what has made her father look so happy? Here is my Bible, let her turn to the Acts of the Apostles, 20th chapter, 25th, and read it carefully."

The beautiful child turned reverently the pages of the Holy Book, and as she read she looked up in her father's eyes—

"And to remember the words of the Lord Jesus, how he said it is more blessed to give than to receive."

"Ah! I know," she said, laying her rosy cheek upon his hand, "you have been giving something to some poor beggar, as you did last week, and he thanked you, and, said God bless you! and that's what makes you look so happy."

Lina read a confirmation in her father's smile, but he said nothing, only kept repeating to himself the words of the Lord Jesus, "It is more blessed to give than to receive.—Arthur's Home Gazette.

Moral Reflections, Sentences, and Maxims.

Our wit sometimes enables us to commit follies with impunity.

The vivacity which augments with years is not far from folly.

In love, he who is earliest cured is always best cured.

Young women who do not wish to appear coquettes, and men of advanced age who do not wish to appear ridiculous, should never speak of love as a thing with which they can have anything to do.

We may appear great in an employment beneath our merit, but we often appear little in ones too great for us.

Confidence contributes more than wit to conversation.

Nothing so much prevents our being natural as the desire of appearing so.

To praise good actions heartily is in some sort to take part in them.

MINUTES
OF THE
Indiana State Temperance Convention,
Held in Madison, Sept. 28 and 29, 1853.

Sept. 28th, 10 o'clock A. M.

Convention met—opened with prayer by Rev. John Keiger—was temporarily organized by appointing Rev. Jas. Crawford, of Dearborn Co., President, and B. F. Foster, of Jefferson County, Secretary.

Credentials were received from the following delegates:

Jefferson County.—Hon. W. M. Dunn, J. Y. Allison, Rev. J. P. Barnett, Rev. J. Brown, Rev. H. Gilmore, Rev. C. Keller, Rev. G. Taylor, Rev. B. F. Foster, Samuel Abbott, Jos. Roberts, W. Whetridge, R. J. Wharton, J. Dudley, Silas Ritchie, R. B. Hunt, L. J. Adams, Wm. Randall, S. Patton, H. Riley, S. C. Stephens, W. H. Fry, Jas. E. Lewis, J. D. Dubois, H. Quigley, Wm. M. Monroe, W. M. Taylor, R. Coffin, John H. Taylor, J. H. Chappell, Aquilla Robertson, Christopher Keller, M. Wiley, Z. Loyd, Nathan Roberson, John Wallace, Thos. Gazaway, Jno. H. Bower, J. Hoard, Henry Bear, Henry T. Hays, W. Wallace, Rev. Wm. Monroe, John Chambers, J. M. Tilford, A. Park, A. S. White, P. P. Wiley, John Brazleton, A. T. Wood, Thomas D. George, A. C. Dean, John R. Ritchie, J. H. Reynolds, E. H. Hammond, John Patterson, Jacob Giltner, Geo. A. Ransin, W. A. Young, Wm. C. Logan, Levi Ramsey, J. W. Brown, and Robt. Elliott.

Switzerland County.—Jno. McCollom, Wm. Shaw, James McCathon, Enos Littlefield, Rev. A. Atkinson, Geo. McCullough, Dr. Cheever, Rev. Mr. Dolby, Frederick M. Harris, U. H. Stowe, Benj. Robinson, John Framan, Solomon Washer, H. A. Tinker, Amos Edwards, Dr. P. S. Sage, James Shaw, E. Hafford, James Stewart, Ewd. Kerns, Jas. Cleghorn, W. McQuinn, Jas. Marsh, T. H. Downey, H. Drewrey, and S. T. Campbell.

Marion County.—Rev. John C. Steele, Rev. J. A. McClung, Rev. B. F. Crary, Rev. E. Whitten, John D. Defrees, J. L. Ketcham, Calvin Fletcher, J. H. Batty, T. S. L. Wainright, John Wilkins, William Hannaman, Thos. Gott, James H. Stapp, Jos. R. Wainscott, Rev. E. R. Guiney, and Dr. Thompson.

Floyd County.—Rev. John Kiger, Jas. E. Dishman, Thos. Dolby, J. D. Kelso, J. T. Creed, Orlando Gregg, E. Wathen, L. L. Gorner, B. F. Gravel, R. Elderkin, and E. M. Angel.

Scott County.—Willis L. Traylor, Robt. H. Nelson, E. G. Hallowell, Geo. Hauley, James H. Phillips, Alfred Hays, and Wm. B. Stout.

Bartholomew County.—Rev. John B. Abbott, Rev. W. W. Curry, Rev. A. G. Dunning, and B. Moore.

Clarke County.—David Forsyth, Alfred Hough, and Matthew Clegg.

Montgomery County.—Reuben Taylor, Dr. T. L. Forkner, and Fisher Dougherty.

Putnam County.—Col. Danl. Sigler and Rev. Wm. Maginnis.

Dearborn County.—Rev. James Crawford, and Dr. W. H. Harding.

Ohio County.—Rev. Geo. L. Key, and J. I. Works.

Tippecanoe County.—Adam Purkerton, Saml. R. Seawright, and Henry Williams.

Union County.—Rev. Lewis Hurbutt.

On motion, a committee of seven was appointed to nominate officers for the convention. Rev. John B. Abbott, Rev. Mr. Barnett, Dr. Harding, J. D. Kelso, Wm. Shaw, Cleghorn and Works, were appointed said committee.

On motion, the following gentlemen were appointed a Business committee: Messrs. Wm. Hannaman, John Kiger, C. Keller, John C. Steele, H. A. Tinker, and M. A. Dishman—to which were added the Indiana State Central Committee.

The following gentlemen were appointed a committee on Credentials: Messrs. John H. Batty, John H. Taylor, and L. L. Gorner.

Messrs. H. Gilmore, Geo. L. Key, and J. D. Kelso were appointed a committee on Public Speaking.

On motion, adjourned to meet at two o'clock.

Wednesday, 2 o'clock, P. M.

Convention met pursuant to adjournment.

Committee reported the following nominations for officers, which were concurred in:

For President.—Calvin Fletcher, of Marion County.

For Vice Presidents.—William Shaw, of Switzerland; L. L. Gorner, of Floyd; Col. Sigler, of Putnam; Silas Ritchie, of Jefferson; Rev. James Crawford, of Dearborn; and Reuben Taylor, of Montgomery.

Secretaries.—B. F. Foster and John H. Taylor, of Jefferson; W. L. Traylor, of Scott; and Orlando Gregg, of Floyd.

Committee on Business made a report, which was laid on the table, and made the special order of business for forenoon session of to-morrow.

Rev. H. Gilmore presented the following resolutions, which were adopted:

Resolved, That the temperance cause needs and has a right to expect, the full and constant co-operatiou and support of all the christian churches throughout our State, as well as others of our citizens, who regard the welfare of society.

Resolved, That there is a sufficiency of correct theory on the subject of temperance among our citizens, to secure any reasonable legislation for putting a stop to the distillation and traffic of ardent spirits as a beverage, if brought into practical application.

Resolved, That where there is a lack of action, according to correct theory, in reference to the temperance reformation, we permit selfishness to predominate over our benevolence and philanthropy.

Resolved, That we deem it of greater real advantage to ourselves and country, to take an open and unyielding position, even with a comparatively small number, than to have the patronage and good will of all the makers, vender, and drinkers in the world.

Resolved, That the principles of total abstinence, which we unhesitatingly adopt, prohibits, not only the making, vending, and drinking of all alcoholic liquors as a beverage, but also the manufacturing and sale of those articles designed or calculated to aid the cause of intemperance, and the renting of grounds, houses or rooms, for hotels, taverns, grog shops, groceries, or drinking or gambling saloons, where the work of intemperance is carried on.

On motion, a committee of the following gentlemen were appointed to prepare an address upon the subject of a prohibitory law:—Messrs. McClung, Crary, Barnett, Defrees, and Sigler.

On motion, adjourned to meet at eight o'clock to-morrow morning.

Thursday, 8 o'clock, P. M.

Convention met. Opened with prayer by Rev. B. F. Crary.

On motion, a special committee was appointed, to whom was referred the Report of the Business Committee. Messrs. John D. Defrees, McClung, Curry, Clegg, and Adams were appointed said committee.

Several interesting addresses were delivered touching the matter of a prohibitory law.

On motion, adjourned until 2 o'clock, P. M.

2 o'clock, P. M.

Convention met.

Mr. Defrees, of the special committee, submitted the following report as a substitute for the original report of the Business committee, which was freely discussed and adopted:

1. Resolved, That in the opinion of the friends of temperance, here, in convention assembled, the time has arrived when the public sentiment of this States requires the enactment of a law which shall entirely prohibit the manufacture or sale, as a beverage, of every description of ardent spirits, or liquors that can intoxicate those who use them.

2. Resolved, That in the election of members of the next legislature, we are determined to make an efficient prohibitory law the issue above all mere party considerations. We, therefore, that such an issue may be made as definite as possible, hereby appoint the following gentlemen, to-wit: J. Sulllivan, of Madison, J. L. Ketcham, of Indianapolis, A. C. Downey, of Rising Sun aud S. A. Huff of Lafayette, a committee, whose duty it shall be to prepare a bill to that effect, to be submitted to the consideration of the State temperance convention which shall assemble at Indianapolis on the second Wednesday of January next, and to the essential features of which said candidates should be required to pledge themselves.

3. Resolved, That we earnestly desire that the friends of a prohibitory law, in evecounty in the State shall hold at an early day, county conventions, for the purpose of sending delegates to the State Convention at Indianapolis on the day above designated, (to which meeting the propriety of requiring the same pledges from all candidates may be submitted,) and to take such other measures as they may deem proper to secure the enactment of the law above indicated, and to advance the great temperance reformation, now so rapidly progressing throughout our whole country.

4. Resolved, That a committee of five be appointed to devise the best plan of conducting the next summer's campaign, to secure the election of the right kind of men to the Legislature, and of raising the means of defraying the incidental expenses; and that said committee report to the convention at Indianapolis.

5. Resolved, That, in view of the fact that many counties of our State are not represented in this convention, and, in the expectation of a full representation in January, we defer until then the arrangement of a plan, in detail, for the canvass of 1854.

Mr. Abbott offered the following resolutions, which were adopted:

Resolved, That this Convention do most cordially approve and recommend "Harris' Mirror of Intemperance and Crime" to the favorable consideration of the friends of Temperance throughout this country. As a work of art, this beautiful Panorama, from its character and design, cannot fail to be productive of much good, and prove a powerful auxiliary to the cause of Temperance.

Whereas, It is essential to all moral reforms, that they should be sustained by an enlightened public sentiment, and that to accomplish this desirable object, a well conducted paper is indispensable:

And Whereas, the Grand Division of the Sons of Temperance of Indiana have established a reliable Temperance paper in the City of Indianapolis, entitled the "Temperance Chart;" therefore, be it

Resolved, That this Convention fully approve and endorse said paper, and will use their efforts to sustain it: And further Resolved, that this Convention recommend the Grand Division of Indiana to enlarge the "Chart," and increase the price to one dollar per year.

Mr. Taylor offered the following resolution, which was adopted:

Resolved, That the several committees appointed by this Convention, be authorized to fill any and all vacancies that may occur in their respective bodies.

The thanks of the Convention were tendered to the citizens of Madison, for their hospitalities during the meeting.

On motion, the proceedings of the Convention were ordered to be published in the "Temperance Chart," city papers of Madison, and that all other papers in the State be requested to copy.

On motion, adjourned to meet at Indianapolis, on the 2d Wednesday in January, 1854.

C. FLETCHER, Pres't.

B. F. Foster,
John H. Taylor,
W. L. Traylor,
Orlando Gregg, } Secretaries.

To Bring the Drowned to Life.—Intended to be put in every man's hat.—Immediately as the body is removed from the water, press the chest suddenly and forcibly downward and backward, and instantly discontinue the pressure. Repeat this violent interruption until a pair of common bellows can be procured. When obtained, introduce the muzzle well upon the base of the tongue. Surround the mouth with a towel or handkerchief and close it. Direct a bystander to press firmly upon the projecting part of the neck, and use the bellows actively. Then press upon the chest, expel the air from the lungs, to imitate natural breathing.—Continue this at least an hour, unless signs of natural breathing comes on.

Wrap the body in blankets, place it near a fire. and do everything to preserve the natural warmth, as well as to impart a natural heat, if possible. Everything, however, is secondary to inflating the lungs. Send for a medical man immediately.

Avoid all frictions until respiration shall be in some degree restored.

Valentine Mott,
Surgeon General of the American Shipwreck Company.

A Dangerous Disease.—Some one telling the famous Marquis Spinola that a distinguished general had died of having nothing to do, he answered, "Upon my word, it is enough to kill anybody."

LIBRARY INDIANAPOLIS

TEMPERANCE CHART.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.
WM. HANNAMAN, C. E. BABB,
JAMES HALL, R. T. BROWN,
JOHN B. ABBETT.

WEDNESDAY, OCT. 12, 1853.

Correction.—In our notice of the Convention last week we stated that the resolutions were drawn up by Rev. Mr. Steele. This, it seems, was a mistake. It will be seen by the published proceedings in today's paper that the original resolutions were referred to a committee, who reported as a substitute the resolutions published.

☞ A meeting of young men was held on Wednesday evening last, at Wesley Chapel, for the purpose of organizing a "Young Men's Temperance Union," the object of which is to promote the cause of Temperance and Morality. The exercises were very interesting, and there was manifested an excellent spirit. We hope the organization will do much good.

Our Social Order.—Meetings of the Social Order have been regularly held every week for some time past at Roberts' Chapel, in this city, with apparently the best results. On Tuesday evening of last week the house was crowded, and many ladies were present. Our best citizens engage most heartily in this movement, and are always to be found at the meetings giving encouragement to the effort by every means in their power. As this Order presents a common platform upon which all good citizens can meet to labor in behalf of the common cause, we hope for much from its operations, and hail its revival with joy.

At the meeting above alluded to, a committee was appointed, consisting of six gentlemen and several ladies in each ward, to canvass the city and obtain signatures to a petition to the Council for an ordinance prohibiting the selling of liquors.

New Books.

Mapleton; or More Work for the Maine Law. By Pharcellus Church, D. D.—New York: L. Colby & Co.

We have not been able to more than commence this book, but should judge from what we have seen, as well as the opinions of others, that it is a work of extraordinary interest. It comes to us highly recommended; and, from the well-known character of the author, who is a Baptist minister in New York, we can safely commend it to the confidence of the public. The work can be had of the publishers, 122 Nassau street, N. Y.

We are informed by Rev. Mr. Williams, of this place, that he has a few copies for sale at the book-store of Cox & Mathes.

The Temperance Musician: a choice collection of original and selected Temperance Music, with an extensive variety of popular Temperance Songs. By A. D. Fillmore. Cincinnati: Applegate & Co.

This will certainly become one of the most popular temperance song-books which has been published in the country. We think it is, so far as we have examined it, the best collection of songs we have seen. Some of them are exceedingly beautiful and affecting.

Address Applegate & Co., No. 43 Main street, Cincinnati, O.

☞ The ladies in Ohio seem to be awake on the subject of temperance.—They are holding large and spirited gatherings in different parts of the State, at some of which good addresses have been delivered and other spirit-stirring exercises had. We were sorry to notice that the question of women's rights was introduced to some extent at one of them recently.

☞ Dr. Jewett is lecturing in Cincinnati to large audiences. He is said to be a very popular speaker, and goes in earnest for the Maine Law.

The Design of a Prohibitory Law.

Time and again it is said in relation to the Maine Law—"You cannot legislate men into good morals." My dear sir, we know that, and we are not trying to do any such thing.

Does a law exist, here and elsewhere, against stealing? If so, what is the object of it? It is to protect the community against the rascality of the dishonest. It is to prevent the overt act, the carrying out of a mischievous design, by which others are injured, and the attempt to do which constitutes crime. The law against stealing is not to make men more moral, or more honest, but to protect the community.

So the Maine law is not to restrain the drunkard, nor to control his conscience. Neither is it to correct the heart or purify the polluted soul of the man who sells the liquor. We know very well that we can not regulate the consciences of men. We do not expect by legislation to make them more moral in their outward conduct. We ask for no law to improve the morals of men, in the sense in which that phrase is generally used. So far as an act is a crime against God, it may be that human law has but little to do with it. Upon this point we have nothing to offer now. But where there is a crime against society, has not society the right to punish it? If a practice, common in the community, be an unmitigated and universally acknowledged injury to society, surely the people have a right to put a stop to it.

Our object is to prevent the overt act by which individuals are injured. We wish to prevent the swindler from taking the money of others and giving in return that which is not an equivalent. We wish to protect the weak from the aggressions of the strong—the simple and ignorant from the arts, the tricks, and the villainy of the unprincipled and designing. We aim to restrain by the strong arm of the law those who have had long experience, and are well skilled in the work, from fleecing the young and inexperienced of their property, their health, their reputation, and all else that would make life endurable.

The principle here presented is recognized as a proper basis for statutory enactment every where else; and why not when we come to consider it where, beyond all comparison, more mischief is the result than is produced by a similar disregard of right any where else.

Is there not in this business that which constitutes the very essence of crime? We lay aside the question as to the moral nature of the evil—though in this respect its name is Legion—and look at it alone as a physical evil. Does it ever produce poverty, disease, insanity, or death? And through what channels does it effect its work? We honestly ask what it is that liquor-sellers do? Do they not take the young and unwary, who are entirely free from the appetite, and with fiendish ingenuity decoy them into their net? Do they not place directly in the way of the poor slave of a depraved appetite (an appetite which some of their number created,) a temptation which even the most resolute reformed drunkard can scarcely resist? Do they not go on day after day, and year after year, feeding the appetite which they themselves have furnished the means to produce, and thus luring the victim forward till he takes the fatal plunge? Does not the presence of the temptation in the neighborhood of the poor inebriate, in many instances, prevent his return to sober habits when he has a desire to do so? Is it true that they do all this? Or is there nothing in all the machinery of this traffic to catch those who are now in the path of sobriety?

Yes, they do all this; and thousands, every year, go into drunkards' graves in this fair land, who might, were there no liquor establishments in the country, live on respectable, honored, and useful citizens. By every avenue through which poor fallen human nature can be approached, they endeavor to get an influence over both the young and the old to entice them to destruction. In instances without number they succeed in obtaining that influence and producing the dreadful habit which ends in the evils above spoken of, when but for them the individuals who fall might have been preserved to their friends and to society.

Don't we know all this to be true? Is there a man within the limits of this State so stupid as not to know it? Well, is there nothing unlawful in all this? Is there no crime in the act of deliberately placing in the pathway of utter, blind-fold ignorance, or of demented weakness, that over which they blunder into the pit of death? Is it not a fit subject for legislation?

Here is the ground upon which we claim the Maine Law. Civilized society has been a long time discovering the truth that certain classes of the community were not able to protect themselves from the ruinous effects of intemperance, and that it would be right to remove the cause of all their woe—that the man who furnished to them the means of destruction was guilty of a crime. But the time has come at last. The people have finally cut this Gordian knot, and they will go on conquering till the world is subdued. The guilty liquor-seller, who has heretofore been plying his art covered by a vail which obsured his crime, is now trembling with the fear of discovery, and the vail is being stripped from the murderous business, and it is being exposed in all its naked deformity. We trust we will not have to wait long for the consummation of this great work.

The good Work in Indiana.

A friend writing, from Bloomfield, in this State, under date, of Sept. 13, says:

"The cause is in pretty good condition here. The leaven of truth, is working, gradually with the masses. One grocery died, when the people put their iron hoof, upon license in April. We have but one more, and the keeper of that is now speechless on his bed. His friends think he is concerned for his future welfare; may God have mercy on him. He has meted out death to many. He has said he would never get well. The license that he got last year has been out but a few days. He said in April, he did'nt care if they did vote license down—that his would last as long as he would live any way.

"I have lately been in Bedford, and Salem, the County seat of Lawrence and Washington counties. The good folks have buried their last grocery, in each place. Oh, let us take courage, and do battle for the right!"

A correspondent, in Hamilton county, writes as follws:—

"As prohibition, is one of the standard principles, of the temperance reform, of this day, and as it is to the triumph of that that all sound temperance men, must look for the annihilation, of intemperance. it is necessary, in order to determine the true state of the cause, to find how public opinion is, for by that alone this principle, must gain the ascendancy."

"Last winter a county temperance, convention, was held for the purpose of obtaining signatures to memorials, to be presented to the Legislature. Several persons were appointed to canvass the county. At a day appointed, the canvassers met, to give an account of their success, and the number of petitions was greater than the most enthusiastic would have guessed. They all concurred in the opinion that three-fourths, of the people of Hamilton were ready for a prohibitory law. Rev. Mr. Smith said that so far as his circuit extended, he had taken some pains to find out what public sentiment was, and that he had found a large majority favorable to prohibition. They see, said he, that there is no security that their children, and children's children will not be brought under its blighting influence.

"Mr. Chipman, said that of those he visited about fifty signed the petition, while but eleven refused.

"If the Legislature of Indiana, will but submit the Maine law, or one as to good, the people for decision, they will find our county up and doing."

Thus the work goes on among the masses. When the time comes for deciding the question in this State, we have no doubt the people will be found on the right side to a much greater extent than some persons suppose.

We often take credit for faults opposite to those we have; when we are weak we boast of being obstinate.

We easily pardon in our friends those faults which do not concern ourselves.

Correspondence.

For the Chart.

Our Order.

BY DR. ELIEZER WILLIAMSON.

From the green hills of woody Maine,
To Louisiana's strand;
From east to west, from vale to plain,
Through all our happy land;
Our glorious Order has gone forth,
To spread its hallowed light,
To cheer misfortune's dark abodes,
And fill the world with light.

The unprotected orphan's cry,
And widow's wails are hushed,
And men redeemed, from ruin fly,
Whose fondest hopes were crushed.
In triumph still it onward goes,
To rescue and to save,
Though some its principles oppose,
It shall each storm outbrave.

A mighty Brotherhood combined,
A fearless, dauntless band,
Men of one heart, one soul, one mind,
The chosen of the land;
Resolved they are to never stop,
Till men have ceased to sell,
And manufacture, buy or make,
The beverage of hell.

The following letter was received some time since, and should have been published sooner, but it happened to be overlooked.

For the Temperance Chart.

Brother Gordon:—The work still progresses slowly, but surely, in this place and vicinity. We make no more noise than is just necessary to keep the Anties in the proper humor for manifesting their opposition, for when we are quiet, they are, and when we make a stir, they do the same; we want to keep them stirred up all the time, so that we can see what they are about, for of all things I do despise this under-current opposition.

Rev. Mr. Clifford, made quite a stir among the serpents, on the 7th of last June, insom uch that they crawled out of the tall grass in a hurry, and ever since that, they will not show their teeth. They even went so far as to threaten us with the cry, that they would stop us from meeting together, even if they had to use force.

The Methodists concluded a Camp Meeting, near this place, a week or so back, and I am happy to say the subject, of Temperance received due attention in nearly every sermon that was preached. And it smelled so strong in some of them that some persons could stand it no longer, but must leave the grounds they claimed to be members of a church, but its name or creed is seldom written, either from the fact that it has none, or that ink cannot be found dark enough to indite it. I am sorry, to see so many persons claiming to be advocates of Temperance, opposed to its being made mention of in the Pulpit. One Brother, and a particular friend of mine, after listening to a strong Temperance Sermon, at the afore-mentioned Camp Meeting, went so far as to say that that every sermon would entirely kill off the meetings. Well did it do it? No, but that very same night, a stronger Temperance Sermon than the other was listened to, and I never saw such a revival as followed that sermon in all my life. And I firmly believe that it would be a revival all the time to expell all of these whiskey members from the church. Temperance and Religion go hand in hand, and will continue to, till all the world is reclaimed from vice and folly, and brought to see the light of the blessings that follow wherever they go.

At our last meeting, six Delegate s were appointed to attend the convention, at Madison on the 28th. inst.

Inclosed I send you the names of eight subscribers, accompanied with the cash, and I promise to increase the list.

Yours in L. P. & F.
W. S. Schoonover.
Hardinsburg Indiana, Sept. 15.

A Terrible End.—On Sunday last, one mile outside of Troy, Ohio, the mangled body of a once respectable man was found, who of late has been a drunkard. With the exception of the extremities of the arms and legs, the flesh had been entirely consumed by the hogs. The lower jaw was torn off, stripped of every vestige of flesh, and was found several rods from the rest of the skeleton. A more revolting spectacle has seldom been witnessed.

Report.

Of the committee, appointed by the social order of temperance in the city of Indianapolis, on the power of lhe Common Council of said city under the act of June 18th 1852. for the incorporation of cities, to pass an ordinance similar to, or embodying the leading provision of the Maine law.

It is competent for a State legislature to regulate and restrain the internal traffic in any article; and to prohibit it altogether, if deemed for the public good.

If the State had not the power to do this, it would be incapable of answering the ends of its organization.

This power does not interfere with the civil liberty of the citizen.

Civil liberty is the not being restrained by any law, but what conduces in a greater degree to the public welfare; it consists in a freedom from all restraints, except such as established law imposes for the good of community.

If the State does not prohibit the traffic entirely, but merely restricts it, it may still be carried on within the statutory limits.

In the absence of any statute to the contrary every individual has the natural right to traffic in spirituous and other liquors.

The constitutional power of the State legislatures to pass laws prohibiting the retail and internal traffic in ardent spirits has been affirmed by the Supreme Court of the United States in the cases of Thurlow against the commonwealth of Massachusetts, Fletcher against the State of Rhode Island, and Pierce and another against the State of New Hampshire, 5th Howard. 504, 633, and recognized as an established principle by the Supreme Court of this State. Bepley vs. The State April term 1653.

In the case of Bepley against the State Judge Stewart, delivering the opinion of the Court, said: "It is competent for the legislature to declare any practice deemed injurious to the public a nuisance, and to punish it accordingly."

The case of Bepley against the State grew out of a violation of the 17th section of the act of March 4th, 1853.

This act prohibits the sale of spirituous liquors, in the State of Indiana, in any quantity less than one gallon, except for certain specified purposes, without the consent of a majority of the legal voters of the proper township, who may cast their votes for license at the April election &c, and subjects any person offending, to a fine for each offense.

It declares all places wherein spirituous liquors are retailed, if kept in a disorderly manner, to be common nuisances, and punishes the keeper of any such nuisance by a fine of not less than twenty-five nor more than one hundred dollars.

It makes all contracts entered into by a person, while in a state of intoxication, voidable at the option of such intoxicated persons. And all places or houses wherein spirituous liquors are sold or bartered, directly or indirectly, without license, in less quantity than one gallon, or suffered or allowed to be drunk in or about such place, house, out-house, yard, or appurtanance thereto, are declared to be common and public nuisances; and all persons keeping and maintaining such nuisances, on conviction, are finable in any sum not less than two nor more than one hundred dollars. Acts of 1853. 87-89.

There are some other provisions in the act tending, further, to restrict the sale, by making the seller liable for any damage sustained by the family of the person intoxicated &c, but the foregoing is sufficient for our purpose.

This act is said, by some, to be unconstitutional: not that they deny the constitutional right of the legislature to pass a prohibitory law, for that is too well settled to be the subject of controversy, but the ground they take, is, that the granting of license to retail being dependent on the vote of the majority in each township, is a violation of those clauses in the constitution of 1851, which require all laws to be general and uniform in their operation throughout the State, that no law shall be passed, the taking effect of which shall be made to depend upon any authority, except as provided in the constitution; and that no local or special law shall be passed for the punishment of crimes and misdemeanors. Sec. 25 Art. 1. Sec. 22, 23. Art. 4. Const. 1851. But we do not think the objections are well taken. The Supreme Court has, already, decided that the 17th section is constitutional. This, we admit, does not decide the constitutionality of the whole act. But the principle, on which that decision was made, secures all of the act, except that part relating to a vote by the people, and the action thereon. And if this part be deemed unconstitutional strike it out.

Although a part of an act of the legislature is unconstitutional, it does not affect a constitutional part of the same act relative to the same subject. "That part which is unconstitutional, is considered as if stricken out of the act, and if enough remains to be ictelligibly acted upon, it is considered as the law of the land. 2. Blackford. 8. All that part of the act of 1853 relative to a vote by the people and the matlers dependent on such vote, may well be rejected, without, in the least, affecting the sense of the rest; and there is then, an absolute prohibition of the sale of spirituous liquors by a less quantity than a gallon at a time, except for the purposes specified in the act.

The term "spirituous liquors" does not embrace wine or other intoxicating liquors, which are not distilled. "Spirit is the name of an inflammable liquor produced by distillation" 5 Blackford. 118.

This act is far in advance of any previous legislative enactment of our State on the subject; and far behind the Maine law. It is not half as stringent as the Massachusetts acts in 5th Howard, 505, 511,

Now, as to the power of the State to adopt the Maine law, there does not seem to be any room for doubt. By nature each individual has the right of acting as he thinks fit, without any restraint or control, except by the law of nature. But every man, when he enters into society, gives up a part of this natural right as the price of so valuable a purchase. 1. Black. Com. 125. In other words, when a man becomes a member of the State, there is an agreement, express or implied, that he will yield obedience to its laws and regulations; and whatever natural liberty he retains, is held, subject to such regulations and restraints, as the State may afterwards deem necessary to make or impose for the good of the whole. And this is consistent with civil liberty, which we have shown, "is the not being restrained by any law, but what conduces in a greater degree to the public welfare."

In the case of Thurlow against Massachusetts, Chief Justice Tancy, said: "although a State is bound to receive and to permit the sale by the importer of any article of merchandise which congress authorizes to be imported, it is not bound to furnish a market for it, nor to abstain from the passage of any law, which it may deem necessary or advisable to guard the health and morals of its citizens, although such law may discouage importation, or diminish theiprofitsof the mporter or lessen the revenues of the general government.

And if any State deems the retail and enternal traffiic in ardent spirits injurious to its citizens, and calculated to produce idleness, vice, or debauchery, I see nothing in the Constitution of the United States to prevent it from regulating and restraining the traffic, or from prohibiting it altogether, if it thinks proper." 5. How. 577.

And Justice McLain, said "A State regulates its domestic commerce, contracts the transmission cf estates. real and personal, and acts upon all internal matters which relate to its moral and political welfare." And further:—"These subjects appertain exclusively to the State sovreignty, and the license laws of Massachusetts are essentially police laws. The acknowledged police power of a State extends often to the destruction of property. A nusance may be abated. Every thing prejudicial to the health or morals of a city may be removed. Merchandise from a port where a contagious disease prevails being liable to communicate the disease, may be excluded; and in extreme cases it may be thrown into the sea. This comes into direct conflict with the regulation of commerce; and yet no one doubts the local power. It is a power essential to self preservation, and exists, necessarily in every organized community. It is indeed, the law of nature, and is possessed by man in his individual capacity. He may resist that which does him harm, whether he be assailed by an assassin, or approached by poison. And it is the settled construction of every regulation of commerce, that, under the sanction of its general laws, no person can introduce into community malignant diseases, or any thing which contamenatts its morals or endangers its safety. And this is an acknowledged principle applicable to all general regulations. Individuals in the enjoyment of their own rights must be careful not to injure the rights of others." 5. How. 589. And, it may be added, individuals interests must be made subservient to the general interests of community. 2. Kent. 340.

If therefore, the police power of the State be so comprehensive, there is nothing to prevent the State legislature from authorizing the Common Council of a city to exercise like power within the city limits. A city is a public corporation. The Common Council is its legislative body. They "enjoy the prerogatives of government to a perscribed extent. Among these is the power to pass by-laws and ordinances upon certain subjects. They cann transcend the powers conferred on them by statute. This is their constitution. Neither can the State or general governments transcend the powers conferred by their constitutions. Every act beyond the constitution is void; and may be declared so by our courts of justice, whether it emenate from a general or local legislatiue." 7. Cow. 606.

The police power of a city must, necessarily be somewhat extensive or the corporation cannot protect the interests of the public, and subserve the purposes of its creation. It is useless to create a munidipal corporation, unless it is clothed to some extent, with general and even discretionary power. But as the legislative which creates it, is bound in its action by the constitution of the State and of the United States, so this general and discretionary power must be exercised within, and be in harmony with the State constitution, the power granted by the charter and the constitution of the United States.

This power is absolutely necessary in a city of large and increasing population; in order, first to secure the health, morals, and safety of the citizens, and their property; and, secondly, immunity from idleness, vice, and debauchery; the first being always more exposed, and the last, most prevalent in the midst of a dense, mixed, and often to a considerable extent, lawless population, who entertain enlarged views of liberty, believing it to consist in entire freedom from every restraint, except such as they, themselves, may see fit to impose upon their actions and that not as a matter of obligation, but of favor merely.

But it has been shown that there is nothing in the constitution of the United States to prevent a State from passing any law, which it may deem advisable or necessary to guard the health and morals of its citizens; nor, if it deems the retail and internal traffic in ardent spirits injurious to its citizens, and calculated to produce idleness, vice, or debauchery, to prevent it from regulating and restraining the traffic, or prohibiting it altogether; that this is a general principle, not confined to a particular case, but applicable to any thing calculated to contaminate the morals, or endanger the health or safety of the community, that without this power the State could not accomplish the objects of its organization; and, that there is nothing in it repugnant to the general rights and liberties secured to the citizen by the State constitution is apparent from the decisions in 5th Howard, in Bepley against the State, already cited, and in Lunts case Greenleaf. 412. And this power to act, in such cases, which is possessed by the State, may be granted to a municipal corporation. For a municipal corporation is the creature of the legislature; and the legislature is limited in its grant of power to such corporations, only by the constitution of the State. Now as it regards the traffic in spirituous liquors, the only difficulty which presents itself in the way of the Common Council interfe ing, is the fact that the State, in the exercise of its police power has passed a general law regulating the retailing of spirituous liquors. For if a difficulty really existed in this particular case, it could not be said to apply to any other liquors deemed injurious, and not included in that law. The act of June 18, 1853, has been adopted as the charter of this city, By the 35th, section of that act, it is declared, that "the Common Council shall have power to pass ordinances:

First. To regulate or prohibit the use of hand organs, or instruments of an annoying character, or other music of itinerant performers in the streets, lanes, alleys or public places of the city,

Second. To fill up or drain grounds thereon water has or may become stagnant, at the expense of the owner thereof.

Third. To prevent and regulate the use of fire arms, fire works, or other sports, or other thing or practice tending to endanger persons or property.

Fourth. To direct the location of tallow chandleries, soap factories, and other buildings or structures, and prohibit the erection of snch buildings, or the continuance of noxious trades or business therein whenever the health or welfare of the city shall require the same.

Fifth. To establish cemeteries or burial places within or without the City limits, and to provide for the sanction of the dead.

Sixth. To establish quarantine regulations.

Seventh.. To preserve peace and good order, prevent vice and immorality, and quell riots and disorderly assemblages &c, 1. R. S. 1852, 210'

The power granted in this section is independent of that contained in the 38th section of the same act. I. b. 212.

The Common Council is unconditionally authorized, to pass ordinances to accomplish the objets specified in the foregoing and subsequent specifications of section 35. On the subjects embraced in this section, the Common Council is limited, only, by the constitution. This was necessary, in order that the police power of the city might be effective. On these subjects, therefore the action of the Common Council is not made to depend, for its validity, on consistency with legislature enactments. Therefore, while that section stands unaltered and unrepealed, the Common Council may pass any ordinance necessary to secure the objects contemplated by it, without regard to general State legislation. But the power in section 38, to make other by-laws, necessary to carry out the objects of the corporation depends upon their being consistent with the laws of the State, that is, with the general enactments of the State legislative. The sixth and seventh specifications of section 35, cover the very ground on which the Supreme court of the United States bases the power of the State, to regulate and restrain the internal traffic in any article, and if thought proper, to prohibit it altogether; and would seem to justify the Common Cnuncil in affiixing a penalty to the doing of an act declared to be an offense against the State law, as it respects the retailing of spirituous liquors or any other practice affecting the health or morals of the city, and in prohibiting it altogether, if deemed advisable or necessary for either of those purposes.

But, secondly, if we are mistaken in our view of the 35th section, the power granted in the 38th, removes the difficulty. In the outset. we stated that if the traffic in any article was merely restricted, it might still be carried on within the statutory limit. But the vote in this township, at the last April election, was against license. In this city, therefore, the sale of spirituous liquors, in a less quantity than a gallon, except for sacramental, mechanical chemical, medicinal, or culinary purposes, is entirely prohibited, Beyond that limit the natural right is untouched. The statute neither sanctions nor authorizes iis exercise. The 38th section gives the Common Council additional power, "to make other by-laws not inconsistent with the laws of this State, and necessary to carry out the objects of the corporation." This clause gives the Council ample power to act, subjects to the right of the individual to sell for the above mentioned purposes, so long as the vote of the township is against license. Nor would such actions be inconsistent with the State law. For while the vote is against license, there is no law of the State authorizing the retail, except for the purposes aforesaid; and as to the sale in quantities of a gallon and upwards and for purposes other than those specified, the statute is silent. The right to do this last, exists, as any other natural right, so long as it is not inconsistent with the rights or interests of the community, and no longer,

The Common Council, then, may do this because it would not be inconsistent with the State law, and is not opposed to the constitution of the State, or of the United States. It is what the State might have done, or could do; and what it has authorized the Common Council to do.

The Maine law prohibits the manufacture and sale, directly or indirectly, of any spirituous or intoxicating liquors, or mixed liquors, a part of which are spirituous or intoxicating, except by persons duely authorized, to be used for medical and mechanical purposes and no other. and annexes certain penalties to a violation of the prohibition. It provides for the appointment of agents to sell for the purposes specified.

No person is permitted to be a manufacturer or common selller of any such liquors, other than those duly appointed, on pain of forfeiting a certain sum on the first and subsequent convictions; and it provides for the search, seizure and destruction of such liquors, by the proper officers, when they "are kept or deposited, and intended for sale, by any person not authorized to sell the same, under the provisions of the act, unless the owner shows by positive proof, that said liquors are of foreign productions, that they have been imported under the laws of the United States, and in accordance therewith that they are contained in the original packages in which they were imported, and in quantities not less than the laws of the United States prescribe." Such are the leading provisions of the act, seperated from the parts relating to the mode of practice and ammount of forfeitures established by it, and, which may be properly styled its machinery. Now; an ordinance prohibiting the manufacture and sale in this city, of spirituous or intoxicating liquors, or mixed liquors, a part of which are spirituous or intoxicating, except they are to be used for sacramental, mechanical, medicinal, culinary purposes and no other; and punishing the manufacturer or common seller of any such liquors, for purposes other than those specified, by appropriate personalties, would not be inconsistent with our State law which the vote on the license qestion remains unchanged. Such an ordinance would occupy no part of the ground covered by the statute. It would not punish an act made an offense against the State of Indiana. 1. Carter, 38. It would be consistent with the statute and aid in making it effective, nor would it interfere with the right to sell, by retail or otherwise, for purposes authorized by the statute,

If therefore the principles which we have laid down are corret, and that they are, we think has been fully and conclusively shown by, and clearly deduced from, the authorities cited, the conclusive is inevitable, that, under the power granted in the 38th section (elving out the 35th.) there is nothing to prevent the Common Council of this or of any other City in the State, where the vote has been against license, from passing an ordinance such as we have above sketched, that the power granted, fully authorizes them to do so if they think proper to exercise it It is true, that the ordinance would only be valid so long as the vote of the majority in the township is against license, unless the Supreme Court, by its decision in the case of Maize against the State now pending, should set aside, as unconstitutional, that part of the act of 1853, relative to a vote by the people, which we think highly probable. But the ordinance might be so framed, that the part affecting the manufacture and sale of liquors not embraced in the term "spirituous liquors" might be intelligibly acted upon independent of the rest, and such part would not be affected by a vote in favor of license; for as to the traffic in those liquors not embraced in the term "spirituous liquors," the Common Council have the same power to regulate and restrain, or prohibit it altogether within the City, that the State has; and there is no statute bearing, in the least, on the traffic in those liquors.

But if the power bestowed, on the Common Council, by the 35th section, is as comprehensive, as in our opinion it is, they have the power to pass an ordinance embodying the leading provisions of the Maine law, as detailed by us, with such changes or modifications in the penalties and mode of practice, or, in other words in the machinery of the law, consistent with the charter and practice peculiar to this State. The traffic in intoxicating liquors with its pruphealia of tippling shops, saloons, beer, shops, coffee houses and oyster cellars, is the very nursery of vice and immorality, the mother of riots, disturbances, and every species of crime and debauchery. It, with its concomitants, is the bane of all communities; especially of cities. It is to be hoped, that the day is not distant, when our legislators aided by a correct and enlightened public sentiment, will enact such laws as will be calculated to stop the progress of this great enemy of our race.

Size of the Ark.

Infidels have objected to the size of the Ark, and have asserted that it is quite absurd to suppose that ever there could be a vessel constructed large enough to hold all the creatures that must have been placed in it, together with sufficient food—it may be, for six or twelve months)—water for the fishes! corn for the four footed animals, seed for the birds, and so on. Now we will take the dimensions of the Ark from the record of Moses, and calculate them on the lowest possible scale.—There are two definitions given of a cubit: one that is 1 foot 18 inches, or a foot and a half—the other that it is 1 foot 8 inches. We will take it only at the lowest. Moses states that the Ark was 300 cubits long; this would make it 450 feet long, or about the length of St. Pauls' cathedral, London. The breadth of it he states to be 50 cubits; we then have it 75 feet in breadth. He states it to be 30 cubits high; so that it was 45 feet in heighth. In other words, it was as long as St. Paul's Cathedral, nearly as broad and half as high. The tonage of the Ark, according to the calculation of modern carpenters, must have been 32,000 tons. The largest English ship of war, the St. Vincent, for instance, which is of a size altogether unimaginable to those who have never seen it—is 2,500 tons burden; so that the Ark must have been equal to seventeen first rate ships of war, and, if armed as such ships are, it would have contained much beyond 18,000 men, and provisions for them for 18 months. Buffon has stated that all the four-footed animals may be reduced to 250 pairs, and the birds to a still smaller number. On calculation, therefore, we shall find that the Ark would have held more than five times the necessary number of creatures, and more than five times the required quantity of food to maintain them for twelve months.—Dr. Cummings.

Extravagance.—Hon. John A Dix, in a recent lecture before the Historical Society, made the following just remarks:

"Nothing can be more unwise than the erection of costly dwellings, which can only be maintained by princely fortunes. At the death of the head of a family, and a division of the ancestral property, no one of the children, as a general rule, has enough to support the establishment, and it passes into other hands. Nothing can be more cruel than to bring up children with expectations which cannot be fulfilled, and with habits of life which they are compelled to abandon. The parent, for the sake of a few years of ostentation, invests a large portion of his estate in a splendid dwelling, with the certainty that his death will be the signal for the expulsion of his children from it. Nothing can be more inconsiderate, if it is done without reflection, or more unfeeling. if it is done with a full view of the inevitable consequences. Look for the splendid mansions of thirty years ago, and see what has become of them. Scarcely one remains in the family by which it was constructed. They are boarding-houses, places of public exhibition; or the workshops of fashion."

Foreign.

We find the following items in the late foreign news:

The aspect of the Turkish difficulties is more threatening than ever. The Turks are roused. A dispatch from the fanatics even called on the Sultan to declare war or abdicate the throne. In the meantime the great powers are endeavoring to induce the Sultan to accept the original Vienna note, but Austria shows symptoms of backing out from the alliance with France and England, to side with Russia.

This news has seriously depressed the money market.

At Constantinople incendary placards continue to be pasted upon the walls, and there is a bitter feeling against England and caricatures of that goveanment are freely circulated.

The general feeling at Constantinople was that the Sultan would make no further concessions to Russia or the powers, and it was also rumored that the disputes between the English and French Minister had been revived. The French Minister insisted that the fleets should come up to Constantinople and Lord Radcliffe objecting.

To Subordinate Divisions.

NEW RITUAL.

The new Ritual of our Order has been received at this office.

All Divisions wishing it, must order immediately and enclose Two Dollars to the undersigned, when it will be sent free of expense.

C. WOODWARD, G. S.

Indianapolis, Oct. 5, 1853.

☞ The Fifth Annual Session of the Grand Union of the Daughters of Temperance of the State of Indiana will commence in the Hall of the Temple of Honor, in the city of Indianapolis, on Wednesday, October 26, 1853, at 3 o'clock P. M.

R. HINDS, G. P. S.

E. Richmond, G. S. S.

Notice.

The Grand Section of C. of T., of Indiana, will hold its Sixth Annual Session, in Temperance Hall, Indianapolis, commencing on Monday, October 24th, at 1½ o'clock, P. M. As there is much business of importance to transact, representatives will please be punctual in attending.

Sections will please forward their quarterly returns to the G. S. before the 20th of October, or they may loose their charters. Henry Ohr, G. S. of C. of T.

Indianapolis, August 17th, 1853.

Notice.

The Eighth Annual Session of the Grand Division of the Sons of Temperance of the State of Indiana, will commence in Temperance Hall in the City of Indianapolis, on Tuesday, October 25, 1853, at 6 o'clock P. M. P. S. Sage, G. W. P.

C. Woodward, G. S.

August 1, 1853.

$25 Premium.

The undersigned Committee on the state of the Order of the Grand Section of Cadets of Temperance of Indiana, offer the above premium for the most acceptable Initiatory ceremony for Cadets of Temperance. Competitors for the same to be members of some Temperance organization.

All manuscripts to be forwarded to Henry Ohr, G. S., on or before the 20th day of October next.

Theophilus Robinson,
H. C. Newcomb, } Com.
Henry Ohr,

Indianapolis, Aug. 6th, 1853.

TEMPLES OF HONOR.

The undersigned having received the Revised Constitutions of the Temple of Honor, is now prepared to furnish Temples with the Constitution and Bylaws, at the following rates, where not many alterations are made from the form kept standing:

100 copies,	$12 00	300 copies	$20 00
200 "	16 00	400 "	24 00

Subordinate, Degree, and Social Degree Constitutions, (in one book) are furnished at the above rates.

A copy of the form kept standing, will be sent to any Temple, by making application for the same.

Temples wishing Constitutions at the above rates, must send in their orders soon, as the form cannot be kept standing long.

JOHN H. OHR, G. W. R.

Indianapolis, Oct. 4th, 1853.

CONSTITUTION AND BY-LAWS,

WE are still prepared to print Constitution and By-Laws, where the alterations are few from the copy recommended by the Grand Division, at the following rates:

100 copies, (or less)	$5 00
200 "	8 00
300 "	10 00

We will pay the postage on all ordered from us.

☞ All orders accompanied by the cash, will be promptly attended to.

Address, JOHN H. OHR,
Indianapolis, Indiana.

CHARTERS.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR A DIVISION S. OF T.

(Date.)

The undersigned inhabitants of ——, believing the Order of the Sons of Temperance to be well calculated to extend the blessings of total abstinence, and promote the general welfare of mankind, respectfully petition the Grand Division of the —— of ——, to grant them a Charter to open a new Division, to be called the —— Division, No. —, Sons of Temperance, of the —— of ——, to be located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves, individually and collectively, to be governed by the rules and usages of said Grand Division, and also, by those of the National Division.

Enclosed is the Charter Fee, $5 00. Books, $2 00.

This must be signed by at least eight persons of good character and standing in community, and sent to C. WOODWARD, G. S., Indianapolis, Ind., free of postage.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR A TEMPLE.

(Date.)

The undersigned, believing the Temple of Honor to be well calculated to cement more firmly our fraternal relations, and add to the general prosperity of the cause of Temperance, respectfully petition the Grand Temple of the —— of ——, to grant them a Charter to open a new Temple, to be called the —— Temple of Honor, No. —, of the —— of ——, to be located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves individually and collectively, to be governed by the rules and usages of the Grand Temple, and also by those of the Order at large.

Enclosed is the Charter Fee, $20 00.

To be directed to the G. W. R., free of postage.

This must be signed by at least twenty persons of good standing, and if not known to the G. W. T. or G. W. R., must send satisfactory references.

J. H. OHR, G. W. R.

Indianapolis, Ind.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR CADETS OF TEMPERANCE.

The undersigned, boys of ——, believing the Order of Cadets of Temperance to be well calculated to extend the blessings of total abstinence, and promote the general welfare of mankind, respectfully petition the Grand Section of the State of Indiana, to grant them a charter to open a new Section, to be called the —— Section, No. ——, Cadets of Temperance, of the State of Indiana, to be located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves, individually and collectively to be governed by the rules and usages of said Grand Section, and also those of the acting Head of the Order.

Enclosed is the fee for Charter, R. B.'s and officers' cards, $5 00.

It must also be stated whether the applicants are members of the Order or not; if they are, of what Section. The application to be directed to the Grand Secretary, free of postage.

It must also be certified by a W. P. or P. W. P, that the W. Patron elect is a Son of Temperance in good standing.

Address (post paid) HENRY OHR, G. S., C. o T., Indianapolis, Indiana.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR DAUGHTERS OF TEMPERANCE.

(Date.)

The undersigned, inhabitants of ——, believing the Order of the Daughters of Temperance to be well calculated to extend the blessings of Total Abstinence, and promote the general welfare of mankind, respectfully petition the Grand Union to grant them a charter to open a new Union to be called the —— Union, No. —, D. of T., of the State of Indiana, located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves, individually and collectively, to be governed by the rules and usages of said Grand Union.

Enclosed is the Charter Fee, $5 00.

The above must be signed by at least eleven females, of proper age and good standing in community.

Address (post paid,) Mrs. ELIZA RICHMOND, G. S. S., Indianapolis, Indiana.

New Watch and Jewelry Store.

No 1, Bates House, Washington Street,

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

WE have now open the largest and best assortment of fine Watches and rich Jewelry ever offered in this city, to which we invite the examination of the public.

Our stock is all new—selected with great care, and comprises Watches, Diamond Work, Chains, Pins, Rings, Pencils, Lockets, of all kinds; Silver Ware, Clocks, Perfumery, Brushes, Soaps, Plated Ware, Castors, Fruit Baskets, &c., which we will sell for CASH at New York prices. Mr. E. W. NEFF, of this city, has taken charge of the Watch repairing department, and will spare no pains to give satisfaction to our customers.

july 6-tf E. J. BALDWIN & CO.

D. CRAIGHEAD. R. BROWNING.

CRAIGHEAD & BROWNING,

Dealers in all kinds of

Drugs, Medicines, Surgical Instruments, Paints, Oils, Chemicals, Varnishes, Dye Stuffs, Glassware Window Glass, Brushes, Cosmetics, Spices, Cigars, Tobacco, Perfumery, &c.,

WASHINGTON STREET,

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

ALL are respectfully invited to call and examine our stock and prices, as we feel confident we can render satisfaction both as to prices and quality of articles. Great care is taken in the selection of articles, in reference to their purity, as we endeavor at all times to keep such articles as are strictly pure and genuine. Every article will be waranted as represented. Orders from Physicians and others promptly attended to. Particular attention given to filling Prescriptions and compounding Medicines, which, in all cases, shall receive the personal attention of one of the firm. june 30

HANNAMAN & DUZAN,

DEALERS IN

DRUGS AND MEDICINES,

Surgical Instruments, Paints, Oils, Varnishes, Dye Woods, Medical and Window Glass, Brushes, Perfumery, Soaps, &c.

Washington, 3 doors west of Pennsylvania St.,

june 30 1y INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

W. W. ROBERTS,

Druggist and Apothecary.

Wholesale and Retail Dealer in

DRUGS, MEDICINES, PAINTS, OILS, AND DYE STUFFS, BRUSHES, FANCY GOODS, AMERICAN AND FRENCH WINDOW GLASS, &c.

WASHINGTON ST., INDIANAPOLIS.

Physicians, Country Merchants, and the people generally, are invited to examine his stock, which will be sold at the lowest cash price.

☞ QUALITY WARRANTED TO SUIT. ☜

june 22 4m

COMMERCIAL COLLEGE,

(Late Commercial Institute,)

Of Indianapolis,

Established March 31, 1851.

INCORPORATED, 1853.

W. McK. SCOTT, A. M., Founder and President.

JAMES C. HAYDEN, (Late Professor in Bacon's Mercantile College, Cincinnati,)

PROF. OF BOOK-KEEPING AND PENMANSHIP.

THE Session will commence at College Hall as follows:

1st Session on the first Monday of September.
2d Session on the 1st Monday of November.
3d Session on the 1st Monday of January.
4th Session on the 1st Monday of March.
5th Session on the 1st Monday of May.

Having secured, permanently, the services of the distinguished Professor above named, and leased for a term of yeers the commodious and beautiful Hall formerly known as CONCERT HALL, but now named COLLEGE HALL, which is to be fitted up in a style of great elegance, taste, and convenience, the President would say, that this College now offers advantages superior to all others, for imparting a sound, thorough, and accomplished business education

COURSE OF STUDIES.

The Course of Studies, as enlarged, will be as follows, viz:

1. Book-Keeping, by Single and Double Entry, in all its various branches, and its application to all kinds of business.
2. The Laws, Customs, and Usages of Trade and Commerce.
3. Mercantile Arithmetic, upon the short and easy system of cancelation, (taught in no other College.)
4. Commercial Law, in a series of Lectures, thorough and systematic.
5. Business Penmanship.
6. Commercial Correspondence.
7. Lectures upon Banking, Political Economy, and other subjects valusble to the business man.

EXPENSES.

Cards of Admission, invariably in advance, or secured, $25; Diplomas $3; Stationery $5; Boarding $2 50 per week; incidentals, at option of student, $15. Making entire expenses about $75.

On application, a Catalogne will be furnished, giving full particulars.

All letters will receive prompt attention on being directed, post-paid, to

june 8 W. McK. SCOTT, President.

Sears' American Pictorial Book Establishment.

181 William St., near Spruce St., NEW YORK.

BOOK AGENTS WANTED.

THE Subscriber publishes a large number of most valuable books, very popular, and of such a moral and religious influence, that while good men may safely engage in their circulation, they will confer a public benefit, and receive a fair compensation for their labor.

☞ To young men of enterprise and tact, this business offers an opportunity for profitable employment seldom to be met with. There is not a town in the Union where a right honest and well-disposed person can fail of selling from 50 to 200 volumes, according to the population.

The titles of the principal works are as follows:

THE PICTORIAL FAMILY BIBLE. Illustrated by about One Thousand Engravings! 1450 pages large quarto. Price $6.

NEW AND COMPLETE HISTORY OF THE BIBLE. 700 pages octavo. Price $2 50.

NEW PICTORIAL HISTORY OF CHINA AND INDIA. Illustrated with two hundred Engravings. 700 pages large octavo. Price $2 50.

THRILLING INCIDENTS of THE WARS OF THE UNITED STATES. With three hundred Engravings. 600 pages octavo. Price $2 50.

NEW PICTORIAL DESCRIPTION OF THE UNITED STATES for 1853. Illustrated with two hundred Engravings. 600 pages octavo. Price $2 50.

TREASURY OF KNOWLEDGE, and CYCLOPEDIA OF SCIENCE and ART. With numerous Engravings. 512 pp. 8vo. Price $2 50.

SCENES AND SKETCHES OF CONTINENTAL EUROPE Nvmerous Engravings. 550 pp. 8vo. Price $2 50.

PICTORIAL DESCRIPTION OF GREAT BRITAIN AND IRELAND. With several hundred handsome Engravings. 550 pages octavo Price $2 50.

PICTORIAL FAMILY ANNUAL. With over two hundred Engravings. 360pp. 8vo. Price $2

INFORMATION FOR THE PEOPLE.—This work comprises the finest series of Embellishments ever offered to the American public. 600 pages octavo. Price $2 50.

NEW PICTORIAL FAMILY INSTRUCTOR, or Digest of General Knowledge. Designed for Families, Schools, and Libraries. 600 pages octavo. Price $2 50.

PICTORIAL HISTORY OF THE AMERICAN REVOLUTION. A Book for every family in the Union! Several hundred Engravings. Price $2.

PICTORIAL SUNDAY BOOK. Designed for the use of Families, Bible-Classes and Sunday-School Teachers. 600 pp. 8vo. Price $2 50.

BIBLE BIOGRAPHY, or the Lives and Characters of the principal personages recorded in the sacred writings. With numerous Illustrations 500 pages octavo. Price $2 50.

WONDERS OF THE WORLD—Second Series—in two Parts. With 400 Illustrations. 540 pp. 8vo. Price $2 50.

THE HISTORY OF PALESTINE, from the Patriarchal age to the present time. By John Kitto, editor of the London Pictorial Bible. Price $4

VIEW OF NEW YORK. This Engraving is printed on a mammoth sheet, 47 by 19 inches, and ought to be very saleable. Price 50 cents.

DICK'S COMPLETE WORKS. Eleven vols. in two. 1500 pp. 8 vo. Price $4 50.

THE CHRISTIAN LITURGY. Bound in Embossed Morrocco. Price $1 50.

A NEW AND DEEPLY INTERESTING VOLUME

THE REMARKABLE ADVENTURES OF

CELEBRATED PERSONS,

Embracing the Romantic Incidents in in the Lives of Sovereigns, Statesmen, Generals, Princes, Warriors, Travellers, Adventurers, Voyagers, &c.,

Eminent in the History of Europe and America.

Including Sketches of over Fifty Celebrated Heroic Characters. Beautifully illustrated with numerous Engravings. One vol. 400 pages, royal 12mo. cloth gilt. Price $1 25.

☞ We solicit orders faom the Trade, Teachers, and School Committees for books to whom we furnish our own publications, and those of all the publishers in the country, on the most liberal terms.

☞ COUNTRY MERCHANTS and POSTMASTERS can procure subscribers to, and sell SEARS' PICTORIAL WORKS," make a handsome profit, and sustain no loss.

☞ Persons wishing to engage in the sale of our Works, will receive promptly by mail a circular containing full descriptions, with the terms on which they will be furnished, by addressing the publisher, post-paid, ROBERT SEARS, Publisher, oct 11 3w No. 181, Willtam St., New York.

TEMPERANCE INN,

Bloomington, Indiana.

J. & S. M. ORCHARD, PROPRIETORS.

TRAVELLERS will find it to their advantage to call and try the accommodation of the TEMPERANCE INN. Stage office for all the different routes, in connection with this House. may25 6m

REAL ESTATE AND GENERAL AGENCY OFFICE,

INDIANAPOLIS, INDIANA.

UNDER THE CONTROL OF W. M'K. SCOTT,

Attorney & Counsellor at Law, and Notary Public.

The attention of the Agency will be devoted,

First—To the collection of debts and the payment of Taxes for non-residents in any county in the State. Also, the redemption of Lands sold for Taxes, sale, purchase or lease of Lands, purchase of adverse claims, examination and perfection of Title, &c., &c.

Second—To the prosecution of claims against the General Government, procuring Land Warrants, Patent Rights, and Pensions under the various Pension Laws, &c.

Third—All other Miscellaneous agencies as may be intrusted to the care of this office.

Fourth—The taking of Depositions and Attestation of all instruments requiring a seal

In all cases requiring an outlay of money for the benefit of individuals, the requisite funds must be transmitted in advance.

Prompt attention to all letters on business that are pre-paid. Address W. M'K. SCOTT,

Real Estate and General Agent,

jan 5-1y Indianapolis, Ind.

ADAMS & CO'S EXPRESS.

WE are now running a daily line East and West, accompanied by special messengers, and with the speed of the mails, running our own cars with the passenger trains.

Packages will be received at the cars up to the time of starting, and at our office until 1 o'clock each day.

We are prepared to transport packages, bank notes and specie, to and from any of the eastern cities, also, Louisville, Frankfort, and Lexington, Ky., St. Louis, Mo., or any points on the Ohio and Mississippi rivers; and to and from Terre Haute, and all intermediate points, and to forward freight from Terre Haute up and down the Wabash.

In addition to these, we have the most complete arrangements for transporting packages to and from California and Europe.

Exchange on England, Ireland, and Scotland, for sale, payable at any bank in the kingdom.

Foreign passage tickets; by Grinnell, Minturn & Co.'s line to Liverpool and London, constantly on hand, and for sale at the lowest rates.

Notes, drafts, and bills collected in any of the Eastern or Western cities

Orders for goods to be returned by Express, sent free. Our rates of charges have been greatly reduced, and the public will find this a safe and expeditious method of transportation.

Indianapolis, June 30, 1852. ADAMS & CO.

Office in Indianapolis in Journal Building, west side Pennsylvania Street.

Office open during business hours.

june30 1y C. WOODWARD, Agent.

"God never made his works for man to mend."
DR. FRANKLIN.

KIER'S ROCK OIL.

A NEW AND MOST IMPORTANT REMEDY FOR DISEASE.

DISCOVERED IN 1849.

IS drawn from a deep well near Pittsburgh—has been used with remarkable success in Ohio and Pennsylvania, and more Eastern States—and is now working its way West. An opportunity is now offered to the Afflicted for testing it. Where known and tried, it at once makes firm friends, and cures which are eloquent in its praise. Certificates of its power to heal are at hand—but we know well, reader, that such evidence, to have weight with you, now-a-days, must be in your own neighborhood.—You have only to try the Oil to be satisfied—it will SPEAK FOR ITSELF.

We have no war with the legion of Nostrums and Specifics of the day—we know but little about them—some say they are good for nothing. However that may be, the

Petroleum

will not be suppressed and kept back by reason of the above nostrums—duty and inclination both forbid it.

Those who are afflicted, are respectfully invited to get a Circular and look over the Directions for

Ague, Rheumatism, Piles, Diarrhœa, Flux, Tooth Ache, Burns, Worms, Scrofula, Coughs, Bronchitis, Croup, Old Sores, Cholera Morbus, Contractions of the Limbs and Joints, Sore Eyes, Blindness, Costiveness, Dyspepsia, and other Diseases.

By that time you may say, "it cures too much." But recollect it is not a HUMAN INVENTION, but compounded by Nature's master hand—and Nature does not do her work by halves.

The Oil is used both internally and externally.

As AGUE, SORE EYES, PILES, RHEUMATISM, and SCROFULA are so common in many parts of the West, we are constrained to say, that while this Oil will cure and relieve other diseases, it has been and is constantly used with most complete success in these cases.

☞ Price 50 cents per Bottle (half pint.)

Beware of all Rock Oil preparations, as some persons are offering a spurious article. Look for S. M. KIER'S name written on the label of the bottle.

For sale by the Druggists throughout Indiana, and by TOMLINSON BROTHERS, J. P. POPE & Co., S. ROSENGARTEN, WM. TILLEY, and at wholesale by W. W. ROBERTS, Indianapolis, Indiana.

R. M. LYON, Fort Wayne,

may25 10w Proprietor in the Western States.

SOMETHING NEW.

LATHROP & STEVENS, Wholesale and Retail Dealers in BOOTS AND SHOES, at the West room in the Bates House, Washington Street, Indianapolis.

We are now opening a new and splendid stock of Boots and Shoes of every variety and style, which we are receiving direct from the manufacturers.—We design to keep constantly on hand a good assortment of the best quality of goods manufactured, which we can warrant to give satisfaction to all who may give them a trial. We will sell by the case, dozen, or single pair, at low prices for cash.—Our stock consists in part of Gents' fine Cloth, silk warp, glove kid, buck, patent calf, and enameled Gaiters and Ties of every variety and style; Ladies' fine silk warp Gaiters, Buskins, Ties, Slippers and Boots; Misses' ditto; Men's calf, goat, kip, and thick Boots and Brogans; Boys' and Youths' ditto; assorted Ladies, kid, goat and calf Boots and Buskins; Misses' ditto. Also every variety of Children's Shoes. Come and see for yourselves.

LATHROP & STEVENS,

may 25 4w Indianapolis, Indiana.

A CHANCE TO MAKE MONEY.

Profitable and honorable Employment!

THE Subscriber is desirous of having an agent in each county and town of the Union. A capital of from $5 to $10 only will be required, and anything like an efficient, energetic man can make from three to five dollars per day; indeed some of the Agents now employed are realizing twice that sum. Every information will be given by addressing,

(postage paid) WM. A. KINSLER,

june 15 3w Box 601, Philadelphia P. O.

Railroad City Book Store.

COX & MATHES,

South side of Washington, between Illinois and Meridian streets,

INDIANAPOLIS, INDIANA.

AT wholesale and retail, Standard and Miscellaneous Works, Law, and Medical Books, School Books, Plain and Fancy Stationery, Blank Books, Wall Papers, &c., &c. mar 2

The American Life and Health Insurance Company.

Office—No. 7, South Third St., Philadelphia.

Officers.

LEONARD JEWELL, President.
JAMES PEACOCK, Treasurer.
JOHN C. SIMS, Sec'y and Actuary.
THOS. S. SMITH, Solicitor

JOHN F. BIRD, FRED. A. FICKARDT, } Medical Examiners.

CHARLES WOODWARD, Indianapolis, Ind., General Agent for the State of Indiana.

THIS Company issues policies at Total Abstinence Rates, Joint stock Rates, and at Mutual Rates, which for $1000 on the life of a person 30 years of age, are as follows:

Age.	Total Abstinence.	Joint Stock.	Mutual
30	$15.40	$19.60	$23.60

A further table of Rates will be furnished at the Office.

The condition in Total Abstinence rates (believed to be the lowest in the Union,) is entire forfeiture upon the departure of the Insured from Total Abstinence in its strictest sense.

Policies at Joint Stock and Mutual rates, contain no condition except as usual in Life Insurance.

HEALTH INSURANCE DEPARTMENT.

All Moneys received from the Insured, for Annual Premiums, after deducting expenses, will be divided among the Sick

The Public have for some time been familiar with the subject of Life and Health Insurance, but it is obvious that too little thoughts has been given to the latter. LIFE Insurance benefits our successors, while HEALTH Insurance directly benefits ourselves. It makes provision for a time of sickness, when the products of a man's industry are cut off, and want unites with Disease to aggravate his distress. It is at this gloomy period, when he is prostrated and helpless, and when despondency would otherwise overwhelm him, that the holder of a Health Insurance Policy will realize its benefits.

RATES, under 50 years of age,

$2,00	per year,	for	$2,00	per week.
3,00	"	"	3,00	"
4,00	"	"	4,00	"
5,00	"	"	5,00	"
6,00	"	"	6,00	"

Over fifty and under sixty.

$2,50	per year,	for	$2,50	per week.
3,75	"	"	3,00	"
5,00	"	"	4,00	"
6,25	"	"	5,00	"
7,50	"	"	6,00	"

When the Fund shall amount to Three Dollars and upwards for every person insured and sufficient to warrant an additional distribution, the weekly allowances will be increased in accordance with the Rules of the Policy.

All the members of a Temple or Division insured at greatly reduced rates.

Applications for Agencies in any of the cities or towns in the State, should be made to the undersigned, post paid, or in person.

As Agent for the above Company, I am prepared to receive applications for Policies at any of the above rates.

CHARLES WOODWARD, Agent,

At ADAMS & CO.'S Express Office.

J. L. MOTHERSHEAD, Medical Examiner.

june 30 '52-1y

Ohio Life Insurance Company,

Capital $100,000.

JOINT STOCK AND MUTUAL,

CINCINNATI.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS.

Wm. Burnet, Jno. N. Ridgway, Chas. Goodman, S. Robert, E. S. Haines, Jno. M. Blair, J. W. Donohue, Eden B. Reeder, Wm. Person.

WM. BURNET, President.

S. W. REEDER, Sec'y J. W. DONOHUE, Vice Pres't

Office in Reeder's Building, Third street, between Almy's and City Bank.

This Company insures Lives at the lowest rates consistent with safety, either upon the Joint Stock or Mutual plan.

In the Joint Stock Department, premium payable quarterly, semi-annually or annually. On the Mutual plan, one-half the premium paid in Cash, the balance by a note bearing six per cent. interest—the interest only payable annually. Persons insuring on the mutual plan, participate in the profits of the Company in that department.

The undersigned having been appointed agent for the above Company, is prepared to fill applications for Life Insurance, on favorable terms.

Any information on the subject and pamphlets explaining the nature and utility of Life Insurance, furnished without charge, at the office of the Agent.

C. WOODWARD, Agent.

Office at Adam's & Co.'s Express Office, Journal Building, Pennsylvania street, Indianapolis, Ind.

june 30, '52-1y.

THE LATEST WONDER of the 19th CENTURY.

DR. G. W. BENNETT'S

Celebrated Eye-Balm.

A SPECIFIC FOR CHRONIC, SORE, INFLAMED, AND WEAK EYES.

Prepared only by Dr. George W. Bennett, and for sale by Merchants and Druggists generally.

THIS Balm is an excellent and certain cure for sore and inflamed Eyes, in all cases of Psoroic, Scrofulous, and Purulent Opthalmia, and what is commonly termed wild hairs in the eye-lids. It is a specific in Infantile, Purulent, and Scrofuleus Inflamed, and Sore Eyes, and all in the various diseases of the Eyes, that prevail among the human family, in every climate. It will be found a sovereign remedy if properly applied.

W. W. ROBERTS, Indianapolis, Ind. General Agent for State of Indiana, to whom all orders must be addressed

Price---Twenty-five Cents.

I warrant the above Balm to cure if the directions are strictly observed, or return the money.

june 22 4m G. W. BENNETT.

1,000 BOOK AGENTS WANTED,

TO SELL PICTORIAL AND USEFUL WORKS FOR THE YEAR 1854.

$1,000 Dollars a Year.

WANTED in every County of the United States, active and enterprising men, to engage in the sale of some of the best Books published in the country. To men of good address, possessing a small capital of from $25 to $100, such inducements will be offered as to enable them to make from $3 to $5 a day profit.

☞ The Books published by us are all useful in their character, extremely popular, and command large sales wherever they are offered.

For further particular, address, (postage paid.)

ROBERT SEARS, Publisher,

oct 5 1m 181 William Street, New York.

JAMES HALL,

MERCHANT TAILOR,

No. 2. Temperance, Hall, Indianapolis,

Manufactu'ng & Clothing Emporium,

Wholesale and Retail Dealer in Ready Made Clothing, Cloths, Cassimers, Vestings, Trimmings, Trunks, Sachels, Canes, Umbrellas, Hats, Caps, a every description of Gentlemen's Furnishing.

Also:

General Agency for the sale of GRAND AND SUBORDINATE REGALIA, EMBLEMS, COSTUMES, &c., FOR THE ORDERS OF MASONS, ODD FELLOWS, TEMPLE OF HONOR, SON, DAUGHTERS, AND CADETS OF TEMPERANCE. oct27 1y

THE ILLUSTRATED MAGAZINE OF ART.

THE five numbers of this Magazine which are published, place it at the head of publications of this kind No expense will be spared to make it in every respect worthy of the name, the "Illustrated Magazine of Art. The Engavings which are preparing for the future numbers are in the hands of first-class American and European Artists.

A Series of most interesting Tales will appear in it. "The School of Life," written and Illustrated by ANNA MARY, daughter of William and Mary Howitt, will shortly appear; also, "The Dead Bridal," an historical romance, illustrative of the most interesting period in the history of the Venetian Republic, by JONATHAN FREKE SLINGSBY, of the Dublin University Magazine; contributions, too, from WILLIAM and MARY HOWITT, PERCY B. ST. JOHN, and other writers of distinction in America and Europe

The following is a brief outline of the plan of the Magazine:

I. The Historical Department will abound with picturesque representations of the most remarkable events which have occurred in this and other countries; accompanied with interesting anecdotes and details from the pen of the most eminent writers of the day. This department will contain several splendid engravings, designed by the first artists of the world, and engraved in the highest style of modern art.

II. The Men and Women of the Age. This department will consist of beautifully executed portraits of the leading characters of the age, especially of those who figure on the stage of humanity as the world's benefactors. Each portrait will be accompanied by an interesting biographical sketch

III. The Wonders of Natural History, Botany, and other sciences, will be developed in choice Engravings of Beasts, Birds, Fishes, Insects, Forest Trees, Flowers, Geological and Fossil Specimens, &c., with accompanying descriptions.

IV. The Triumphs of Architectural Art will be displayed in exquisitely finished representations of Cathedrals, Churches, Palaces, and other models of ancient and modern Architectural Art.

V. The Works of the Great Masters, selected from the principal Galleries of Art in the World. In general, the portrait of the Master will be given, accompanied with a highly finished engraved copy of his chef d'œuvre.

VI. The Scientific Portions will be rendered highly interesting by the familiar explanations, and the numerous diagrams which will accompany each subject.

VII. Manufactures. The principal manufacturing processes in use will be fully explained by minute details, and an abundance of beautiful engravings.

VIII. Machinery and Inventions will have due attention paid to them, and be described by numerous appropriate engravings.

IX. The Literary Department, independently of the various articles accompanying the illustrations, will comprise original and interesting narratives, contributed by the most popular writers of the day, with numerous illustrations.

In every respect, the "Illustrated Magazine of Art," will be decidedly

SUPERIOR TO ANY MAGAZINE OF THE DAY.

Each Monthly part will contain at least Thirty superb Engravings, four of which will be printed separately, on supefine Plate Paper.

The greatest care will be manifested in every department of production. The Paper will be of the first manufacture, and the Ink supplied from the celebrated Printing Ink Establishment of Messrs. Lawson & Co., of Paris. Six of the monthly portions, when completed, will form a volume which, for interest, originality, value and beauty, will defy competition. It will not only be an interesting family book, but a rich ornament for the drawing-room table, and a pleasant companion in the study.

The parts will appear on the First of every Month at Twenty-five Cents each.

ALEXANDER MONTGOMERY,

may 25 17 Spruce Street, New-York.

SPLENDIDLY ILLUSTRATED WORKS.

THE ALPS, SWITZERLAND, SAVOY AND LOMBARDY.

With the Magazine for June will be ready, Part I., price Twenty-five Cents, of a Magnificent Work to be completed in Twelve Monthly Parts, entitled

THE ALPS, SWITZERLAND, SAVOY AND LOMBARDY, with an account of the most recent Ascents to Mont Blanc, &c. By the Rev. Charles Williams. This work, when completed, will form a large thick Volume, in Imperial Octavo, containing upwards of Three Hundred beautiful Engravings, descriptive of the peculiar Scenery of those most interesting portions of Europe, with the Occupations of the Inhabitants, &c., &c.

Cassell's Natural History.

On the First of July will commence

CASSELL'S NATURAL HISTORY, which for variety, beauty and completeness, will claim to be considered as a first-class work, upon this most interesting subject. The First volume will be devoted to the Feathered Tribe of the Creation and will contain upwards of Three Hundred Engravings, in the first style of Art. The volume will be completed in Twelve Monthly Parts, Imperial Octavo. Price 25 cents each.

History of England.

On the First of July will appear Part I., price 25 cts. of THE ILLUSTRATED HISTORY OF ENGLAND, from the earliest period on record to the present time. Edited by ROBERT FERGUSON, LL. D.

This History, which is intended to form a great National Work, will extend to Four Volumes, Imperial Octavo; each Volume to be completed in Twelve Monthly Parts, price 25 cents each. The Work will comprehend the Political, Civil, and Domestic History of the Nation, and its Progress in Civilization, Literature, Art, &c. It will be profusely Illustrated with Engravings from Designs by GILBERT, PHILLIPPOTEAUX, WILLIAMS, and others. Representations of the most remarkable Events will be worked separately upon Plate Paper. The Portraits will form a complete Gallery, not only of the Monarchs, but of those individuals whose names are prominent in England's History. Also, Antiquities, including Autographs, Buildings, Costume, Furniture, Arms, Coins, Monuments, Manufactures &c., of each Epoch.

History of Hungary.

July First will be published, in one Handsome Volume, Imperial Octavo, price, One Dollar and Twenty-five Cents, in Cloth Boards,

THE ILLUSTRATED HISTORY OF HUNGARY, AND THE MAGYARS, from the Earliest Period to the clos of the late War. By EDWARD LAWRENCE GODKIN. The Volume will be Illustrated with One Hundred highly finished Engravings, including representations of the principal Battles; Portraits of the early Kings, and of the Statesmen and Generals who figured in the War of Independence; Costumes of the Peasantry, &c.; Views of the chief Towns and Fortresses, &c.; with an accurate Description of the Manners and Customs of the People, their Literature, Commerce, Arts, &c.

ALEXANDER MONTGOMERY,

may25 Publisher, 17 Spruce Street, New-York.

MANSION HOUSE,

Cambridge City, Indiana.

J. CUNNINGHAM, Proprietor.

TRAVELLERS

Will find it to their advantage to call and try the accommodation of the MANSION HOUSE.

STAGE OFFICE also in connection with this House.

may 4 6m

INDIANA STATE LIBRARY

TEMPERANCE CHART.

A Weekly Journal:---Devoted to Temperance, Morality, Education, Literature, Useful Arts, Science, General Intelligence, &c.

J. W. GORDON, M. D., EDITOR.] ORGAN OF THE GRAND DIVISION OF INDIANA. [JOHN H. OHR, PRINTER.

VOL. III. INDIANAPOLIS, IND., WEDNESDAY, OCT. 26, 1853. NO. 18.

THE TEMPERANCE CHART,
IS PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY, BY THE GRAND DIVISION, S. of T. OF INDIANA.

Edited by J. W. Gordon, M. D.
To whom all Communications and Subscriptions must be addressed, post-paid.
OFFICE—in second story of Temperance Hall Building, Washington St., Indianapolis.

TERMS:
Single copy, one year,..... 75 cts.
☞ In advance in all cases,

TERMS OF ADVERTISING.—Circulation 4000 copies.

One Squre, (12 lines,) for one week,	$0 50
" " for each subsequent insertion,	25
" " for 3 months,	3 00
" " for 6 months,	5 00
" " for 1 year without alteration,	8 00
" " for 1 year, with changes,	1002

A reduction made on larger advertisements.
Cuts double the above rates.
Advertisements must be handed in by Saturday, of each week, to insure insertion.
Applications for advertising, or for any kid of Printing for the Order, must be made to
J. H. OHR, Indinnapolis.

POETRY.

From the American Union.

Home.

I languish for my home, my home;
Kind mother, call me back,
My sicken'd heart will leap to see
My childhood's sunny track.
My wearied feet have strayed afar,
That loved with thee to roam;
The earth is but a wilderness—
Then, mother, call me home.

Alone I watch the silver stars
Upon the summer sky,
And fancy, in their holy light,
I see thy gentle eye;
And to my bosom's inmost depths,
Some secret whisperings come,
To tell me of the loving hearts
That glad mine early home.

Mother, loved mother, like the dove
That sought the holy ark,
I bring to that lone resting place,
A time-worn, weary bark.
It tempts no more the waves of life,
A wreck upon its foam;
Shatter'd and frail, it turns to thee—
Then, mother, call me home.

Thick thronging memories crowd my heart
And every gleam that's cast
Upon it now, is but the light
I borrow from the past.
In vain—in vain I seek for peace
Beneath God's bright blue dome,
Its angel form is but with thee—
Then, mother, call me home.

MISCELLANEOUS.

FAITH AND HOPE---A PARABLE.

BY WOODSWORTH.

One morning, as the sun rose, two spirits went forth upon the earth.

And they were sisters; but Faith was of mature age, while Hope was yet a child.

They were both beautiful. Some loved to gaze upon the countenance of Faith, for her eye was serene, and her beauty had changed not; but Hope was the delight of every eye.

And the child sported in the freshness of the morning, and as she hovered over the gardens and dewy lawns, her wings glittered in the sunbeams like a rainbow.

"Come, my sister," she cried, "and do chase with me the butterfly from flower to flower."

But her sister was gazing at the lark, as it arose from its low nest and warbled among the clouds.

And when it was noon the child said again: "Come, my sister, aud pluck with me the flowers of the garden, for they are beautiful and their fragrance is sweet."

But Faith replied, "Nay, my sister, let the flowers be there, for thou art young and delightest thyself with their beauty. I will meditate in the shade until the heat of the day be past. Thou wilt find me by the fountain in the forest. When thou art weary, come to me and repose on my bosom."

And she smiled and departed.

After a time Hope sought her sister. The tear was in her eye, and her countenance was mournful.

Then Faith said, "My sister, wherefore dost thou weep, and why is thy countenance sad?"

And the child answered, "Because a cloud is in the sky, and sunshine is overcast—see, the rain begins to fall."

"It is but a shower," Faith replied, "and when it is over, the fields will be greener than before."

Now, the place where they stood was sheltered from the rain, as it had been from the noontide heat. And Faith comforted the child, and showed her how the waters flowed with a fuller and clearer stream as the showers fell.

And presently the sun broke out again, and the woods resounded with song.

Then Hope was glad, and went forth to her sports once more.

After a while the sky was again darkened and the young spirit looked up, and behold there was no cloud in the whole circle of the heavens.

Therefore Hope marveled, for it was not yet night.

And she fled to her sister, and cast herself down at her feet, and trembled exceedingly.

Then Faith raised the child, and led her forth from the shade of the trees, and pointed to the sun and said—

"A shadow is passing over the face thereof, but no ray of his glory is extinguished. He still walketh in brightness, and thou shalt again delight thyself in his beams. See, even yet his face is not wholly hidden from us."

But the child dared not look up, for the gloom struck upon her heart.

And when all was bsight again, she feared to wander from her sister, and her sports were less than before.

When the eventide was come, Faith went forth from the forest shades and sought the lawn, where she might watch the setting of the sun.

Then said she to her young sister: "Come and behold how far the glories of the sunset transcend the beauties of morning. See how softly they melt away, and give place to the shadows of night."

But Hope was now weary—her eye was heavy, and her voice languid. She folded her radiant wings, and dropped on her sister's bosom, and fell asleep.

But Faith watched through the night—she was never weary, nor did her eyelids need repose.

She laid the child on a bed of flowers, and kissed her cheek. She also drew her mantle round the head of the young sleeper, that she might sleep in peace.

Then Faith looked upwards, and beheld how the stars came forth. She traced them in their radiant courses, and listened to their harmonies, which mortal ear hath not heard.

And as she listened, their music entranced her soul.

At length, a light appeared in the east, and burst forth from the portals of the heavens. Then the spirit hastened to arouse the young sleeper.

"Awake! oh, my sister, awake!" she cried, "a new day hath dawned, and no cloud shall overshadow it. Awake, for the sun hath risen, which shall set no more."

From the Cleveland Commercial.

The Two Homes.

BY C. E. FULLER.

Among the earliest pictures daugerreotyped upon the tablets of my memory, is a quiet little home, embowered in rosebushes, and adorned with living gems, fresh from Flora's matchless casket; and in the distance, blue and beautiful Erie, rolling its eternal tide of waves upon the sandy shore; and on her swelling bosom, the graceful schooner, whose white sails glistened in the sun, like the snowy plumage of some fabled sea-bird reared in Neptune's coral caves. Such are the remembrances of my early home, where an unbroken band of loved and loving ones dwelt in peace and happiness. But a change "came o'er the spirit of my dream." The Death angel came, and he laid his cold hand on one of our number, and now she is sleeping "the dreamless sleep that knows no waking," in a quiet grave-yard in the Peninsular State. Those bright scenes in life's unclouded morn have vanished, yet they have left a fadeless picture, graven upon my mind; one which the cold cares of life will only serve to brighten.

From the scenes thus impressed upon my youthful memory, permit me to sketch two homes, occupied by two brothers, at a short distance from my father's residence.

The one was a large and commodious brick house, surrounded by fruit and ornamental trees, and beautified by flowers; the barns and fences were in good repair, and the neatness of the fields was a sure index of comfort, if not of affluence.

On the opposite side of the street stood the residence of the other. It was an old house of logs, which looked as though it had borne the storms of thirty winters; the small windows, from which half the glass had been broken, were filled with boards and rags, and an old broken down fence partially surrounded the dilapidated tenement. There was a little orchard near the hovel, which had been struggling for existence for years, against the briars, and half conquering, half vanquished, it presented anything but a pleasant appearance. The fields looked as though some scathing sirocco, with its pestilential breath, had withered every living thing, and the miserable tenement remained as a crumbling monument of desolation and desert loneliness.

I was a child then, and the appearance of those houses, so unlike, produced an impression on my mind which time will never obliterate. Childish curiosity led me to inquire the cause of the different circumstances of these brothers; and I learned that the land occupied by each had been a gift from their father, one of the early settlers of the Western reserve. They had both married at nearly the same time, and commenced, with equally flattering prospects, the journey of life. The one had been sober and industrious,, and success had rewarded his efforts. The other was the poor fallen victim of Intemperance. At the shrine of the demon, strong-drink, he had offered up his good name, his prospects in life, his wife and his children, his home, and every talent that God had ever given him. Manliness was gone; in tattered habiliments, he wandered through the streets with fearful blasphemies upon his gibbering tongue. The fierce stimulant had blotted out the last trace of the image of God from his brow.

Years have passed by since I have seen the wretched wreck of humanity, whom I have endeavored to sketch. I believe he yet lives, if possible more loathsome and degraded than in former years. But his days on earth must be few, for "the way of the transgressor is hard." Ere long he will be swept into the grave, unnoticed and unnumbered, with none to drop a tear to his memory.

O, young man! beware of the poison cup, the envenomed drought that lures but to destroy.

'Twill blast each pleasure, wither every joy
And breathe a mildew on the holiest hopes;
With it is mingled every woe. It rolls
A fiery wave of desolation oe'r
The brightest spots that cheer man's pilgrimage;
Dries up the purest fountains in the soul,
And leaves the heart, bereft of hope and love,
Withered and desolate.

For a thousand years Intemperance has been the vice, in comparison with which all other vices have whitened into virtue. Its pathway has been strown with blighted hopes, ruined homes, and broken hearts, and

"The woes it creates and the horrors of crime,
Have been written with blood on the records of Time."

Yet a star of hope has at length appeared in the Eastern horizon; its first glimmering beams fell on the forest-clad hills and rock-girt shores of Maine. The despairing sons of Progress took fresh courage, and after one desperate struggle, they were free. Then arose to Heaven, one long, loud shout of victory, and the pean notes echoed o'er the granite hills of New England; Ontario's billows bore it on like music o'er the waters, and Erie's crystal waves re-echoed it. Michigan, the darling of the inland seas, with her thousand limpid lakes and murmuring streams heard the exulting shout, and when her cowardly legislators asked her if she would be free, she gave an aye, full twenty thousand strong; an aye so loud and long, that it rolled like the voice of thunder, down the Mississippi valley, and westward to the wild crags of the "Sierra Nevada. The world has heard it now. There's scarcely a hamlet in our happy land, where the name of NEAL DOW is not a household word. And the laurels he has won will be great when the fame of the Cæsars is forgotten. May the glittering banner of Temperance soon wave its glorious folds over every land, and "the noble Law of Maine," be the motto of the world.

HIRAM, O., Sept. 26th, 1853.

THE GARDEN OF THE HEART.—I see it is much easier to pull up many weeds out of a garden, than one corruption out of the heart; and to procure a hundred flowers to adorn a knot, than one grace to beautify the soul. It is more natural to corrupt man to envy, than to imitate the spiritual excellencies of others.

There are no fools so troublesome as those who have some wit.

Ardent Spirits.

When treated of by medical writers, and arranged according to its effects, on the human body, distilled spirit is placed in the same class, and considered under the same relations, with henbane, deadly nightshade, tobacco, hemlock, opium, and various other poisons; and, in other points of view, as exerting an influence on the human system similar to the continued action of the contagion of the plague, typhus fever, and small pox. Discovered by a Mahammedan alchemist, while tortuing the wholesome gifts of a benificent Creator, in search of a universal solvent, by which to extract gold from its hidden recesses, and minutest state of division, distilled spirits continued, for centuries to be employed in their mysterious, and in general, vain inventions; and it was not till more than fifty centuries of the world's history had passed away, that the unhappy ingenuity of a Spanish physician, first suggested its use as a remedy in disease; nor till several centuries afterwards, that the popular taste established it as a remedy to health. How literally it has since, in innumerable instances, in this latter character, realized the Italian epitaph, "I was well; I would be better; and here I am."

Till the reign of William and Mary, ale had been the common beverage of the laboring classes in England. But no sooner was ardent spirits ingrafted in their habits by an act for the encouragement of distillation, than its employment became so excessive as to call for legislative interference; and it was not till 1751, that the measures of the government were successful, in bringing back the consumption of ale to its original quantity; before which, according to Smollet, "such a shameful degree of profligacy prevailed, that the retailers of this poisonous compound (gin) set up painted boards in public, inviting the people to be drunk for the small expense of a penny; assuring them that they might be dead drunk for two-pence, and have straw to lie on till they recovered, for nothing." From this time till the removal of the restrictions on the sale of gin, in 1827, continued again to be the favorite drink of the English workmen; but immediately on the nation being again, the second time, exposed, with all its ale quaffing habits, to the light, diffusive, and a greeable stimulous of distilled spirit it fell;—the thirst for the new liquor spreading with the rapidity of lightning, and its consumption increasing in two years, twelve millions of gallons.

Distilled spirits began to be prepared on the continent of Europe, on a large scale, in the commencement, and was first introduced into this country in the latter end, of the 16th century; and in the comparatively short period which has elapsed since its consumption has extended in the United Kingdom, to about 40,000,000 gallons per annum. The earliest notice of its application to the purposes of ordinary life, which we have seen, in its exhibition, as a supposed preservative from cold and damp to the laborers in the Hungarian mines; and Cambden mentions its as having been adopted in 1581, for the first time, as a cordial, by the English soldiers engaged in assisting the Dutch in Netherlands. And from this little cloud, no bigger than a man's hand, has been evolved the mighty mass, which is now suspended over our country, and pouring its fiery streams into all the currents of public and domestic intercourse.

It was not till the end of the the 13th century, that spirits of wine impregnated with certain herbs, was introduced into use as a remedy in the treatment of disease. The first ardent spirits known in Uurope was made from grapes, and was sold as a medicine both in Italy and Spain. The Genoese afterwards prepared it from grain, and sold it in small bottles, at a very high price, under the name of aqua vitæ or the water of life.—Down to the 16th century, it continued to be kept exclusively by the apothecary, and its use restricted to medicines.

It appears, however, that as early as the reign of Henry VIII., a liquor termed aqua vitaæ, supposed to have been brandy, was known in Ireland; it being decreed by that monarch, that there be but one maker of aqua vitaæ in any borough or town. In 1556, an act of parliament was passed at Drogheda, against distilling at all; it being described in the language of the act, as "a drink nothing profitable to be daily drunken and used."

Fortune and humor govern the world.

Moral Reflections, Sentences, and Maxims.

It is more easy to become acquainted with men in general, than with any man in particular.

We should not judge of a man's merit by his good qualities, but by the use he can make of them.

There is a certain lively gratitude which not only acquits us of the obligations we have received, but by paying what we owe them makes our friends indebted to us.

We should desire few things ardently if we had a perfect knowledge of what we were desiring.

What causes the majority of women to be so little touched by friendship is, that it is insipid when they have once tasted of love.

In friendship, as in love, we are often more happy from the things we are ignorant of, than from those we are acquainted with.

We endeavor to make a merit of faults that we are unwilling to correct.

The most violent passions leave us some moments of relaxation, but vanity always agitates us.

Old fools are more foolish than young ones.

Weakness is more opposed to virtue than vice is.

What renders the pangs of shame and of jealousy so acute is, that vanity cannot help us to support them.

Propriety is the least of all laws, and they must eb obeyed.

The pomp of funerals is more interesting to the vanity of the living than to the memory of the dead.

A well regulated mind has less difficulty in submitting to ill-regulated ones than in governing them.

When fortune surprises us by bestowing on us an important office, without having conducted us to it by degrees, or without our being elevated to it by our hopes, it is almost impossibly that we should sustain ourselves in it with propriety, and appear worthy of possessing it.

A SCENE.—We saw yesterday, at the Depot, a poor, pale, little girl peddling peaches among the passengers who were constantly coming and going through the place. Her sorrowful look, her timid way, her thin pale face, with the traces of tears visible upon it, and her meek blue eye, "all and singular," had their effect upon the strangers around and many there were that bought her fruit to cheer her heart, and with their bits of silver dropped a word of kindness and encouragement in her ear, more precious than coin to her, after the pressing necessity that drove her among that crowd should be satisfied. But one there was who excited our indignation. With a costly overcoat upon one arm, a well-stuffed carpet-bag in one hand, in elegant apparel and with a massive gold watch-chain dangling a foot in length from his fob ending in a costly seal, he passed through on his way to the western cars. "Please buy some peaches, sir?" said the little girl, with an arch twist of the head and a pleasant smile playing about her lips, brought there by the cheerful words that had fallen so like a gentle blessing on her heart, "Some peaches? only a penny a piece," and she held out her basket. "Get away with your trash!" was the surly response of this human mastiff, accompanied by a kick, which knocked the basket from the poor creature's hand and scattered its contents among a crowd of greedy boys, who commenced picking up the fruit and devouring it. The clouds of sorrow all came back again in a moment, and, at this new trouble, the tears gushed from her eyes afresh. A citizen who stood by quietly stepped up and paid for the peaches and bade her never mind. This man (?) who did it went on with a look of consious mightiness and seated himself in the car. We saw that his baggage was labelled—"Cleveland—home"—where he doubtless secures the fawning attendant upon wealth, and is considered a "respectable" member of the community.—Buffalo Rough Notes.

The indictment of nearly a thousand unlicensed liquor dealers in New York city, shows that the Mayor and other city officers are really in earnest in their attempt to break up some of the vilest rum holes on earth.

LIBRARY INDIANAPOLIS

TEMPERANCE CHART.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.
WM. HANNAMAN, C. E. BABB,
JAMES HALL, R. T. BROWN,
JOHN B. ABBETT.

WEDNESDAY, OCT. 26, 1853.

☞ Absence of the Editor during the past week, will account for the scarcity of editorial.

A CARD.

We observe in this morning's Sentinel an editorial on the subject of the Temperance Chart and Gov. Wright, in which the Editor of the Sentinel says: "this then settles the question. The whole abuse—the charge of corruption and official perjury which Dr. Gordon makes against Gov. Wright has the sanction and endorsement of Wm. Hanaman, James Hall, C. E. Babb, R. T. Brown and John R. Abbott."

Justice to ourselves and fidelity to the cause of Temperance demands of us that we shall in the most public manner disavow ever having given the least shadow of ground for such a conclusion as the above. Within the last year the Committee of publication have twice instructed the editor of the Chart to withhold his personalities and especially to discontinue his attacks on Gov. Wright. It has ever been our desire that the Chart should confine itself strictly to the principles of "Total Abstinence" in the use, and legal prohibition of the traffic in intoxicating drinks without stooping to mingle in the political broils of the day. For ourselves, and for the Grand Division which we represent, we disavow paternity or even approbation of those personal attacks of the Chart, whether on Gov. Wright or any other individual which seem to have been prompted more by a desire to gratify personal or politicul feelings than to promote the cause of universal sobriety.

WM. HANNAMAN,
R. T. BROWN,
JOHN B. ABBOTT,
JAMES HALL,

October 25th 1853.

Our Cause!

The friends of Temperance are anxious to know the prospects of the cause throughout the country; and to all such we can say, and do say, with gratiude to God, that there never was a time, when its mighty interests were rising to such importance in the public mind. Six of the independent States of this Union, have most triumphantly adopted the Maine Law, and seven more only await the time and opportunity to let their decree be heard at the ballot box, against the monster vice—the traffic and use of intoxicating liquors—"a vice," in the language of Gov. Wright, "whose haggard victims meet us everywhere. They throng upon every avenue of life, chilling us with an overpowering sense of their wretchedness and moral degradation." Friends of a prohibitory law, look upwards and onwards. The mighty revolution is moving before you with the strength of God and the prayers of the good of every land. Let the Maine Law be your watchword, and while you bend over fallen husbands and bleeding families still continue to point to its glorious beams brightning the eastern heavens as the star of hope—promising the return of peace and protection to our families, our altars, and our homes.

No good soldier will now desert the field at this stage of the was, when success has attended every effort, and our cannon are now thundering and shaking the very citadel of the enemy. Let every good man draw the sword and never sheath it until the last head of the Rum Kingdom shall fall and fall forever.

Our pride is often increased by what we retrench from our other faults.

☞ The somewhat eccentric but more than somewhat talented Theodore Parker, thus discourseth of the causes of national downfall. His reflections are not unworthy of attention. We hope they will be pondered by all who desire to do justice and love mercy.—[ED. CHART.

Do you know how empires find their end? Yes, the great States eat up the little. As with fish, so with nations. Aye, but how do the great States come to an end? By their own injustice, and no other cause. They would make unrighteousness their law, and God wills not that it be so. Thus they fall; thus they die. Look at these ancient States, the queenliest queens of earth. There is Rome, the widow of two civilizations,—the Pagan and the Catholic. They both had her, and unto both she bore daughters and fair sons. But, the Niobe of Nations, she boasted that her children were holier and more fair than all the pure ideas of justice, truth, and love, the offspring of the eternal God. And now she sits there, transformed into stone, amid the ruins of her children's bones.—At midnight I have heard the owl hoot in the coliseum and the forum, giving voice to desolation; and at midday I have seen the fox in the palace where Augustus gathered the wealth, the wit, the beauty and the wisdom of a conquered world; and the fox and the owl interpreted to me the voice of many ages, which came to tell this age, that though hand join in hand, the wicked shall not prosper.

Come with me, my friends, a moment more, pass over this Golgotha of human history, treading reverent as you go, for our feet are on our mothers' grave, and our shoes defile our fathers' hallowed bones. Let us not talk of them; go further on, look and pass by. Come with me into the Inferno of the nations, with such poor guidance as my lamp can lend. Let us disquiet and bring up the awful shadows of empires buried long ago, and learn a lesson from the tomb.

Come, old Assyria, with the Ninevitish dove upon thy emerald crown! What laid thee low? "I fell by my own injustice. Thereby Nineveh and Babylon came, with me, also, to the ground."

Oh queenly Persia, flame of the nations, wherefore art thou so fallen, who troddest the people under thee, bridgedst the Hellespont with ships, and pouredst thy temple-wasting millions on the western world? "Because I trod the people under me, and bridged the Hellespont with ships, and poured my temple-wasting millions on the western world. I fell by my own misdeeds!"

Thou muselike, Grecian queen, fairest of all thy classic sisterhood of States, enchanting yet the world with thy sweet witchery, speaking in art, and most seductive in song, why liest thou there with beauteous yet dishonored brow, reposing on thy broken harp? "I scorned the law of God; banished and poisoned wisest, justest men; I loved the loveliness of flesh, embalmed it in the Parian stone; I loved the loveliness of thought, and treasured that in more than Parian speech. But the beauty of justice, the loveliness of love, I trod them down to earth! Lo, therefore have I become as those Barbarian States—as one of them!"

Oh manly and majestic Rome, thy sevenfold mural crown, all broken at thy feet, why art thou here? It was not injustice brought thee low; for thy great book of law is prefaced with these words, justice is the unchanging, everlasting will to give each man his right! "It was not the saint's ideal: it was the hypocrite's pretence! I made iniquity my law. I trod the nations under me. Their wealth gilded my palaces,—where thou mayst see the fox and hear the owls,—it fed my courtiers and my courtezans. Wicked men were my cabinet counsellors, the flatterer breathed his poison in my ear. Millions of bondmen wet the soil with tears and blood. Do you not hear it crying yet to God? Lo here have I my recompense, tormented with such downfall as you see! Go back and tell the new-born child, who sitteth on the Alleghanies, laying his either hand upon a tributary sea, a crown of thirty stars about his youthful brow—tell him that there are rights which States must keep, or they shall suffer wrongs! Tell him there is a God who keeps the black man and the white, and hurls to earth the loftiest realm that breaks His just, eternal law! Warn the young Empire that he come not down dim and dishonored to my shameful tomb! Tell him that justice is the unchanging, everlasting will to give to each man his right. I knew it, broke it, and am lost. Bid him to know it, keep it, and be safe!"

"God save the Commonwealth!" proclaims the Governor. God will do his part,—doubt not of that. But you and I must help Him save the State. What can we do? Next Sunday I will ask you for your charity; to-day I ask a greater gift, more than the abundance of the rich, or the poor widow's long remembered mite. I ask you for your justice. Give that to your native land. Do you not love your country? I know you do. Here are our homes and the graves of our fathers; the bones of our mothers are under the sod. The memory of past deeds is fresh with us; many farmer's and mechanic's son inherits from his sires some cup of manna gathered in the wilderness, and kept in memory of our exodus; some stones from the Jordan, which our fathers passed over sorely bested and hunted after; some Aaron's rod, green and blossoming with fragrant memories of the day of small things when the Lord led us—and all these attach us to our land, our native land. We love the great ideas of the North, the institutions which they founded, the righteous laws, the schools, the churches too—do we not love all these? Aye. I know well you do. Then by all these, and more than all, by the dear love of God, let us swear that we will keep the justice of the Eternal Law. Then are we all safe. We know not what a day may bring forth, but we know that Eternity will bring everlasting peace. High in the heavens, the pole-star of the world, shines Justice; placed within us, as our guide thereto, is Conscience. Let us be faithful to that "Which, though it trembles as it lowly lies, Points to the light that changes not in heaven."

Pennsylvania Election.

We copy the following from the Olive Branch, published at Norristown Pa., in regard to the election recently held in that State:

As far as heard from, the Democratic party has gained largely, and their State ticket it elected by a tremendous majority, including Mr. Brawley. The Prohibition ticket has been large in all the counties where it was agitated. Candidates pledged to Prohibition were run in the following counties:—Philadelphia, Mifflin, Centre, Berks, Clinton, Lycomiug, Potter, Columbia, Montour, Crawford, Cumberland, Dauphin, Erie, Fayette, Westmoreland, Franklin, Lancaster, Lebanon, Luzerne, Montgomery, Monroe, Pike, Perry, Schuylkill Susquehana, Sullivan, Wayne, York, Wyoming, and Bucks. Let the friends of Reform continue their exertions, and we shall achieve a glorious result.

In Philadelphia the result is most cheering. Eli K. Price, prohibition candidate for Senate from the City, is elected. Of the Assembly men, three out of four are in favor of Prohibition.

In Philadelphia County, seven of the eleven Assembly men are in favor of the Maine Law—three belonging to the Democratic party, and four to the Natives. A large portion of the Whigs nobly abandoned the ticket forced upon them by their corrupt leaders, and determined to go for temperance and reform. In Chester, two Democrats are elected and one Whig—all, it is said are in favor of Prohibition. In Lancaster, the rummy Whig candidates are elected by a small majority, but the Maine law vote is over 4000. In Dauphin, one Whig and one Democrat are elected—the Maine Law candidate received nearly 1500 votes—within about three hundred as high as the Whig vote.

Temperance Meeting To-night.

The Young Men's Temperance Union meets to-night at Wesley Chapel, and we hope the friends of Temperance will generally turn out. We regard this effort of the young men of our city, as one calculated to do much good. Every young man that has the cause of Temperance at heart, should come forward and take an active part in this glorious enterprise. We understand that the Rev. John McClung will address the meeting.

☞ Mr. J. W. McIntyre, General Agent of the American Sunday School Union, for the State of Indiana, has laid upon our table a copy of Sewell's Plates, representing the effects of Alcohol on the stomach of the Drunkard. There are four of these plates, which, if framed and hung up in your Temperance Halls and Business Offices, would be an excellent Temperance Lecture to the eye.

Members of the Grand Division and others, wishing a copy of these plates and book describing them, can procure them of Henry Ohr, at Temperance, Hall, during the session of the Grand Division. Price of four plates and accompanying book, only 20 cents.

As some of our friends in attendance at the Grand Division, may have some Sunday School business to transact with Mr. McIntyre, he can be found at Mr. Landis' Boarding House, one square south of Masonic Hall.

John B. Gough, the great temperance lecturer, is now addressing the people of England on the importance of total abstinence. The Leeds Mercury says he has decided to remain in that country till next June.

☞ Every thing is pardoned in a man except prosperity.

From the Independent Press.

Temperance.

The South East Indiana Conference of the M. E. Church, at its recent session in Brookville, adopted the following report on Temperance:

WHEREAS, As christians, philanthropists, and patriots, we owe it as a solemn duty to our Fathers, our Country, and our God, to transmit unimpaired to our children the priceless heritage bequeathed us, and which is and must be, mainly supported by the pillars of TEMPERANCE and VIRTUE; and whereas the great evils of intemperance have given to the world, in the mournful facts of its history, testimony written and repeated in ten thousand instances in letters of blood, of opposition, bitter and soulless, to all systems and efforts of the Church and of Temperance men, banded together in Societies of various kinds for the sake of strength and more efficient action, have been rendered comparatively powerless and ineffectual on account of the encouragement and protection given by the laws of the land, to the manufacture and sale of ardent spirits as a beverage, as well as, the respectability and pecuniary inducement which our lawmakers have given to the infamous traffic; and whereas, the object of all government and legislation should be to secure the greatest amount of happiness to the greatest possible number, and whereas, a course of legislation based upon this principle, pursued and carried out in several of our sister States, has resulted in effectually breaking down, the hitherto impregnable bulwark of "KING ALCOHOL," and in driving him in utter dismay from his usurped dominions; therefore be it

Resolved, That we, as a Conference, are in favor of the enactment by the Legislature of Indiana, of a law similar in its provisions to the Maine Liquor Law.

Resolved, That as ministers of the Gospel of truth and righteousness we will more faithfully preach, speak and write against the Liquor trade, and whilst we live to pray, we will war against it as the great corruptor of public and private morals.

Resolved, That we admire and applaud the humane, the patriotic and Christian conduct of all coopers, who refuse to make whisky barrels, of all farmers who refuse to sell hogs or grain to distilleries, of all business men who disclaim any and all connection with the traffic, and of all who exhibit the moral courage, and patriotic honesty to advocate the Temperance cause.

Resolved, That no man professing Christianity can with any degree of consistency sell his grain for distillation, loan his credit to keep up a still-house, or 'touch, taste, or handle the unclean thing."

Resolved, That we respectfully ask the Editors of the various periodicals of our State, in the name of patriotism and christianity, to strive less fearlessly, and more faithfully to bear aloft our glorious standard of civil and religious freedom, and to inform the American mind as well as the Foreign immigrants, that if Benedict Arnold reaped the requiem of infamy, in endeavoring to sell his country,—that those who sell their countrymen to the drunkard's grave, should take warning by his fate, for their crime is no less infamous and inhuman.

Improvement in California.

Amongst the late news from California, we find the following highly encouraging item in a San Francisco letter to the Journal of Commerce:

"Our city has become a city of churches, and the Sabbath day is regarded almost universally as a day of rest. Society is blessed with the presence of women, who are now flocking to our shores in vast numbers, bringing the children of the East to bless and cheer the sterner sex.—Gambling is fast dying out. Houses that one year ago would have rented for $3,000 to $5,000 per month for Gambling purposes, are now offered for business marts at $1,000 to $1,500 per month. On Long Wharf, where one year ago there were over a dozen gambling houses there is but one in operation. The same may be said of other prominent localities.—It seems now to be the grand aim and strife of this people to do good; to contribute largely and freely of their wealth for the upbuilding of the Redeemer's Kingdom in the land. May God hasten it in his own good time and way!"

☞ We understand that seventeen barrels ef whisky per week, on an average, arrive at the Railroad depot—are drayed to the different "snake holes" in this city, and guzzled down the throats of the citizens of this city and vicinity, by the gallon, we suppose, as the snake-hole keepers are not allowed to retail it. And yet we boast of being a temperance community!—Richmond Palladium.

In suits against rum-sellers, perjury of tippling witnesses is as common as their habits are notorious. Under the Maine Law, such wickedness is avoided. The liquor itself before mixed with debased natures, never commits perjury. A steaming bung hole tells the truth, for it can't lie.—Cayuga Chief.

Foreign Items.

Lately nearly two hundred gentlemen in Edinburgh agreed to ascertoin the actual amount of Sunday traffic in the public houses in that city, and their report, entering into the statistics of each house, has been published. There are in all, 454 licensed houses in Edinburgh, of which 312 were opened on the Sunday referred to. The visitors that day to these liquor houses were 22,202 men, 11,931 women, 4,631 children under 14 years of age, and 3,032 children under eight years of age. Total number of visitants at the liquor houses during the Sunday, forty-one thousand, seven hundred and ninety-six. The population of Edinburgh is about 150,000; one-quarter part of the population, therefore, run to the taverns on Sunday, for tippling.

The snow on Mount Etna furnishes a source of wealth to the Catanians, by no means inconsiderable. Above a certain height, it is found in congealed masses, and in this state is fit for conveyance to all the large towns in the island, and even as far as Malta. Constantinople and the vicinity are in like manner supplied with this article—of paramount necessity in a warm climate—from the cavities near the summit of Mount Olympus, where the snow lies throughout the year.

According to a recent paper, there are in London 1,316 children under 14 years of age at large as mendicants and thieves, and 1,783 of the same character found in lodging-houses. The number of children living in idleness, without education, and neglected by parents, is 20,641 under 15 years of age.

London extends over an area of seventy-eight thousand and twenty-nine acres, or one hundred and twenty-two square miles; and the number of its inhabitants—rapidly increasing—was two million, three hundred and sixty-two thousand, two hundred and thirty-six, on the day of the last census.

The English papers furnish unfavorable news from Madagascar. The Queen was still pursuing a course of rigorous hostility toward the Christians, who were suffering greatly from her prosecutions.

The Russian clergy are ignorant and immoral. The priestly office is regarded as a means of escaping slavery, and the priests pass nearly half their lives in a state of intoxication.

The estimated total number of volumes now in the library of the British Museum is 510,110. The additions since 1848 have been at the rate of 15,000 volumes a year.

Madame Jenny Lind will next season visit England, to give concerts. Benedict the composer, has gone to see her at Dresden, and to stand godfather to her son.

John Mitchell has escaped from Van Dieman's Land, and is supposed to be on his way to America.

The deficiency of grain in France amounts to nearly one-fourth of an average crop.

Queen Victoria had a narrow escape, lately, from destruction by a railway accident.

Dickens is said to have cleared $20,000 from the Bleak House.

Turkey has two hundred thousand men under arms.

From the Sandwich Islands.

The small-pox was raging on the islands without abatement, and had been made matter of a good deal of political excitement. On the 20th of July last the citizens of Honolulu held a spirited meeting, and prepared a petition to the King for the dismissal from office of Dr. Judd and Mr. Armstrong, the Ministers of Finance and Public Instruction.

The petition among other criminations, alleges that these gentlemen of the Ministry are responsible for the prevalence of the small-pox, and that it was through their influence that the government rejected the proposals made by the Board of Physicians, on the first appearance of the epidemic, to arrest the progress by vaccinating the entire population of the islands. Counter petitions and statements had been made in a very excited spirit.

The Royal Commissioners of Public Health had, in favor of the petitions of the foreign residents, made some arrangement in the nature of hospital and vaccine establishments and health districts, and had provided for burials at the public expense. The last health report shows the most desperate fatality on the island of Oahu, while only a few cases are reported to remain in Honolulu. The total number of cases reported on the islands is 3456; deaths, 1276. The deaths at Hawaihae were twenty-eight out of a population of about fifty.

The wheat crop on east Maul had been very successful. The attention of the people seems to be enthusiastically devoted to wheat-growing, and it is said that the sowing for 1854 will be capable of a yield of twenty thousand bushels. Agricultural and manufacturing machinery is being fast introduced in the islands.

Two shocks of an earthquake had been experienced at Hawaihae on the evenings of the 25th and 29th of July last.

The Cincinnati Enquirer.

This paper, for several weeks past, has been indulging in the lowest slang and abuse of the editor of the organ. His private character has been assailed, and all his family relations have been dragged before the public. His motives and conduct have been attacked, with a zeal worthy of a better cause.

The editor of the Organ has deemed all these malicious assaults upon him as unworthy of even a passing notice, and hence, has uniformly remained silent.

The editor was born in this county, and his life has been passed here. He feels that it would be undignified to enter upon a vindication of his own good name, for whatever of praise he merits for anything of good he may have done, or whatever of censure he may deserve for his blameworthy walk and conversation, as will be accorded to him by those who know him best.

As editor we have alwas made it a rule to avoid all personal attacks, preferring to vindicate the great cause which we have espoused, and to advance which, we have labored the best period of our manhood. We do not say that we have not felt deeply wronged by the course of the Enquirer, but we have had more self-respect than to notice the calumnies and abuse of any and all the political presses who have deemed us worthy of their malace. A reputation which can be successively assailed by a political party press, is unworthy of being preserved. To those of our friends who censure us for not descending from the advocacy of a great moral reform, into the arena of political gladiators, we would say that we have no taste for such rencounters. If our good name is worth preserving, it cannot be injured by the vile billingsgate of our enemies, and we should not hope to come forth from any such conflict with any new laurels worth the wearing.

The cause of Temperance and the prohibition of the liquor traffic, are the subjects which the Enqirer may appropriately assail; and these would furnish a more fruitful theme for the assault of a gentleman, than the personal assault of their humble advocate.

Of the offensive article in the Organ of last week, which is attributed to our authorship, we knew nothing until several days after the issue of the paper. We were absent at the time, and had been for some two weeks, publicly discussing the great subject of prohibition. Every body understands that we have no interest whatever in the Organ; and whatever we write is furnished gratuitously to the publisher. For all articles from our pen, we hold ourself personally responsible.

If, as editor, we shall do any person, even our worst enemy, any wrong, we shall most cheerfully make the amende honorable. We wish we could reasonably expect the same course from those who have maliciously and wantonly traduced and abused us. For the purity of our motives, we appeal to the Great Searcher of hearts, before whose unerring tribunal we expect to appear; and for the rectitude of our conduct, we appeal from a corrupt party press to the judgment of our countrymen.

S. F. CARY.

"The Party is nearly Ruined."

Such is the exclamation of the Enquirer, because of the defeat of the Democratic candidate for governor in Maine.—"This Maine Law has so invaded our ranks that the party is ruined! our prowess has gone." Every defeat is laid to the Maine Law. Because 48,000 honest temperance Democrats did not vote for the whisky candidate, who only received 9,500 votes in the entire State, after a thorough drumming up of all the "whisky boys," they must be denounced, and charged with the awful crime. Whisky is the sole cause of the defeat, as the figures show, and thus we hope it will ever be, until decent, respectable men are put in nomination. This last election tells the tale as to the popularity of the Maine Law in Maine. The whig candidate for Governor, (favorable to the Law,) received about 49,000 votes; the temperance Democrat, 48,000, and the whisky Democrat, 9,500. This looks very much like the law was unpopular! The more they see of its working, the better they like it.. No power on earth can repeal this law in Maine!—Ohio Organ.

On Sept. 28th, says the Portland Advertiser, snow fell in the town of Rangely, Maine, to the deprh of one foot. Between that place and Phillips, travel was interrupted for several days in consequence.—The trees bordering the road were so loaded with snow that they bent down and obstructed the way. The Portland Argus states that snow fell in Carthage, in the same state, on the same day, to the depth ef six inches, among the mountains.

A movement has been set on foot by the Rev. J. A. James, of Birmingham, Mr. Thompson, and others, in England, to procure a million of copies of the New Testament in Chinese, for distribution among the insurgents. The cost will be £17,000. Mr. Thompson gives 1,000 copies, and Mr. James 500.

The Maine Law in Portland.

The following extracts are taken from an official report made by the Mayor of Portland to the City Council, at the end of the muncipal year for 1851–2:

"A great many families situated thus (poor and miserable) a year since, are now comfortable and happy, being entirely relieved by the suppression of the grog shops, from their former troubles.—The extinguishment of the traffic in intoxicating drinks will not only be the means of saving a great amount of money to the poorer part of the people, but the productive industry of the country will be stimulated to an extent that we cannot at present foresee. The whole of the great sum which was formerly expended for strong drinks by the people of this city and State, will henceforth be expended for necessaries and comforts of life, with the additional amount which will accrue from the more industrious habits of the people, or that will be added year by year to the accumulating wealth of the State.

"There were committed to the almshouse from June 1, 1850, to March 20, 1851, (before the law) 252; from June 1, 1851, to March 39, 1852, (after the law) 146—difference in 9 months, 106. Number in alms house March 20, 1851, 112; number in alms house March 20, 1852, 90—difference 22. Number of families assisted out of the alms house from June 1, 1850, to March 20, 1851, 135; from June 1, 1851, to March 20, 1852, 90—difference in nine months, just one-third, 45. Seventy-five of the ninety in the alms house, March 20, 1852, came through intemperance—four of the ninety were not brought there through that cause; the history of the remaining eleven is not known.

"Committed to the house of correction for intemperance, from June 1, 1850, to March 20, 1852, 40; for larceny, etc., etc., 12—in all 58; from June 1, 1851, to March 20, 1852, for intemperance ten; for larceny, etc., etc., 3—in all 13; a difference in nine months of more than three fourths! Committed in April, 1851, 9; in May, 10—19. "The Maine Law" was enacted June 2, 1851, and from the first of that month to March 20, 1852, 10 months, the number committed was only 10, although great activity was displayed by the police in arresting all offenders.

"At the term of the District Court in Portland, March, 1852, but one indictment was found for larceny, and that was the result of a mistake; while at the March term of 1851, seventeen indictments were found. These results have been obtained notwithstanding an increased vigilance in arresting persons found under the influence of strong drink.

Committed to the jails for drunkeness, larceny, &c., from June 1 1850, to March 20, 1851, 279; for the corresponding period of 1851–2, 135; difference 144. Deduct liquor sellers (72) imprisoned in the latter term, and we have 63 for drunkenness, larceny, &c., &c., against 279 for the corresponding period before the enactment of the Maine Law, a deduction of almost seven-ninths in the short period of nine months! There were in jail on the 20th of March 1851 25 persons, on the 20th March 1852, 7 persons, 3 of whom were liquor sellers; without them the number would be 4 against 25 of the corresponding day of 1851, a falling off of more than 83 per cent, in the short period of nine months.

"There were committed to the watch house from June 1, 1850, to and including March 1851, 481 persons. For the corresponding period of 1851–2, after the enactment of the Maine Law, the number was 180, a deduction of almost three-fifths notwitstanding the increased vigilance of the police in the latter period, in arresting persons in a state of intoxication."

Population of the Grave.—The following extract is taken from the Merchant's Ledger:

"From extensive calculation, it seems the average of human births per second, since the birth of Christ to this time, is about 815, which gives about thirty-two thousand millions; and after deducting the present supposed population of the world, (960,000,000,) leaves the number of thirty-one thousand and forty millions that have gone down to the grave, giving death and the grave the victory over the living, to the number of thirty thousand and eight millions. Of this number in the grave, about 9,000,000,000 have died by wars;

7,920,000,000 by famine and pestilence;
500,000,000 by martyrdom;
580,000,000 by intoxicating drinks;
13,000,000,000, natural or otherwise."

The Maine Law is like the Point Comfort churn, spoken of in Major Jack Downing's letters, and which Gen. Jackson was struck with on account of its remarkable simplicity. Said the General, "If Congress had made that churn, they would have put a hundred wheels into it; but here there is but one wheel, and that one a 'smasher.' The Maine Law I conceive to have but one wheel, and that is capable of smashing in the heads of the rum barrels throughout the length and breadth of the land.

A Noble Governor.

George R. Gilmer, Esq., Ex-Governor of Georgia has written a letter, which appears in the Georgia papers, and which thus concludes. It is quite refreshing to see our political men speaking out on the right side.

The candidates for the Legislature who are still strong in the faith, that the devil and the grog-shops are more popular with the people than God and his country, and that electioneering with half pints will get more votes than doing what good men desire, are led into their mistakes by the triumphs of the dram candidates in former times, when whiskey was drank by everybody; when the Bible was a novelty; when schoolmasters got drunk; when preachers when they were pointing out the straight and narrow way, sometimes followed in the reeling tracks of their flocks; when the special treat given to a visiting neighbor was to draw out the bottle; when merchants encouraged people to buy decanters of whiskey upon their counters; and when on muster days, election days, and court days every one considered it a mark of regard to drink with his neighbor. If the whiskey candidates will but look beyond their noses, they will see that the Bible now is in every house; that the old lifelong drunkards are all gone;—that the preached word comes from the lips unpolluted by whiskey; that our teachers are the sober men of our country; that the neighbor who now offers whiskey blushes from the consciousness of the wrong done; that the decanter has been taken away from the counter, lest solvent men should be kept away from the store; and the candidate for the legislature who offers the half-pint to a voter, is eyed as a fit person to be sent elsewhere.

The time is rapidly passing away, if not already gone, when the old may lead the young to dram shops; when fights between neighbors in cups make delightful amusement for the crowd; when the legislature can sell the inheritance of the people for bribes, and members cannot read the laws which they help to pass.

Men have the power to discern good from evil. And yet with all the aids which they can call to their assistance, they find it difficult to do right. Will the dram drinkers strive to continue the temptation which, when indulged in, fuddles the brain beyond discernment.

In ancient times when kings wanted money they sold licenses to commit crimes. Shall our Republic, in these enlightened times, grant licenses for money to evil doers to sell what excites to the commission of the most flagrant offences.

Very respectfully,
George R. Gilmer.

Empire of Queen Victoria.—Finche, in his "Boundaries of Empire," rather grandiloquently dishes up the wonder and greatness of Queen Victoria's empire as follows:

"The Queen of England is now sovereign over one continent, a hundred peninsulas, five hundred promontories, a thousand lakes, two thousand rivers, and ten thousand islands. She waves her hand, and five hundred thousand warriors march to battle, to conquer or to die. She bends her head, and at the signal a thousand ships of war, and a hundred thousand sailors, perform her bidding on the ocean. She walks upon the earth, and one hundred and twenty millions of human beings feel the slightest pressure of her foot. Come, all ye conquerors, and kneel before the Queen of England, and acknowledge the superior extent of her dependent provinces, her subjugated kingdoms, and her vanquished empires. The Assyrian empire was not so wealthy. The Roman empire was not so populous. The Persian empire was not so extensive. The Arabian empire was not so powerful. The Carthaginian empire was not so much dreaded. The Spanish empire was not so widely diffused. We have over-run a greater extent of country than Attila, that scourge of God, ever ruled! We have subdued more empires and dethroned more kings than Alexander or Macedon! We have conquered more nations than Napoleon, in the plenitude of his power, ever subdued! We have acquired a larger extent of territory than Tamarlane the Tartar ever spurred his horse's hoof across." This is indeed a proud boast, and should stimulate to good actions.

A New Line.—Whisky is now conveyed to this city by wagons from the Westville depot—that point being more convenient than receiving it at the Richmond depot, and letting everybody see who gets it, and where it goes to; besides, the drays (there being two of the proprietors of these vehicles who are willing to haul the stuff,) could not accommodate all within the time required, as the demand by the gallon exceeds the supply!—Richmond Palladium.

☞ A young nobleman, celebrated for his Herculean strength and rashness, has made a voyage from Venice to Trieste, alone, standing on two planks four feet long, by one foot wide and four inches thick, fastened by an iron clasp, and without any other help than a pole. He arrived at Trieste, seventy miles from Venice, safe and sound, having gained his wager.

Few Drunkards in Wine-Growing Countries.—This has long been the cry of opponents to total abstinence. A few months since, we published testimony from Jas. Fennimore Cooper and others, showing the fallacy and falsity of this argument in a strong light. Mr. Cooper made particular observation and inquiry in France, and found that intemperance of the grossest character was terribly prevalent there. We have further corroboration of this fact in extracts from a work entitled "Parisian Sights"—said to be fully reliable. The writer says:

"The increase of licensed retailers of wines and spirits throughout France has been rapid since 1830. Then there existed but 250,000. Now there are upwards of 350,000, an increase of 100,000 in twenty years, and of 20,000 during the last three years, under the republic. This augmentation has been among the lowest class of cabarets, of which there has been an increase of 70,000 within nineteen years, paying a license of only six francs each. Were Beelzebub permitted to select an agent for the demoralization of humanity, he could not find one better adapted to his purpose, than that which is sanctioned by the government of France. That I may not be accused of exaggerating the evil influence of the licensed dram shop, I quote the following from the work of M. Villerme, upon the physical and moral condition of the working class. The description he gives refers to the cabarets of the quarter Etaques at Lille.

"'I could have wished," says Villerme, "to have entered the places, where I have seen through the doors and windows across a cloud of tobacco smoke, crowds of people, agitated like the inhabitants of an anthill; but it was evident that notwithstanding the precaution I had taken to disguise myself in a manner not to create suspicion, my appearance among them would have created surprise, if not violence. A great number stood, from want of room to sit down; all drank the detestable corn brandy or beer. I heard even children utter the vilest obscenities. I can affirm that I have never seen at once so much pollution, misery and vice, and nowhere under an aspect more hideous and revolting.'"

This is a strong testimony, but our author adds something more direct:

"In Paris it is estimated that there are 7,000 habitual drunkards, of the most brutal character. The mayor of Paimpol, in his official report, says: "I can affirm that the greater part of the paupers of this town owe their misery to the excess of drinks, particularly brandy; that almost all the disorders and crimes which have come before me have been committed by persons either drunk or given to intoxication."

Such evidence should destroy the common delusion, that because light wines are cheap in France, intoxication is rare.—Brandies of the most deleterious nature are equally cheap, and are more generally used.

Why We need the Maine Law.—We need it to diminish by one half and more our pauper tax. We need it for the prevention of crime. We need it to protect our children from the demon of intemperance. We need it as an auxiliary to the reformation of the drunkard, thousands of whom would hail it as the messenger of mercy. We need it to staunch the tears of the drunkard's wife, and to snatch his children from the degradation and the misery which he entails upon them. We need it to close one of the largest flood gates of vice, and open the channel through which health, virtue and general prosperity may pour their blessings upon the whole community.

Humility.—Humility is a Christian duty. It is more than a duty; it is a principle of religion, and its influence is exceedingly great, not only upon our religious, but our social character. They who are truly humble-minded have no quarrels, give no offense, contend with no one in wrath and bitterness. Still more impossible is it for them to insult any one under any circumstances. And the way to be humble-minded is, to think less of our virtues and more of our sins.

An Item for Temperance Men.—The Madison Courier says the following resolution was adopted by the Grand Jury of the county on the 28th:

Resolved, That it is the opinion of the Grand Jury of Jefferson county, Indiana, that in the investigation of the crimes that came under our notice, that nine-tenths of said crimes were directly or indirectly caused by the use of intoxicating liquors.

Go in for Matrimony!—Every school boy knows a kite would not fly unless it had a string tying it down. It is just so in life. The man who is tied down by half-a-dozen blooming responsibilities, and their mother, will make a stronger and higher flight than the bachelor who, having nothing to keep him steady, is always floundering in the mud. If you want to ascend in the world, tie yourself to somebody.

Gradations of a French Newspaper. When Napoleon escaped from Elba and returned to France, the Moniteur announced the event as follows:—First announcement—"March, 1815. The monster has escaped from the place of his banishment; he has run away from Elba." 2nd—"The Corsican dragon (l'ogre) has landed at Cape Juan." 3rd—"The tiger has shown himself at Gap. The troops are advancing on all sides to arrest his progress. He will conclude his miserable adventure by becoming a wanderer among the mountains; he cannot possibly escape. 4th—"The monster has really advanced as far as Grenoble; we know not to what treachery to ascribe it." 5th—"The tyrant is actually at Lyons. Fear and terror seized all at his appearance." 5th—"The usurper has ventured to approach the capital to within sixty hours' march." 7th—"Bonaparte is advancing by forced marches; but it is impossible he can reach Paris." 8th—"Napoleon will arrive under the walls of Paris to-morrow." 9th, "The Emperor Napoleon is at Fontainebleau." 10th—"Yesterday evening his majesty the emperor made his public entry, and arrived at the Tuilleries—nothing can exceed the universal joy!"

☞ On a tomb stone in an English burial-ground is the following epitaph:

"Here lies Robin Fellows,
The maker of bellows,
He bellows did make till the day of his death,
But he that made bellows, could never make breath."

Most epitaph writers give the good qualities of the departed, leaving the bad unnoticed. Not so with the writer of the following:

"Here lies John Hill,
A man of skill,
His age was five times ten:
He never did good,
Nor ever would,
Had he lived as long again."

Very Poetic.—Thackeray says a woman's heart is just like a lithographer's stone—what is once written upon it can't be rubbed out.—Let an heiress once fix her affections on a stable boy, all the preaching in the world will not get her thoughts above oat-boxes and curry-combs. "What is written on her heart can't be rubbed out." This fact shows itself not only in love, but in religion. Men change their Gods a dozen times, a woman never. To convert a Sister of Charity to Methodism would require a greater amount of power than you would have to make use of to overturn the Pyramids.

Grand Temple of Honor.

☞ The Fifth Semi-Annual Session of the Grand Temple of Honor of Indiana, will be held in the city of Richmond, commencing on Wednesday, November 23d, at 2 o'clock P. M.

Representatives are requested to make their arrangements to be there by the first session.

JOHN H. OHR, G. W. R.

To Subordinate Divisions.

NEW RITUAL.

The new Ritual of our Order has been received at this office.

All Divisions wishing it, must order immediately and enclose Two Dollars to the undersigned, when it will be sent free of expense.

C. WOODWARD, G. S.

Indianapolis, Oct. 5, 1853.

TEMPLES OF HONOR.

The undersigned having received the Revised Constitutions of the Temple o Honor, is now prepared to furnish Temples with the Constitution and Bylaws, at the following rates, where not many alterations are made from the form kept standing:

100 copies,	$12 00	300 copies	$20 00
200 "	16 00	400 "	24 00

Subordinate, Degree, and Social Degree Constitutions, (in one book) are furnished at the above rates.

A copy of the form kept standing, will be sent to any Temple, by making application for the same.

Temples wishing Constitutions at the above rates, must send in their orders soon, as the form cannot be kept standing long.

JOHN H. OHR, G. W. R.

Indianapolis, Oct. 4th, 1853.

CONSTITUTION AND BY-LAWS,

WE are still prepared to print Constitution and By-Laws, where the alterations are few from the copy recommended by the Grand Division, at the following rates:

100 copies, (or less)	$5 00
200 "	8 00
300 "	10 00

We will pay the postage on all ordered from us.

☞ All orders accompanied by the cash, will be promptly attended to.

Address, JOHN H. OHR,
Indianapolis, Indiana.

CHARTERS.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR A DIVISION S. OF T.

(Date.)

The undersigned inhabitants of ——, believing the Order of the Sons of Temperance to be well calculated to extend the blessings of total abstinence, and promote the general welfare of mankind, respectfully petition the Grand Division of the —— of ——, to grant them a Charter to open a new Division, to be called the —— Division, No. —, Sons of Temperance, of the —— of ——, to be located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves, individually and collectively, to be governed by the rules and usages of said Grand Division, and also, by those of the National Division.

Enclosed is the Charter Fee, $5 00. Books, $2 00.

This must be signed by at least eight persons of good character and standing in community, and sent to C. WOODWARD, G. S., Indianapolis, Ind., free of postage.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR A TEMPLE.

(Date.)

The undersigned, believing the Temple of Honor to be well calculated to cement more firmly our fraternal relations, and add to the general prosperity of the cause of Temperance, respectfully petition the Grand Temple of the —— of ——, to grant them a Charter to open a new Temple, to be called the —— Temple of Honor, No. —, of the —— of ——, to be located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves individually and collectively, to be governed by the rules and usages of the Grand Temple, and also by those of the Order at large.

Enclosed is the Charter Fee, $20 00.

To be directed to the G. W. R., free of postage.

This must be signed by at least twenty persons of good standing, and if not known to the G. W. T. or G. W. R., must send satisfactory references.

J. H. OHR, G. W. R.

Indianapolis, Ind.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR CADETS OF TEMPERANCE.

The undersigned, boys of ——, believing the Order of Cadets of Temperance to be well calculated to extend the blessings of total abstinence, and promote the general welfare of mankind, respectfully petition the Grand Section of the State of Indiana, to grant them a charter to open a new Section, to be called the —— Section, No. ——, Cadets of Temperance, of the State of Indiana, to be located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves, individually and collectively to be governed by the rules and usages of said Grand Section, and also those of the acting Head of the Order.

Enclosed is the fee for Charter, R. B.'s and officers' cards, $5 00.

It must also be stated whether the applicants are members of the Order or not; if they are, of what Section. The application to be directed to the Grand Secretary, free of postage.

It must also be certified by a W. P. or P. W. P, that the W. Patron elect is a Son of Temperance in good standing.

Address (post paid) HENRY OHR, G. S., C. o T., Indianapolis, Indiana.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR DAUGHTERS OF TEMPERANCE.

(Date.)

The undersigned, inhabitants of ——, believing the Order of the Daughters of Temperance to be well calculated to extend the blessings of Total Abstinence, and promote the general welfare of mankind, respectfully petition the Grand Union to grant them a charter to open a new Union to be called the —— Union, No. —, D. of T., of the State of Indiana, located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves, individually and collectively, to be governed by the rules and usages of said Grand Union.

Enclosed is the Charter Fee, $5 00.

The above must be signed by at least eleven females, of proper age and good standing in community.

Address (post paid,) Mrs. ELIZA RICHMOND, G. S. S., Indianapolis, Indiana.

New Watch and Jewelry Store.

No 1, Bates House, Washington Street,

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

WE have now open the largest and best assortment of fine Watches and rich Jewelry ever offered in this city, to which we invite the examination of the public.

Our stock is all new—selected with great care, and comprises Watches, Diamond Work, Chains, Pins, Rings, Pencils, Lockets, of all kinds; Silver Ware, Clocks, Perfumery, Brushes, Soaps, Plated Ware, Castors, Fruit Baskets, &c., which we will sell for CASH at New York prices. Mr. E. W. NEFF, of this city, has taken charge of the Watch repairing department, and will spare no pains to give satisfaction to our customers.

july 6-tf E J. BALDWIN & CO.

D. CRAIGHEAD. R. BROWNING.

CRAIGHEAD & BROWNING,

Dealers in all kinds of

Drugs, Medicines, Surgical Instruments, Paints, Oils, Chemicals, Varnishes, Dye Stuffs, Glassware Window Glass, Brushes, Cosmetics, Spices, Cigars, Tobacco, Perfumery, &c.,

WASHINGTON STREET,
INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

ALL are respectfully invited to call and examine our stock and prices, as we feel confident we can render satisfaction both as to prices and quality of articles. Great care is taken in the selection of articles, in reference to their purity, as we endeavor at all times to keep such articles as are strictly pure and genuine. Every article will be waranted as represented. Orders from Physicians and others promptly attended to. Particular attention given to filling Prescriptions and compounding Medicines, which, in all cases, shall receive the personal attention of one of the firm. june 30

HANNAMAN & DUZAN,

DEALERS IN

DRUGS AND MEDICINES,

Surgical Instruments, Paints, Oils, Varnishes, Dye Woods, Medical and Window Glass, Brushes, Perfumery, Soaps, &c.

Washington, 3 doors west of Pennsylvania St.,

june 30 1y INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

W. W. ROBERTS,

Druggist and Apothecary.

Wholesale and Retail Dealer in

DRUGS, MEDICINES, PAINTS, OILS, AND DYE STUFFS, BRUSHES, FANCY GOODS, AMERICAN AND FRENCH WINDOW GLASS, &c.

WASHINGTON ST., INDIANAPOLIS.

Physicians, Country Merchants, and the people generally, are invited to examine his stock, which will be sold at the lowest cash price.

☞ QUALITY WARRANTED TO SUIT. ☜

june 22 4m

COMMERCIAL COLLEGE,

(Late Commercial Institute,)

Of Indianapolis,

Established March 31, 1851.

INCORPORATED, 1853.

W. McK. SCOTT, A. M., Founder and President.

JAMES C. HAYDEN, (Late Professor in Bacon's Mercantile College, Cincinnati,)

PROF. OF BOOK-KEEPING AND PENMANSHIP.

THE Session will commence at College Hall as follows:

1st Session on the first Monday of September.
2d Session on the 1st Monday of November.
3d Session on the 1st Monday of January.
4th Session on the 1st Monday of March.
5th Session on the 1st Monday of May.

Having secured, permanently, the services of the distinguished Professor above named, and leased for a term of years the commodious and beautiful Hall formerly known as CONCERT HALL, but now named COLLEGE HALL, which is to be fitted up in a style of great elegance, taste, and convenience, the President would say, that this College now offers advantages superior to all others, for imparting a sound, thorough, and accomplished business education

COURSE OF STUDIES.

The Course of Studies, as enlarged, will be as follows, viz:

1. Book-Keeping, by Single and Double Entry, in all its various branches, and its application to all kinds of business.
2. The Laws, Customs, and Usages of Trade and Commerce.
3. Mercantile Arithmetic, upon the short and easy system of cancelation, (taught in no other College.)
4. Commercial Law, in a series of Lectures, thorough and systematic.
5. Business Penmanship.
6. Commercial Correspondence.
7. Lectures upon Banking, Political Economy, and other subjects valusble to the business man.

EXPENSES.

Cards of Admission, invariably in advance, or secured, $25; Diplomas $3; Stationery $5; Boarding $2 50 per week; incidentals, at option of student, $15. Making entire expenses about $75.

On application, a Catalogue will be furnished, giving full particulars.

All letters will receive prompt attention on being directed, post-paid, to

june 8 W. McK. SCOTT, President.

Sears' American Pictorial Book Establishment.

181 William St., near Spruce St., NEW YORK.

BOOK AGENTS WANTED.

THE Subscriber publishes a large number of most valuable books, very popular, and of such a moral and religious influence, that while good men may safely engage in their circulation, they will confer a public benefit, and receive a fair compensation for their labor.

☞ To young men of enterprise and tact, this business offers an opportunity for profitable employment seldom to be met with. There is not a town in the Union where a right honest and well-disposed person can fail of selling from 50 to 200 volumes, according to the population.

The titles of the principal works are as follows:

THE PICTORIAL FAMILY BIBLE. Illustrated by about One Thousand Engravings! 1450 pages large quarto. Price $6.

NEW AND COMPLETE HISTORY OF THE BIBLE. 700 pages octavo. Price $2 50.

NEW PICTORIAL HISTORY OF CHINA AND INDIA. Illustrated with two hundred Engravings. 700 pages large octavo. Price $2 50.

THRILLING INCIDENTS of THE WARS OF THE UNITED STATES. With three hundred Engravings. 600 pages octavo. Price $2 50.

NEW PICTORIAL DESCRIPTION OF THE UNITED STATES for 1853. Illustrated with two hundred Engravings. 600 pages octavo. Price $2 50.

TREASURY OF KNOWLEDGE, and CYCLOPEDIA OF SCIENCE and ART. With numerous Engravings. 512 pp. 8vo. Price $2 50.

SCENES AND SKETCHES OF CONTINENTAL EUROPE Nvmerous Engravings. 550 pp. 8vo Price $2 50.

PICTORIAL DESCRIPTION OF GREAT BRITAIN AND IRELAND. With several hundred handsome Engravings. 550 pages octavo Price $2 50.

PICTORIAL FAMILY ANNUAL. With over two hundred Engravings. 360pp. 8vo. Price $2

INFORMATION FOR THE PEOPLE.—This work comprises the finest series of Embellishments ever offered to the American public. 600 pages octavo. Price $2 50.

NEW PICTORIAL FAMILY INSTRUCTOR, or Digest of General Knowledge. Designed for Families, Schools, and Libraries. 600 pages octavo. Price $2 50.

PICTORIAL HISTORY OF THE AMERICAN REVOLUTION. A Book for every family in the Union! Several hundred Engravings. Price $2.

PICTORIAL SUNDAY BOOK. Designed fo. the use of Families, Bible-Classes and Sunday-School Teachers. 600 pp. 8vo. Price $2 50.

BIBLE BIOGRAPHY, or the Lives and Characters of the principal personages recorded in the sacred writings. With numerous Illustrations 500 pages octavo. Price $2 50.

WONDERS OF THE WORLD—Second Series—in two Parts. With 400 Illustrations. 540 pp. 8vo. Price $2 50.

THE HISTORY OF PALESTINE, from the Patriarchal age to the present time. By John Kitto, editor of the London Pictorial Bible. Price $4

VIEW OF NEW YORK This Engraving is printed on a mammoth sheet, 47 by 19 inches, and ought to be very saleable. Price 50 cents.

DICKS COMPLETE WORKS. Eleven vols. in two. 1500 pp. 8 vo. Price $4 50.

THE CHRISTIAN LITURGY. Bound in Embossed Morrocco. Price $1 50.

A NEW AND DEEPLY INTERESTING VOLUME

THE REMARKABLE ADVENTURES OF

CELEBRATED PERSONS,

Embracing the Romantic Incidents in in the Lives of Sovereigns, Statesmen, Generals, Princes, Warriors, Travellers, Adventurers, Voyagers, &c.,

Eminent in the History of Europe and America.

Including Sketches of over Fifty Celebrated Heroic Characters. Beautifully illustrated with numerous Engravings. One vol. 400 pages, royal 12mo. cloth gilt. Price $1 25.

☞ We solicit orders faom the Trade, Teachers, and School Committees for books to whom we furnish our own publications, and those of all the publishers in the country, on the most liberal terms.

☞ COUNTRY MERCHANTS and POSTMASTERS can procure subscribers to, and sell SEARS' PICTORIAL WORKS," make a handsome profit, and sustain no loss.

☞ Persons wishing to engage in the sale of our Works, will receive promptly by mail a circular containing full descriptions, with the terms on which they will be furnished, by addressing the publisher, post-paid, ROBERT SEARS, Publisher, oct 11 3w No. 181, William St., New York.

TEMPERANCE INN,

Bloomington, Indiana.

J. & S. M. ORCHARD, PROPRIETORS.

TRAVELLERS will find it to their advantage to call and try the accommodation of the TEMPERANCE INN. Stage office for all the different routes, in connection with this House. may25 6m

---

REAL ESTATE AND GENERAL AGENCY OFFICE,

INDIANAPOLIS, INDIANA.

UNDER THE CONTROL OF W. M'K. SCOTT, Attorney & Counsellor at Law, and Notary Public.

The attention of the Agency will be devoted,

First—To the collection of debts and the payment of Taxes for non-residents in any county in the State. Also, the redemption of Lands sold for Taxes, sale, purchase or lease of Lands, purchase of adverse claims, examination and perfection of Title, &c., &c

Second—To the prosecution of claims against the General Government, procuring Land Warrants, Patent Rights, and Pensions under the various Pension Laws, &c.

Third—All other Miscellaneous agencies as may be intrusted to the care of this office.

Fourth—The taking of Depositions and Attestation of all instruments requiring a seal

In all cases requiring an outlay of money for the benefit of individuals, the requisite funds must be transmitted in advance.

Prompt attention to all letters on business that are pre-paid. Address W. M'K. SCOTT,

Real Estate and General Agent,

jan 5-1y Indianapolis, Ind.

ADAMS & CO'S EXPRESS.

WE are now running a daily line East and West, accompanied by special messengers, and with the speed of the mails, running our own cars with the passenger trains.

Packages will be received at the cars up to the time of starting, and at our office until 1 o'clock each day.

We are prepared to transport packages, bank notes and specie, to and from any of the eastern cities, also, Louisville, Frankfort, and Lexington, Ky., St. Louis, Mo., or any points on the Ohio and Mississippi rivers; and to and from Terre Haute, and all intermediate points, and to forward freight from Terre Haute up and down the Wabash.

In addition to these, we have the most complete arrangements for transporting packages to and from California and Europe.

Exchange on England, Ireland, and Scotland, for sale, payable at any bank in the kingdom.

Foreign passage tickets; by Grinnell, Minturn & Co.'s line to Liverpool and London, constantly on hand, and for sale at the lowest rates.

Notes, drafts, and bills collected in any of the Eastern or Western cities.

Orders for goods to be returned by Express, sent free. Our rates of charges have been greatly reduced, and the public will find this a safe and expeditious method of transportation.

Indianapolis, June 30, 1852. ADAMS & CO.

Office in Indianapolis in Journal Building, west side Pennsylvania Street.

Office open during business hours.

june30 1y C. WOODWARD, Agent.

"God never made his works for man to mend." DR. FRANKLIN.

KIER'S ROCK OIL.

A NEW AND MOST IMPORTANT REMEDY FOR DISEASE.

DISCOVERED IN 1849.

IS drawn from a deep well near Pittsburgh—has been used with remarkable success in Ohio and Pennsylvania, and more Eastern States—and is now working its way West. An opportunity is now offered to the Afflicted for testing it. Where known and tried, it at once makes firm friends, and cures which are eloquent in its praise. Certificates of its power to heal are at hand—but we know well, reader, that such evidence, to have weight with you, now-a-days, must be in your own neighborhood.—You have only to try the Oil to be satisfied—it will SPEAK FOR ITSELF.

We have no war with the legion of Nostrums and Specifics of the day—we know but little about them—some say they are good for nothing. However that may be, the

Petroleum

will not be suppressed and kept back by reason of the above nostrums—duty and inclination both forbid it.

Those who are afflicted, are respectfully invited to get a Circular and look over the Directions for

Ague, Rheumatism, Piles, Diarrhœa, Flux, Tooth Ache, Burns, Worms, Scrofula, Coughs, Bronchitis, Croup, Old Sores, Cholera Morbus, Contractions of the Limbs and Joints, Sore Eyes, Blindness, Costiveness, Dyspepsia, and other Diseases.

By that time you may say, "it cures too much." But recollect it is not a HUMAN INVENTION, but compounded by Nature's master hand—and Nature does not do her work by halves.

The Oil is used both internally and externally.

As AGUE, SORE EYES, PILES, RHEUMATISM, and SCROFULA are so common in many parts of the West, we are constrained to say, that while this Oil will cure and relieve other diseases, it has been and is constantly used with most complete success in these cases.

☞ Price 50 cents per Bottle (half pint.)

Beware of all Rock Oil preparations, as some persons are offering a spurious article. Look for S. M. KIER'S name written on the label of the bottle.

For sale by the Druggists throughout Indiana, and by TOMLINSON BROTHERS, J P. POPE & Co., S. ROSENGARTEN, WM. TILLEY, and at wholesale by W. W. ROBERTS, Indianapolis, Indiana.

R. M. LYON, Fort Wayne,

may25 10w Proprietor in the Western States.

SOMETHING NEW.

LATHROP & STEVENS, Wholesale and Retail Dealers in BOOTS AND SHOES, at the West room in the Bates House, Washington Street, Indianapolis.

We are now opening a new and splendid stock of Boots and Shoes of every variety and style, which we are receiving direct from the manufacturers.—We design to keep constantly on hand a good assortment of the best quality of goods manufactured, which we can warrant to give satisfaction to all who may give them a trial. We will sell by the case, dozen, or single pair, at low prices for cash.—Our stock consists in part of Gents' fine Cloth, silk warp, glove kid, buck, patent calf, and enameled Gaiters and Ties of every variety and style; Ladies' fine silk warp Gaiters, Buskins, Ties, Slippers and Boots; Misses' ditto; Men's calf, goat, kip, and thick Boots and Brogans; Boys' and Youths' ditto; assorted Ladies, kid, goat and calf Boots and Buskins; Misses' ditto. Also every variety of Children's Shoes. Come and see for yourselves.

LATHROP & STEVENS,

may 25 4w Indianapolis, Indiana.

A CHANCE TO MAKE MONEY.

Profitable and honorable Employment!

THE Subscriber is desirous of having an agent in each county and town of the Union. A capital of from $5 to $10 only will be required, and anything like an efficient, energetic man can make from three to five dollars per day; indeed some of the Agents now employed are realizing twice that sum. Every information will be given by addressing, (postage paid) WM. A. KINSLER,

june 15 3w Box 601, Philadelphia P. O.

Railroad City Book Store.

COX & MATHES,

South side of Washington, between Illinois and Meridian streets,

INDIANAPOLIS, INDIANA.

AT wholesale and retail, Standard and Miscellaneous Works, Law, and Medical Books, School Books, Plain and Fancy Stationery, Blank Books, Wall Papers, &c., &c. mar 2

The American Life and Health Insurance Company.

Office—No. 7, South Third St., Philadelphia.

Officers.

LEONARD JEWELL, President.
JAMES PEACOCK, Treasurer.
JOHN C. SIMS, Sec'y and Actuary.
THOS. S. SMITH, Solicitor

JOHN F. BIRD, FRED. A. FICKARDT, } Medical Examiners.

CHARLES WOODWARD, Indianapolis, Ind., General Agent for the State of Indiana.

THIS Company issues policies at Total Abstinence Rates, Joint stock Rates, and at Mutual Rates, which for $1000 on the life of a person 30 years of age, are as follows:

Age.	Total Abstinence.	Joint Stock.	Mutual
30	$15.40	$19.60	$23.60

A further table of Rates will be furnished at the Office.

The condition in Total Abstinence rates (believed to be the lowest in the Union,) is entire forfeiture upon the departure of the Insured from Total Abstinence in its strictest sense.

Policies at Joint Stock and Mutual rates, contain no condition except as usual in Life Insurance.

HEALTH INSURANCE DEPARTMENT.

All Moneys received from the Insured, for Annual Premiums, after deducting expenses, will be divided among the Sick

The Public have for some time been familiar with the subject of Life and Health Insurance, but it is obvious that too little thoughts has been given to the latter. LIFE Insurance benefits our successors, while HEALTH Insurance directly benefits ourselves. It makes provision for a time of sickness, when the products of a man's industry are cut off, and want unites with Disease to aggravate his distress. It is at this gloomy period, when he is prostrated and helpless, and when despondency would otherwise overwhelm him, that the holder of a Health Insurance Policy will realize its benefits.

RATES, under 50 years of age.

$2,00	per year,	for	$2,00	per week.
3,00	"	"	3,00	"
4,00	"	"	4,00	"
5,00	"	"	5,00	"
6,00	"	"	6,00	"

Over fifty and under sixty.

$2,50	per year,	for	$2,50	per week.
3,75	"	"	3,00	"
5,00	"	"	4,00	"
6,25	"	"	5,00	"
7,50	"	"	6,00	"

When the Fund shall amount to Three Dollars and upwards for every person insured and sufficient to warrant an additional distribution, the weekly allowances will be increased in accordance with the Rules of the Policy.

All the members of a Temple or Division insured at greatly reduced rates.

Applications for Agencies in any of the cities or towns in the State, should be made to the undersigned, post paid, or in person.

As Agent for the above Company, I am prepared to receive applications for Policies at any of the above rates.

CHARLES WOODWARD, Agent,
At ADAMS & CO.'S Express Office.

J. L. MOTHERSHEAD, Medical Examiner.

june 30 '52-1y

Ohio Life Insurance Company,

Capital $100,000.

JOINT STOCK AND MUTUAL,

CINCINNATI.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS.

Wm. Burnet, Jno. N. Ridgway, Chas. Goodman, S. Robert, E. S. Haines, Jno. M. Blair, J. W. Donohue, Eden B. Reeder, Wm. Person.

WM. BURNET, President.

S. W. REEDER, Sec'y J. W. DONOHUE, Vice Pres't

Office in Reeder's Building, Third street, between Almy's and City Bank.

This Company insures Lives at the lowest rates consistent with safety, either upon the Joint Stock or Mutual plan.

In the Joint Stock Department, premium payable quarterly, semi-annually or annually. On the Mutual plan, one-half the premium paid in Cash, the balance by a note bearing six per cent. interest—the interest only payable annually. Persons insuring on the mutual plan, participate in the profits of the Company in that department.

The undersigned having been appointed agent for the above Company, is prepared to fill applications for Life Insurance, on favorable terms.

Any information on the subject and pamphlets explaining the nature and utility of Life Insurance, furnished without charge, at the office of the Agent.

C. WOODWARD, Agent.

Office at Adam's & Co.'s Express Office, Journal Building, Pennsylvania street, Indianapolis, Ind.

june 30, '52-1y.

THE LATEST WONDER of the 19th CENTURY.

DR. G. W. BENNETT'S

Celebrated Eye-Balm.

A SPECIFIC FOR CHRONIC, SORE, INFLAMED, AND WEAK EYES.

Prepared only by Dr. George W. Bennett, and for sale by Merchants and Druggists generally.

THIS Balm is an excellent and certain cure for sore and inflamed Eyes, in all cases of Psoroic, Scrofulous, and Purulent Opthalmia, and what is commonly termed wild hairs in the eye-lids. It is a specific in Infantile, Purulent, and Scrofulous Inflamed, and Sore Eyes, and all in the various diseases of the Eyes, that prevail among the human family, in every climate. It will be found a sovereign remedy if properly applied.

W. W. ROBERTS, Indianapolis, Ind. General Agent for State of Indiana, to whom all orders must be addressed

Price---Twenty-five Cents.

I warrant the above Balm to cure if the directions are strictly observed, or return the money.

june 22 4m G. W. BENNETT.

1,000 BOOK AGENTS WANTED,

TO SELL PICTORIAL AND USEFUL WORKS FOR THE YEAR 1851.

$1,000 Dollars a Year.

WANTED in every County of the United States, active and enterprising men, to engage in the sale of some of the best Books published in the country. To men of good address, possessing a small capital of from $25 to $100, such inducements will be offered as to enable them to make from $3 to $5 a day profit.

☞ The Books published by us are all useful in in their character, extremely popular, and command large sales wherever they are offered.

For further particular, address, (postage paid.)

ROBERT SEARS, Publisher,

oct 5 1m 181 William Street, New York.

JAMES HALL,

MERCHANT TAILOR,

No. 2. Temperance, Hall, Indianapolis,

Manufactu'ng & Clothing Emporium,

Wholesale and Retail Dealer in Ready Made Clothing, Cloths, Cassimers, Vestings, Trimmings, Trunks, Sachels, Canes, Umbrellas, Hats, Caps, a every description of Gentlemen's Furnishing.

Also:

General Agency for the sale of GRAND AND SUBORDINATE REGALIA, EMBLEMS, COSTUMES, &C., FOR THE ORDERS OF MASONS, ODD FELLOWS, TEMPLE OF HONOR, SON, DAUGHTERS, AND CADETS OF TEMPERANCE. oct27 1y

---

THE ILLUSTRATED MAGAZINE OF ART.

THE five numbers of this Magazine which are published, place it at the head of publications of this kind No expense will be spared to make it in every respect worthy of the name, the "Illustrated Magazine of Art. The Engavings which are preparing for the future numbers are in the hands of first-class American and European Artists.

A Series of most interesting Tales will appear in it. "The School of Life," written and Illustrated by ANNA MARY, daughter of William and Mary Howitt, will shortly appear; also, "The Dead Bridal," an historical romance, illustrative of the most interesting period in the history of the Venetian Republic, by JONATHAN FREKE SLINGSBY, of the Dublin University Magazine; contributions, too, from WILLIAM and MARY HOWITT, PERCY B. ST. JOHN, and other writers of distinction in America and Europe

The following is a brief outline of the plan of the Magazine:

I. The Historical Department will abound with picturesque representations of the most remarkable events which have occurred in this and other countries; accompanied with interesting anecdotes and details from the pen of the most eminent writers of the day. This department will contain several splendid engravings, designed by the first artists of the world, and engraved in the highest style of modern art.

II. The Men and Women of the Age. This department will consist of beautifully executed portraits of the leading characters of the age, especially of those who figure on the stage of humanity as the world's benefactors. Each portrait will be accompanied by an interesting biographical sketch

III. The Wonders of Natural History, Botany, and other sciences, will be developed in choice Engravings of Beasts, Birds, Fishes, Insects, Forest Trees, Flowers, Geological and Fossil Specimens, &c., with accompanying descriptions.

IV. The Triumphs of Architectural Art will be displayed in exquisitely finished representations of Cathedrals, Churches, Palaces, and other models of ancient and modern Architectural Art.

V. The Works of the Great Masters, selected from the principal Galleries of Art in the World. In general, the portrait of the Master will be given, accompanied with a highly finished engraved copy of his chef d'œuvre.

VI. The Scientific Portions will be rendered highly interesting by the familiar explanations, and the numerous diagrams which will accompany each subject.

VII. Manufactures. The principal manufacturing processes in use will be fully explained by minute details, and an abundance of beautiful engravings.

VIII. Machinery and Inventions will have due attention paid to them, and be described by numerous appropriate engravings.

IX. The Literary Department, independently of the various articles accompanying the illustrations, will comprise original and interesting narratives, contributed by the most popular writers of the day, with numerous illustrations.

In every respect, the "Illustrated Magazine of Art," will be decidedly

SUPERIOR TO ANY MAGAZINE OF THE DAY.

Each Monthly part will contain at least Thirty superb Engravings, four of which will be printed separately, on supefine Plate Paper.

The greatest care will be manifested in every department of production. The Paper will be of the first manufacture, and the Ink supplied from the celebrated Printing Ink Establishment of Messrs. Lawson & Co., of Paris. Six of the monthly portions, when completed, will form a volume which, for interest, originality, value and beauty, will defy competition. It will not only be an interesting family book, but a rich ornament for the drawing-room table, and a pleasant companion in the study.

The parts will appear on the First of every Month at Twenty-five Cents each.

ALEXANDER MONTGOMERY,

may 25 17 Spruce Street, New-York.

SPLENDIDLY ILLUSTRATED WORKS.

THE ALPS, SWITZERLAND, SAVOY AND LOMBARDY.

With the Magazine for June will be ready, Part I., price Twenty-five Cents, of a Magnificent Work to be completed in Twelve Monthly Parts, entitled

THE ALPS, SWITZERLAND, SAVOY AND LOMBARDY, with an account of the most recent Ascents to Mont Blanc, &c. By the Rev. Charles Williams. This work, when completed, will form a large thick Volume, in Imperial Octavo, containing upwards of Three Hundred beautiful Engravings, descriptive of the peculiar Scenery of those most interesting portions of Europe, with the Occupations of the Inhabitants, &c., &c.

Cassell's Natural History.

On the First of July will commence

CASSELL'S NATURAL HISTORY, which for variety, beauty and completeness, will claim to be considered as a first-class work, upon this most interesting subject. The First volume will be devoted to the Feathered Tribe of the Creation and will contain upwards of Three Hundred Engravings, in the first style of Art. The volume will be completed in Twelve Monthly Parts, Imperial Octavo. Price 25 cents each.

History of England.

On the First of July will appear Part I., price 25 cts. of THE ILLUSTRATED HISTORY OF ENGLAND, from the earliest period on record to the present time. Edited by ROBERT FERGUSON, LL. D.

This History, which is intended to form a great National Work, will extend to Four Volumes, Imperial Octavo; each Volume to be completed in Twelve Monthly Parts, price 25 cents each. The Work will comprehend the Political, Civil, and Domestic History of the Nation, and its Progress in Civilization, Literature, Art, &c. It will be profusely Illustrated with Engravings from Designs by GILBERT, PHILLIPPOTEAUX, WILLIAMS, and others. Representations of the most remarkable Events will be worked separately upon Plate Paper. The Portraits will form a complete Gallery, not only of the Monarchs, but of those individuals whose names are prominent in England's History. Also, Antiquities, including Autographs, Buildings, Costume, Furniture, Arms, Coins, Monuments, Manufactures &c., of each Epoch.

History of Hungary.

July First will be published, in one Handsome Volume, Imperial Octavo, price, One Dollar and Twenty-five Cents, in Cloth Boards,

THE ILLUSTRATED HISTORY OF HUNGARY, AND THE MAGYARS, from the Earliest Period to the close of the late War. By EDWARD LAWRENCE GODKIN. The Volume will be Illustrated with One Hundred highly finished Engravings, including representations of the principal Battles; Portraits of the early Kings, and of the Statesmen and Generals who figured in the War of Independence; Costumes of the Peasantry, &c.; Views of the chief Towns and Fortresses, &c.; with an accurate Description of the Manners and Customs of the People, their Literature, Commerce, Arts, &c.

ALEXANDER MONTGOMERY,

may25 Publisher, 17 Spruce Street, New-York.

MANSION HOUSE,

Cambridge City, Indiana.

J. CUNNINGHAM, Proprietor.

TRAVELLERS

Will find it to their advantage to call and try the accommodation of the MANSION HOUSE.

STAGE OFFICE also in connection with this House.

may 4 6m

INDIANA STATE LIBRARY

TEMPERANCE CHART.

A Weekly Journal:---Devoted to Temperance, Morality, Education, Literature, Useful Arts, Science, General Intelligence, &c.

ORGAN OF THE GRAND DIVISION OF INDIANA. [JOHN H. OHR, PRINTER.

VOL. III. INDIANAPOLIS, IND., WEDNESDAY, NOV. 2, 1853. NO. 19.

THE TEMPERANCE CHART,

IS PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY, BY THE GRAND DIVISION, S. of T. OF INDIANA.

TERMS:

Single copy, one year,..... 75 cts.

☞ In advance in all cases,

TERMS OF ADVERTISING.—Circulation 4000 copies.

One Squre, (12 lines,) for one week,	$0 50
" " for each subsequent insertion,	25
" " for 3 months,	3 00
" " for 6 months,	5 00
" " for 1 year without alteration,	8 00
" " for 1 year, with changes,	1002

A reduction made on larger advertisements.

Cuts double the above rates.

Advertisements must be handed in by Saturday, of each week, to insure insertion.

Applications for advertising, or for any kid of Printing for the Order, must be made to

J. H. OHR, Indinnapolis.

POETRY.

"GO FORTH INTO THE COUNTRY."

BY MRS. JAMES GRAY.

Go forth into the country,
From a world of care and guile,
Go forth to the untainted air,
And the sunshine's open smile,
It shall clear thy clouded brow—
It shall loose the worldly coil
That binds thy heart too closely up,
Thou man of care and toil!

Go forth into the country,
Where gladsome sights and sounds
Make the heart's pulses thrill and leap
With fresher, quicker bounds.
They shall wake fresh life within
The mind's enchanted bower;
Go, student of the midnight lamp,
And try their magic power.

Go forth into the country,
With its songs of happy birds,
Its fertile vales, its grassy hills,
Alive with flocks and herds.
Against the power of sadness
Is its magic all arrayed—
Go forth and dream no idle dreams,
Oh, visionary maid!

Go forth into the country,
Where the nut's rich clusters grow;
Where the strawberry nestles mid the furze
And the holly-berries grow.
Each season hath its treasures,
Like thee all free and wild—
Who would keep thee from the country,
Thou happy, artless child?

Go forth into the country,
It hath many a solemn grove,
And many an altar on its hills,
Sacred to peace and love.
And whilst with grateful fervor
Thine eyes its glories scan,
Worship the God who made it all,
Oh! holy Christian man.

[Dublin Univ. Mag.

MISCELLANEOUS.

A Beautiful Story.

BETTER THAN DIAMONDS.

I was standing in the broad, crowded street of a large city. It was a cold winter's day. There had been rain; and, although the sun was shining brightly yet the long icicles hung from the eaves of the houses, and the wheels rumbled loudly as they passed over the ground. There was a clear, bright look, and a cold wind, which quickened every step. Just then, a little child came running along—a poor, ill-clad child; her clothes were scant and threadbare; she had no cloak and no shawl, and her little bare feet looked red and suffering. She could not have been more than eight years old. She carried a bundle in her hand. Poor little shivering child! I, even I, who could do nothing else, pitied her. As she passed me, her foot slipped upon the ice, and she fell, with a cry of pain, but she held the bundle tightly in her hand, and, jumping up, although she was limping sadly, endeavored to run on as before.

"Stop, little girl, stop," said a sweet voice; and a beautiful woman, wrapped in a huge shawl, and with furs all around her, came out of a jeweler's store close by. "Poor little child," she said; "are you hurt? Sit down on this step and tell me." How I loved her, and how beautiful she looked! "Oh, I cannot," said the child; "I cannot wait—I am in such a hurry. I have been to the shoemaker's, and mother must finish this work to-night, or she will never get any more shoes to bind." "To-night," said the beautiful woman—"to-night!" "Yes," said the child—for the stranger's kind manner had made her bold—"yes, for the great ball to-night; and these satin slippers must be spangled; and—" The beautiful woman took the bundle from the child's hand and unrolled it. You do not know why her face flushed and then turned pale, but I, yes I, looked into the bundle, and on the inside of a slipper I saw a name—a lady's name—written but—I shall not tell it.

"And where does your mother live, little girl?"

So the child told her where and then she told her that her father was dead, and that her little baby brother was sick, and that her mother bound shoes that they might have bread; but that sometimes they were very cold; and that her mother sometimes cried, because she had no money to buy milk for her little sick brother. And then I saw that the lady's eyes were full of tears; and she rolled up the bundle quickly, and gave it back to the little girl, but she gave her nothing else—no not even one sixpence, and, turning away, went back into the store from which she had just come out. As she went away, I saw the glitter of a diamond pin. Presently she came back, and stepping into a handsome carriage, rolled off. The little girl looked after her for a moment, and then, with her little bare feet colder than they were before, ran quickly away. I went with the little girl, and I saw her go to a narrow, damp street, and into a small dark room and I saw her mother—her sad, faded mother, but with a face so sweet, so patient, hushing and soothing a sick baby. And the baby slept, and the mother laid it on her lap, and the bundle was unrolled; and a dim candle helped her with her work, for, thought it was not night, yet her room was very dark. Then, after a while, she kissed her little girl, and bade her warm her poor little frozen feet over a scanty fire in the grate, and gave her a little piece of bread, for she had no more, and then she heard her say her evening prayer, and, folding her tenderly to her bosom, blessed her, and told her that the angels would take care of her. And the little child slept, and dreamed—oh such pleasant dreams—of warm stockings and new shoes, but the mother sewed on, alone. And, as the bright spangles glittered on the satin slippers, came there no repinings in heart. When she thought of her little child's bare, cold feet, and of the scant morsel of dry bread, which had not satisfied her hunger, came there no visions of a bright room and gorgeous clothing, and a table loaded with all that was good and nice, one little portion of which spared to her would send warmth and comfort to her humble dwelling?

If such thoughts came, and others—of a pleasant cottage, and of one who had dearly loved her, and whose strong arm had kept want and trouble from her and her babes, but who could never come back—if these thoughts did come, repiningly, there came also another: and the widow's hands were clasped, and her head bowed low in deep contrition, as I heard her say, "Father, forgive me. for thou dost all things well, and I will trust thee." Just then the door opened softly, and some one entered. Was it an angel? Her dress was of spotless white, and she moved with a noiseless step. She went to the bed where the sleeping child lay, and covered it with soft warm blankets. Then presently a fire sparkled and blazed there, such as the little old grate had never known before. Then a huge loaf was upon the table, and fresh milk for the sick babe. Then she passed gently before the mother, and drawing the unfinished slipper from her hand, and placed there a purse of gold, and said, in a voice like music, "Bless thy God, who is the God of the fatherless and the widow"—and she was gone; only, as she went out, I heard her say, "better than diamonds—better than diamonds!" What could she mean? I looked at the mother. With clasped hands; and streaming eyes, she blessed her God, who had sent an angel to comfort her. So I went too; and I went to a bright room, where there were music, and dancing, and sweet flowers; and I saw young, happy faces, and beautiful women, richly dressed, and sparkling with jewels; but none that I knew, until one passed me whose dress was of simple white, with only a rose-bud on her bosom, and whose voice was like the sweet sound of a silver lute. No spangled slipper glittered upon her foot; but she moved as one that treadeth upon the air, and the divine beauty of Holiness that so glorified her face, that I felt, as I gazed upon her, that she was indeed an angel of God.

INDIANA STATE LIBRARY INDIANAPOLIS

THE BIBLE.—There are in all sixty-six books which compose the volume of Holy Writ, which are attributed to more than thirty different authors, or writers of the whole. Half of the New Testament was composed by St. Paul, and the next largest writer is the gentle and beloved St. John. With the single exception of Paul, neither history nor tradition has ever testified that these powerful thinkers and writers ever enjoyed the benefits of education, or that they were trained to scholarship and learning; and how ably have they written; what eminent characters have been chronicled by them; and what great events recorded, both for time and eternity! Jeremiah is sorrowful; Isaiah sublime; David poetical; Daniel sagacious; Habakkuk and Haggai terrible and denunciatory, but they all seem to have exercised their natural gifts under the influence of Divine direction and inspiration! Moses, with his vast knowledge, and profound intelligence—the legislator, the reformer, the deliverer, commenced the work; and John, with his depth of feeling and exquisite tenderness and simplicity, completed it. And, what do we know of the lives of all those, or even of the two last mentioned? Nothing that human vanity might exult in. Moses was rescued from the oozy rushes of the Nile; and John died in his old age, a lonely exile on the small island of Patmos.

BE YOURSELF.—Insist on yourself, never imitate. Your own gift you can present every moment with the emulative force of a whole life's cultivation; but of the adopted talent of another, you have only an extemporaneous, half possession. That which each can do best, none but his Maker can teach him. No man yet knows what it is; nor can, till that person has exhibited it. Where is the master who could have taught Shakspeare?—Where is the master who could have instructed Franklin, or Washington, or Bacon, or Newton? Every great man is a unique. The Scipionism of Scipio is precisely that part he could not borrow.—Shakspeare will never be made by the study of Shakspeare. Do that which is assigned you, and you cannot hope too much. There is at this moment for you an utterance brave and grand as that of the colossal chisel of Phidias, or trowel of the Egyptians, or the pen of Moses, or Dante, but different from all these.—Emerson.

WHICH IS THE WORST?—A liquor-seller, in a heated discussion about the Maine Law, exclaimed—

"These temperance men carry matters altogether too far. We never compel men to buy or use liquor, but if they are fools enough to do it, it is their look out, not ours.'

'Sir,' said a bystander, 'do you say a man is a fool who buys and drinks liquor to excess?

'Yes, any man is a fool to do it, I don't care who he is,' said the liquor dealer.

'Well, sir,' replied the bystander, I will not dispute you; but if the man who drinks is fool to spend his time and money in a way that is ruining his property, character, health, happiness, family, soul and body, what must be the character of the man who will take advantage of his folly, because he can make money by it? If the one is a fool, is not the other a knave?'

AMERICA IN LESS THAN FOUR DAYS.—We are enabled to announce, that, by a new and much improved construction of vessels, it will be perfectly practicable to accomplish the voyage between the United States and the United Kingdom in considerable less than four days; in fact, in about three days and a half; the ports connecting the Old and New Worlds, being Halifax and Galway. This is no speculative statement. It is grounded on experiments which have already been made to test the sailing capabilities of vessels constructed on the new principle. With the submarine telegraph, which is about to be laid down between Halifax and Galway, and the passage of vessels in three days and a half across the Atlantic, America and Great Britain will virtually become one colossal country, inhabited and governed by the Saxon race.—London Morning Advertiser.

Innocence is very far from finding as much protection as crime.

Beautiful Illustration.

Rev. Mr. Willets, of Philadelphia, in illustrating the blessedness of cultivating a liberal spirit uses this figure:

"See," he says, "that little fountain yonder—away yonder in the distant mountain, shining like a thread of silver through the thick copse, and sparkling like a diamond in its healthful activity. It is hurrying on with tinkling feet to bear its tribute to the river. See! it passes a stagnant pool, and the pool hails it: 'Whither away, master streamlet?' 'I am going to the river, to bear this cup of water God has given me.' 'Ah, you are very foolish for that—you'll need it before the summer's over. It has been a backward spring and we shall have a hot summer to pay for it—you will dry up then.' 'Well,' said the streamlet, 'if I am to die so soon, I had better work while the day lasts. If I am likely to loose this treasure from the heat, I had better do good with it while I have it.' So on it went, blessing and rejoicing in its course. The pool smiled complacently at its own superior foresight, and husbanded all its resources, letting not a drop steal away. Soon the midsummer heat came down, and it fell upon the little stream. But the trees crowded to its brink, and threw out their sheltering branches over it in the day of adversity, for it brought refreshment and life to them; and the sun peeped through the branches and smiled complacently upon its dimpled face, and seemed to say, 'It's not in my heart to harm you; and the birds sipped its silver tide and sang its praises, the flowers breathed their perfume upon its bosom, the beast of the field loved to linger near its banks, the husbandmen's eye always sparkled with joy as he looked upon the line of verdant beauty that marked its course through its fields and meadows; and so on it went, blessing and blessed of all!

"And where was the prudent pool? Alas! in its inglorious inactivity it grew sickly and pestilential. The beasts of the field put their lips to it, but turned away without drinking; the breeze stopped and kissed it by mistake, but shrunk chilled away. It caught the maleria in the contact, and carried the ague through the region, and the inhabitants caught it and had to move away; and at last the very frogs cast their venom upon the pond and deserted it, and Heaven in mercy to man, smote it with a hotter breath, and dried it up!

"But did not the little stream exhaust itself? Oh, no! God saw to that; it emptied its full cup into the river, and the river bore it into the sea, and the sea welcomed it, and the sun smiled upon the sea, and the sea sent up its incense to greet the sun, and the clouds caught in their capacious bosom the incense from the sea, and the winds like waiting steeds, caught the chariots of the clouds and bore them away—away to the mountain that gave the little fountain birth—and there they tipped the brimming cup, and poured the grateful baptism down; and so God saw to it, that the little fountain, though it gave so fully and so freely, never ran dry. And if God so bless the fountain, will he not bless you, my friends if 'as ye have freely received, ye freely give?' Be assured he will."

A Delighted Mother.

A mother, who was in the habit of ask- her children, before they retired at night, what they had done to make others happy, found her young twin daughters silent. One spoke modestly of deeds and dispositions founded on the golden rule, 'Do unto others as ye would they should do unto you.' Still these little bright faces were bowed in silence. The question was again repeated.

'I can remember nothing good all this day, dear mother; only one of my schoolmates was happy because she gained the head of the class, and I smiled on her and ran to kiss her; so she said I was good.—This was all dear mother."

The other spoke more timidly: A little girl, who sat with me on the bench at the school had lost a little brother. I saw, that while she studied her lesson, she hid her face in her book and wept. I felt sorry, and laid my face on the same book and wept with her. Then she looked up and was comforted, and put her arms around my neck; but I do not know why she said I had done her good.

Old age is a tyrant, which prohibits all the pleasures of youth upon pain of death.

There is an excess of good and evil which passes our sensibility.

Down with the Groggeries.

Wherever we go, we see the awful evidence of that curse, which has so long desolated our country. We hear constantly of brilliant youth and venerable age, and consumed by the destroying vice of mothers, wives and daughters, rendered wretched and broken hearted by its fatal facination; and we ask ourselves how long is this scourge to last—when will society, aroused to its danger drive the dread demon from its bosom? We speak of the vice itself, not of the indulgence.

There is such a vice prevailing in almost every community, and it is insidiously hardening the hearts, subduing the consciences, and destroying the lives of its votaries. They resort at first to the delusive gratification for the sake of health, or consolation, convivial enjoyment, but whilst they are gradually enslaved, and neither fear nor affection, however eloquent their appeals, can effectually sever the chain. How bitter the tears this vice is now wringing in secret from hopeless eyes! How keen the pangs it is inflicting every day, upon the hearts that throb in vain for the ruin it has produced! What is its cause and what the remedy.

The cause of all this sin and sorrow may be found in the drinking habits of the people.—These habits are fostered by various causes, but more especially by the temptations held out by the vast number of houses and shops established all over the country for the purpose of creating and pandering to the vicious propensities of men. The groggeries and other similar establishments, are school houses of intemperance, crime and infamy, and must be put down, or the dreadful work of demoralization and ruin will still go on with all its horrible results. How this can be prudently and safely accomplished, we are not prepared or qualified to determine. Legislation of some sort, directed at the source of the evil, is evidently needed, and yet there are delicate rights belonging naturally to man, which are liable to be violated by almost any measures adopted for this end. These rights must be respected, and some radical remedy applied at the same time to the awful curse, which, yielding to no other means, seems to require at the hands of society the most strenuous exercise of the law-making power for its removal.—Raleigh (N. C.) Weekly Post.

KEEP TO THE RIGHT.

"Keep to the right, as the law directs,
For such is the law of the road;
Keep to the right, whoever expects Securely to travel life's road."

A most excellent regulation is that of "keeping to the right." For centuries such has been the "law of the road."—For centuries they who traveled north or south, and they who traveled east or west, did obey the law, and there were no collisions, no disturbances. But in this nineteenth century the letter of this law hath been broken in order to give its spirit more power and effect. Plank roads are a peculiar feature of this age. Plank roads are a great accommodation—a decided improvement over the old road. But the law of the plank road is changed. Loaded vehicles are entitled to the plank, and light vehicles must turn out, no matter whether it be to the right or to the left. They who travel for pleasure must give the track to those who are loaded and carry burdens. Such is the law of plank roads. A most righteous law is this.

Like the law of the roads, so do the civil laws yield before the progress of the age—yield not in spirit but in the letter. The old law which defined and enforced "right," was most wise, quite necessary and very excellent in its day and generation. But its stern and unbending rules must yield, in order that the pure principles of justice, on which it was founded, may prevail. Its letter must give way, that its spirit may give life. They who travel life's road for pleasure should be made to turn—no matter if it be to the right or to the left—when they meet those who are heavily laden.—American Artisan.

☞ Eight hundred gallons of liquor were condemned at Bangor, Maine, on the 7th, and swallowed by mother Earth, who seems to be indulging rather freely in the use of intoxicating liquors. The Bangor Mercury says that City Marshal Farnham of that city has seized under the liquor law, eight thousand four hundred and forty-three gallons of liquor, and most of it has been condemned and destroyed.

TEMPERANCE CHART.

WEDNESDAY, NOV. 2, 1853.

Notice.

The Committee appointed by the Grand Division to provide for the future publication of the Temperance Chart, respectfully solicit bids to take said Chart and publish it on individual responsibility. And as there is now due from said Chart to its subscribers about $700, bids will be taken for the supply of papers to said subscribers. Bids to be forwarded to the Grand Scribe by the 15th day of November.

C. F. CLARKSON, Ch'n.

Oct. 28, 1853.

The Committee will meet at Rushville, on Thursday, Nov. 17th, at 2 o'clock, P. M.

Grand Division.

The Eighth Annual Session of the Grand Division of Indiana, was held in this city last week.

The attendance was larger than at any meeting of this body ever before held, evincing the fact that although the friends of temperance and morality are not as active as they should be in view of the importance of their work, yet when the occasion demands it they are not wanting in duty, and if thoroughly roused, as we doubt not they will be before the next annual election, they will leave their mark upon some of those Janus-faced politicians who are now feeding at the public crib.

The amount of business transacted was not as great as at some former sessions, but as a general thing the legislation at this session was of a practical kind, and well calculated for the present crisis of the temperance cause.

Several appeals were decided, settling the following principles:

That a Son of Temperance cannot deal out whiskey to hands in his employ, even though he has no interest in the same, and does so only to keep them from getting too much.

A brother cannot resign his membership in a Division after he has violated the pledge, in order to avoid expulsion.

A Brother after passing the W. P's chair, may be elected to another office by the Division without serving as P. W. P. for three months and thereby looses none of the honors of office.

No brother who has violated the pledge can hold office for twelve months after being re-instated.

No Son of Temperance can vote in favor of a Grocery License.

Other local appeals of no general interest to the Order, were also decided. The Report of the Grand Scribe showed the following condition of the Order for the past year:

Initiated, 3843; admitted by card, 352; withdrawn, 985; suspended, 643; expelled, 1779; violated pledge, 1104; deaths, 83; present number of members, 11,077 in 301 Divisions, the balance not having reported.

The receipts for the year, including the amount in the treasury at its commencement, have been - - - $3,665 62

And the expenditure, - 3,946 40

The Grand Division is in debt about Eight Hundred Dollars.

Strong resolutions were passed against the practice of Sons of Temperance spending their time about Groceries and Beer Shops, and against the use or sale of Cronks or other Beers by them—against the practice of some Divisions initiating persons under eighteen years of age. Also in favor of suspension of Benefits, and circulation of Temperance tracts by Divisions.

The Grand Division also voted to borrow one thousand dollars, to pay up its outstanding debts and future liabilities—to give the Temperance Chart to some responsible publisher, have the same enlarged one-third and published at one dollar per annum, and a committee of five was appointed to make the necessary arrangements. Until those arrangements are made, (which will be in a few weeks,) the publication of the Chart will be suspended.

We publish in another column some resolutions to which we invite the attention of temperance men and members of the Order generally.

After a session of near three days, the Grand Division adjourned on Friday to meet at Lawrenceburgh, on the second Tuesday in April next, at 6 o'clock P. M.

In no session has more harmony prevailed, and scarcely a disputed proposition came before the Grand Division. Nearly every proposition or resolution was carried by a unanimous vote, and often with applause, which could not be checked by the presiding officer, so much in earnest were the members. We yet hope to see many such sessions. The proceedings of the session will be published as soon as the necessary arrangements can be made.

The following officers were elected for the ensuing year:

R. T. Brown, Crawfordsville, G. W. P.
E. M. H. Berry, Milroy, G. W. A.
C. Woodward, Indianapolis, G. Scribe.
Henry Ohr, " " G. T.
J. T. Wallace, Bowling Green, G. C.
J. B. Abbett, Columbus, G. Chap.
Peter Winchel, Indianapolis, G. Sent.

The New Ritual.

The Ritual adopted for the Sons of Temperance by the National Division, is now for sale by the Grand Scribe, at Two Dollars a sett, including Odes.

By reference to the following resolutions, passed by the Grand Division, it will be seen that it is absolutely necessary for Divisions to obtain it previous to the first of January next:

Resolved, That from and after the 1st of January, 1854, the old Ritual shall cease to be used in all the Subordinate Divisions, and the new Ritual provided by the National Division, be substituted in its place.

Resolved, That the Grand Scribe be required to withhold the pass-words from all Divisions not complying with the above requirements, and that they be not entitled to a representative in the Grand Division.

Resolved, That the Grand Division require of all Subordinate Divisions to destroy the old Rituals in their possession by burning the same so soon as the new is received by them, and to report that fact to the G. S., attested by the signature of their W. P. and R. S.

Constitution of Subordinate Divisions.

The National Division at its late session at Chicago, made the following changes in the Constitution of Subordinate Divisions:

Initiation Fee.—Subordinate Divisions may initiate for one dollar.

Suspension.—Members suspended for six months may be admitted as new members, but forfeit all honors previously obtained.

Members suspended for non-payment of dues, to retain their honors, must pay the whole amount of dues which may have accrued to the time thev are re-instated.

Installations.—Installation ceremonies in Grand and Subordinate Divisions may be performed in public at the option of Divisions.

Financial Basis.—Each Subordinate Division shall pay not more than five cents per quarter for each of its members, whose name may appear on the F. S's books, to be sent with the returns to the Grand Division, at the close of each quarterly term.

This last change makes a material difference in the reports of Divisions to the Grand Division, as hereafter all Divisions will be required to pay 5 cents per quarter for each member they report, instead of 5 per cent. on receipts as heretofore.

Harris' Mirror of Intemperance and Crime.

We insert the following resolution passed last week by the Grand Division of Indiana, in reference to this Panorama:

Resolved, That we regard the exhibition of Harris' Mirror of Intemperance and Crime, as an appropriate and valuable agency in the furtherance of the cause of temperance, and that we recommend it as worthy the patronage of temperance men.

☞ A man recently, while in liquor, crawled in on top of a boiler in a machine shop, in Detroit, and dropping asleep, was literally baked when he was discovered.

Grand Union.

The Grand Union D. of T. of Indiana convened in this city on the 26th inst. Mrs. R. C. Hinds, of Madison, G. P. S.

We notice the following resolutions passed by that body:

Whereas, We believe our favorite Order, which was planned in love, and dedicated to God with prayer, has done an untold amount of good, in laying a solid and permanent foundation, upon which can be built a temple immense in structure and immortal in renown, and which charitably admits of additions and improvements; Therefore,

Resolved, That we recommeud to subordinate Unions the experiments of holding public meetings in the several communities, where it may seem expedient, to be addressed by ladies or judicious gentlemen, on the subject of female co-operation with them in the Temperance reformation, to the exclusion of every other subject foreign from this great, this woman's work. The same to be held at such time and place as they may deem proper.

Resolved, That we recommend to each member of this Grand Union to subseribe for a copy of the Temperance Chart, and also, that we recommend the members of subordinate Unions to subscribe individually. Also,

Resolved, That we recommend the Recording Scribes of each subordinate Union to contribute to the columns of the Chart.

Resolved, That the thanks of the Grand Union are due, and they are hereby tendered to G. H. Dunn, Esq., President of the L. & U. M. R. R. for his kindness in presenting the delegates from Lawrenceburgh Union with a through ticket.

The following officers were elected to serve the ensuing year:

G. P. S., Mrs. E. Foote, of Danville.

G. S. A., Mrs. M. Maulsby, of Economy.

G. S. S., Mrs. E. Richmond, of Indianapolis.

G. S. T., Mrs. M. Given, of Indianapolis.

G. S. Chap., Mrs. S. C. Blair, of Perrysville.

G. S. Con., Mrs. A. M. Stewart, of Mount Vernon.

G. S. Sen., Miss M. A. Tolman, of Lafayette.

The proceedings of the Grand Union will be published in pamphlet form.

To the Point.

The Cayuga Baptist Association, at its fifty-third Annual Meeting, held in Skaneatelas last month; passed the following resolutions:

Resolved, That we look upon intemperance as one of the greatest hindrances to the spread of the gospel of Christ—that it is relatively and positively an unmitigated evil and crime—that it not only hinders those who are its most degraded victims from entering into the kingdom—"No drunkard shall inherit the kingdom of God" but by means of its temples and shrines which are erected and crowded with worshippers throughout the length and breadth of the land, outnumbering the Churches of the living God—it is keeping thousands and thousands of the youth, middle aged, and aged of our country from the places and means of grace.

Resolved, That we regard the passage of a "Maine Law," or a law resembling that in its principle features, and its faithful execution, to be the most efficient means now before the people for stopping the fearful ravages which intemperance is making upon the Christianity and political integrity of our land—and as ministers and laymen we pledge ourselves to use all the lawful means which God has placed in our hands, to secure the passage of such a law.

Indiana Sabbath School Agency.—The American Sunday School Union has established at Indianapolis a depository and agency for the State of Indiana. Mr. J. W. McIntyre is the agent. All persons who wish for information in regard to the operations of the Union, or to obtain employment as missionaries, or to procure its publications, or generally any advice or assistance in regard to Sabbath Schools, should address Mr. McIntyre. The location of this agency is permanent, the stock is ample to meet all the wants of the State, and the numerous railroads and other facilities of travel enable the agent to send books promptly to any part of the State. We hope that ministers and Christians of all denominations will avail themselves of the offered assistance of this agency, and do more in their respective localities to establish and sustain Sabbath Schools.

Those visiting Indianapolis, may learn the residence of the agent by obtaining his card at Fridley & Cottman's clothing store, No. 21 South Washington street, opposite the Capital House.

As many of our readers are Sabbath School men, we recommend the preservation of this notice.

Temperance Legislation.

The following Report and Resolutions unanimously adopted at the Session of the Grand Division in this city last week were ordered to be published in the Chart and all the papers in the State were requested to copy the same. We hope they will do so:

To the Grand Division of the State of Indiana.

Your Committee to whom was referred so much of the G. W. P's. Report as referred to legal Suasion or Legislative action, beg leave to say, that they are more than pleased with the sentiment so ably expressive in that Report, and feel, that it does honor to the man, the cause it advocates, and the body over which he had presided for the last year, and after having given as much consideration to the subject as time and circumstances would permit beg leave to submit the following Preamble and Resolutions.

Whereas your Committee would join with the G. W. P. in saying that we believe the time has fully come when high ground should be taken by Temperance men generally, and that ground should be taken now; And Whereas, that stand should be taken boldly, fearlessly. And not to be surrendered until the victory is won, and continued upon the principle of victory or death until the accomplishment of that desired object; And Whereas, it is a principal in moral ethics fully sustained by experience that to be successful in any good work that is contested by enemies is for the persons engaged in the contest to understand each other and to be united in all their efforts when this becomes the case, Victory sets perched upon our Banner; And Whereas, it is believed by your committee that in order to this understanding and union of effort, the G. D. should take decisive action in recommending some mode of warfare together with the means to be employed in carrying it out. And in the opinion of your committee the plan suggested by the G. W. P. is as good a basis of action as we can adopt; And Whereas, other orders both Ecclesiastical and Moral have been and still are passing stringent resolutions upon the subject of a prohibitory law such as the Maine Law, or something better: Therefore

1st. Resolved, That this G. D. fully and heartily endorse the sentiments of the G. W. P. in his Report on the subject of legal Suasion or Legislative Enactment.

2nd. Resolved, That as members of the order of Sons of Temperance, we individually pledge ourselves to vote in future for no man for law making or law enforcing, who is opposed to a prohibitory law, but on the contrary we will without regard to party, vote for men in favor of such a law, when such candidates can be found, but at the same time we would discountenance the organization of a distinct temperance party.

3d. Resolved, That the G. D. recommend to the members of the order, their co-operation with the members of the different Temperance orders in their vicinity, and the friends of Temperance generally, the formation of a society to be styled the Prohibitory Law Temperance League in each of their respective townships throughout the State, the object of which shall be to promote that union so much desired in carrying out the principles couched in the foregoing resolutions on the subject of voting by a combination of all the elements of Temperance, and their concentration to the one great and important object we have in view.

4th. Resolved, That this G. D. recommend the holding of Prohibitory Law Temperance meetings in every School District throughout the State, and that every Son of Temperance consider himself special lecturer in his own township, and wherever else he may happen to go, and that it be made a subject of conversation in all the families and circles we may happen to be thrown.

6th. Resolved, That it is the opinion of this G. D. that for any Son of Temperance to refuse or fail to carry out the principles couched in the foregoing shall be deemed a palpable violation of the faith and trust reposed in him by the G. D. as a true Son of Temperance.

7th. Resolved, That a copy of the above preamble and resolutions be furnished by the G. S. for publication in the Chart, and that all the papers published in the State be respectfully requested to copy.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

John Wallace,
John Leach,
A. C. Mitchell.

☞ The following lines present a lively portraiture of one of the most trying positions in which man can be placed. We hope there may not be many to whom they will apply in future:

"There is a deadlier pang than that which beads
With chilly death-drops the o'ertortured brow,
When one has a big heart and feeble hands,—
A heart to hew his name out upon time
As on a rock, then in immortalness
To stand on time as on a pedestal;
When hearts beat to this tune, and hands are weak,
We find our aspirations quenched in tears,
The tears of impotence and self-contempt,
That loathsome weed up-springing in the heart,
Like nightshade 'mong the ruins of a shrine."

Items of News.

☞ Lancaster City, Pa., gave a majority of about 200 votes for the Prohibition candidates, at the late election.

☞ The license for selling liquor has been raised to $1,500 in Marion, Ala., by the town council.

☞ Eleven millions of bushels of corn are annually used for purposes of distillation in the United States.

Connecticut.—The State Temperance Convention met at Meriden, on the 13th ult., and resolved on strong political action, without forming a third party. The Maine Law will be the great issue throughout the State.

The principal liquor sellers in Chicago held a meeting on Thursday evening last week, and adopted a resolution to charge "ten cents per drink for all liquors except beer and cider,"—the resolution to take effect on the first of October.

☞ It is stated that the annual gains of the East India Company on the pernicious drug, opium, are, on a moderate estimate, $21,000,000; and it is presumed to exceed even that enormous sum. This is a most inhuman traffic, spreading poverty, disease, crime, ruin, and death among millions.

☞ No man ever found in the Bible any incitement to liquor drinking or selling until he had first found it somewhere else; and no man ever felt impelled by the Bible to favor the liquor traffic one moment longer than he was inclined that way by considerations outside of the Bible.—N. Y. Tribune.

☞ The Prosecuting Attorney of Tuscarawas County, Ohio, after careful scrutiny, has declared that costs, expenses, loss of time, fees, &c., of lawsuits, growing out of the use of liquor, has cost the people of that county more than $18,000 in eighteen months! This is a greater sum than the entire county tax levied in that county.

☞ A Carson League State Convention was held at Rochestor, N. Y., last week. The object of this Society is the suppression of the liquor traffic. The members all consent to be taxed at the rate of fifty cents on each thousand dollars of their property, to raise a fund to be used in prosecutions, and to form the basis of a political and moral organization. In some counties the league covers three or four millions of property.

☞ The Grand Division of the Sons of Temperance of Kentucky, which was in session at Frankfort last week, adjourned on Saturday. The attendance was large. Charles Eginton resigned the position of editor of the New Era. R. H. Buckley, of Newcastle, was elected Grand Worthy Patriarch, and Rev. H. H. Kavanaugh, of Versailles, Grand Worthy Associate, for the ensuing year.

Vermont.—The Anti-Liquor Law.—The Grand Jury of Chittenden County, Sept. 1853, say:

"The Grand Jurors in obedience to the charge of the Court, have inquired into the operations and effect of the present Liquor Law, and are unanimous in the opinion of its good effect upon the morals and happiness of the community. They commend the fidelity of those officers of the law, whose duty it has been to see this law enforced."

From the Fountain Journal.

Grand Division.

The Annual Session of the Grand Division was held in Portland on Tuesday and Wednesday of this week. There was a fair attendance, and all of the members present seemed full of the right spirit. It seemed to be the determination of all present to do all they could to infuse a new spirit of life into the order.

The pecuniary affairs of the G. D. have for a long time been in an embarrased condition, and its debt has hung like an incubus upon it. We are now glad to be able to say that it will all be paid up the next session, at Buckfield, unless something wholly unexpected turns up. The whole debt was some three hundred and fifty dollars, and money enough was pledged and raised at this session to cover it all, with the exception of about seventy five dollars. We know this will be good news for every member of the Order.

The reports from brothers from different sections of the State showed a great deal of energy and determination in suppressing the evils of intemperance by enforcing the law. They have been at work and much good has been the result. We hope ere long to give an account of these operations to our readers.

The officers of the G. D. for the ensuing year are

G. W. Bourne, Bennebunk, G. W. P.
Thos. Chase, Ruckfield, G. W. A.
H. K. Morrell, Gardiner, G. S.
Chas. Hamlin Augusta, G. T.
J. B. Thorndike, Portland, G. C.
G. C. Grant, Prospect, G. Sen.
Rev. J. L. Stevens, Norway, Chaplain.

Report of the G. S. S. of the Grand Union D. of T. of Indiana.

Sisters of the Grand Union:

In accordance with the requirements of the constitution, I present you with a report of the transactions of the Grand Union since its last session, viz:

RECEIPTS.

Cash in Grand Treasury, October 27th, 1853,	$10,19
Receipts for Charter fees,	25,00
Receipts for Constitutions, Forms,	10,23
Receipts for Per-centage,	18,10
Receipts for sale of Regalia,	3,50
	$67,02

EXPENDITURES.

Stationery and incidental expenses,	$08,95
Postage,	6,03
Grand Scribe's Salary,	37,50
Cash on hand to balance;	14,54
	$67,02

The following is the condition of the Order, as obtained from the quarterly returns, which will be imperfect, as half the Unions have failed to forward their returns.

Initiated,	131
Admitted by Card,	1
Withdrawn,	32
Suspended,	14
Expelled,	5
Deaths,	3
Present number of Members,	600
Received on Initiations,	$47,60
Received on Dues,	250,68
Received on Donations,	15,75
Per-centage due the Grand Union	16,50

Charters have been granted to the following Unions, viz:

Golden Union, No. 69, at Romney,
Manchester Union, No. 70, at New Manchester,
Rushville Union, No. 71, at Rushville,
North Salem Union, No. 72, at North Salem,
Laurel Wreath Union, No. 73, at Trouts,

The thanks of the Grand Union, are due to the G. D's., S. of T. who have kindly aided us in organizing Unions in districts where we found it impracticable to send a delegate from our own body.

The following Unions have surrendered their Charters and thereby become extinct. Madison Union, No. 1, Brazil, No. 15, Excelsior, No. 34, and Pleasant. No. 51.

The following Unions have responded to the resolution passed at the last session of the Grand Union, recommending subordinate Unions to contribute, from their treasury the sum of two dollars or more, to defray the expense of a delegate to the National Union, viz:

Delaware, No. 56,	$2,00
Perrysville, No. 48,	5,00
Bowling Green, No. 59,	8,00
Lawrenceburgh, No. 10,	5,00
Evergreen, No. 44,	2,00
Purity, No. 46,	3,00
Pleasant, No. 51,	2,00
Economy, No. 57,	2,00
Sugar Grove, No. 61,	2,00
Manchester, No. 43,	2,00
Excelsior, No. 34,	2,00
Fidelity, No. 37,	2,00
Newburgh, No. 58,	2,00
Sigourney, No. 2,	5,00
Hemans, No. 3,	2,00
	$41,00

The above sum being insufficient to defray the expenses of a delegate to Philadelphia, it was by order of the advisory committee placed on interest in the hands of Mr. S. Fletcher, and it remains with this body to say what further disposition shall be made of the same.

DEAR SISTERS: Standing as we do at the close of another year, it becomes us to pause, and while we cast a retrospective glance over the past, to ask ourselves what we have accomplished in the great cause in which we have been engaged—the cause of Temperance. Have we existed merely as an Order without producing any beneficial results? or has our example been like the gentle dews, which though it falls quietly and unseen, yet gives a deeper tint to the rose and a richer fragrance to the violet.

While we claim not for woman a place in the arena of public strife, yet we believe that a field of usefulness, broad and extensive is stretched out before her, into which she may enter and claim her rights without infringing upon those of the other sex.

To us my sisters are committed the care and education of the youth of both sexes. Let us see to it then that we perform our part well, and while we may fail to accomplish all we might desire, in reclaiming the inebriate, let us endeavor so to educate the youth of our Land, that when the present generation of Rumsellers and Rumdrinkers shall have gone down to their graves of degradation, these youths may be prepared to come forward as the advocates of Temperance and good order.

Let us as Mothers educate our Sons so thoroughly in the principles of Temperance, that no arguments of the seducer shall be able to lead them astray. Let us so educate our daughters that they will give no countenance to the inebriate, or to him who is ten fold worse than the inebriate, would make his fortnne and gild his palace with the tears and groans of the widow and orphan. Yes we will teach our daughters to shun him as they would the libertine, the gambler, the thief, and the murderer. In short let us endeavor to make our homes so pleasant and our firesides so cheerful and entertaining that our sons will have no need to go elsewhere to seek amusements. Let us throw wide our doors for the reception of those who are bereft of a mother's home and a mother's welcome, and furnish for them amusements and entertainments of such a character, that they will have no relish for the crowded saloon or the bachanalian revel.

But we need not confuse our sphere of action within the family circle; our influence should be felt throughout the length and breadth of our State. Let us then withdraw our patronage from all who are in any way connected with the horrid trafic in Intoxicating Liquors. Let us form Societies for the purpose of circulating Temperance Tracts, and if our brethren should fail to go forward in this matter, let us prepare Memorials to the Legislature for a prohibitory law, and then visit every city, town and neighborhood, and call upon every man and every woman for his or her signature, so that by the next Session of our Legislature we may be able to present such an array of names as shall convince them that the people of Indiana must and will be heard.

This is no time to slumber, too many, Alas! of our fellow beings have already gone down to the drunkard's grave, while the wail of the widow and orphan may be heard throughout the length and breadth of our land; and though our Legislators and rulers may heed it not, yet it is still ascending and entering into the ear of Jehovah, who will, most assuredly, cause his vengeance to fall not only on him who drinks and him who sells, but also on him who, having the power to make laws to prevent these evils, turns a deaf ear to the cries of humanity and hiding himself behind the screen of popular favor refuses to act. Ah! there will be a day of awful reckoning when one sigh from the myriads that have ascended from broken hearted widows, and one tear from the ten thousands that have fallen from the eye of the orphan, will weigh more in the scales of eternal justice than all the popular applause that has ever floated upon the breeze.

Restpectfully submitted,
ELIZA RICHMOND, G. S. S.

Foreign Items.

Halifax, Thursday, Oct. 27, 1853.

The Royal Mail steamship Niagara, Captain Leitch, from Liverpool on Saturday the 15th inst., arrived here at one o'clock this (Thursday) morning.

The Collins steamship Arctic, from New York on the 1st inst., arrived out on Wednesday morning the 12th.

THE EASTERN QUESTION.

The Sultan has announced that if the Russians do not evacuate the Principalities within fifteen days, Turkey will considerate it as a case of declared war, and will act accordingly, but will not at present cross the Danube.

The proclamation of war is posted on all the mosques.

The Sultan has invited the combined fleets up to Constantinople.

The Black Sea is free to neutral flags.

THE LATEST RECEIVED AT LIVERPOOL.

The Paris Police has made a search for Kossuth in the house of M. Kif, a Hungarian. Kossuth, however, was not there.

Louis Napoleon is reported to have stated on the 12th inst., that unless Russia yields, war must be proceeded with.

A letter from Turin says the Piedmontese Government had refused to admit M. Foresti, a naturalized American, as Consul for the United States, alleging that he is a disciple of Mazzini.

Corn may be imported into the Papal States, duty free, until February next.

The Emperor of Russia has authorized the free importation, into any port of Finland, all the materials for equipping ships. This privilege to endure for 5 years.

A Paris Correspondent writes that in the private Constantinople letters, the Eastern question is examined in every point of view, and the conclusion unanimously come to is, that there is no escape from war.

Russian agents are actively at work stirring up insurrections in Turkey.

A number of English officers, most, if not all, belonging to the Indian service, are moving between the Turkish camps, and a number are also now on their way to Constantinople.

The Paris correspondent of the London Globe says:

"Notwithstanding all that we hear of preparations for war, the impression here that peace will be preserved is very general. The number of offers of aid to the Turkish Government from Poles, Hungarians, &c., is almost incredible. These offers are not confined to the refugees in France, they have come from the United States—also from Hungary, Poland, and Italy."

☞ Snow fell on the Philadelphia and Baltimore road on Sunday the 23d ult., in considerable quantity.

From the Watchman and Evangalist.

Intemperance.

The ravages of Intemperance are most appalling. The continuation of the traffic, as a beverage, drives the plough-share of destruction over the whole surface of society, and even to its deepest foundations. It is utterly at war with every interest of society.

Intemperance is the scourge of our race, far more terrible than war, famine and pestilence. In Great Britain, year by year, it destroys 60,000; and in the United States 30,000, to say nothing of other countries. While most controlled, the traffic in intoxicating drinks eats like a cancer, and hurries men prematurely and wretchedly into eternity. It is morally and politically wrong. The interests of all mankind call upon us to detest and frown upon the traffic, and to sustain and enforce every enactment designed for its extermination.

Our State Legislatures do not hesitate to guard against frightful casualities on railroads and steamboats, and the spread of pestilence from city to city. Why are they backward to pass a prohibitory statue? Why do they keep up a wicked coalition with dram shops, liquor manufacturers, wholesale and retail venders? It is time for State Governments, Mayors and City corporations, and magistrates, not only to pass stringent prohibitory statues, but firmly to execute them. They should refuse to enter into any combination with manufacturers and tippling shops for base purposes, or the attainment of political power. We can but view any persons, or party, that will act so selfishly, with detestation, and as forfeiting the respect and countenance of all the upright and intelligent portion of the community.

We are not for making temperance a question of party politices; but if any party makes intemperance a part of its politics, for the purpose of retaining or gaining political power, we can view such only with contempt and alarm, and their action as tending to the overthrow of all morality, and consequently of all law and order.—From such, every friend of temperance should withhold his vote, and not give it to any one whose example and influence are thrown on the side of intemperance, or whom he knows will not secure and sustain the law demanded. There can be no want of power in the State to enact the law, and the object and end of the enactment is its enforcement.

In every State it is the duty of the people to demand of the government to protect them and their children from the evils of the liquor traffic. It is time for the people to see to it, that their government does its duty. Let them rise and shake off the cruel and miserable government of the tippling dens. Who that has a soul in him can tamely bow to the control of a few wealthy manufacturers and large dealers, and the swarming multitude of dram-shop keepers? The people should prevail. No longer permit themselves to be the foot-ball of office holders or seekers. Let the press, openly and independently, plead the cause of sobriety and virtue.

The newspapers daily chronicle numerous and varied instances setting forth, in some degree, the ruin and wretchedness produced by the traffic of intoxicating beverages, but lift up no voice against that traffic; not a few even plead for its continuance. Alas, what debasement and corruption of public sentiment! Here permit us to give a single one of the occurrences to which we have just made allusion. It is given in one of the city papers, as follows:

FIRE AND HORRIBLE DEATH.—Authur Stevenson, a confirmed inebriate, in Concord, Lewis county, Ky., went home drunk late on Saturday night, and while carelessly walking about the room with a candle in his hand, it is supposed, accidentally set fire to the musquito bar of the bed in which his wife lay asleep. The flames spread so fast that before Mrs. Stevenson could get out of bed, her clothes were all on fire and she burned almost to death, surviving but a few hours. The house was burnt to the ground with its contents. The old man was going about on yesterday, talking wildly and refusing to believe that his wife was burned to death.

WATER DRINKING.—Prof. Silliman closed a recent Smithsonian lecture in Washington, by giving the following sensible advice to young men,

"If, therefore, you wish for a clear mind, strong muscles, and quiet nerves, and long life, and power prolonged to old age, permit me to say, though I am not giving a temperance lecture, avoid all drinks but water and infusions of that fluid. Shun tobacco and opium and every thing else that disturbs the normal state of the system. Rely upon nutritious food and dilutent drinks, of which water is the basis and you will need nothing beyond this but rest, and the due regulations of your powers, to give you long, and happy, and useful lives and a serene evening at the close."

The same pride which makes us censure the faults from which we fancy ourselves exempt, induces us to despise the good qualities which we want.

The Carson League.

Mr. Carson began as a worker in the Temperance ranks, but found his efforts embarrassed and impeded by the fact that the apparent, immediate, palpable pecuniary interest is all on the side of Alcohol. The distiller, the brewer, the dealer, the grocer, the inn-keeper, are all making money, or expecting to do so, by their business, while the opposition to it is entirely a matter of principle, conscience, philanthropy. And while these are apt to nod or relax their vigilance, self-interest is sure to keep its weather eye steadily open. Thus the temperance meeting is held perhaps weekly, and with something of effort at that; while the tippler's seminary is found at almost every frequented corner, and is hardly ever shut.

And yet there is an interest antagonistic to that of the rumseller, which is even more extensive and powerful than his if it can only be fully organized and brought fully into action. It is the interest of the taxpayer. Every dollar of profit realized from the liquor traffic, it is demonstrated, is more than paralleled by consequent additions to the aggregate of taxation. The crime, the litigation, the pauperism, resulting from the liquor traffic more than consume all the profits of that traffic, which lives only because one set of men grasp the profits and saddle the payment of expense mainly upon the residue of the community. Mr. Carson's aim is to put the saddle on the right horse.

To this end he calls together the taxpayers and sets the facts before them in a homely, colloquial fashion. He says to them, "Let us make this entirely a matter of business. You are now paying about fourteen cents a year in taxes on every hundred dollars of your property, as valued in the tax lists, for the support of the pauperism and repression of the crime whereof the liquor traffic is the cause. What I propose is, that you form an association and engage with each other to be taxed, so far as may be necessary, inside of the burden thus imposed on you, for the suppression of the traffic. If you don't like the temperance cause enough for this, do it to save your money, now unjustly taken from you to fill other men's coffers."

It is not necessary to set forth the details of the plan based on the foundation above stated. Here is a township, for example, wherein the tax-list shows a property valuation of $300,000, two-thirds of it held by friends of temperance, or at all events by men averse to being taxed merely to line other men's pockets. These two-thirds join the Carson League, and club their votes or obligations accordingly, binding them to spend as much of their property respectively to suppress the liquor traffic as they are now compelled by law to pay for the punishment or subsistence of its victims. They establish an office, and employ an agent to keep a stern eye on all the dealers in Alcoholic poisons, and haul them up whenever they break the law. If the Maine Law or No License is the predominant, the road is short and easy. If rumselling is legalized, there are still conditions and restrictions enough in every license law to make the business a losing one if they are only enforced. There are not one-tenth of the rum holes in this city that are conducted in accordance with the laws, lax and vicious as these are.

THE GRAND DIVISION OF EASTERN NEW YORK.—This body (says the Tribune) convened in annual session on Wednesday the 12th ult., in Convention Hall, at which time the election for Grand Officers took place. A large and imposing number of Delegates were in attendance, and a very animated feeling manifested itself among them in anticipation of the successful issue of their labors as evidenced in the improved state of public feeling, as regards prohibitory laws for the suppression of the liquor traffic, and consequent diminution of crime and pauperism. The following officers were elected for the ensuing year:

John Reid, Albany, G. W. P.
Hon. Eli W. Rogers, G. W. A.
Thos. Edgerly, G. S.
James Mackean, G. T.
Rev. W. H. Meeker, G. C.
J. Hungerford, G. Con.
Mark Finley, G. Sent.

Resolutions were passed to memorialize the Legislature for a law to prohibit the sale of liquors at its next session. The places for holding the quarterly sessions of the Grand Divisions were, by resolution appointed as follows: January session at Albany; April session in Port Jervis, and July session at Rouse's Point.

ADVANTAGES OF GOODNESS.—One of the almost numberless advantages of goodness is, that it blinds its possessor to many of those faults in others which could not fail to be detected by the morally defective. A consciousness of unworthiness renders people extremely quick-sighted in discerning the vices of their neighbors; as persons can easily discover in others the symptoms of those beneath which they themselves have suffered.—Godfrey.

The generality of friends disgust us with friendship, and the generality of devotees disgust us with devotion.

Moral Reflections, Sentences, and Maxims.

There is no man who thinks himself in any of his qualities inferior to the man he esteems the most in the world.

In important affairs we ought not so much to apply ourselves to create opportunities, as to make use of those which present themselves.

It would seldom be a bad bargain for us to renounce the praise, on condition of escaping the censure of the world.

Whatever disposition the world may have to judge incorrectly, it more often shows favor to false, than injustice to true merit.

We sometimes see a fool with wit, but never one with judgment.

We should gain more by letting ourselves be seen such as we are, than by attempting to appear what we are not.

There are many cures for love, but none of them infallible.

We are very far from knowing all that our passions make us do.

FOOD FOR SHEEP.—A late writer, of great intelligence on this subject says:—"No farmer can feed either cattle or sheep profitably, without either ruta bagas, mangel wurtzel, corrots or parsnips. The experiments made in England and Scotland, in the last two years, have demonstrated this beyond all doubt."

NATIONAL CHARACTERS.—However poetic an Englishman may get, he never allows himself to soar above comfort. If he goes to Nineveh, it is in company with a hamper of bottled ale. Meet him on the Great Pyramid, and it will be behind a mug of black tea, and a side dish of sandwiches. John never allows his reverence of the ancients to do injury to himself.—Should he ever explore the internal arrangements of Ætna, it would be with three pockets filled with crackers and cheese, and one with London Porter. John differs radically from Jonathan. Let the former meet a native in the Great Desert, and the first thing he would inquire for would be the nearest hotel. The first thing Jonathan would ask for would be the latest news from York, add "What is going on in Bosting?" A friend of ours once met an Englishman and an American, on a cliff near the Falls of St. Anthony. The former was imbibing a little "alf and alf," while the latter was going it blind on the Morning Herald. John can do nothing till he eats; while Jonathan is non compos till he imbibes "the latest news."—N. Y. Dutchman.

Grand Temple of Honor.

☞ The Fifth Semi-Annual Session of the Grand Temple of Honor of Indiana, will be held in the city of Richmond, commencing on Wednesday, November 23d, at 2 o'clock P. M.

Representatives are requested to make their arrangements to be there by the first session.

JOHN H. OHR, G. W. R.

To Subordinate Divisions.

NEW RITUAL.

The new Ritual of our Order has been received at this office.

All Divisions wishing it, must order immediately and enclose Two Dollars to the undersigned, when it will be sent free of expense.

C. WOODWARD, G. S.
Indianapolis, Oct. 5, 1853.

TEMPLES OF HONOR.

The undersigned having received the Revised Constitutions of the Temple o Honor, is now prepared to furnish Temples with the Constitution and Bylaws, at the following rates, where not many alterations are made from the form kept standing:

100 copies, $12 00	300 copies $20 00
200 " 16 00	400 " 24 00

Subordinate, Degree, and Social Degree Constitutions, (in one book) are furnished at the above rates.

A copy of the form kept standing, will be sent to any Temple, by making application for the same.

Temples wishing Constitutions at the above rates, must send in their orders soon, as the form cannot be kept standing long.

JOHN H. OHR, G. W. R.
Indianapolis, Oct. 4th, 1853.

CONSTITUTION AND BY-LAWS,

WE are still prepared to print Constitution and By-Laws, where the alterations are few from the copy recommended by the Grand Division, at the following rates:

100 copies, (or less)	$5 00
200 "	8 00
300 "	10 00

We will pay the postage on all ordered from us.

☞ All orders accompanied by the cash, will be promptly attended to.

Address, JOHN H. OHR,
Indianapolis, Indiana.

CHARTERS.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR A DIVISION S. OF T.

(Date.)

The undersigned inhabitants of ——, believing the Order of the Sons of Temperance to be well calculated to extend the blessings of total abstinence, and promote the general welfare of mankind, respectfully petition the Grand Division of the —— of ——, to grant them a Charter to open a new Division, to be called the —— Division, No. —, Sons of Temperance, of the —— of ——, to be located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves, individually and collectively, to be governed by the rules and usages of said Grand Division, and also, by those of the National Division.

Enclosed is the Charter Fee, $5 00. Books, $2 00.

This must be signed by at least eight persons of good character and standing in community, and sent to C. WOODWARD, G. S., Indianapolis, Ind., free of postage.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR A TEMPLE.

(Date.)

The undersigned, believing the Temple of Honor to be well calculated to cement more firmly our fraternal relations, and add to the general prosperity of the cause of Temperance, respectfully petition the Grand Temple of the —— of ——, to grant them a Charter to open a new Temple, to be called the —— Temple of Honor, No. —, of the —— of ——, to be located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves individually and collectively, to be governed by the rules and usages of the Grand Temple, and also by those of the Order at large.

Enclosed is the Charter Fee, $20 00.

To be directed to the G. W. R., free of postage.

This must be signed by at least twenty persons of good standing, and if not known to the G. W. T. or G. W. R., must send satisfactory references.

J. H. OHR, G. W. R.

Indianapolis, Ind.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR CADETS OF TEMPERANCE.

The undersigned, boys of ——, believing the Order of Cadets of Temperance to be well calculated to extend the blessings of total abstinence, and promote the general welfare of mankind, respectfully petition the Grand Section of the State of Indiana, to grant them a charter to open a new Section, to be called the —— Section, No. ——, Cadets of Temperance, of the State of Indiana, to be located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves, individually and collectively to be governed by the rules and usages of said Grand Section, and also those of the acting Head of the Order.

Enclosed is the fee for Charter, R. B.'s and officers' cards, $5 00.

It must also be stated whether the applicants are members of the Order or not; if they are, of what Section. The application to be directed to the Grand Secretary, free of postage.

It must also be certified by a W. P. or P. W. P, that the W. Patron elect is a Son of Temperance in good standing.

Address (post paid) HENRY OHR, G. S., C. o T., Indianapolis, Indiana.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR DAUGHTERS OF TEMPERANCE.

(Date.)

The undersigned, inhabitants of ——, believing the Order of the Daughters of Temperance to be well calculated to extend the blessings of Total Abstinence, and promote the general welfare of mankind, respectfully petition the Grand Union to grant them a charter to open a new Union to be called the —— Union, No. —, D. of T., of the State of Indiana, located in ——, and under your jurisdiction.

We pledge ourselves, individually and collectively, to be governed by the rules and usages of said Grand Union.

Enclosed is the Charter Fee, $5 00.

The above must be signed by at least eleven females, of proper age and good standing in community.

Address (post paid,) Mrs. ELIZA RICHMOND, G. S. S., Indianapolis, Indiana.

New Watch and Jewelry Store.

No 1, Bates House, Washington Street,

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

WE have now open the largest and best assortment of fine Watches and rich Jewelry ever offered in this city, to which we invite the examination of the public.

Our stock is all new—selected with great care, and comprises Watches, Diamond Work, Chains, Pins, Rings, Pencils, Lockets, of all kinds; Silver Ware, Clocks, Perfumery, Brushes, Soaps, Plated Ware, Castors, Fruit Baskets, &c., which we will sell for CASH at New York prices. Mr. E. W. NEFF, of this city, has taken charge of the Watch repairing department, and will spare no pains to give satisfaction to our customers.

july 6-tf E. J. BALDWIN & CO.

D. CRAIGHEAD. R. BROWNING.

CRAIGHEAD & BROWNING,

Dealers in all kinds of

Drugs, Medicines, Surgical Instruments, Paints, Oils, Chemicals, Varnishes, Dye Stuffs, Glassware Window Glass, Brushes, Cosmetics, Spices, Cigars, Tobacco, Perfumery, &c.,

WASHINGTON STREET,

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

ALL are respectfully invited to call and examine our stock and prices, as we feel confident we can render satisfaction both as to prices and quality of articles. Great care is taken in the selection of articles, in reference to their purity, as we endeavor at all times to keep such articles as are strictly pure and genuine. Every article will be waranted as represented. Orders from Physicians and others promptly attended to. Particular attention given to filling Prescriptions and compounding Medicines, which, in all cases, shall receive the personal attention of one of the firm. june 30

HANNAMAN & DUZAN,

DEALERS IN

DRUGS AND MEDICINES,

Surgical Instruments, Paints, Oils, Varnishes, Dye Woods, Medical and Window Glass, Brushes, Perfumery, Soaps, &c.

Washington, 3 doors west of Pennsylvania St.,

june 30 1y INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

W. W. ROBERTS,

Druggist and Apothecary.

Wholesale and Retail Dealer in

DRUGS, MEDICINES, PAINTS, OILS, AND DYE STUFFS, BRUSHES, FANCY GOODS, AMERICAN AND FRENCH WINDOW GLASS, &c.

WASHINGTON ST., INDIANAPOLIS.

Physicians, Country Merchants, and the people generally, are invited to examine his stock which will be sold at the lowest cash price.

☞ QUALITY WARRANTED TO SUIT. ☜

june 22 4m

COMMERCIAL COLLEGE,

(Late Commercial Institute,)

Of Indianapolis,

Established March 31, 1851.

INCORPORATED, 1853.

W. McK. SCOTT, A. M., Founder and President.

JAMES C. HAYDEN, (Late Professor in Bacon's Mercantile College, Cincinnati,)

PROF. OF BOOK-KEEPING AND PENMANSHIP.

THE Session will commence at College Hall as follows:

1st Session on the first Monday of September.
2d Session on the 1st Monday of November.
3d Session on the 1st Monday of January.
4th Session on the 1st Monday of March.
5th Session on the 1st Monday of May.

Having secured, permanently, the services of the distinguished Professor above named, and leased for a term of years the commodious and beautiful Hall formerly known as CONCERT HALL, but now named COLLEGE HALL, which is to be fitted up in a style of great elegance, taste, and convenience, the President would say, that this College now offers advantages superior to all others, for imparting a sound, thorough, and accomplished business education

COURSE OF STUDIES.

The Course of Studies, as enlarged, will be as follows, viz:

1. Book-Keeping, by Single and Double Entry, in all its various branches, and its application to all kinds of business.
2. The Laws, Customs, and Usages of Trade and Commerce.
3. Mercantile Arithmetic, upon the short and easy system of cancelation, (taught in no other College.)
4. Commercial Law, in a series of Lectures, thorough and systematic.
5. Business Penmanship.
6. Commercial Correspondence.
7. Lectures upon Banking, Political Economy, and other subjects valusble to the business man.

EXPENSES.

Cards of Admission, invariably in advance, or secured, $25; Diplomas $3; Stationery $5; Boarding $2 50 per week; incidentals, at option of student, $15. Making entire expenses about $75.

On application, a Catalogne will be furnished, giving full particulars.

All letters will receive prompt attention on being directed, post-paid, to

june 8 W. McK. SCOTT, President.

Sears' American Pictorial Book Establishment.

181 William St., near Spruce St., NEW YORK.

BOOK AGENTS WANTED.

THE Subscriber publishes a large number of most valuable books, very popular, and of such a moral and religious influence, that while good men may safely engage in their circulation, they will confer a public benefit, and receive a fair compensation for their labor.

☞ To young men of enterprise and tact, this business offers an opportunity for profitable employment seldom to be met with. There is not a town in the Union where a right honest and well-disposed person can fail of selling from 50 to 200 volumes, according to the population.

The titles of the principal works are as follows:

THE PICTORIAL FAMILY BIBLE. Illustrated by about One Thousand Engravings! 1450 pages large quarto. Price $6.

NEW AND COMPLETE HISTORY OF THE BIBLE. 700 pages octavo. Price $2 50.

NEW PICTORIAL HISTORY OF CHINA AND INDIA. Illustrated with two hundred Engravings. 700 pages large octavo. Price $2 50.

THRILLING INCIDENTS of THE WARS OF THE UNITED STATES. With three hundred Engravings. 600 pages octavo. Price $2 50.

NEW PICTORIAL DESCRIPTION OF THE UNITED STATES for 1853. Illustrated with two hundred Engravings. 600 pages octavo. Price $2 50.

TREASURY OF KNOWLEDGE, and CYCLOPEDIA OF SCIENCE and ART. With numerous Engravings. 512 pp. 8vo. Price $2 50.

SCENES AND SKETCHES OF CONTINENTAL EUROPE. Nvmerous Engravings. 550 pp. 8vo. Price $2 50.

PICTORIAL DESCRIPTION OF GREAT BRITAIN AND IRELAND. With several hundred handsome Engravings. 550 pages octavo Price $2 50.

PICTORIAL FAMILY ANNUAL. With over two hundred Engravings. 360pp. 8vo. Price $2

INFORMATION FOR THE PEOPLE.—This work comprises the finest series of Embellishments ever offered to the American public. 600 pages octavo. Price $2 50.

NEW PICTORIAL FAMILY INSTRUCTOR, or Digest of General Knowledge. Designed for Families, Schools, and Libraries. 600 pages octavo. Price $2 50.

PICTORIAL HISTORY OF THE AMERICAN REVOLUTION. A Book for every family in the Union! Several hundred Engravings. Price $2.

PICTORIAL SUNDAY BOOK. Designed for the use of Families, Bible-Classes and Sunday-School Teachers. 600 pp. 8vo. Price $2 50.

BIBLE BIOGRAPHY, or the Lives and Characters of the principal personages recorded in the sacred writings. With numerous Illustrations 500 pages octavo. Price $2 50.

WONDERS OF THE WORLD—Second Series—in two Parts. With 400 Illustrations. 540 pp. 8vo. Price $2 50.

THE HISTORY OF PALESTINE, from the Patriarchal age to the present time. By John Kitto, editor of the London Pictorial Bible. Price $4

VIEW OF NEW YORK. This Engraving is printed on a mammoth sheet, 47 by 19 inches, and ought to be very saleable. Price 50 cents.

DICK'S COMPLETE WORKS. Eleven vols. in two. 1500 pp. 8 vo. Price $4 50.

THE CHRISTIAN LITURGY. Bound in Embossed Morrocco. Price $1 50.

A NEW AND DEEPLY INTERESTING VOLUME

THE REMARKABLE ADVENTURES OF

CELEBRATED PERSONS,

Embracing the Romantic Incidents in in the Lives of Sovereigns, Statesmen, Generals. Princes, Warriors, Travellers, Adventurers, Voyagers, &c.,

Eminent in the History of Europe and America.

Including Sketches of over Fifty Celebrated Heroic Characters. Beautifully illustrated with numerous Engravings. One vol. 400 pages, royal 12mo. cloth gilt. Price $1 25.

☞ We solicit orders faom the Trade, Teachers, and School Committees for books to whom we furnish our own publications, and those of all the publishers in the country, on the most liberal terms.

☞ COUNTRY MERCHANTS and POSTMASTERS can procure subscribers to, and sell SEARS' PICTORIAL WORKS," make a handsome profit, and sustain no loss.

☞ Persons wishing to engage in the sale of our Works, will receive promptly by mail a circular containing full descriptions, with the terms on which they will be furnished, by addressing the publisher, post-paid, ROBERT SEARS, Publisher, oct 11 3w No. 181, William St., New York.

TEMPERANCE INN,

Bloomington, Indiana.

J. & S. M. ORCHARD, PROPRIETORS.

TRAVELLERS will find it to their advantage to call and try the accommodation of the TEMPERANCE INN. Stage office for all the different routes, in connection with this House. may25 6m

---

REAL ESTATE AND GENERAL AGENCY OFFICE,

INDIANAPOLIS, INDIANA.

UNDER THE CONTROL OF W. M'K. SCOTT, Attorney & Counsellor at Law, and Notary Public.

The attention of the Agency will be devoted,

First—To the collection of debts and the payment of Taxes for non-residents in any county in the State. Also, the redemption of Lands sold for Taxes, sale, purchase or lease of Lands, purchase of adverse claims, examination and perfection of Title, &c., &c.

Second—To the prosecution of claims against the General Government, procuring Land Warrants, Patent Rights, and Pensions under the various Pension Laws, &c.

Third—All other Miscellaneous agencies as may be intrusted to the care of this office.

Fourth—The taking of Depositions and Attestation of all instruments requiring a seal

In all cases requiring an outlay of money for the benefit of individuals, the requisite funds must be transmitted in advance.

Prompt attention to all letters on business that are pre-paid. Address W. M'K. SCOTT,

Real Estate and General Agent,

jan 3-1y Indianapolis, Ind.

ADAMS & CO'S EXPRESS.

WE are now running a daily line East and West, accompanied by special messengers, and with the speed of the mails, running our own cars with the passenger trains.

Packages will be received at the cars up to the time of starting, and at our office until 1 o'clock each day.

We are prepared to transport packages, bank notes and specie, to and from any of the eastern cities, also, Louisville, Frankfort, and Lexington, Ky., St. Louis, Mo., or any points on the Ohio and Mississippi rivers; and to and from Terre Haute, and all intermediate points, and to forward freight from Terre Haute up and down the Wabash.

In addition to these, we have the most complete arrangements for transporting packages to and from California and Europe.

Exchange on England, Ireland, and Scotland, for sale, payable at any bank in the kingdom.

Foreign passage tickets; by Grinnell, Minturn & Co.'s line to Liverpool and London, constantly on hand, and for sale at the lowest rates.

Notes, drafts, and bills collected in any of the Eastern or Western cities.

Orders for goods to be returned by Express, sent free. Our rates of charges have been greatly reduced, and the public will find this a safe and expeditious method of transportation.

Indianapolis, June 30, 1852. ADAMS & CO.

Office in Indianapolis in Journal Building, west side Pennsylvania Street.

Office open during business hours.

june30 1y C. WOODWARD, Agent.

"God never made his works for man to mend." DR. FRANKLIN.

KIER'S ROCK OIL.

A NEW AND MOST IMPORTANT REMEDY FOR DISEASE.

DISCOVERED IN 1849.

IS drawn from a deep well near Pittsburgh—has been used with remarkable success in Ohio and Pennsylvania, and more Eastern States—and is now working its way West. An opportunity is now offered to the Afflicted for testing it. Where known and tried, it at once makes firm friends, and cures which are eloquent in its praise. Certificates of its power to heal are at hand—but we know well, reader, that such evidence, to have weight with you, now-a-days, must be in your own neighborhood.—You have only to try the Oil to be satisfied—it will SPEAK FOR ITSELF.

We have no war with the legion of Nostrums and Specifics of the day—we know but little about them—some say they are good for nothing. However that may be, the

Petroleum

will not be suppressed and kept back by reason of the above nostrums—duty and inclination both forbid it.

Those who are afflicted, are respectfully invited to get a Circular and look over the Directions for

Ague, Rheumatism, Piles, Diarrhœa, Flux, Tooth Ache, Burns, Worms, Scrofula, Coughs, Bronchitis, Croup, Old Sores, Cholera Morbus, Contractions of the Limbs and Joints, Sore Eyes, Blindness, Costiveness, Dyspepsia, and other Diseases.

By that time you may say, "it cures too much." But recollect it is not a HUMAN INVENTION, but compounded by Nature's master hand—and Nature does not do her work by halves.

The Oil is used both internally and externally.

As AGUE, SORE EYES, PILES, RHEUMATISM, and SCROFULA are so common in many parts of the West, we are constrained to say, that while this Oil will cure and relieve other diseases, it has been and is constantly used with most complete success in these cases.

☞ Price 50 cents per Bottle (half pint.)

Beware of all Rock Oil preparations, as some persons are offering a spurious article. Look for S. M. KIER'S name written on the label of the bottle.

For sale by the Druggists throughout Indiana, and by TOMLINSON BROTHERS, J. P. POPE & Co., S. ROSENGARTEN, WM. TILLEY, and at wholesale by W. W. ROBERTS, Indianapolis, Indiana.

R. M. LYON, Fort Wayne,

may25 10w Proprietor in the Western States.

SOMETHING NEW.

LATHROP & STEVENS, Wholesale and Retail Dealers in BOOTS AND SHOES, at the West room in the Bates House, Washington Street, Indianapolis.

We are now opening a new and splendid stock of Boots and Shoes of every variety and style, which we are receiving direct from the manufacturers.—We design to keep constantly on hand a good assortment of the best quality of goods manufactured, which we can warrant to give satisfaction to all who may give them a trial. We will sell by the case, dozen, or single pair, at low prices for cash.—Our stock consists in part of Gents' fine Cloth, silk warp, glove kid, buck, patent calf, and enameled Gaiters and Ties of every variety and style; Ladies' fine silk warp Gaiters, Buskins, Ties, Slippers and Boots; Misses' ditto; Men's calf, goat, kip, and thick Boots and Brogans; Boys' and Youths' ditto; assorted Ladies, kid, goat and calf Boots and Buskins; Misses' ditto. Also every variety of Children's Shoes. Come and see for yourselves.

LATHROP & STEVENS,

may 25 4w Indianapolis, Indiana.

A CHANCE TO MAKE MONEY.

Profitable and honorable Employment!

THE Subscriber is desirous of having an agent in each county and town of the Union. A capital of from $5 to $10 only will be required, and anything like an efficient, energetic man can make from three to five dollars per day; indeed some of the Agents now employed are realizing twice that sum. Every information will be given by addressing, (postage paid) WM. A. KINSLER,

june 15 3w Box 601, Philadelphia P. O.

Railroad City Book Store.

COX & MATHES,

South side of Washington, between Illinois and Meridian streets,

INDIANAPOLIS, INDIANA.

AT wholesale and retail, Standard and Miscellaneous Works, Law, and Medical Books, School Books, Plain and Fancy Stationery, Blank Books, Wall Papers, &c., &c. mar 2

The American Life and Health Insurance Company.

Office—No. 7, South Third St., Philadelphia.

Officers.

LEONARD JEWELL, President.
JAMES PEACOCK, Treasurer.
JOHN C. SIMS, Sec'y and Actuary.
THOS. S. SMITH, Solicitor

JOHN F. BIRD, FRED. A. FICKARDT, } Medical Examiners.

CHARLES WOODWARD, Indianapolis, Ind., General Agent for the State of Indiana.

THIS Company issues policies at Total Abstinence Rates, Joint stock Rates, and at Mutual Rates, which for $1000 on the life of a person 30 years of age, are as follows:

Age.	Total Abstinence.	Joint Stock.	Mutual
30	$15.40	$19.60	$23.60

A further table of Rates will be furnished at the Office.

The condition in Total Abstinence rates (believed to be the lowest in the Union,) is entire forfeiture upon the departure of the Insured from Total Abstinence in its strictest sense.

Policies at Joint Stock and Mutual rates, contain no condition except as usual in Life Insurance.

HEALTH INSURANCE DEPARTMENT.

All Moneys received from the Insured, for Annual Premiums, after deducting expenses, will be divided among the Sick

The Public have for some time been familiar with the subject of Life and Health Insurance, but it is obvious that too little thoughts has been given to the latter. LIFE Insurance benefits our successors, while HEALTH Insurance directly benefits ourselves. It makes provision for a time of sickness, when the products of a man's industry are cut off, and want unites with Disease to aggravate his distress. It is at this gloomy period, when he is prostrated and helpless, and when despondency would otherwise overwhelm him, that the holder of a Health Insurance Policy will realize its benefits.

RATES, under 50 years of age,

$2,00	per year,	for	$2,00	per week.
3,00	"	"	3,00	"
4,00	"	"	4,00	"
5,00	"	"	5,00	"
6,00	"	"	6,00	"

Over fifty and under sixty.

$2,50	per year,	for	$2,50	per week.
3,75	"	"	3,00	"
5,00	"	"	4,00	"
6,25	"	"	5,00	"
7,50	"	"	6,00	"

When the Fund shall amount to Three Dollars and upwards for every person insured and sufficient to warrant an additional distribution, the weekly allowances will be increased in accordance with the Rules of the Policy.

All the members of a Temple or Division insured at greatly reduced rates.

Applications for Agencies in any of the cities or towns in the State, should be made to the undersigned, post paid, or in person.

As Agent for the above Company, I am prepared to receive applications for Policies at any of the above rates.

CHARLES WOODWARD, Agent,

At ADAMS & CO.'S Express Office.

J. L. MOTHERSHEAD, Medical Examiner.

june 30 '52-1y

Ohio Life Insurance Company,

Capital $100,000.

JOINT STOCK AND MUTUAL,

CINCINNATI.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS.

Wm. Burnet, Jno. N. Ridgway, Chas. Goodman, S. Robert, E. S. Haines, Jno. M. Blair, J. W. Donohue, Eden B. Reeder, Wm. Person.

WM. BURNET, President.

S. W. REEDER, Sec'y J. W. DONOHUE, Vice Pres't

Office in Reeder's Building, Third street, between Almy's and City Bank.

This Company insures Lives at the lowest rates consistent with safety, either upon the Joint Stock or Mutual plan.

In the Joint Stock Department, premium payable quarterly, semi-annually or annually. On the Mutual plan, one-half the premium paid in Cash, the balance by a note bearing six per cent. interest—the interest only payable annually. Persons insuring on the mutual plan, participate in the profits of the Company in that department.

The undersigned having been appointed agent for the above Company, is prepared to fill applications for Life Insurance, on favorable terms.

Any information on the subject and pamphlets explaining the nature and utility of Life Insurance, furnished without charge, at the office of the Agent.

C. WOODWARD, Agent.

Office at Adam's & Co.'s Express Office, Journal Building, Pennsylvania street, Indianapolis, Ind.

june 30, '52-1y.

THE LATEST WONDER of the 19th CENTURY.

DR. G. W. BENNETT'S

Celebrated Eye-Balm.

A SPECIFIC FOR CHRONIC, SORE, INFLAMED, AND WEAK EYES.

Prepared only by Dr. George W. Bennett, and for sale by Merchants and Druggists generally.

THIS Balm is an excellent and certain cure for sore and inflamed Eyes, in all cases of Psoroic, Scrofulous, and Purulent Opthalmia, and what is commonly termed wild hairs in the eye-lids. It is a specific in Infantile, Purulent, and Scrofulous Inflamed, and Sore Eyes, and all in the various diseases of the Eyes, that prevail among the human family, in every climate. It will be found a sovereign remedy if properly applied.

W. W. ROBERTS, Indianapolis, Ind. General Agent for State of Indiana, to whom all orders must be addressed

Price---Twenty-five Cents.

I warrant the above Balm to cure if the directions are strictly observed, or return the money.

june 22 4m G. W. BENNETT.

1,000 BOOK AGENTS WANTED,

TO SELL PICTORIAL AND USEFUL WORKS FOR THE YEAR 1854.

$1,000 Dollars a Year.

WANTED in every County of the United States, active and enterprising men, to engage in the sale of some of the best Books published in the country. To men of good address, possessing a small capital of from $25 to $100, such inducements will be offered as to enable them to make from $3 to $5 a day profit.

☞ The Books published by us are all useful in in their character, extremely popular, and command large sales wherever they are offered.

For further particular, address, (postage paid.)

ROBERT SEARS, Publisher,

oct 5 1m 181 William Street, New York.

JAMES HALL,

MERCHANT TAILOR,

No. 2. Temperance, Hall, Indianapolis,

Manufactu'ng & Clothing Emporium,

Wholesale and Retail Dealer in Ready Made Clothing, Cloths, Cassimers, Vestings, Trimmings, Trunks, Sachels, Canes, Umbrellas, Hats, Caps, a every description of Gentlemen's Furnishing.

Also:

General Agency for the sale of

GRAND AND SUBORDINATE REGALIA, EMBLEMS, COSTUMES, &C., FOR THE ORDERS OF MASONS, ODD FELLOWS, TEMPLE OF HONOR, SON, DAUGHTERS, AND CADETS OF TEMPERANCE. oct27 1y

---

THE ILLUSTRATED MAGAZINE OF ART.

THE five numbers of this Magazine which are published, place it at the head of publications of this kind No expense will be spared to make it in every respect worthy of the name, the "Illustrated Magazine of Art. The Engavings which are preparing for the future numbers are in the hands of first-class American and European Artists.

A Series of most interesting Tales will appear in it. "The School of Life," written and Illustrated by ANNA MARY, daughter of William and Mary Howitt, will shortly appear; also, "The Dead Bridal," an historical romance, illustrative of the most interesting period in the history of the Venetian Republic, by JONATHAN FREKE SLINGSBY, of the Dublin University Magazine; contributions, too, from WILLIAM and MARY HOWITT, PERCY B. ST. JOHN, and other writers of distinction in America and Europe.

The following is a brief outline of the plan of the Magazine:

I. The Historical Department will abound with picturesque representations of the most remarkable events which have occurred in this and other countries; accompanied with interesting anecdotes and details from the pen of the most eminent writers of the day. This department will contain several splendid engravings, designed by the first artists of the world, and engraved in the highest style of modern art.

II. The Men and Women of the Age. This department will consist of beautifully executed portraits of the leading characters of the age, especially of those who figure on the stage of humanity as the world's benefactors. Each portrait will be accompanied by an interesting biographical sketch.

III. The Wonders of Natural History, Botany, and other sciences, will be developed in choice Engravings of Beasts, Birds, Fishes, Insects, Forest Trees, Flowers, Geological and Fossil Specimens, &c., with accompanying descriptions.

IV. The Triumphs of Architectural Art will be displayed in exquisitely finished representations of Cathedrals, Churches, Palaces, and other models of ancient and modern Architectural Art.

V. The Works of the Great Masters, selected from the principal Galleries of Art in the World. In general, the portrait of the Master will be given, accompanied with a highly finished engraved copy of his chef d'œuvre.

VI. The Scientific Portions will be rendered highly interesting by the familiar explanations, and the numerous diagrams which will accompany each subject.

VII. Manufactures. The principal manufacturing processes in use will be fully explained by minute details, and an abundance of beautiful engravings.

VIII. Machinery and Inventions will have due attention paid to them, and be described by numerous appropriate engravings.

IX. The Literary Department, independently of the various articles accompanying the illustrations, will comprise original and interesting narratives, contributed by the most popular writers of the day, with numerous illustrations.

In every respect, the "Illustrated Magazine of Art," will be decidedly

SUPERIOR TO ANY MAGAZINE OF THE DAY.

Each Monthly part will contain at least Thirty superb Engravings, four of which will be printed separately, on supefine Plate Paper.

The greatest care will be manifested in every department of production. The Paper will be of the first manufacture, and the Ink supplied from the celebrated Printing Ink Establishment of Messrs. Lawson & Co., of Paris. Six of the monthly portions, when completed, will form a volume which, for interest, originality, value and beauty, will defy competition. It will not only be an interesting family book, but a rich ornament for the drawing-room table, and a pleasant companion in the study.

The parts will appear on the First of every Month at Twenty-five Cents each.

ALEXANDER MONTGOMERY,

may 25 17 Spruce Street, New-York.

SPLENDIDLY ILLUSTRATED WORKS.

THE ALPS, SWITZERLAND, SAVOY AND LOMBARDY.

With the Magazine for June will be ready, Part I., price Twenty-five Cents, of a Magnificent Work to be completed in Twelve Monthly Parts, entitled

THE ALPS, SWITZERLAND, SAVOY AND LOMBARDY, with an account of the most recent Ascents to Mont Blanc, &c. By the Rev. Charles Williams. This work, when completed, will form a large thick Volume, in Imperial Octavo, containing upwards of Three Hundred beautiful Engravings, descriptive of the peculiar Scenery of those most interesting portions of Europe, with the Occupations of the Inhabitants, &c., &c.

Cassell's Natural History.

On the First of July will commence

CASSELL'S NATURAL HISTORY, which for variety, beauty and completeness, will claim to be considered as a first-class work, upon this most interesting subject. The First volume will be devoted to the Feathered Tribe of the Creation and will contain upwards of Three Hundred Engravings, in the first style of Art. The volume will be completed in Twelve Monthly Parts, Imperial Octavo. Price 25 cents each.

History of England.

On the First of July will appear Part I., price 25 cts. of THE ILLUSTRATED HISTORY OF ENGLAND, from the earliest period on record to the present time. Edited by ROBERT FERGUSON, LL. D.

This History, which is intended to form a great National Work, will extend to Four Volumes, Imperial Octavo; each Volume to be completed in Twelve Monthly Parts, price 25 cents each. The Work will comprehend the Political, Civil, and Domestic History of the Nation, and its Progress in Civilization, Literature, Art, &c. It will be profusely Illustrated with Engravings from Designs by GILBERT, PHILLIPPOTEAUX, WILLIAMS, and others. Representations of the most remarkable Events will be worked separately upon Plate Paper. The Portraits will form a complete Gallery, not only of the Monarchs, but of those individuals whose names are prominent in England's History. Also, Antiquities, including Autographs, Buildings, Costume, Furniture, Arms, Coins, Monuments, Manufactures &c., of each Epoch.

History of Hungary.

July First will be published, in one Handsome Volume, Imperial Octavo, price, One Dollar and Twenty-five Cents, in Cloth Boards,

THE ILLUSTRATED HISTORY OF HUNGARY, AND THE MAGYARS, from the Earliest Period to the close of the late War. By EDWARD LAWRENCE GODKIN. The Volume will be Illustrated with One Hundred highly finished Engravings, including representations of the principal Battles; Portraits of the early Kings, and of the Statesmen and Generals who figured in the War of Independence; Costumes of the Peasantry, &c.; Views of the chief Towns and Fortresses, &c.; with an accurate Description of the Manners and Customs of the People, their Literature, Commerce, Arts, &c.

ALEXANDER MONTGOMERY,

may25 Publisher, 17 Spruce Street, New-York.

MANSION HOUSE,

Cambridge City, Indiana.

J. CUNNINGHAM, Proprietor.

TRAVELLERS

Will find it to their advantage to call and try the accommodation of the MANSION HOUSE.

STAGE OFFICE also in connection with this House.

may 4 6m